It is also very possible under our present situation for a judge to be swept out of office in a strong national election, which I think is very unfortunate, and we know this has happened before and will happen again if we continue this way.

I have also heard a great deal about the backlog of cases, and I think there is plenty to do for our judges to continue with their work, instead of electioneering, particularly on a statewide basis where they have to go all over the entire State.

Under our Proposal No. 7 they must come back to the public for your vote as to whether their record has been good or not, and I think this is placing back in the hands of the public their ability to choose and select.

I was very interested in what Governor Scranton said to our committee. When he was Governor, he appointed a small panel and asked them to give him a list of names. He chose from these names and they were, I think, outstanding men, and I would like at some point to have Governor Scranton comment upon this a little further.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Secretary Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. I have been very impressed by the splendid oratory of Delegates Solomon and Caputo, but I have not been too impressed by their logic.

They speak of preserving a democratic right when, indeed, they are speaking to a point of denying a democratic right, that is the right of free choice. I think this should be kept in mind as this flood of oratory envelopes us.

The burden of their argument is that although we have now what we want and they have what they want, do not forget them. They are not pleading for something, they are pleading to keep something from the rest of the people. They say we have what we want, but we do not want you to have a free choice in judging that. They do not want you to have a free choice in assessing it in the future. They do not want you to have a free choice by referendum to approve the system 40 years from now when other developments may have taken place, so I think in all fairness one must question the logic of these appeals.

I think, also, one should recall my experience with the election system of judges. If my memory is not faulty, I may have missed some elections, I cannot remember in my adult life ever having voted for a judge of the common pleas court. In every instance that I can recall a vacancy has occurred and with some wonderful political shenanigans in which I have often taken part—and I can tell you precisely how the last three judges got on my bench, it was in a part I had participated in—has appointed a judge. We never voted on it. Then, after he has been on the bench for a while, we have a sitting judge principle who runs on both tickets and he is elected automatically. There has never been an election in Bucks County that I am aware of in recent years. We have gotten some splendid judges by the appointment method. I think the third from the last one is an interesting case in point. The Chairman of the Republican Party who was also the District Attorney and dissident Democrat brought charges against the Democratic County Chairman who was then hauled into Court and tried by the Republican County Chairman, a beautiful example of real Pennsylvania politics in action. We kept a very close watch on the Chairman of the Republican Party and he handled himself admirably in this case.

Governor Lawrence was the principal character witness and I was the No. 2 character witness, and we watched them with a magnifying glass. This man behaved admirably. When the trial was through and we got our Democratic boy off by the skin of his teeth, thanks in part because he did have a completely honest and fair trial, when the next vacancy came up, some of us got together and said that it has got to be a Republican. We cannot do any bettter than the Chairman of the Republican Party, so up he went.

I had a dear friend who had run with me for office as a Democrat, the only reason he did was we could not get any Democrat to run for the office. We made a deal if they got two, we would get one. This marvelous young friend of mine was promoted to the bench by this system. Since we have been here in session, a fellow I used to play basketball with in high school and one of the best Republicans we have in Bucks County, he was elevated to the bench. I do not know what the agreement was on this, but even with the election system we are talking about so seriously here I would venture to say that not 50 per cent of the common pleas judges of Pennsylvania are elected, they are appointed by precisely the process that is given here as an alternative, except that the Governor does not have an advantage of a selection committee, he has the advantage of whatever deal has been worked out by the Republican Party and the Democratic Party at the local level and, by and large, we have done a very good job on this and I agree with Delegate Solomon that we have a fine judicial system in Pennsylvania.

To plead that this is a system of election, does not make any sense to me. I am perfectly willing to see it continue as it is, but I do believe, Mr. President, that there should be this option of a referendum at some future date.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. Chairman, I do not speak for or against this amendment. I have put in and I believe there is being reproduced an amendment to this amendment which has been accepted by the sponsor of the amendment itself, and I think from what I can gather in this Convention, it will generally receive the approbation of the House.

The point of the amendment to the amendment is to cover the situation that is not covered in the amendment itself, and that is how is an interim appointment filled. The thrust of my amendment is to have the interim appointment filled by the Governor, with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate, for and during the period until the next municipal election.

I do not know whether that has been distributed yet or not. I ask the Chair to discern whether it has.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand the amendment to the amendment that you are now offering has been prepared. It will be distributed and I am asking the clerk to read the amendment to the amendment and we will have a debate and discussion which should be confined to the amendment to the amendment, because we are going to have to vote on that first.

DELEGATE RUTH. I want to clarify that point if I may as sponsor. If I accept it, at least, at this time, is it my understanding that the amendment to the amendment can be voted on separately first before my full amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The amendment to the amendment has to be voted on separately first before your amendment.

O'DONNELL AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Ruth to Committee Proposal No. 7?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL offered the following amendment to the amendment offered by Delegate Ruth:

Amend the Amendments by inserting between lines 6 and 7:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 5, line 30, by inserting after "of": two-thirds of

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate O'Donnell, do you wish to speak on your amendment to the amendment which we are going to vote on first?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I do not think it requires extensive discussion. The present Constitution calls for filling an interim appointment and the judge to run for election if the municipal election follows two months later. There is language elsewhere in Committee Proposal No. 7 that changes that period to 10 months obviously because the two months language contemplated that period of time when we had a fall primary, as well as a fall general election.

We now have a spring primary and the interim appointment would have to be at least 10 months before the municipal election requires a judge to run then.

In addition to that, the present Constitution calls for confirmation by two-thirds of the Senate, if they are in session. However, a more recent amendment to the Pennsylvania Constitution says in effect, that the Senate is never out of session, that it merely recesses and adjourns.

Consequently, the effect of this amendment will be solely to make clear that there is no constitutional change in the requirement that confirmation be by two-thirds of the Senate. That is all it is.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone wish to be heard?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Delegate Butera indicated to me it is not printed properly and I am not sure. I will have to look at it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It is an amendment to an amendment.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. It is all right. If you take your original Ruth amendment and go down to line 6, and then put in as an insert there between lines 6 and 7 just what it says and add to that language, "Amend Section 1, Section 11, page 5, line 30, by inserting after "of" the words "two-thirds of." That means if you go back to the proposal itself the interim appointment is filled with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are we ready for the question in connection with the amendment to the amendment? Apparently we are. I will ask the clerk to unlock the voting machine. The question is, will Convention agree to the amendment to the amendment being offered by Delegate O'Donnell? All those voting yea, will vote in favor of the amendment to the amendment, and those voting nay, will reject the amendment to the amendment.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Ruth. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE RUTH. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE RUTH. Point of inquiry. If my amendment now, as I see it, should fail as amended, will I have the opportunity to present my amendment without the O'Donnell amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No. I am advised by the Parliamentarian the answer to that is "no," except by a vote to reconsider.

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment to the Ruth amendment offered by Delegate O'Donnell?

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE IRVIS. I rise to a point of information.

Mr. President, I trust that I am accurate in this analysis and, if I am not, would Delegate Ruth correct me. The amendment as we have it before us, I believe, does not address itself to the question of the judicial qualification commission as far as statewide offices are concerned, is that correct?

DELEGATE RUTH. That is correct.

DELEGATE IRVIS. As far as your amendment is concerned, it would leave the recommendations of the judiciary committee intact as far as statewide judges are concerned?

DELEGATE RUTH. I am not trying to attack that problem.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, I have been at this microphone many times in the last several days saying the same thing, that I am going to say again today. Authority originally existed among the human tribes in the man who was the strongest, the most agile, and sometimes the most brutal. He was both executive, judiciary and legislative. It has taken many, many generations and many thousands of years to evolve the present day system of democracy and I am convinced it is still evolving.

There are many of us who talk about a republican form of government. The republican form of government was made necessary only because the people in the large democracy were not able to communicate rapidly with one another. We sent representatives to Washington and Harrisburg only because the people themselves cannot at this point of development of human communication be heard from instantly.

The time will come when the people of this country and, perhaps, indeed, the people of the world will be able to voice electronically their opinions on major decisions which affect them. When that day comes, true democracy would have finally evolved.

The proposal of the committee here is a backward step, it is a step backward into the age of kings. It says, in effect, there are certain selected human beings who know better what is right for the rest of humanity than the rest of the humanity knows for itself. I decry that position and deny it. I am in favor of the election of the executive. I am in favor of the election of the Legislature and I am in favor of the election of the judiciary. I quite agree with the learned Secretary. I, too, know in a lesser degree than he, of course, how some of the judges get on the bench. The system does not always work the way it is in the books but that does not deny the basic democracy of the system. The fact that men may corrupt it does not deny the basic usefulness of the system.

We are here deciding today one of the basic questions of all mankind. Shall men govern themselves? And you cannot logically ask a man the question, do you wish to be a slave or do you wish to be free? There is no logic in a question like that, and that is what the option plan does. It says, in effect, are you willing to vote away your democratic right to select the people who shall judge you? If 51 per cent of the people say "yes," 49 per cent must submit. I say this is wrong. This is not an option which we have a right to offer. It is immoral for us to offer such an option to the people. The people have spoken a long time ago before the advent of this country. They have stated without equivocation that they mean to govern themselves and they mean to elect their executive leader. They mean to elect the men who pass their laws and elect the men who sit in judgment on them. It is for this reason I rise today to support this amendment and I will support the amendment for statewide election of statewide jurists. However, this is the amendment before us. Let us not deny to the people the right which they over long and bloody centuries have won, and that is the right to select their judges. This is their human right and we have no right here today to even tamper with it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Bunting.

DELEGATE BUNTING. Mr. President, after hearing Delegate Irvis, I am having a difficult time in getting to my starting place on what I had intended to say, because we are not asking the people to abdicate their voice in the ultimate judicial system.

The possible panel selection, which will be preserved for their adoption, would be composed as to its majority by people appointed by the Governor whom the people elect. Where I feel Delegate Irvis is overlooking a most essential form of our system of justice, is its dedication to the proposition that justice shall be impartial, it shall not be a matter of satisfying the majority. The unpopular cause, the communist, the rapist, he deserves the same due process before the bench of the court as any litigant and, if he does not have it, none of us do.

Justice wears a blindfold, in order to establish that justice is impartial. Delegate Irvis has talked about kings, and I call the delegates' attention, if I may, to the book of Deuteronomy, the book of Moses in the Old Testament where the charge was, "I charge you judges, hear the causes between your brother and judge righteously between every man and his brother and the stranger that is with you, ye shall not respect persons in judgment. You shall hear the small as well as the great." I do not mean to say that the Lord is on my side and not on Delegate Irvis', because, if that be the case, I would be the first casualty.

I do say this comes to us over the ages, and this is the fundamental concept in our law, impartiality. I firmly believe that the merit panel selection which is intended by the Committee to be preserved to the people affords justice the means of maintaining that blindfold in place. I say we must make every effort to insulate, to protect our judges from political pressures. We must demand this immunity for our judges. The merit selection is just one step in maintaining that blindfold and in preventing partisan political pressures from pecking away at it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Michael.

DELEGATE MICHAEL. Mr. President, I would like to elaborate a bit on the point Delegate Bunting brought out. I think we have been carried away with the idea of the will of the majority and we are applying it to all three branches, legislative, executive and judicial.

Delegate Bunting first brought out the idea of impartiality of justice. I think the second point that should be brought out concerning justice is that it does not necessarily reflect the will of the majority.

Because a judge makes an unpopular decision, we do not turn him out, as we can turn out the legislature because we want a change in policy. His decision may be unpopular, but if he is upholding and deciding fairly on an unpopular law, you turn out the legislature and get a change, you do not turn out the judge to get a change.

Let me be specific here. We are upholding the rights of individuals, many times the right of the minority. I can use two examples: First, Delegate Bunting mentioned Communist. If we can go back to the Joe McCarthy era when there was thought of Communists, every one a suspect of being a Communist, there we had to rely on the courts to protect the individual. We can turn out the legislature and have them set up different laws on the regulation of the Communist Party, but we cannot just turn out the courts because they make a decision that may be unpopular with the majority but does protect an individual. Let us go up and look at a Supreme Court decision on prayers in schools. If that court, or the judges of that court, were put up for popular election right after that decision, they probably would have been defeated because of the reaction of the majority of the people at the time the decision was handed down with regard to the prayer in schools. That court was upholding a principle stated in the Constitution of the United States in the First Amendment on Freedom of Religion.

The court should not be subject to the pressures of either politicians or waves of public enthusiasm to bend its decisions. It should, on the other hand, be upholding the rights that are stated in our Constitution. It should uphold the laws that are passed by our Legislature, there is the place we make the changes. You say what difference is this going to be. We still can reject or accept a judge after he has been appointed, two or three years after, when he comes up for approval or for rejection.

Let me point out one basic difference in this system from the popular election system. In the popular election system, suppose a judge has made a decision in favor of an individual, at this time, for example, we will take the present Vietnam war and the predominant public feeling that he has made it against it. The party in power, and I am looking forward to the presidential elections of 1968, may be changed because of popular feeling concerning the conduct of the Vietnam war. If the judge is up at that time, under the present system he will be turned out with the party that is turned out, not on the merits of whether he has done a good job as a judge or not.

Under the system that is proposed both as a local option in the counties and statewide, a judge is put up without a party designation to run on his record two or three years after he has been chosen. You as voters can say, yes, we like the way he is doing his job, or, no, we do not like the way he is doing his job. He is not going to be pushed out on the wave of party pressure, he will not go out with the Republican Party if it goes out or go out with the Democratic Party if it goes out because he is running on a party label and has been elected on a party basis.

I think this is something we have to consider very seriously when we are talking in terms of the role of the judicial system in our government. That role is very important in upholding the law, in protecting individuals and protecting minorities.

The second point I make is this, that we have to go back to the voters. One of the primary things that the reform organization in this State campaigned on was reform of the judiciary.

One of the primary arguments they used was that we should have a merit selection and put it to the voters for adoption or rejection of a particular judge without a party label. If we are considering the people who sold the Convention and now have to go out and sell the Constitution, we have to think in terms of the Chamber of Commerce, the JCs, the League of Women Voters, and the American Association of University Women. These organizations feel that it is important that our judiciary be just as fair and selected in just as proficient a manner as we can be. I think we should consider that point also when we are making our decision here as to whether to offer the voters an option on the local level, and whether on a statewide level to offer them a merit system.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Curran.

DELEGATE CURRAN. Mr. President, I would like to make one small point and it is particularly to my dear friend, Secretary Michener, and that is that I do not care what kind of system or what kind of a deal Bucks County may have once their judges are appointed. The nub of the question is that even though they may have a deal and even though they may come up with a Republican or Democrat, or have some formula for splitting their bench, the fact is that every single person who meets the qualifications for the Judiciary, has a right to circulate his nominating petition and file the same and submit his name to the voters of that judicial district, and that is the point. No matter how big or small, how stupid or how brilliant you are, you still have the ultimate right to have the voters confirm or disaffirm your suspicions. When the day comes that every man who is practicing law no longer has that right, it is a sad, sad comment and a sad, sad day.

I think it should be pointed out that insofar as our Committee is concerned, this particular provision had an interesting history and the history is, first of all, there was no option. Then the option got put in and then the option was tried to be taken out and, as was said by Chairman Amsterdam, it lost by a razor thin majority.

It is a fact, and I am sure everyone knows it, that this was a very contentious point in the Judiciary Committee and, as was said, it was never taken out and that is why it is in.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hocker.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. President, not being a learned man, I can only speak about the things that I have seen happen in history in my lifetime.

I want to say to anyone in this room, yes, I was a politician for a lot of years. I would not have given it up for anything in the world, but each time I ran—and I ran 11 times—I won, but I never quarreled with the right of another man to file against me and pick me apart before the voters. If you are this weak, then you better stay out of politics and you also better stay out of the court, it does not matter how you get on there.

I want you to know that the rights of the minority in this State and in the United States are upheld by the right of the electorate, not only to elect, but to submit names by petition at election time, and then let the chips fall where they will. Let the electorate go after it.

Nothing hurts me more in the world than when I drive to Florida and pass four or five signs along the road that say, "Impeach Earl Warren." It is a most difficult task. I do not know anything bad about Mr. Warren, but someone evidently does or he would not have put those signs up along the road. I do not even know the gentleman, but in my lifetime I saw the Supreme Court of the United States packed, and packed for a reason, and they made no bones about it. They said, "We are going to pack the court so we can do the things that we want done." I think that has been done in the United States, and I dread to think of the day that that could ever happen in Pennsylvania.

I want them to go before the electorate. I am like that young man over there who I think has the right to approach the bench. I cannot approach the bench and, after you people get through here, I do not think I can even be a JP, but if you want to change the JP system—and there are some wrongs in it—good, do it. If you want to change some other things that are wrong, you do it, but do not ever take away from the people the right to elect their peers.

We left the mother country because we did not believe in breeding for blood lines. We believed in breeding people that could come up by their boot straps, immigrants, whoever they are. The people should have a right to file a petition and they do not have to bow down to a supreme body who is chosen to pick them. Are we right? Are they ready to go on the bench?

Mr. President, we are as political in Dauphin County as we can be without going to jail, but I have never known in my lifetime a bad judge in Dauphin County, never. We got a man right here in this Convention who came to the common pleas court in Dauphin County as a very young man. In fact, when he came into the hall of the House, they told him to grow a mustache or nobody would listen to him. That is how young he was. He went on to common pleas court, and I will guarantee you, if you had a system like this, Bob Woodside would have never been chosen from over Peters Mountain to serve on the common pleas court. He served and he served well.

Mr. President, if you do not do anything else in this Convention and, if you want to save what you are trying to do here, the things that are wrong, do not butcher it up with what you are trying to put in here. The right of the people to choose and pick their peers and the right of any man to file a petition to run for judge, if he has the ability.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Sharp.

DELEGATE SHARP. Mr. President, it has been suggested by Delegate Irvis only a very few moments ago that one of the most fundamental sociological rights of man is man's right to be judged, and with this I heartily agree. There is no question that this is fundamental. This is the precept to which we who are members of the Bar have dedicated our lives and our professional talents but that is not the issue before this body today. The issue before this body by this amendment is whether the people shall select their judges in only one way, in perpetuity, and that of election. This is the issue that is raised by Delegate Ruth's amendment.

A great deal of that which Delegate Hocker so eloquently said a few minutes ago, I subscribe to heartily. I would not wish at any time to see this body, or any other body, take away from the people the right to select their peers, nor would I any the less wish to see it take away their right to choose those that shall judge them.

Mr. President, I wonder whether the opponents of this committee proposal, the supporters of the amendment, are really being honest with this. On the one hand, they say to us that we must give the people the right to elect their peers, and yet, on the other hand, they say, but the only right we will give the people is to elect their judges, we will not accord them the right to decide for themselves whether they should wish to elect or whether they should wish to choose another system.

I would say that the issue posed here is one which is vital and most fundamental to our rights as citizens of this Commonwealth, but, by the same token, I would not be so presumptuous as to believe that the people do not have the right to choose for themselves, whether they should desire to continue electing judges or whether they should desire to employ another method.

How can we in intellectual honesty with each other, state that the people shall have the right in this Commonwealth to change the very form of government itself which has existed for much greater period than the 1830s referred to so eloquently by Delegate Solomon? How can we say the people are sufficiently sophisticated that they may choose home rule if they wish, that they may choose area government in the variety and styles and sizes that they so desire, that they may exercise rights of optional government in such manner as they please, but at the same time say that you must continue to select your judges as they have been selected for the past 175 years in Pennsylvania? I say this is not an expression of our confidence in the people of this Commonwealth. I say this is not concommitant with the principles which I have heard so loudly on this floor as the faith in the people of this Commonwealth.

The issue, Mr. President, is not that we are denying anything to the electorate of this Commonwealth by the committee proposal, for the committee proposal gives to the people the right to either continue election or to use the alternate method.

I believe it was Justice Holmes that said, "The life of law is not logic but experience."

I cannot be so wise. I cannot be so honest as to look forward 40 years from now, 50 years from now, 60 years from now, and say a judicial district in Pennsylvania would not be better in itself if it chose another method rather than election, and yet at the same time I would have no quarrel if that district decided to continue election for the next 200 years.

Let us have faith in the people who sent us. I would take nothing from them. I would, however, grant them the right to determine their own destinies in regard to those whom they wish to judge them.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Powell.

DELEGATE POWELL. Mr. President, two of the previous speakers have mentioned my home county of Bucks, and I would like to mention it, also.

Our esteemed Secretary outlined the procedure of selecting judges in Bucks County. That procedure is no different than in any other county throughout this Commonwealth.

What I would like to ask the esteemed Secretary is, have we gotten bad judges from this system? Have we gotten judges that should not be judges from a system of election as a sitting judge principle? Furthermore, to bring his memory up to date, if you will recall in 1956 there was an election of judges. Although I come from a Republican County, a Democrat became judge in a race with the Republican.

I say that opportunity should remain, and I support this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Bloom.

DELEGATE BLOOM. In starting my remarks, I want to say a few things. I came down here as a delegate not only to represent Washington County and Greene County, but to represent the people of the State of Pennsylvania. I came down here to reform, and by reform I mean to revise the four articles for which we were elected.

I did not speak too much, nor did I offer any amendments whatsoever to the three first articles, because I felt very sincerely that those with the political know-how knew more than I did by coming down here and making a hurried study in the period of two months and a half. I felt they were better qualified to talk on these particular subjects and know what reforms should be made. I voted for all of the reform measures that were offered that might be for the betterment and the revision of these particular articles.

The remarks that I make in my talk right now are not derogatory to the politicians, but in favor of the politicians in their own field. I favor politics because my best and closest relative is what is commonly known as a politician, has been for a great number of years, so, therefore, I would not say anything in derogation of politics in American government or in the State of Pennsylvania.

I have had something close to my heart and I speak from my heart and I speak from my own conscience, not from anybody else's conscience or anybody else's heart, and I speak to this delegation not derogatory, but in the sense of trying to help them come to some conclusions here in this judicial article.

In the first place, I am a realist, because a realist always knows and takes people for what they are. I realize, No. 1, that everyone here, with few exceptions, were put on a party ballot either Republican or Democratic and they were elected on that party ballot. They were put there, and I realize this. I was put there, too, and I do not segregate myself from any of the rest of the delegates. I was put there by the political leaders of our county. However, I am not bound to those political leaders whenever it comes to judicial reform. Therefore, I am speaking only as an individual.

I believe that I have worked in the vineyards of the judiciary for the past 45 years. I have seen many changes in this time, I have seen many reforms in this time. I realize all of us think in terms of our provincialism, our own judicial district, and we feel if it is good enough in our judicial district, it ought to be good enough in the whole State of Pennsylvania. I take the broad view in this matter. I think what is good for all of the people of Pennsylvania, both Republicans and Democrats, is good for my people in Washington County and Greene County.

I am here for one purpose, and I am only speaking for one purpose, that is to get better qualified judges in the judicial system. Not mainly for the present, but for the future. Now, let us get at it.

I hate to do this, but I know that you all know the procedures that are followed in politics. What are the qualifications of a judge that is going to be picked by the political heads of that particular judicial district? No. 1, does he make a good appearance before the public? No. 2, is he a friendly person and can he make friends quickly? No. 3, what has he done for the party and does he deserve this elevation for the work he has done politically? No. 4, is he financially able to contribute money to the campaign, and how much? And is he going to be a good campaigner and is he going to win? Those are the qualifications that they usually look for when they select judges.

When they say that the people select judges, the people do not select the judges that run for the parties. The party heads of that particular judicial district pick those people and you do not make an application to become a judge. They pick you, usually on the general qualifications that I have outlined. They are picked by the few and they are picked by the political leaders, and they are the ones that either win or lose in a campaign. Both parties are on an equal basis in this.

If you will note the qualifications under our present system for the selection of judges, there is not mentioned a very important fact: Does the candidate have judicial temperament? This is never mentioned in any campaign as the politician does not know, nor does he usually care, whether or not the candidate does have judicial temperament.

However, to get down to the facts of the case—this is the main question—do you want the political heads of the two-party system to choose your judges, or do you want a qualified commission which will deal with the lawyers? Some of them are lawyers and they know whether or not he has judicial temperament or will make a better judge? Do you want them to select those people and let the Governor choose from the qualified selected group that is given to him? I believe if you do that, in the long run, in accordance with my own experience, we will have better qualified judges for the future.

I want to call this to your attention, have you noticed the great decay in the moral concepts and in the respect of the court, and the respect of lawyers and the respect of our own government in the young people today? We must protect the judicial system, and I think the only way we can protect the judicial system, in my honest opinion, is by the merit system. Call it what you may, if there is a better system to get better judges for the future, I will be for it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Lee.

MOTION TO TABLE RUTH AMENDMENT

DELEGATE L. B. LEE. Mr. President, it is my humble opinion that we have the cart before the horse at this instant. The Kauffman amendment provides the method of selection for statewide judges and, as such, the option discussed in the Ruth amendment.

Therefore, Mr. President, I move we table the Ruth amendment and consider Mr. Kauffman's amendment first.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Has your motion been seconded?

DELEGATE SOLOMON. There was no second to the motion. I would like to speak.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I saw Mrs. Sprogell's hand go up.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. I do not think she meant it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Did you second the motion?

DELEGATE SPROGELL. Yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Moved by Delegate Lee, and seconded by Delegate Sprogell that we table the Ruth amendment until we have considered the Kauffman amendment.

I see Delegate Scranton. I understand this is not debatable.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I do not want to debate it. May I give an experience of the Committee?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does the Chair hear any objection to that?

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
The motion was not agreed to.

The question recurs,
Will the Convention agree to table the Ruth amendment until the Kauffman amendment has been considered?

Less than the majority having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the negative and the motion to table was not agreed to.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Henderson.

DELEGATE HENDERSON. I have not spoken on the amendment. I spoke as a prelude to discussion.

Our democratic form of government calls for the people's voice and also their choice in all three areas of government. If we change from the elective process to the selective process, then we change this democratic form of government. Let us not transplant a philosophy from another state. Missouri's problems belong to Missouri, and not to Pennsylvania.

I say this, who shall judge the panel? Who shall determine the qualifications? These are questions that disturb me. If we begin to select judges by the panel process, then the next step we shall select our legislators by the panel process, and then our administrators, and then we have an autocracy and not a democracy. Why should the people suffer with an individual who serves as a judge for the first two years on a trial basis when they really did not have the chance to actually select this judge?

I say this, Delegate Bloom's comments concerning the qaulifications of judges may pertain to Washington County, but they do not pertain to Beaver County. We have a history from 1776 of elected judges, and they stood on their merits. Never has the Supreme Court questioned any of their decisions. I say this applies to the whole Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The elective process is part of our democratic heritage and, if we change this heritage, then we are changing democracy.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Hook.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, I sat here and listened to this discussion and I was not going to rise, but, being the son of a former judge who served the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania for a period in excess of 20 years, I felt I should reiterate some of the points that I have discussed with my father and point out some of his thinking on this present subject.

In answer to Delegate Henderson, I would like to state that Judge Scalera and Judge Riley were both originally appointed in your county. I think you remember this, it was within the last two years. I think this perfectly well shows some of the problems we have. I think these two gentlemen are exceptionally good judges. I think they were appointed by the Governor and they were elected, and I think these two gentlemen are very exceptional men.

I have lived with the problems of a judge for over 20 years. I know some of the things and some of the ideas that he has to go through. I say this from the bottom of my heart, because I have been in politics a number of years through my association with my father. I feel very strongly about what the Committee has proposed. I believe that this gives to the people in the State of Pennsylvania an option that they have been in need of for a number of years.

I will tell you why. Look around your own counties. Look at it and look at it hard. There are many attorneys in your Bar Associations who I feel—and I know you feel the same as I do—should be judges of your court of common pleas of your particular counties. Have you ever asked yourselves why they are not? I can tell you why they are not. Basically, for one reason politics. This is viable. We are losing many men who should be and could be judges of our courts. I know some of the gentlemen in this room who I feel very strongly about and I have discussed with them their political futures, as to whether or not they would consider being candidates for judges in their own counties, and their answer is, no. I asked them why not. The basic reason is they have to go out and face the public and they have to go out and put a lot of money into a political campaign. This is expensive. In our county it costs $30,000 to run for a judgeship and there are only 15,000 Democratic votes. That is $2.00 a head.

I think we have to sit down and look this thing over and apply a lot of sense to this because it is very possible that many counties will adopt the option plan. I think we have to consider this, and I think the Committee has made a wonderful suggestion to the people of the State of Pennsylvania in answer to an area which I feel has to be considered.

Over the weekend I think many of you watched Channel 2 in the western part of the State, and one of the things brought up by the announcer—and I think this announcer has been very fair in his dealings with this Convention—was that there were 91 politicians in this Convention and this is why, when we come to a controversial area, we back away from it and we use the words, "Let the people decide." I think with this option form, we will let the people decide. I think it is important that we give them a choice. This is not just for today, this is for the future. This is very important. I think we ought to talk to Judge Woodring, Judge Burkholder, Judge Fortney, Judge Shettig and Judge Woodside about this matter and get some of their ideas on the election of judges and selection of judges. I will say to you in many counties there will only be one or two judges that will be approved by the qualifications committee. Mainly because many of our counties do not have judges or attorneys who are of judicial timber.

Yes, there will be many attorneys who will run who are not qualified, and they will expend a lot of money. They will get defeated by the popular votes. The people do have the final say, but, at the same time, when these particular counties are asking for a change, we turned down Allegheny County and I have had a flood of telegrams for the last ten days from the people of Allegheny County saying, let us give them a community court that we elected here not to do so. But, at the same time, we are going to provide an option for the people in Allegheny County to reform their line of judiciary. I say the same thing is true here, we should still give an option to the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, a right to see if they are going to choose the merit selection of judges on the county or judicial district level.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, the speeches have been in passion and eloquent and in many instances very logical and analytical, both pro and con. When a man convinced against his will and is of the same opinion still and so it goes. I have listened now to many good addresses on this matter.

I have, also, Mr. President, studied the Missouri Plan very carefully over the years. I have studied the Pennsylvania plan as proposed, and I have come to the conclusion that we are really, in the article submitted by the committee, giving our constituents no choice at all.

In the alternative we say to them, you may elect your judges, or in the alternative we say, you may surrender this right which is yours as an inheritance over all the years you have been in this republic of ours to a small committee of five, who can very easily, very easily and readily, make that choice, influence the choice, and they become the hierarchy which determines the judicial perrogatives of the judicial district.

For that reason, I say, Mr. President, it is far better to favor this amendment. Eliminate it as an alternative, which it is not at all for it is not a good alternative. Let the people speak as they have a right to speak in this, our republic.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me ask the delegates, are we ready for the question or do we want to hear more about this?

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
The motion was agreed to.

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Michener. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE MICHENER. I rise to a question of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman may state it.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, my esteemed fellow delegate from Bucks County asked two questions, which in a sense do touch my honor as it was—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Michener, I do not think that is a point of personal privilege. I think you are going into the debate on this.

DELEGATE MICHENER. No, Mr. President. It is clearly a point of personal privilege, sir.

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE WITHDRAWN

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Can you ask them after we have had the vote?

DELEGATE MICHENER. Yes, Mr. President.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Ruth?

KAUFFMAN AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have one amendment which is similar to the one you have just voted on, which is the Kauffman amendment. If you want, we can take that now, or we can close now and let this in with the others.

I am going to try to get the feeling of the delegates as to how you want to handle this.

A VOICE. Let us do it now.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You want to take up the Kauffman amendment now?

A VOICE. Yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The understanding is, then, that after we finish the discussion of the Kauffman amendment and vote on it we will ask those who have amendments pending, and there are quite a few of them, if they will meet tonight with the committee in order to cut down on the number of amendments, consolidate them and get us lined up for a productive day tomorrow.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I note that Delegate Kauffman has somewhere between six and ten amendments on the subject of judicial selection. I was under the impression that the next Kauffman amendment on the table had to do with statewide judges.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I do not know where you got that impression, Delegate O'Donnell.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. My understanding is that the Kauffman amendment pertains to Section 11 (a). It starts off with Section 11 (a).

This is the amendment, by the way, that we were not going to take up until we got the one on 11 (b).

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Is that 11 (a), sir, having to do with statewide judges?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. In other words, that really is a brand-new subject to bring up?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, it is.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, is this the proper procedure if Mr. O'Donnell is going to engage in this dialogue to move to table the proposed Kauffman amendment? There was a motion to table the prior Ruth-Solomon amendment and that was overruled.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fineman.

DELEGATE FINEMAN. I wonder if we are now dealing with the amendment that was distributed prior to the Ruth-Solomon amendment, whether or not we are properly raising a question to table this amendment?

I ask that question of the Parliamentarian. I do not understand the procedure that is presently being engaged in.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. There is no motion in connection with this amendment. This amendment, as far as I know, has not been presented yet. This is the next amendment we have on the list to consider. I understand it has not been distributed yet.

DELEGATE FINEMAN. We have it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Not the amendment we are now considering.

MOTION TO ADJOURN

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I move to adjourn.

DELEGATE BLOOM. I would like to second that.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. A motion to adjourn was made by Delegate O'Donnell, seconded by Delegate Bloom.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. All right. We will open up the voting machine, and all those in favor will vote aye, and those opposed to the motion will vote no. Those favoring adjournment, and I assume that your complete motion would be to adjourn until tomorrow morning at nine o'clock—is that correct?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is the motion before the House.

Those voting yea will vote in favor of it.

The question recurred,

Will the Convention agree to the motion to adjourn until tomorrow morning at 9 a.m.?

KAUFFMAN AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The amendment to be considered is the Kauffman amendment, which has not yet been distributed, but will be distributed.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Kauffman to Committee Proposal No. 7?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 4, line 30, by inserting after "of": Appointment or Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 5, lines 4 to 7, by striking out "from a list of persons qualified for the office" in line 4, all of lines 5 to 7, and inserting: with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate.

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 5, lines 13 to 15, by striking out "courts of Statewide jurisdiction," in line 13, all of lines 14 and 15, and inserting: in section 11 (a).

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 5, line 30, by inserting after "of": two-thirds of Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 12), page 7, lines 9 to 30; page 8, lines 1 to 10, by striking out all of said lines.

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 13), page 8, line 11, by striking out "13" and inserting: 12

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 14), page 9, line 25, by striking out "14" and inserting: 13

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 16), page 11, line 2, by striking out "16" and inserting: 15

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 17), page 14, line 1, by striking out "17" and inserting: 16

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 18), page 14, line 26, by striking out "18" and inserting: 17

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman in connection with this amendment.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, I realize that it is late and that most of us are tired, but this is a terribly important subject which we are considering and I implore you all to listen carefully and consider this with an open mind. Listen carefully to the arguments which will be propounded both for and against the method of selection of statewide judges that this amendment proposes.

This amendment, if you have read it now, you will realize covers only judges of statewide jurisdiction, and what this amendment proposes is that all judges of statewide jurisdiction will be appointed in the same way, following the same concept now being followed by the Federal judiciary, by the State of New Jersey and by the State of Hawaii, and, incidentally, I think very importantly and significantly, the method proposed and advocated in the model state constitution prepared by the National Municipal League.

This is not a question of reformers against anti-reformers. This is a question of what is the method of reform that this body wants to propose and suggest.

I submit to you, Mr. President, that the judiciary, the Federal judiciary, has been reputed throughout the nation as being of outstanding quality and character. The Federal judiciary is appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate.

What I am proposing here is the appointment of the judges of statewide jurisdiction by the Governor, with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate.

As most of you, if not all of you, know I was one of the co-chairmen of the subcommittee on the selection of judges, and I think it is only fair for all of you to know that the proposal of the standing judiciary committee that is now before you, providing for a selection panel was not, I repeat, was not the recommendation of the subcommittee. The subcommittee, at least the majority of the subcommittee, objected to placing power in a group of persons without any responsibility.

The selection panel, as recommended in the present proposal of the judiciary committee, would be composed, as I am sure you know, of four laymen appointed by the Governor and three lawyers appointed by the Supreme Court, and I think in considering this proposal we must carefully analyze and consider the make-up of that commission.

To label the other proposal as a nonpartisan merit proposal is a contradiction really of facts, because, if you will examine the language of the committee proposal, it is suggested, it is required, that four of the members of the panel be of one party and three of the members be of the other political party, which demonstrates beyond any doubt that it was contemplated by the framers of this proposal—

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Braham. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BRAHAM. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary point. Some of us were not allowed to speak on this last argument. This gentleman is now making his speech against the plan of the Judiciary Committee. I think he is out of order. He is supposed to be speaking about approval by two-thirds of the Senate. He is spending his time destroying the plan we proposed which we were not allowed to defend.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want to say to Delegate Braham, that my understanding was that Delegate Kauffman was speaking to his amendment. Now, if he confines himself to the amendment—

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, I have been certainly. I cannot think of anything more relevant to an amendment which abolishes a selection panel than to tell why you are abolishing this selection panel.

This amendment, if Delegate Braham would read it carefully, abolishes a selection panel and imposes the requirement that a selection by the governor be confirmed by two-thirds of the Senate.

I cannot think of anything more relevant to the abolition of the panel than tell why you think it ought to be abolished.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed, Delegate Kauffman.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. As I was about to say, Mr. President, the panel clearly contemplates that political considerations will enter into the considerations of the panel itself, since the proposal provides that no more than four of the members of the seven-man panel will be members of one party and three will be members of the other party. It is not nonpartisan at all. It is very conceivable, as a matter of fact, that you could clearly have totally political recommendations to the Governor, and the Governor could make totally political appointments without any responsibility on anyone. On whom would you put the blame? The panel is not elected by the people. It is not directly responsible to anyone.

The Governor, who must make his appointment from a list of 10 to 20 names submitted to him by the panel, simply could say, I appointed one of the persons whose name was submitted to me, I have no further responsibility. I was limited. Therefore, you diffuse responsibility so completely that there is no one upon whom you could lay the blame for political appointment. On the other hand, if you place the responsibility where you place the power and give the Governor the power to make the appointment and require the Senate to confirm the appointment, you have no one involved in that process who has not been directly elected by the people and who is not directly responsible to the people.

I submit to you that any governor of this Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is not going to pick a man, when he is responsible solely with the Senate for that appointment, who is not qualified and who is not meritorious to serve as a member of the judiciary.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I think we have to be very careful of what really is the antithesis to every thing that democracy has been based upon, and that is the concept of a body selected not by the people, not responsible to the people, meeting in secret behind closed doors, basing their decisions upon qualifications that will be kept private into which no one can inquire, permitting that type of a body to select our judges.

I submit that it is far better, far more non-political and far more meritorious, to permit your Governor to select the judges. I also submit that two-thirds of the Senate assures minority representation and, in the words of the National Municipal League, who has propounded the model state constitution, straight gubernatorial appointment, with advice and consent of the Legislature, recommends itself to the National Municipal League because of the high degree of visibility. Its deliberations are not in secret, not behind closed doors and it will be in the open. It will be for the public to see, and their reasons will be clearly known and defined.

DELEGATE THORNBURGH. May I interrogate Delegate Kauffman?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, he will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE THORNBURGH. Reference has been made to recommendations of the National Municipal League and their model constitution. As I refer to page 406 of the manual, The Judiciary, do they not set forth as an alternative to their recommendation as 604(a) the kind of nominating commission referred to in the committee proposal?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. They set forth as an alternative, less favored by them, the concept of a selection panel, but one that is picked in a different way. One which I remind you, Delegate Thornburgh, would not be controlled, in essence, by the Supreme Court.

This nominating commission, which the standing committee has proposed, would literally be controlled by the Supreme Court, which would name three members, and not by the Governor who names four, but because of the staggered terms of the members, it would take a Governor until he was in his second term to have any chance of nominating people who might be responsive to his will, so that this type of nominating panel, which I think you must consider, when you are considering the plan, it would be conceivably possible and most likely probable that the Supreme Court would be naming the panel, would name the Supreme Court, which would name the panel and you would have an elite naming an elite.

DELEGATE THORNBURGH. Referring to the alternative, is it not so that the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court would be a member of the panel?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. He would be one of the members.

DELEGATE THORNBURGH. And he would act as chairman?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. He would be one of the members. However, there would be six other members who would not be members of the court. There would be three laymen and three lawyers, and the lawyers, may I remind you, would be selected by the Bar and not by the Supreme Court. I think that is an important distinction to draw.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, the Chair recognizes Delegate Tomascik.

DELEGATE TOMASCIK. May I interrogate Delegate Kauffman, please?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Yes, sir.

DELEGATE TOMASCIK. Mr. Kauffman, assuming under your proposed amendment that the Governor makes the appointment with the consent and advice of two-thirds of the Senate, then that person stands for office, is that correct?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. That is correct.

DELEGATE TOMASCIK. Then is he permitted to have any opponent? Can any other member of the Bar also be a candidate against him, or is it on the basis of whether he is a good judge or not?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. It would be on a "yes-no" retention basis. You must keep that in mind, too. You cannot consider this proposal in isolation, or in a vacuum, coupled with the "yes-no" retention as well as the judicial inquiry review board, I think we have coupled also with the two-thirds consent, you have a total package which is completely free from political control, and it will give us the kind of judiciary we are aiming for in this Convention.

DELEGATE TOMASCIK. Thank you for the clarification.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate McGeary.

DELEGATE McGEARY. May I ask Delegate Kauffman one question?

Is it not true that the model plan which you have mentioned does not require two-thirds of the Senate? It seems to me that the majority of the Senate and two-thirds is a very important difference, two-thirds would allow for considerable political maneuvering.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. What you say is true, and the reason why the two-thirds was inserted was to insure that there would be minority representation, and in the words described some place—I am not sure of the exact page reference in our manual—one of the reasons why some of us discussed the two-thirds is because it would require support of the minority party, plus it would promote a nonpartisan spirit, and that is what we are aiming for by putting the two-thirds in.

DELEGATE McGEARY. May I point out just one thing? I think you referred to the United States system, the Federal system, as being good, and they do not require two-thirds, it is merely a majority.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Clerk now recognizes Delegate Scales.

DELEGATE SCALES. Mr. President, as I understand this system, there would be a simple appointment by the Governor without the use of a mandatory selection panel. If this amendment were adopted, would there be any thing to prevent the Governor from creating his own advisory panel to aid him in making such a selection?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. No, Mr. President. As a matter of a fact, as the co-chairman of our standing Judiciary Committee did when he was Governor of this Commonwealth, it would be perfectly possible and, as a matter of fact, advisable for a governor during his election campaign to state that he would select his judges on the basis of the recommendations given to him by an advisory panel, but that would be permissive and not mandatory. You would not be dividing responsibility, because in that instance the Governor would still be the person responsible for the appointment and he could not shirk his responsibility by saying, well, the names were submitted to me by some selection panel and I am sorry about that, but I had to pick one of them.

DELEGATE SCALES. Mr. President, I have one further question, if I may?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed.

DELEGATE SCALES. Can you elaborate a little bit further, Mr. Kauffman, on your statement that your amendment is, in effect, the Federal system?

The reason that I asked that question is that I have heard proponents of the Bar Association comment with respect to the panel selection plan that it was similar to the Federal system, and I think many of us would find your comments as chairman of your sub-committee interesting in that regard.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I believe we have modeled our plan after the type of system which has worked very well for the Federal judiciary.

We have placed the responsibility with the Governor, which would correspond with the responsibility placed upon the President, and we have placed the responsibility for confirmation in the hands of the Senate, as the responsibility is placed in the hands of the United States Senate. The inquiries which would be made, obviously, into a person's qualifications would not be done in secret behind closed doors, but, on the contrary, the inquiry would be made in public, in the halls of the Senate by persons who were elected by the people and directly responsible to the people.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I am certain that this motion what is tantamount to lifetime appointment by the Governor is something very new in the minds of thinking Pennsylvanians, and it is certainly one which I would like to have the opportunity to digest. That is one of the reasons why a bit earlier this evening I suggested that we adjourn so we could have an opportunity to think this one over this evening.

However, I understand from an earlier ruling made in this Convention that some kind of business has to be transacted between one motion to adjourn and another. Is that correct, sir?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is correct.

We will recognize Delegate Woodside.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, if we are about to adjourn, I have an amendment I would like to offer to the amendment, and it has just been prepared. I would like to be able to offer it before we adjourn.

It is an amendment which would merely strike out "of two-thirds", those three words. It is made up and I would like to offer it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You are in order in offering your amendment to the amendment at this time.

WOODSIDE AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Kauffman to Committee Proposal No. 7?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE offered the following amendment to the amendment offered by Delegate Kauffman which was read by the clerk:

Amend the Amendments by striking out in line 5 "of two-thirds"

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment to the amendment?

MOTION TO TABLE WOODSIDE AMENDMENT TO KAUFFMAN AMENDMENT AND THE KAUFFMAN AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Jirolanio.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I now move to lay the amendment and the amendment to amend the amendment on the table until tomorrow morning.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I second that, sir.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Jirolanio, seconded by Delegate O'Donnell, that the amendment to the amendment being offered by Judge Woodside, as well as the Kauffman amendment, be laid on the table until tomorrow morning.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the motion to table the Kauffman and Woodside Amendments?

The roll was recorded as follows:

MEETING OF JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes the chairman of the judiciary committee, Chairman Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. In accordance with the suggestion made by the President, we would like the members of the Judiciary Committee to meet with those who are proposing amendments to the various items on selection which we have been discussing all day immediately following the end of this session. I will read off their names, and by that time we hope to know where the meeting will be held.

The names of the persons I am told who have amendments are as follows: Delegates Gerber, Woodside, Baldrige, Barron, Tate, Orban, Jirolanio, Shoemaker, McGlynn, Curran, Kauffman, Banes and Burkholder.

The meeting will be held in Room 615 of the Main Capitol Building.

As you all know, the elevators at the south end going up to the fifth floor take you into Room 615. There will be a meeting for the purpose of trying to sort out the amendments and get them in as good order as is possible for tomorrow's introduction.

A MEETING OF SUBCOMMITTEE ON LOCAL FINANCE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I have one quick announcement.

The subcommittee on local finance will meet immediately following this session in the rear of this room to make a presentation.

ADJOURNMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pasqeurilla for the adjournment motion.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, I move that this Convention do now adjourn until Tuesday, February 20, 1968 at 9 a.m., e.s.t.

The motion was agreed to and (at 6:45 p.m., e.s.t.) the Convention was adjourned.

PENNSYLVANIA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION 1967-1968

JOURNAL

Volume 1 | Tuesday, February 20, 1968 | Number 47

The Convention was called to order at 9 a.m., e.s.t.

THE PRESIDENT (Raymond J. Broderick) IN THE CHAIR

PRAYER

THE REVEREND JOHN S. McCALL of the Third Presbyterian Church in Pittsburgh, offered the following prayer.

Almighty God, who has always demanded of Your people that we let justice flow as the waters and righteousness be like an everlasting stream in our midst, deliver us, we pray, from those who confuse justice with an endless flow of platitudes and righteousness with an everlasting stream of words, in order that decisive and honest reason may prevail in this assembly. Strengthen us with the courage to assume the responsibility of forthrightly decided what is good for the people; deepen us with the humility to sincerely submit our decisions to the final judgment of the people, and inspire us with the faith that our common destiny is ultimately with You, O Lord of all history. Amen.

APPROVAL OF JOURNALS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The first order of business today is the approval of the Journals for January 2 through 5.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, I move that the Journal for January 2 be approved.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Casey that the Journal for January 2 be approved. The motion is seconded by Delegate Orban.

On the question,
Will the Convention approve the Journal for January 2?
It was approved.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Casey in connection with the Journal of January 3.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, I move that the Journal for January 3 be approved.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Casey that the Journal for January 3 be approved. The motion is seconded by Delegate Orban.

On the question,
Will the Convention approve the Journal for January 3?
It was approved.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Casey in connection with the Journal of January 4.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, I move that the Journal for January 4 be approved.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Casey that the Journal for January 4 be approved. The motion is seconded by Delegate Orban.

On the question,
Will the Convention approve the Journal for January 4?
It was approved.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Casey in connection with the Journal of January 5.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, I move that the Journal for January 5 be approved.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Casey that the Journal for January 5 be approved. The motion is seconded by Delegate Orban.

On the question,
Will the Convention approve the Journal for January 5?
It was approved.

ANNOUNCEMENT CONCERNING JOURNAL

SECRETARY MICHENER. Mr. President, there is an important announcement concerning the Journal. We have shifted to a new reporting company by the name of Mohrbach and Marshal, Inc., which puts the previous day's Journal on my desk at 8:00 o'clock the next morning, so yesterday's debates are on my desk right now, also, last Friday's debates the 16th. Then from the previous system we have February 6th and we will trail along with them.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes the Secretary, Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, I want to submit the following requests for leaves of absence:

The delegate from the 43rd District, Marie C. Aurentz, who is ill, for the 19th.

The delegate from the 15th District, Guy J. Swope, for the 20th.

The delegate from the 44th District, James D. Morton, for the 20th.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you, Secretary Michener.

Is there any objection to the leaves of absence?

The Chair hears none, and the leaves are granted.

ILLNESS OF DELEGATE MUSSELMAN

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, no notice has been taken in this chamber of the fact that one of our most beloved delegates has been quite ill and, I believe, in a hospital for some time. I refer to "Woody" Musselman. If anyone can inform us as to his progress, there are many of us who would like to know about it.

QUORUM CALL

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will now call the roll for the purpose of determining a quorum. The delegates will please record their presence by voting "aye."

The roll was recorded as follows:

Aberman	Devlin	Kelly	Reynolds

CALENDAR

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON SECOND CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to the second consideration of Committee Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 7, entitled:

A Proposal repealing article five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania relating to the Judiciary and adding a new Judiciary article.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

BARRON AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron.

DELEGATE BARRON. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE BARRON offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 5), page 2, lines 19 to 21, by striking out all of said lines and inserting: Section 5. Right of Appeal.—There shall be a right of appeal in all cases to a court of record from a court not of record; and there shall also be a right of appeal from a court of record or from an administrative agency to a court of record or to an appellate court, the selection of such court to be as provided by law; and there shall be such other rights of appeal as may be provided by law.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron.

DELEGATE BARRON. In redrafting the language, Mr. President, in this amendment, we endeavored to break it up into three clauses.

The first portion reads: "There shall be a right of appeal in all cases to a court of record from a court not of record." This, we hope, is plain and manifests as clearly as we know our intent in regard to appeal from courts not of record.

The middle clause provides: "There shall also be a right of appeal from a court of record or from an administrative agency to a court of record or to an appellate court, the selection of such court to be as provided by law." This is intended to cover the situation of cases when they are in a court of record or before an administrative agency and permit the Legislature, in its wisdom, to select the appeal, the right thereof being guaranteed and the appeal lying to a court of record or an appellate court, as may be directed by the Legislature. The language employed was endeavored to be broad enough to permit the creation of special courts, statutory courts, as has been allowed thus far in the language submitted and approved by this Convention.

Finally, the last clause reads: "And there shall be such other rights of appeal as may be provided by law," is to permit, as now exists, for the Legislature to provide an intermediate court of appeal, if such should be its pleasure. For example, a workman's compensation proceeding, where the appeal lies from the compensation board to the court of common pleas and thence to the Superior Court, or it will also permit, should the occasion and need arise, for the Legislature to provide an appeal route from anyone of its appellate courts to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

Notice that the first clause is a mandatory one. The second clause is mandatory as to the right of appeal, but the selection is permissive in the General Assembly, meaning that the General Assembly shall have the right of selection. In order to give the General Assembly power in this area, we have a permissive right of appeal in the third clause.

I believe this substantially covers the thrust and intent of the proposed language, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone wish to be heard in conection with this matter?

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Hannum.

DELEGATE HANNUM. Mr. President, I certainly believe that the labors to which Delegate Barron has put himself have been most fruitful and I have discussed this informally with him. Clearly, we are here only to effect the utmost clarification in what is the full intent and product of this body.

I would want to make something perfectly clear, we are not concerned with possible extended work on the part of the appellate courts, clogging them, or anything else. We are interested in the rights of the people. What concerned me—and I believe, informally, that can be worked out—this amendment, as drafted, may be somewhat polished in the style and drafting and, as I read it and understand it, having discussed it with Delegate Barron, I have no objection to it and would urge this body to accept it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. I have a question I would like to direct to Delegate Barron regarding the language of this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. He will certainly stand for interrogation. Proceed.

DELEGATE CASEY. Delegate Barron, in the first clause you say: "There shall be right of appeal in all cases to a court of record from a court not of record."

Then, in the clause following the semicolon, beginning on line 3, as I read it, you say: "There shall also be a right of appeal from a court of record or from an administrative agency to a court of record or to an appellate court."

My question is: the words "in all cases" which appear in the first clause do not appear in the second clause. Was the omission intentional? If so, is a change in result intended by the omission?

DELEGATE BARRON. No. I believe the use of the word "also" was intended to refer back, since it compounds against the first clause in the appeal language.

DELEGATE CASEY. Is it your intention, therefore, that there shall be a right of appeal in all cases, not only from a court not of record to a court of record, but also from a court of record or an administrative agency to a court of record or an appellate court?

DELEGATE BARRON. It is.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone else wish to be heard in connection with the Barron Amendment? Are we ready for the question?

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Barron?

The roll was recorded as follows:

DEATH OF GUY DAVIS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Van Sant.

DELEGATE VAN SANT. I would like permission to make a brief announcement. I am sorry to inform the Convention that the beloved General Counsel for the Joint State Government Commission, Guy Davis, had a heart attack this morning downstairs in the Capitol at the cafeteria and I know many will be concerned. I am sorry to be the one to convey the news that Mr. Davis has died.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Van Sant, I am sure we all accept that with a note of great sadness. If you will permit the Chair to suggest this, why do we not all rise for one second of silent prayer in memory of Guy Davis.

(The Convention stood in silent prayer.)

LIMITATION OF DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair just wishes to announce that whenever we are engaged in debate, a motion is always in order for closing debate and putting the question.

The Chair wishes to make clear to all the delegates that in connection with the Ruth amendment yesterday we had a vote on closing debate and putting the question, and it was almost unanimously approved. When that is the situation, that means that even the proposer of the amendment does not have the right to close and we cannot hear any more debate or discussion whenever we have a motion or a vote on the matter.

WOODSIDE AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I see Delegate Hook is at the microphone and I will recognize Delegate Hook.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, are we going to continue at this time with the Woodside amendment to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Hook, I think I now have the answer to your question, and the reason the Chair was momentarily at a loss for the answer is the fact that we do have a Woodside amendment here to be taken up now, but this, I understand, is the Woodside amendment that was discussed yesterday in connection with Section 10. I understood from the committee chairman that this was an amendment that probably would not require too much debate or discussion, and we would like to take this up at this time.

I am going to ask the clerk to read the Woodside amendment that is now before us.

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 10), page 4, line 20, by inserting after "Court" where it appears the last time: and any other Statewide court hereafter created,

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment to the amendment?

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. We are all very much concerned about the time that we are taking to go over this judiciary article, and I would like to make an inquiry as to why we do not get to the meat of this problem.

It appears that we now have before us an amendment to eliminate the panel. We have an amendment to the amendment that it should be by the Governor with two-thirds approval of the Senate, and now we are going to eliminate the two-thirds approval of the Senate, and after we have apparently debated that for several hours, I understand there is another amendment coming up whereby we want to eliminate altogether the method in which statewide judges are to be chosen, and go back to the election system.

It seems to me, if we are going to save time, why do we not take up the amendment first as to whether these delegates want the statewide judges to be appointed or to be elected, and, if we once settle that problem, we can perhaps eliminate a great deal of debate and many amendments. If we decide that this body wants to appoint statewide judges, then we can get into the methods by which we want them to be appointed.

I understand there is an amendment coming out, and I am not speaking for or against it, my only purpose in rising is to try to save some time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May the Chair answer and then turn you over to Chairman Amsterdam.

Last night there was a meeting with the Judiciary Committee of all those who had amendments pending. The Judiciary Committee at that time, together with our own committee on amendments, consisting of Delegates Casey and Orban, together with the Assistant Parliamentarian, and our solicitor, decided on a procedure for accepting these amendments with the idea of expediting the amendment process.

The first amendment this morning was the Barron amendment, which proved to be true, that they thought this was one that would go through quickly.

They are now suggesting that we take up the Woodside amendment, which is one that I understood would go through quickly on Section 10, and then my understanding is that we take up the Kauffman amendment, which is on the table, which was to be considered first.

DELEGATE PASQUERRILA. That is exactly my point.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are prepared, as soon as we get these two small amendments out of the way, to take up the Kauffman amendment.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. This would be debating these issues for two hours, and somebody will come up with another amendment and eliminate two hours of hard work by saying that we should have judges, statewide elected and, therefore, we have wasted all this time on these amendments.

Is there an amendment to be presented to this floor whereby judges on a statewide basis are to be elected?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Kauffman.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I have no objection whatsoever to Delegate Pasquerilla's suggestion that we keep my amendment on the table until we determine the basic principle as to whether or not we want to have election of statewide judges or appointments.

I am not expressing an opinion in favor or against election or appointment at this moment, but I do think it makes sense to postpone consideration of my amendment until we first determine the basic principle.

So I would have no objection to keeping my amendment on the table, assuming that there will be an amendment offered which will provide for election of statewide judges.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I understand—Mr. Jirolanio is raising his hand over there—if that is the meat of the issue, why do we not let this body decide that first, and then after we decide that, we could have saved maybe a half a day here.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Pasquerilla, let me say to you that we have appointed a committee and our committee consists of Vice President Casey and Vice President Orban, and they, as a result of a meeting that took place, I understand, for several hours last night, set up a procedure and a sequence for the amendments.

The Chair does not pull them off the pile willy-nilly, and this was the procedure I was advised we were going to follow. If this body wants to follow another procedure, they can. I think the proper way is to go through the committee that worked last night and determine which way they want to handle the amendments.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, may I say two things at this time, please?

In the first place, the reason we put on some of the less important amendments this morning is that Governor Scranton is delayed because of the snow coming in this morning, and he particularly wanted to be able to speak on the matter of the selection of judges statewide. He requested us, if it were possible to do so, to simply hold it off for a little while this morning until he could get in from Scranton, the very important matter which is being mentioned by Delegate Pasquerilla. That is the reason why we put these less controversial ones on first.

On the more important matters which you raised, last evening when we got together for the purpose of seeing what amendments there were, there was no such amendment as you mentioned. I understand now that there is such an amendment.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I have known it for two days.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Unfortunately, there are some people, as you well know, that hold out amendments, hoping if they are put in at a later time they may get some tactical advantage. There is not anything we can do except when they come in with it.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. My only point is I hate to see the Convention spend hours deciding the method of selection of a judge on an appointive basis when this Convention is liable to decide we want an election of statewide judges. Let us get rid of that problem first.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I agree with you completely, and the first that comes in it will go at the head of the list.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, may I say that yesterday I tried to get this amendment prepared that Mr. Pasquerilla would like to have disposed of, and I did instruct the gentlemen at the table there, the research men, but they did not have it prepared, and they are preparing it now.

I did tell Delegate Amsterdam last night that I was preparing two amendments. One was this particular one, and I realize he has a lot of matters on his hands, and I did not go to the meeting because I had nothing to eat, with the exception of a sandwich, from 8:00 o'clock that morning until nighttime. I am a diabetic and I have to get some food once in a while. That is the reason I was not at the meeting.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. In order to save time, I would suggest that Delegate Pasquerilla sit down right now with Delegate Casey and Delegate Orban, who have helped arrange the committee sequence of amendments, and, if it can be changed, let us change it.

I can tell you this, there is no one more interested in expediting the amendment process and the work of this Convention than your presiding officer. I want to say, until we change this, there is only one thing that the Chair can do, and that is to take the amendments up in the order that we now have them.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Woodside in connection with the amendment which was labeled No. 2 for this morning.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, this amendment is merely a change in the language of what seems to me a slight oversight. It is not terribly important at all and totally immaterial to me whether the Convention accepts it, or not, but this Section 10 provides that all justices of the Supreme Court, Superior Court and Commonwealth Court during their continuance in office shall reside within the Commonwealth.

As has been pointed out, it is possible that the Legislature will create new and other statewide courts, and it seems to me that all statewide courts should be subject to this provision. Therefore, I suggest that we add after the Commonwealth Court "and any other statewide court hereafter created" either by an amendment to the Constitution or by statute. I suggest it might be possible for the Committee on Style and Drafting to reduce the number of words where at least the idea will be there expressed.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone else wish to be heard on the Woodside amendment which is now before you?

The Chair now recognizes Chairman Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, this is consistent with what happened in the committee, and I would see no objection from the committee's point of view to the acceptance of this amendment.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

KAUFFMAN AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are ready to take up the next amendment in the order submitted by the committee, which is the Kauffman amendment and which will have to be called from the table.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I rise for a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, are we going to consider my amendment before we consider the Jirolanio amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have no Jirolanio amendment. I want you to know in the order of amendments that I have here the Kauffman amendment is next for consideration. I have asked the staff if we had the Jirolanio amendment ready and they said, no. They advised me there is one in the process.

I think we should, unless the committee states otherwise, take these amendments in the order that the committee gives them to us.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I understand Senator Jirolanio has asked them for over a day now to prepare this amendment and it ought to be ready at any moment.

DELEGATE BALDRIGE. What happened to the Woodside amendment to the Kauffman amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. They were both tabled at the same time and that will be taken up with the Kauffman amendment.

I want the delegates to know that right at the present time up at this desk I have no Jirolanio amendment. I do not know when it was put in, but I know that they are trying to expedite the preparation and they are trying to expedite its completion.

Unless our committee on amendments decides on a different procedure, I would like to take the amendments in the order that the committee gives them to me because, otherwise, it is a hit-and-miss proposition.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Hook.

DELEGATE HOOK. I would like to interrogate Delegate Amsterdam at this time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Amsterdam will rise for interrogation.

DELEGATE HOOK. Delegate Amsterdam, from your committee, can you tell us of the 42 members of your committee, what was the vote pertaining to the statewide election of judges versus the appointment system?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. On the matter of statewide election, my recollection is, and I think the staff is nodding yes, there was no specific vote, no number taken with regard to that. It was accepted as a part of a package and was no separate specific vote, as I recall it, on the matter of statewide appointment of judges on statewide courts.

DELEGATE HOOK. Delegate Amsterdam, this particular point was not discussed in the committee at all, other than the fact it was determined that statewide would be by the appointive system?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. The discussion was primarily as to whether there should be a panel selection, a panel effort in order to get names to the Governor, or whether the Governor should appoint them without a panel. That was primarily where the discussion was.

I do not recall any vote taken on the matter of the election of judges on a statewide basis. I will ask the staff to check that to make sure that is correct.

May I elaborate on that?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. The matter came to the entire Judiciary Committee primarily on a recommendation of the sub-committee that there be a screening panel, that a panel be set up which would screen all of the attorneys, either on a statewide basis or, if they were in a judicial district, in the district, and the recommendation was that the panel make known to the appointing authority, the Governor, all of the names of the persons who were qualified to be appointed. That was the first item that was taken up.

The alternative to that was that there be a panel that would give the Governor a lesser number of names than all that were qualified.

There were a great many discussions as to whether this should be a small number or relatively large number. Most of the votes failed to arrive at a number that we were requiring of 22 majority of the committee, until we arrived at the one finally that was recommended by the Committee, and, as it was indicated yesterday, that was by a relatively—I think it was described as a "razor thin vote," I would say that correctly describes it. I believe it was 23.

I am told that my recollection is not correct and there was a vote at one time during the course of the committee meetings on the election of statewide judges and there were 13 votes in favor of the election and 21 nay votes, so there was one vote taken during the course of our meetings on that question. I am sorry.

DELEGATE HOOK. Delegate Amsterdam, can you tell us what alternatives were submitted to the committee for the panel?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Are you talking about the make-up of the panel, or are you talking about the manner in which they would make the names known to the Governor?

DELEGATE HOOK. The manner in which they would make the names known to the Governor, first.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. As I indicated a little while ago, the original suggestion was that all qualified persons be named and that a list of all qualified persons be given to the Governor. That was then cut down and the suggestion was made that there be, as I remember, a minimum of three and a maximum of six. Then there was another number. There were various possibilities suggested and votes were taken—some formal, some informal—on each of the possibilities. The one that finally got the necessary 22 or 23 votes was the one that was presented in the committee proposal, which was a minimum of six, a maximum of 10 for each vacancy on a statewide basis.

DELEGATE HOOK. What alternatives were presented to the committee and discussed at your Committee meetings?

For example, we now have the Kauffman amendment, which says the Governor with two-thirds of the Senate. I also know Judge Woodside's amendment has a majority of the Senate. What other suggestions were made to the committee on the floor of the committee hearings?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I would say that the matter of election was discussed; the matter of appointment by the Governor, with the assistance, consent and advice of the Senate; the appointment by the Governor with a panel; also, the possibility of the Governor himself setting up a nominee and having that nominee presented to a panel—not a nominating panel, but to a screening panel—and the panel either approving or disapproving the name submitted to it by the Governor. They, I believe, were the main items that were alternatives given to the committee.

DELEGATE HOOK. Delegate Amsterdam, what discussion was there pertaining to the panel itself and how it was to be composed?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. The discussion with regard to the panel revolved primarily around the question of whether it should be composed of any non-lawyers. Then the question was raised as to whether it ought to be a majority of non-lawyers. Then the question was raised as to whether there should be automatic categories. Perhaps, deans of law schools as distinguished from lawyers chosen by the Bar Association, then the possibility that the lawyers would be chosen by the Supreme Court, possibility that the Governor, or some other agency, would pick the non-lawyers. The make-up of the panel was discussed, I would say, from ten different points of view before we finally arrived at one that met the test of the majority of the committee.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, at this time I would like to make a motion to table the Kauffman amendment. I understand that you have an amendment in your possession—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have many. I want you to know, No. 1, the Kauffman amendment is still on the table. It has not been called up. With the acquiescence of Delegate Kauffman, it was agreed that he would call it up at this time. Now he has in his power whether he wants to call it, or not, and I will recognize him.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, I suggest—and Judge Woodside agrees with me—that both my amendment and his amendment to my amendment be delayed until we first consider the basic concept of whether we want elections statewide or whether we want appointments. I respectfully suggest, in light of that, Mr. President, that we proceed to consider another amendment in the interim while Delegate Jirolanio's is being drawn up and prepared.

AMSTERDAM AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1, (Sec. 11), page 5, line 2 by inserting after "any": Statewide

Amend Sec. 1, (Sec. 11), page 5, lines 2 and 3 by striking out "of Statewide jurisdiction"

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Amsterdam in connection with his amendment.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, this is one of the amendments that is required because of the change we made earlier in another section of the judiciary article.

In discussing the commonwealth court, we had in originally that it would be a court of statewide jurisdiction. That was amended to provide that it be a statewide court. The same language, therefore, should appear on page 5 at the point indicated so that there is no question that the judges of the commonwealth court are chosen in the same way that the judges of the other statewide courts are chosen.

This is simply a clean-up amendment to make the selection of judges with regard to the commonwealth court exactly the same as it is for the Superior Court and the Supreme Court, no matter what that system turns out to be.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone wish to be heard, or are you ready for the question? Apparently we are ready for the question.

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Amsterdam?

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Wilmarth. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE WILMARTH. I rise for a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE WILMARTH. Mr. President, this is only a matter of personal privilege. Although this was a unanimous vote, I failed to vote because I had just gotten the amendment in my hand at the time you called for the vote. I realize that I have been on the floor trying to expedite voting, but I do not think this is fair that we do not have these in our hands before the vote is called for.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I would say this, the Chair agrees with the delegate. I have been making an effort and I thought they had been distributed.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Orban. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE ORBAN. I rise for a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE ORBAN. Being off the floor on business, I would like the record to show I would vote in the affirmative on the last amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It will be placed on the record.

TEACHER AND STUDENTS OF CARNEGIE JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Redick.

DELEGATE REDICK. I am privileged to announce that we have in our audience today a group of 101 students from the Carnegie Junior High School under the guidance of the history and civics teacher, Mr. Sobie. He has with him three teachers: Mr. Allen, Mr. Ceancione and Mr. Strange, also, two chaperones: Mrs. Schutte and Mrs. Weitzel. The delegates are, myself, Delegate Goldman and Delegate Rea. It is to be noted that this group will have traveled, after their return home, a total of 420 miles. At this time I feel we should ask these people to take a bow.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. In accordance with our customary procedure, we will ask the students from Carnegie if they will please rise so we can give them our cordial greeting.

WELCOME TO FAMILY AND FRIEND OF DELEGATE WILCOX

DELEGATE WILMARTH. Mr. President, I believe one of our delegates is a bit shy this morning, but his family is here and I would like him to introduce them.

Tom, will you introduce your family, please?

DELEGATE WILCOX. My wife, Ann, my son Mark, my daughter Ellen and our friend, Ellie Barkman.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are very happy to have the Wilcox family with us. We are very proud of the job that dad is doing down here.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF DINNER OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT COMMITTEE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scales.

DELEGATE SCALES. Mr. President, may I make an announcement at this time?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes.

DELEGATE SCALES. The Local Government Committee wishes to announce that its first annual reunion dinner will be held tomorrow evening, Mr. President. The time of the dinner is 7:30. It will be held in Parlor A at the Holiday Inn Town. The cost of the dinner is $4.00 per person. Those wishing to attend should see our social chairman, Ed Walton, by 3:00 o'clock this afternoon. I am authorized to state that no business will be conducted at this meeting and, in fact, anyone who offers an amendment will be expelled without the benefit of trial.

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Tomascik.

DELEGATE TOMASCIK. Mr. President, I came into the hall of the Convention after the roll call and I wish to have my presence recorded.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want the delegates to know—also Delegate Braham—you have been recorded as present. All those that came in after we took the roll have been recorded as present.

JIROLANIO AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 5, lines 1 to 30; page 6, lines 1 to 30; by striking out "(a) Whenever a vacancy occurs for any" in line 1, all of lines 2 to 30, page 5, all of lines 1 to 29 and "(g)" in line 30; page 6 and inserting: (a) Justices, judges and justices of the peace shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State or districts as the case may be.

(b) Any vacancy happening by death, resignation or otherwise, in any court, shall be filled by appointment by the Governor, to continue till the first Monday of January next succeeding the first general election, which shall occur three or more months after the happening of such vacancy. Appointments shall be made with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate.

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 12), page 7, lines 9 to 30; page 8, lines 1 to 10 by striking out all of said lines

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 13), page 8, line 11 by striking out "13" and inserting: 12

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 13), page 8, lines 16 to 30; page 9, lines 1 to 22 by striking out all of lines 16 to 30; page 8; all of lines 1 to 21 and "(e)" in line 22, page 9 and inserting: (b)

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 14), page 9, line 25 by striking out "14" and inserting: 13

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 16), page 11, line 2 by striking out "16" and inserting: 15

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 17), page 14, line 1 by striking out "17" and inserting: 16

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 18), page 14, line 26 by striking out "18" and inserting: 17

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. What this amendment proposes to do is place the appellate judges on the ballot and their office will be up for election by the people as it is today. This eliminates the panel insofar as it applies to them and will make this an elective office, just as we have done for the district courts and district judges. I see no reason why we should not also have the same prerogative. The same arguments used yesterday afternoon by many of the distinguished delegates will also apply to this particular amendment. The people should have the right to select the appellate court judges. There is a saying here that many persons do not know who they actually are.

Let me say this, as my experience has been active in politics, I know that neither the Republican Party nor the Democratic Party has ever attempted to give to the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania nominees for these particular offices of justices without them being men of high ability, high integrity and good character and their reputations placed right on the line where everyone can look right through them and know they are competent and able and would be good judges to serve all the people. To take away from the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania the right to select the very men who are going to pass upon the laws in the final analysis, I think, is contrary to all democratic principles we stand for in our Constitution and in our country.

Therefore, I would say to this Convention that a vote in favor of this amendment will be restoring the rights to the people and giving to the people the right to select the type of judges and justices they want to serve them in the appellate courts of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, the delegates may wish to have in their minds what motivated the Committee as far as trying to condense into a very few minutes what happened over many, many days of arguments and discussion.

It was felt, particularly in the case of statewide judges, that there was a real inability to know who the various candidates were on any intimate basis. The best judges for the appellate court might well come out of some of the smaller communities, as they have over the years, and they would not be known to very many people on any kind of a statewide basis. Because of that fact, very early in our discussion, when the panel recommendation of the subcommittee came in, there was a rather substantial vote in favor of the panel suggestion, or panel method of suggesting names to the Governor.

Thereafter, there were many votes on the question of whether the panel should give a few names or many names, whether they should give all the names, and whether the Governor, once he had made his appointment, have that appointment subject to the approval by the Senate, by a majority of the Senate, or by two-thirds of the Senate.

All of these were variations on the theme, but there was relatively little opposition in the discussions of the committee itself with regard to the panel selection on statewide judges. I think this is important.

It was felt that this is a way of keeping the judges out of politics, which is important. It was not felt that the judges, in connection with their activities, should be subjected to political pressure of any kind, and it was deemed desirable because of that to have eliminated from the selection process of statewide judges any reference to the electorate method as we have seen it heretofore.

The way in which many of the delegates expressed it was, for the most part, the choice of persons to be nominated was dictated at the party level by the Republican and Democratic State Chairman and, in most cases, it was not really a choice of the electorate in the same sense in which a choice is made for the selection of the Governor or for other important offices in the State. For that reason it was quite clear that the committee itself favored some type of panel discussion.

I should like at this time to have further elaboration, if I may, by calling on Delegate Kauffman, one of the co-chairmen of the subcommittee on the selection of judges.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Kauffman. Delegate Kauffman, if you would yield for one second, the Chair wants to request the fellow delegates to please see if we cannot be in order, because it is difficult for everyone to hear. We know that when you reach the microphone you will want the courtesy of the attention of your fellow delegates, so I just ask you, please, if you have to talk, do it in subdued tone. It is difficult to hear the speakers.

Delegate Kauffman, you may proceed.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, in an area that was otherwise very controversial, there was one basic concept which drew virtual unanimity in the sub-committee on the selection of judges, that is, we decided it was far better for all of this Commonwealth to have our judges of statewide jurisdiction appointed, rather than elected as at present.

There was no question in our minds, at least, that many legitimate arguments which had been propounded for the election of local judges did not apply in any way, shape or form to the selection of judges of statewide jurisdiction. We felt very strongly that judges should be appointed and not elected.

The only contentious issues in our sub-committee, and really the only real contention in the standing committee itself, was in what manner should judges be appointed, not whether judges should be appointed or elected. That was practically a foregone conclusion among virtually all of the people on the subcommittee and virtually the great preponderance of all of the members of the standing committee.

I strongly urge that this amendment be defeated, because I believe it would not be good for the Commonwealth. I think we would be maintaining the status quo, and I have not in this Convention been for change, for the sake of change alone, but this is one situation where the status quo would reflect very badly upon all of us.

There are no legitimate reasons which have been put forth, either in the subcommittee on selection of judges, or with regard to the standing committee on selection of judges, that would favor election of judges. Although there are many of us who do not approve of the particular appointive method which is contained in the standing committee's proposal, I believe I speak for at least many of us who would rather see even that, than the present elective method for statewide selection of judges.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Buck.

DELEGATE BUCK. Mr. President, I came to this Convention pre-opposed to merit selection. In fact, I hoped that I might serve on the sub-committee on selection of the Judiciary Committee, but was apparently overlooked.

In the light of the spirited debate, I think that was a fortunate turn of events, because I can now rise to speak in support of the Judiciary Committee's recommendation, not as a member of the Judiciary Committee, but as a non-metropolitan lawyer who finds himself in the unfortunate position of being located midway between Delegate Scales, who changes the labels on his suit, and Delegate Hook, who apparently goes to his office with dust on his shoes.

I support merit selection not because I wish to stifle or disenfranchise the electorate, not because I wish to substitute Bar Association politics for elective politics, not because I believe the judges that we have in Pennsylvania today are venal, not because I wish to deprive a member of a minority group like myself of an equal opportunity to become a judge on one of the courts in Pennsylvania. I support merit selection because after walking all around that problem and listening to the fine arguments that have been made in this assembly, I have come to the conclusion that merit selection will bring to the courts of our State the best legal talent willing to serve more consistently and more routinely than either the present elective system or the appointive system that has been advocated by Delegate Kauffman.

The argument that the will of the people is and ought to be supreme in every respect and no institution should be allowed to exist except on the direct expression of the people, one must admit, is fundamental to our way of life. As applied, however, to the judicial department, it is a specious argument calculated to destroy the independence of the judiciary though frequently urged in electioneering harangues and occasionally in newspaper editorials. It is certainly one calculated better than any other argument that I have ever heard to make an impression upon the people. This is all sophistry and sophistry so great that one is reluctant to argue against it. The idea that the voters themselves elect their judges is pure romance. The real electors are a few political leaders who do the nominating, and believe me, I find no fault with political leadership of the kind that has been demonstrated in this Convention, and I am a believer in the two-party system because I believe it is the very blood of our way of life, but I would like to direct your attention to the report of the Woodside Commission if there is any doubt in your minds as to the meaning and significance of the elective system. The Woodside Commission reported:

"The elective system is not adequate to determine the ability of a judge. It is their belief that politicians, rather than the people, select the nominee for judicial office under this procedure and that selection is determined not primarily on the basis of judicial ability, but rather on the basis of extra judicial considerations, such as party affiliation, membership in a particular racial or religious group, and patronage considerations.

"It is further thought that the elective system requiring the judge to periodically subject himself on the party ballot to the public, tends to produce a dependent judiciary in that he must appeal for support from those who are likely to have cases before him and they must keep friendly with the party bosses."

If you have any lingering doubt in your mind as to who the real electors are under the elective judicial system, I would merely like to refresh your recollection by a recent example. Both statewide committees of the Republican and Democratic Party met here in Harrisburg during our Convention sessions. Each nominated a candidate for the Superior Court of Pennsylvania. In April of this year the people of Pennsylvania will have a chance to vote for either one of the two nominees. Under that system, how can we say the people will elect their judges?

It has been said on this floor that anybody has the right to be a judge. Certainly, no one will quarrel with that statement. But how can anyone who seeks to become a judge in Pennsylvania hope to do so if he does not have the support of the political leadership? It is too costly and most impractical to wage a campaign in the primary election against the nominee of the political leadership.

As a matter of fact, in my judgment the lawyer in Pennsylvania who wishes to become a judge would have a better opportunity by seeking the favorable consideration upon his application before a merit selection commission such as the Committee on Judiciary has recommended for your approval.

There has been a great deal said in this Convention about the fact that the use of this commission is undemocratic, that it violates the checks-and-balances system upon which our form of government is founded. As a matter of fact, the founding fathers never contemplated that the people should elect their judges and, if any of you have any doubt about the accuracy of that statement, I would like to refresh your recollection by a quotation from the Federalist Papers No. 51 when John Madison wrote in regard to the checks-and-balances system, "Some deviations, therefore, from the principle that all appointments for the Supreme executive, legislative, and judiciary departments should be drawn from the same fountain of authority, the people, must be admitted. In the constitution of the judiciary department, in particular, it might be inexpedient to insist vigorously on the principle because peculiar qualifications being essential to the members, the primary consideration ought to be to select that mode of choice which best secures those qualifications.

As a result, Federal judges have never been elected, but at all times appointed by and with the consent of the Senate. This same practice also prevailed in all of the 13 original states, and in Pennsylvania until 1850, when the growth of the Jacksonian democracy resulted in a constitutional amendment providing for the election of all judges.

It is true that no human institution, not even this Convention, works perfectly at all times, but of all methods of judicial selection, the appointive-elective merit plan is, in my opinion, the best. It eliminates, perhaps not entirely, but as far as possible, the wrong political considerations. It sets up a mechanism dominated by laymen for actively searching out the best talent by nonpolitical people whose objective is to beat the bushes in an attempt to find the most qualified men.

It leaves the final responsibility for selection in the executive where it belongs. It also preserves for the voters the one part they are best able to do, to remove a judge who has demonstrated his unfitness for office. I, therefore, urge you to support the recommendation of the Judiciary Committee on the merit selection of statewide judges and also the merit retention of our lower court judges.

DEATH OF MAJOR GENERAL THOMAS WHITE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Strickler.

DELEGATE STRICKLER. Mr. President, it is my sad task to announce the death of Major General Thomas White, Adjutant General of Pennsylvania, who died at Indiantown Gap, Pennsylvania, this morning.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure I express the feelings of all the delegates that we are deeply saddened by that announcement and, if you permit me to suggest, we will again rise for a moment of silent prayer for our departed Brother, General White.

(The delegates stood in silent prayer.)

JIROLANIO AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. To return to the business of the Convention, the Chair recognizes Delegate Camardella.

DELEGATE CAMARDELLA. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the Jirolanio amendment. It seemed to me as I sat here for the last two and a half months, particularly the last week, that most of the delegates, a big majority of them, feel the people back home, who had enough intelligence to elect them to come here, no longer have intelligence to vote for judges or anyone else whom they see fit.

It seemed to me that we want to take the right, the absolute right, away from the people. I do not think anyone in this State has sent a delegate here to take their right away such as we are attempting to do here in the judiciary.

The minute we start taking the rights away from the people, we are in trouble, in deep trouble. I am sure that we have enough intelligent people in this State to know what they want. We should maintain that right. It is not a privilege but a right to vote for people who shall represent them or judge them.

I strongly support this amendment and I urge each and every delegate to not forget by the mere fact that you are here that you are elected by the people. Do not tell them today they do not know what they are doing. So vote for this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate McGeary.

DELEGATE McGEARY. Mr. President, I have never spoken more than two or three sentences in this Convention, and I do not propose to do so now.

I feel very strongly that this amendment should not pass. We have three branches of the government—I am not telling you anything you do not know. The executive branch is mixed up in politics and should be, the legislative branch is mixed up in politics and should be, but the judicial branch should not be and it seems to me that the merit plan which is suggested, and which I approve of, does more than any of the other plans to take the judiciary out of politics.

I will not continue to talk. Others have talked of the merits of the merit system. I would just like to make one point against the amendment in this particular case and that is, it is merely one illustration, but I had a very good friend who is a member of the Superior Court. He said not to quote him, but I am quoting him now, but I am not quoting his name. He said, "Don't quote me, but when I ran for the Superior Court, I am sure that not only fewer than 10 per cent of the voters knew me, but fewer than 10 per cent of the voters knew anything about my qualifications."

I wanted to add that, because of that, I got curious and at the next election—other people have done this, too—at the next election I went around and took a little poll vote of 32 people the day after the election and asked them, "Whom did you vote for for Superior Court or Supreme Court?" and only two could tell me who they voted for.

I urge the defeat of this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Ruth.

DELEGATE RUTH. Mr. President, I will try to make this short. First of all, I have discussed this with Delegate Jirolanio and I understand he will accept an amendment to (b) of the amendment he is proposing whereby it would be 10 months instead of three months that an appointive judge would then stand for election. This is one period of time which was discussed at length in the Judiciary and it was felt that a judge should, if he runs, an appointed judge should, at least, run on a primary ballot in addition to running on a general ballot. I think this was indicative throughout our Judiciary Committee in a couple of other areas that we put in 10 months, and I think Delegate Jirolanio will agree to that amendment.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I have no objection if the Committee has discussed it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is this an amendment to an amendment you are now offering?

DELEGATE RUTH. Yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is it prepared?

DELEGATE RUTH. I am sorry, it is not prepared, but I felt by putting in the number 10 for 3, that would be sufficient.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would you come forward and see if we cannot get it prepared and we will then have it introduced.

DELEGATE RUTH. While I have the microphone, I do have a few comments if I may make them, and then I will come forward.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Certainly, you may. May I suggest, however, in the interest of saving the time of the delegates, if you will yield now, I will call on you again in order that we may get your amendment to the amendment prepared.

DELEGATE RUTH. All right.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. President, it had been my plan to speak affirmatively regarding the merits of the merit system of selecting judges. However, Delegate Buck has spoken so well and so eloquently on that point that I want to speak in a frame of mind more negative at the moment than affirmative. I want to consider what the merits of our present system have been and what the demerits have been.

Any attempt to improve the administration of justice must begin with the judges. The judge in commission, is the only person absolutely indispensable to the operation of the judicial article. Therefore, we have to examine our system.

It is all right to say we will go back now and elect the judges the way we always have. Then, we are asking the voters to believe it is going to be very much better. There has been talk about how corrupt things were in Missouri and how wonderful our own judges have been.

As a little boy, I remember hearing talk with regard to the construction of the State House and about the money that was spent and the money that was lost in graft.

Our people have always been Republicans and I remember hearing them talk about Governor Geary and they said one honest Governor which we had, who did not have anything to do with this great scandal.

I can think back over the periods of our history when we have been sadly in need of some control of the judiciary. With that let me make some few simple suggestions. I say the improvement of the judiciary must begin with the judges. Let me take this little subject of appeal. How we wrestled to get words that would take care of the subject of appeal. Did it ever occur to you that, when you are considering the language which will make everybody's rights secure after summary conviction, you better consider the merits and ability of the man who pronounced that sentence. If you have strong enough men in the front line rendering the initial decisions, you will not get this multitude of appeals. The trouble is, the justices of the peace and men of that sort do not have the capacity and the stature to impose upon the people before them the idea that you have been before the Court and this is what the law says.

Will you go with me to the other end of our judicial system, and this I hate to speak about because I have had so many friends on the appellate courts. There is one practice of the appellate court of this State now with respect to the allowing of appeals that is all wrong. That practice is that they still require printing of all the records of all the cases that come before them. All the records and all the briefs have to be printed.

Those of you who are not lawyers do not know how expensive that is. It would be not uncommon for a man who was involved in a $10,000 lawsuit to be told by his lawyer, "Well, we ought to take an appeal, but printing that paper book will cost $2,000, or $2,500, or $1,500." Your lawyer friends will tell you about that.

In other states over the line, in Ohio, my neighboring state, also, I might say my native state, they allow the reproduction of the printing of the record. They have materials and methods whereby they can replace and reproduce subjects instantly out of that and the cost only would be a few dollars instead of hundreds and thousands of dollars. If you want to talk about improving appeals, begin there, provided everybody can have an appeal within his reach. It is impossible now. The poor man cannot take an appeal. The insurance companies can take an appeal, the big companies, where there is an estate with money, they can afford to appeal, which is why the appellate courts are able to say that they have their dockets so clean.

The next subject is about delay, judges who do not come in on time, who do not go on the bench on time and who allow witnesses, and lawyers and everybody to delay. They came up with the political system, maybe they did not want to be judges so much as they wanted an office. There have been valuable suggestions made in the unification of the courts. That may involve having the judges punch time clocks. Why not? If they entrust people with the responsibility of being judges over them all, their life and their destiny, we have a right to know what hours they keep, how much they do work.

There was another suggestion made by one of our modest members, Delegate Sprogell. She suggested that the delay in the civil courts is in the negligence cases. Then she made this suggestion, and you young lawyers of the Young Lawyers Association, listened to the suggestion she made completely from the outside, which was, is it not perfectly apparent that nowadays we are going to have to put those plaintiffs cases in the workmen's compensation system? Certainly, we are, because in the courts we have not had the ingenuity, the strength, the fortitude, the wisdom, to devise a system to handle the situation where one lawyer, because he has a lot of cases, can tie up the whole operation of the courts.

Another thing that I would like to mention is this, the loss of business in the courts. We are so proud of our judicial system, we honor its traditions, we stand by its principles about no hearsay evidence, and all of that sort of thing, and presumptions. Well, my friends, the great majority of the business of the country has passed from the courts and is now handled by boards and commissions. The boards and commissions take this away from the public courts. They are run off into a corner, they set up their own little court, they come back staffed by laymen, they bring findings back and say the courts are expected to accept those things.

Let me give you an illustration. The most common of these boards and commissions would be the Workmen's Compensation Board. At the time that was adopted it displaced an old system of actions of law for negligence of employers and apparently, they thought at the time they had to get some disinterested body to handle it, and that is why they set up the Board of Water Commission.

Is it not perfectly clear now that if we had in each county in the county commissioners' office, say, a workman's compensation officer who handled all the agreements and all the settlements and, if there were disputes as to whether a man really was an employee, whether he really was injured, whether he continued to be injured, have it tried in a court like any other case on the question of facts.

The same thing is true about the labor laws. A few years ago there was a case in our county concerning two employees of the Johnson Bronze Company. There was a question of whether they had the right treatment as to their vacation, or something, I do not remember just what it was. They brought it to Lawrence County for trial and had a full apparatus of judge, stenographer, attendant of the court, lawyers, and everything else. They set up this great apparatus to try this little case. The law ought to be revised so those cases would be tried in our courts as any other case. You say this may mean more judges. Certainly, it would mean more judges, but these questions are being decided by non-judges now, only we call them judges.

The life of a business community is research. A company that does not have research fails. Is there any research in the law? Let me ask you, is there not research in the law? What about the American Law Institute? What about the American Judicial Society? What about the Institute for Judicial Administration? All of those have had very valuable research and findings. What happened to them here? They are dismissed with a sneer of, "That's a blue ribbon committee." They are dismissed by many sneers of "blue ribbon stuff."

Then we come in with an outfit that no one heard of who recommends a way of selecting judges. Why do we not try to get the benefit of the study in our country? In our country the Missouri Plan, so reviled here, has been adopted in whole or in part in 14 states. Yet here we are in Penn's Woods saying that means nothing. Here is a little outfit—people look upon Pennsylvania as Penn's Woods. If we hand out a judicial article like this, people say we did not know the woods were so deep in Penn's Woods. We thought they came out of the backwoods some time ago. I do not like that system.

One other thing, as to the future of this thing, what we need is judges with more vision, with more experience, with more insight, and with more fortitude. Let me give an example. I hope I will not give offense to anyone. Let us suppose at the time these men were young men—they are young now, when they were younger—Governor Scranton and Delegate Amsterdam were young lawyers, and at a time when they might have been considered for judge, if we had the situation then so that it would appeal to them to want to be judges, would they not have done differently? Would they not have been able to bring insight, and health and wisdom to our system of administration of justice?

I ask the defeat of this amendment.

COMMITTEE MEETING

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Johnson.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. I wish to speak on the amendment, Mr. President, but before that, as a matter of personal privilege, I would like to make an announcement, if I may.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may.

DELEGATE JOHNSON The way out of this assembly room for the members of the Committee on Style and Drafting is down to the basement through the tunnel to Room 500. Immediately after the afternoon recess we will have lunch and a very important meeting. All members of the Committee on Style and Drafting.

Concerning the amendment, Mr. President, I was tempted to introduce a resolution, but I was told by my friends it might be out of order, the resolution being that when we come to a vote all members of the bar and legislature refrain from voting and let us, the common electorate, decide

I am against the amendment simply because I do not believe that judges on the statewide level should be a matter of partisan politics, I do not believe the candidates should have the expense of the primary, I do not believe they have the real opoportunity to become acquainted with the electorate.

I will close with just this illustration:

During the recent election of Superior Court judges I happened to invite to our college, and have as a speaker at a luncheon, a very distinguished lady from Philadelphia. She was an authority on juvenile delinquency, and you know her name, so I will not repeat it, and, when the luncheon guests assembled, those persons who were members of the district court bench, those persons who were officials of Greenville who were of the opposite party, were not there. Why? Because at the time she happened to be a candidate for Superior Court judge.

I do not believe we should submit people on a higher level to that humiliation. Let us get it out of partisan politics.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Clinger.

DELEGATE CLINGER. Mr. President, I have a more recent poll than that cited to you by Delegate McGeary.

Knowing that this issue was going to arise this week, while I was home over the weekend I conducted a poll of my own. I talked to all of the members of the Republican County Committee, all of the members of the Democratic County Committee and all of the members of the bar that I could get in touch with, and 50 people selected at random out of the phone book, and I asked each of those people who they had voted for for the Superior Court in 1966. My results were basically the same as those found by Delegate McGeary. Only two remembered either of the candidates they had voted for. One of those thought he had voted for a man named Watson, rather than Watkins. The other gentleman I asked why he had voted for the candidate whose name he remembered, and he said he voted for him because he was on the Democratic ticket.

I think, perhaps, it might be instructive here to take a poll of this Convention body and see how many of you remember who you voted for for Superior Court judge two years ago. In case you have forgotten, the other candidates were Stout, Spaulding and Palmer.

In any case, it may or may not be too significant, but I do think you would have found the same results had you conducted a similar poll in your district and it indicates to me two things, first, that by and large the people do not know for whom they are voting for the office of appellate judge, and, secondly, they vote for the wrong reasons.

It has been clearly spelled out here how the process actually works, that is, candidates are really selected by the political leaders and then they run in a partisan political election. Clearly, the ones who win are the ones on the ticket with the ones who are the most attractive candidates for governor or the most attractive candidates for president. As a matter of fact, the electorate really does not have any basis on which to assess the qualifications of the men who are running for appellate court judge.

A judge, after all, cannot run on a political platform as can a governor or as can a legislator, other than to say if he is elected he will administer justice in a fair and impartial way. I suggest to you that the man with a pleasing platform personality may very well turn out to be a tyrant on the bench, and a man with an attractive wife and four attractive children may have only the most tenuous grasp on the rule of perpetuities. Yet these are the qualities, pleasing personalities and the attractive family, that tend to take precedence in an election of this sort.

I suggest that judicial temperament, legal training and background cannot possibly be truly assessed in the heat of a partisan political campaign.

I think this deserves to be stressed, once on the bench the people do have an opportunity to assess the qualifications of the man that is on the bench. They can see how he does, in fact, administer justice.

Bear in mind, the committee proposal does not take this right away from the electorate, it does not remove the right of the people to judge their judges. I think this issue has been clouded here, that we are somehow removing their right to ever pass on the virtues of the judge.

All the committee proposal does, it says the people will have the right to judge their judges when they are in a position to have some basis on which they can make that judgment.

After they have had an opportunity to see the judge in action—and at that point, I submit, they should have a right to reject the judge if they do not feel that he is doing a good job administering justice—the merit retention system gives the people the right to pass on their judges.

The elective system will not produce qualified judges, because the people do not really have any basis on which to make that judgment.

I urge you to defeat the amendment. It can only perpetuate a system that has not been productive in the past.

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, first of all, I would like to make a point of personal privilege and apologize to all of you. I understand and I did not know this was going to happen, that because I was late Delegate Kauffman has been willing to put over his amendment, and you are now discussing something else.

The reason I was late was because my second son got himself involved in a hockey game last night. I think he decided he was going to train to beat the Russians in the next Olympics, and he ended up in the hospital without most of his teeth, so I have been spending most of the night trying to get that worked out. I am not looking for sympathy. He is going to be all right.

May I say on this subject just four things.

First of all, you know the committee was overwhelming in their feeling that on a statewide basis we should not have the election system.

Secondly, and I think equally important, all of our experience, indeed, even recently, has been proving the fact that people really do not know about the election of judges and elections.

Let me give you what I consider to be the ideal election for them to know, which was the election of 1963. There was no governor running, there was no senator running, there was no president running. There were just two members of the Superior Court, and we had a series of polls, and, frankly, I got very interested in this because I wanted to know what people really thought. We had a series of polls taken all year long on this, and I insisted, incidentally, that they poll the home counties of the four men running, as well as everything else, and even with those four counties in it, on a very widespread poll by the end of the year it had gone up to about 55,000 or 65,000 people, only one out of 27 could name one of the four candidates.

I can assure you, Mr. President, that all of our experience has been that this is not really the people deciding who shall be the judges of the State of Pennsylvania.

Third, may I point out to you that this amendment would rip out the retention election system on a yes or no basis, which is very dear to the hearts of the committee, and I think extremely important for politics in our system of the judiciary.

And last, but by no means least, I would like, also, to point out and reiterate what Delegate Michael said yesterday. I remind you as strongly as all of us feel, that the majority must be the important element in our system of government in the United States in both the legislative and congressional halls and in the executive. They are voted in by the majority. They are beholding to them and they should be, but in our system of government we have the judiciary, which is at least partially, if not completely, designed to take care of the individual rights, the minority, and especially the Bill of Rights, and, if you are going to elect the United States Supreme Court, for example, and make sure that they are beholding to the majority, I say to you that the Bill of Rights is literally in jeopardy.

How do we take care of this? We take care of it in our system if we do not like what the decisions of the Supreme Court may be in this State or in the United States Supreme Court, we do it under our system of constitutional amendments.

There is the ability to impeach, but, thank heavens, that has not been used very much. There is the constitutional amendment process by which the majority can maintain their upper hand.

At least, the judiciary is designed in our whole system to make sure that the individual right is maintained against the majority, if need be, but maintained.

Therefore, I say to you that it is incumbent upon us to take a new step forward in Pennsylvania, as they are doing in many other places, not just Missouri, incidentally, but many other places, and no matter what kind of system you want, make sure it is not some kind of a fake election system which has no real meaning.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Keller.

DELEGATE J. W. KELLER. Mr. President, I propose to speak in opposition to the amendment. Therefore, under our rules if someone wishes to speak in favor of it, I would yield to them.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does any delegate wish to speak?

The Chair recognizes Delegate Goldman. He has been standing a long time.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Mr. President, I rise in support of this amendment and for three really simple basic reasons.

One, it has been suggested to us that our judges that are now sitting are bad, that they are political ridden, that their decisions are improper, that they are incompetent, that they are senile, and none of this is true.

It seems strange to me that delegates who are practicing in front of these various judges, including myself, will stand here on the floor of the Convention and attack the judicial system we now have and the judges and say that they are bad, that they are corrupt, that they are inept, and yet at the same time, once having left these halls and the security of the privilege which we have, then defend our judges.

I just do not believe that our court system is as bad as it is being made out to be. I have heard no evidence that any judge has at any time done anything improper or rendered a decision on a purely political basis.

Sure, our system of electing judges now is on a political basis, but it is on a broad-scope, political basis. It is not on the narrow scope of any particular organization or group that may have a vested interest, not just as a mere passing interest, but an absolute vested interest in the selection of that particular judge.

It is political, but it has not been bad. A change simply for the sake of change does not make sense, that is not why we were called here.

Secondly, they say we want to keep judges out of politics. Agreed.

What happened to our sitting judge principle? Is that not designed to keep judgeships out of politics? A judge, once having attained the degree of that office, is then endorsed by both parties. Now, if he is endorsed by both parties, which he is, has that not taken him out of politics?

Does this not make it unnecessary for him to run in a primary or for him to do any campaigning or get into the gutty issues of party politics? I say it does. It takes him from that arena. It has effectively taken him from that arena and it will keep him out of it, as it should. That is a sufficient safeguard.

The third point—and perhaps this, to me, is really the crux of the issue—those proponents of the Bar Plan, and it is a Pennsylvania Bar Association plan, have suggested that our people do not know the qualifications of judges and, therefore, they cannot adequately assess their value and their merit so as to properly be able to decide whether or not this man, or someone else, should be a judge. The Bar Association says—perhaps, properly—we are better qualified, we have particular knowledge that is not available to anyone else and, therefore, we should make this decision. Well, if the Bar Association wants to make this decision for the people, would it not be just as simple and would it not be just as logical for the Bar Association in a primary to endorse and support a candidate and educate the people as to who is or who is not a good judge, rather than taking away the right of voting for that judge and supplanting it within themselves. Would it not be just as easy and more and more proper for the Bar Association to take a more active role as a real participant in the primary election of judges and tell the people who is good and who is bad. In my opinion, this is the democratic way of doing things, not saying that the people are unintelligent and unable to make these decisions and, therefore, we will take that right away from you and make the decision for you. That is not proper.

I stand in favor of this amendment and, if the Bar Association wants to go out and work, then let them work in a primary and let them teach the people who are good judges and who are not.

RUTH AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Jirolanio to Committee Proposal No. 7?

DELEGATE RUTH offered the following amendment to the amendment by Delegate Jirolanio, which was read by the clerk:

Amend page 1 of the amendments, line 11 by striking out "three" and inserting: ten

Amend page 1 of the amendments, lines 19 to 22 by striking out all of said lines and inserting: Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 13), page 8, lines 16 to 27 by striking out all of said lines

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 13), page 8, line 28 by striking out "(d)" and inserting: (b)

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 13), page 9, line 22 by striking out "(e)" and inserting: (c)

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Ruth in connection with this amendment to the Jirolanio amendment.

DELEGATE RUTH. I wish to indicate, first, that I discussed this amendment with Delegate Jirolanio and, as the delegates will remember, the first part of my amendment only changes the time an appointive judge would run and, instead of having to do it after three months of being on the bench, he would do it after ten months.

The second part would keep the merit retention of a judge. Once he was elected, he could then run on a yes-no ballot. Originally, Delegate Jirolanio's amendment would have eliminated merit retention on the statewide level. It was my understanding yesterday that on the local level we kept merit retention and we believe we would like to keep it on a statewide basis.

Now I would like to proceed on the main issue, if I may, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have to dispose of your amendment first. From now on, the discussion must be limited to your amendment to the Jirolanio amendment and then we will vote on your amendment.

Does anyone else wish to be heard in connection with the Ruth amendment? Are we ready for the question on the Ruth amendment?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I would like to have an opportunity to see what it means. Perhaps, everyone else is more familiar with it than I am.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We recognize Delegate O'Donnell. Did you want Delegate Ruth to stand for questioning?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. If I just have it in front of me long enough to read it, I think I may be able to vote intelligently. If you can let the Convention stand at ease for a moment, I would appreciate it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. All right.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate O'Donnell, who is apparently a fast reader.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I would like to have the privilege of interrogating the sponsor of the Ruth amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. He will stand for interrogation. Proceed.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. If I am reading your amendment accurately, I go back to the Jirolanio amendment and underneath where it has No. 12, about 55 per cent of the way down the page, I take the next four lines, "Amend Section 1, etc., down to (b)" and remove it in its entirety, am I correct?

DELEGATE RUTH. I am sorry, but I am not sure where you are, Delegate O'Donnell. I am trying to find you in the Jirolanio amendment.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. All right. You start out, it seems to me, after you get your 3 changed to 10 by saying "Amend Page 1 of the Jirolanio amendment, lines 19 to 22." Now, if I counted down properly to 19 and 22, that takes me to immediately below the number 12 appearing by itself, and it deletes the line which begins "Amend Section 1" and deletes the line which begins "Striking out all," deletes the line beginning "Page 9" and deletes "Subsection (b)," is that correct?

DELEGATE RUTH. That is correct.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. All right. And it inserts in its place—I see, all right.

So, by removing that amendment, then, the amendment effectively is restoring to the judiciary proposal lines 16 to 30 on page 8.

DELEGATE RUTH. That is correct.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Which refers to a justice or judge appointed by the Governor to a vacancy in a court of statewide jurisdiction or in any court of a judicial district which has adopted the method of selection of judges provided in Section 11 (b).

DELEGATE RUTH. My understanding is that lines 16 to 27 are stricken. That is the very first part of my amendment in this area.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I see. In other words, the amendment puts that language back in and then takes it back out again.

DELEGATE RUTH. It does not put it back in, it takes it out. It just takes it out.

In other words, if there is no statewide appointive judge, if they are all elected, we do not have to worry about the problem of when he should run. We covered it up to the 10 months aspect.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, if I may interrogate the speaker, if I compare the two and take the two together, it seems to me that I have this problem and, perhaps, someone more intelligent than I can answer this question. I might add that I have spoken to Mr. Comisky and he had the same problem.

As I understand the Ruth amendment, or the Jirolanio amendment as amended by the Ruth amendment, if it is amended by the Ruth amendment, it will read in (a) and (b) that justices, judges and justices of the peace shall be elected, and in (b) it says any vacancy happening by death, resignation, or otherwise, in any court shall be filled by appointment. Now, I do not quite see how you can fill a vacancy which happens by death, resignation or otherwise by appointment, and also elect. I am just completely, thunderingly astonished by that.

DELEGATE RUTH. The gentleman is addressing himself to the Jirolanio amendment and not the Ruth amendment to the Jirolanio amendment.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I wish I could understand either one.

Very well, I do not understand them at all.

DELEGATE RUTH. I hope you have not confused anyone else.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are we ready for the question on the amendment to the amendment? Does anyone else wish to be heard?

The Chair recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, I must say before voting on this extremely important issue that I share Delegate O'Donnell's ignorance. I do not know what these two amendments put together mean. I think we should find out before we vote.

DELEGATE RUTH. Mr. President?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Ruth.

DELEGATE RUTH. I am 100 per cent in accord that none of us should vote without understanding what we are voting on. I am trying to say that it is my intention, with the staff, to try to first put in 10 months in place of the 3 months. I think that part is clear.

Is that clear to you, Delegate Casey?

DELEGATE CASEY. No, it is not. I cannot find the 3 months.

DELEGATE RUTH. In the Jirolanio proposal in Part (b) thereof, about the fifth line down, it says that an appointive judge shall run in an election 3 or more months after the vacancy has occurred. I have supplied 10 months instead of three or more months, the reason being that in the judiciary this was discussed rather thoroughly —at least, this area—that any appointive judge should at least be on the bench 10 months and should run in a primary election in addition to the general election. If he only had to serve 3 months on the bench, he could get in in July and then run just in the general election.

DELEGATE CASEY. As I read your amendment to the amendment, it says "Amend page 1, of the amendments, line 11 by striking out three"—I cannot find that.

DELEGATE RUTH. If you count every line as printed on the Jirolanio amendment, it seems to me I count 11, Delegate Casey. You count each printed line from the top.

DELEGATE CASEY. May I suggest that somehow, whatever the parliamentary technique is, the Ruth amendment be integrated with the Jirolnanio amendment before we vote on it? I so move.

DELEGATE CAMARDELLA. I second that.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Casey, seconded by Delegate Camardella, that, as I interpret it, we have a clean copy of what this does.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

The roll was recorded as follows:

GUESTS WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. While you are going out, the Chair wants to call attention to the fact that the Harrisburg Chapter of Hadassah are the guests of Delegates Hocker, Woodside and Swope.

May we give them our cordial and sincere greetings.

RECESS

DELEGATE BRODERICK. The Chair has been advised that it will take some time to prepare a clean copy. A motion has been made to recess for lunch until 1:00 p.m. The Chair is willing to hear objections to that if there are any.

The Chair hears none and the Convention is now in recess until 1 p.m.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time of recess having expired, the Convention will come to order.

WELCOME TO WIFE AND GUESTS OF DELEGATE NELSON

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Before recognizing Delegate Ruth in connection with an explanation of his amendment to the amendment, I want to point out that we have with us Mrs. James W. Nelson, the wife of Delegate Nelson. Where are you Mrs. Nelson? I would like her to stand. There she is. Let us give her a warm greeting.

With Mrs. Nelson, we have three guests, Mrs. Earl Leidel, Mrs. Frank Womer and Mrs. Amos Davis, who is the wife of the District Attorney of Blair County. Will those people stand and we will give them our warm and cordial greeting. It is nice to have you with us.

RUTH AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

The Chair recognizes Delegate Ruth in connection with an explanation of his amendment to the Jirolanio amendment.

DELEGATE RUTH. Mr. President, first of all, I wish to apologize to this body for the delay, it certainly was not intentional. I hope that I have not confused anyone and/or Delegate O'Donnell has not confused anyone in relation to this.

Principally, the Jirolanio amendment would have eliminated merit retention of judges, had it been voted upon and passed as first submitted by Delegate Jirolanio.

I have attempted to put back in merit retention, because I believe this body should, when it votes on election of State judges, at least vote on that in its best possible form with merit retention of the State judges, and with an appointed State judge to run after he is on the bench 10 months.

It was basically a unanimous theory in the Judiciary Committee that an appointed judge, at whatever level, should at least be on the bench 10 months before running for an election, because otherwise he would not be going through a primary and he would have only been on a couple of months before he would have to come up. At least, this takes care of that.

We have tried to make it as little detailed as possible, but to change the judiciary article as the committee proposal has come out, we had to make certain changes and remove certain language. The intent and purpose is only to have the judges at the Superior and Supreme Court level, statewide judges, elected and after their term of office run on a yes-no basis.

If an appointed judge is appointed to the bench, he must after 10 months run in a contested election, and, if he is successful at the end of his term, he would then be eligible for merit retention like any other judge. The only purpose, and I cannot stress this enough, my only intent and purpose was to see that the election of statewide judges is presented to this body in its best possible light, win, lose or draw.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone have any questions in connection with the Ruth amendment to the Jirolanio amendment? Remember, we are confining ourselves to the amendment to the amendment now because that gets voted on first.

The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I have two questions. I note the amendment as amended would provide a procedure for the election of justices, judges and justices of the peace, not only at the statewide level but at the district level, as I so read it. May I interrogate Delegate Ruth and ask him if that was his intention?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Proceed.

DELEGATE RUTH. Delegate O'Donnell, first of all, yesterday this body voted on the local level judges being elected and I think that was inclusive of JPs at that time and would have kept the merit retention.

It is my understanding—perhaps, Delegate O'Donnell, this was not brought to my attention—I am only trying to clean up somebody else's amendment. It is my understanding that it was only for Superior and Supreme Courts because we dealt with the local level yesterday.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. This was my impression, Mr. Speaker, I ask again, does this not read that it would apply even to the district level, a subject which I thought was closed yesterday and that is my question?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I can only ask the proposer of the amendment to explain his amendment to the amendment.

DELEGATE RUTH. I did not attempt in any way to adjust Delegate Jirolanio's language in Section (a). It is my understanding the intent here is only to deal with statewide judges, because the local judges were dealt with yesterday and it would have to be a reconsideration type vote. That is my understanding.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. As a parliamentary inquiry, am I not correct if this proposal, as I read it, does speak of the selection of judges at the district level, as well as the statewide level, then this would not require a motion to reconsider the action taken yesterday, because I thought we had disposed fully of the matter of district selection of judges yesterday?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio.

I am not trying to ignore your question, Delegate O'Donnell. We want to hear from Delegate Jirolanio, and maybe he can throw some light on it.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, I want you to know that I did go to the research department of our Convention and I told them there that all I was interested in, of course, was the question of the election of judges and justices to Appellate Courts. They drew up this amendment, and I questioned them on the language that Delegate O'Donnell is attempting to bring up again, and they said this is already in, and they do incorporate that in here. This does change what we have voted up to the present time. I am quoting the research men.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Sir, I was merely going to ask the Chair if an answer to my parliamentary inquiry would be forthcoming, because, again, I do not think we both want issues, as the intention is poorly stated, but I think we both want them as they are written down.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think you are probably right, that we do vote as they are written, and we will be at ease for a moment. I am going to ask the attorney for the Judiciary Committee to get together with the attorney for our amendment committee, Tom Balaban, our Parliamentarian and the attorney for the Convention to see if we can get an answer.

Delegate O'Donnell, as the result of the conference between attorneys and the Parliamentarian, they advised me that there is no need for a motion to reconsider, because nothing is being done now to change the amendment that was adopted yesterday, that in the setup of this, in effect, they included striking out portions that were already stricken out yesterday in order to make it more understandable, they said, to the delegates, and everyone apparently has misunderstood it.

I want to point out one other thing to Delegate O'Donnell, that is, that his question pertains to the Jirolanio amendment and not to the Ruth amendment which we have to vote on first, the amendment to the amendment.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, I am somewhat confused as to the situation under which we are now laboring with relation to the district judges which we passed yesterday, and I want to be sure, as we consider either of these amendments, as to the portents and the results thereof. I want to be positive, if we vote in the negative in this hall on the Jirolanio amendment, that we would not then be defeating what we had endorsed yesterday, and I think all the delegates would like to have this known.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am advised by counsel and the Parliamentarian that we would not be changing anything that we changed yesterday.

DELEGATE STROUP. I thank you, sir, and I will rely on the Parliamentarian with respect to that ruling.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone wish to discuss the Ruth amendment further, or are we ready to put it to a vote?

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment to the Jirolanio amendment offered by Delegate Ruth?

Less than the majority having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the negative and the amendment was not agreed to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now we have under consideration solely the Jirolanio amendment.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Ruth.

DELEGATE RUTH. I have a shorter statement now than I would have had before.

Mr. President, in due respect to Representative Jirolanio, his amendment, in my opinion, does not have the best approach at this time. It is not in the best interest of statewide election and cannot be put to you in its best light as to statewide elections. I, therefore, would not support it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Keller.

DELEGATE J. W. KELLER. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to this amendment.

My voting record, I think, is the best evidence of my faith in an informed electorate to elect those who will govern, those who will legislate and those who will adjudicate, but I use the word "informed" advisedly.

We have already discussed this first reason, and I point it up again as a reminder to you. The arguments that were made yesterday in favor of the local judicial districts being elected does not apply on a statewide basis for the very obvious reason that no superior court, no supreme court, no commonwealth court judge is going to have the same public exposure as a governor, a senator, a president and, necessarily, the people generally will not know who this man is that is running for this high office. They have no real way of being informed so that they can vote in favor of him.

Therefore, as has been indicated before, the majority of the people, the great majority, will simply vote the party ticket.

The second reason I have is very adequately expressed in Delegate O'Donnell's letter, which was put on our desks yesterday. In the third paragraph he points out, thereafter referring to a justice of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court—this is after he has been nominated by the governor—he runs as a party candidate and stands or falls with his party. Pennsylvania has no case in this century in which a candidate for the Supreme Court was elected while the candidate for Governor or United States President on the other ticket was successful. This is the best evidence of the fact that the people vote the party ticket when they are talking about the high offices of the statewide judiciary, because they simply do not know them. This is particularly true in the case of this amendment, because Delegate Jirolanio's amendment calls for an election of all things at a general election, which means that always your statewide judiciary will stand for election either when a president or a governor is running.

I would point out to you that we have in our midst one of our delegates, Delegate Woodside, who served this Commonwealth on the local level judiciary and the statewide level. When he ran for re-election he was defeated, not because he was not a dedicated jurist, not because he was not a competent jurist, but because he was on the wrong ticket at the wrong time.

Therefore, I urge you to oppose this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Butera.

DELEGATE BUTERA. Mr. President, there is very little to be added to this argument, but I want the record to show I rise in opposition to the amendment and support just about everything that has been said in opposition thus far, particularly those words of Governor Scranton this morning, which, I think, framed the issues.

I think the major reform—and those delegates who were not members of the Judiciary Committee will see this as we continue the debate on this article—the major reform which this Convention can make with regard to the selection of judges is to provide for statewide judges to be appointed rather than elected. That is the major reform.

As Delegate Kauffman said yesterday, once you make the determination that we do have a chance to make a reform here, then let us get on to debate as to how the judges shall be appointed.

Mr. President, I urge that we soon get to that question, that we vote this amendment down and then carry on the debate on Delegate Kauffman's amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fay.

DELEGATE FAY. Mr. President, I am speaking on behalf of the amendment.

In our newspaper a week ago an article appeared which said that the people should keep their right to elect judges. This is by Judge Conaboy from Lackawanna County. I want to read some excerpts of his speech.

He said it is hard to believe that so many people of good will can so loudly support an effort designed to place the selection of judges in the hands of a selected few. This is what the judge wrote. Then he said, this, in itself, can create far greater evil than the worst that can be said about the present elective system.

Then he said that a smaller group, which is obsessed with the determination to take upon themselves the appointment of judges, has clouded the true issue and has made general agreement on most of the needed changes almost impossible to achieve.

I am in full accord with Judge Conaboy, but I want to say a few words in regards to the voter. I come from a mining town where we were deprived of a selection of candidates and deprived of the ballot. I am not sure if these are not the same people who want to bring this back into focus.

I remember, because I was one of them, that the polls were controlled by the coal interests and they picked the candidates. We had nothing to say about the candidates. They also voted the people in the mining area, because they worked in and about the mines and every man was voted by the mine boss. Therefore, we did not even have the right to the ballot.

You can sit here as delegates but these are actual experiences. No man who worked about the mines could defy the mine boss. He did not lose his job, but it was made pretty miserable. The miners did have the union, but they had a classic saying. Their saying to the union officials was, "You can have them 364 days a year, but we take them on election day."

Let me tell you, the court house doors were closed to us people. I do not know if it is not the same people who feel that we have something to say with the ballot, and I think rightfully so, we should have something to say.

I listened to some of the delegates and I do not believe you have to go to college to find out who is running for judge. I do not think the small people are that stupid. I think they have done very well so far.

Up in Luzerne County we have a fine selection. It took us 25 years to get our Court where it is and I would say they are fine, honorable men that were picked by the voters.

Maybe that is what they are against, I do not know. I am suspicious. We have men on our bench—we have a judge by the name of Peter Polanshinsky, we have a judge by the name of Brominski, we have a judge by the name of Lopatto, we have a judge by the name of Bigelow and we have a judge by the name of Hourigan. There is nothing wrong with them. Maybe you just do not like that system, but we do. I think the judges should be close to the people and I do not think that five men or 10 men have any right—I do not think the Governor has any more right if he were going to pick the men of Legislature, the men who would represent us here.

I think that would be a terrible mistake and I believe, like the judge from Lackawanna County, it is too much power for a few men.

I want to say this, Mr. President, I polled a lot of people back home and I did not have one who agreed with the panel. I will tell you right now—and I am pretty certain about this—that this whole proposal will fail if this system will be used. We appreciate our vote. As I said earlier, I was one of those who could not vote and I shall never vote to deprive any man of that vote and that right.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gouger.

DELEGATE GOUGER. Mr. President, down on the farm we know you can destroy a field by plowing it too much. We have plowed this field almost to the point of destruction. We are satiated with oratory. We know the issues. I move you, Mr. President, the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will put it in the form of a motion.

Your motion is in favor of closing debate and putting the pending question, is that correct?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I understand that the Chair has up until now given an opportunity to the sponsor to talk last. I only spoke very, very briefly when I presented my amendment and, in due fairness, I would like to have that same courtesy extended to me now.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want to say this to Delegate Jirolanio, that has been so, except where we have had a motion voted on. This motion has only been made. I have not yet gotten a seconder to it, yet.

DELEGATE ROBERTS. I second it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the motion has been seconded by Delegate Roberts.

We have a motion before the floor and I want to say, if this motion passes, you will not have the opportunity to close. I am one that is sympathetic to the fact that you have only used two and a half minutes. You have seven and a half minutes left and if you want—

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, I am not so much interested in sympathy. All I want to do is to keep on operating the Convention in the same manner as you have to the present time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is exactly what I am saying, Delegate Jirolanio.

Yesterday we had a motion voted on. This is the motion of Delegate Gouger, and I will ask Delegate Gouger if he wants to amend his motion to permit Delegate Jirolanio to close.

DELEGATE GOUGER. In justice to Delegate Jirolanio, provided he limits himself to the seven and a half minutes and provided we then immediately move the question.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
It was agreed to.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. May I first thank the Convention for giving me the opportunity of making closing remarks on behalf of my amendment.

I want the Convention to know that the only reason that I presented this amendment is because I felt, in my own mind and in my own conviction, that this was a good amendment. I have tried in the last several months, to find out the pulse of the people, just exactly how they felt about ripping out the provision that gives to the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania the right to elect their own judges. I must report to you, frankly and honestly, that in my own area where I talked to people there is no such sentiment that we shall give this to a panel. They still believe that in the people this right should rest.

We have heard quite some discussion from the opponents of this bill where they point to the Federal system, where they say that the President of the United States, of course, appoints and then, of course, with the consent of the Senate, the gentleman, of course, then does get his office as a judge. Are we that naive? Are we that stupid? Are we morons not to know that there has never been a single person appointed by the President of this United States without some politician, without the senator, without the state committeeman, without other persons, endorsing him first?

You know what would happen if a nomination of a man for the judiciary was made by the President, and it would meet an objection in the Senate, that particular appointment would be held up. So that argument absolutely does not hold any water whatsoever.

Then when you are speaking of the Federal system in comparison with the system that we have in our State, it is entirely different. The rights of the people here are settled by our own courts. The Federal Courts, of course, have more to do where the diversity of citizenship is concerned and some basic rights as given to us by the Constitution of the United States of America. When you take that particular argument, I think you are barking up the wrong tree, to say the people do not have the right, do not have the intelligence, to cast a vote in favor of decent candidates.

I want to say this publicly—and I told this to Judge Woodside on several occasions—I happen to be a Democrat and I also happen to be the Chairman of the Democratic City Committee of Bethlehem, but I make an honest confession that I voted for Judge Woodside. Just because we live in the system and something happens once is no reason to rip out the entire system, because this system still belongs to the rank and file of the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and not to the Pennsylvania Bar Association, which has been trying to hammer down the throats of the people of this Commonwealth what they think is best. Give it to us, the so-called blue-bloods. Give it to us, those people who do not care, that never mingled, that never sat with the people in the lower strata of life. They are now trying to tell us what to do. This is just another indication. They have tried continuously during this entire Convention to convince us that they are the sole bright lights of America, that they know what is good for the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, that they know what we should have, and that the rest of the people are nothing but morons and idiots.

Unfortunately, my Bar Association pays my dues and, because of their attitude, I do not attend their meetings. They are just as much a dictatorship as anything that exists in the United States of America today. They have lobbyists here and lobbyists everywhere, literature everywhere, trying to force down the throats of the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania those things which they think are the best, not what the general populace thinks.

It does not mean anything to me becouse I am 64 years of age and about to quit law practice. I have had a lot of work and a lot of respect. When you talk about judges and you elect judges, whether the Democrats or Republicans select them, you elect them, but the day after they are elected and they go on the bench they are the judges of the people of the entire Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and, brother, you cannot even talk to them because they represent all the people.

When the nominating party selects its candidates, it makes absolutely sure that it gives to the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania those men with ability, those men with integrity, those men who are learned in the law and can serve the people with the best ability as the people are entitled to. That is the kind of man I want, that is why I introduced this amendment and that is why I ask each and everyone of you, search your mind, search your soul, vote your conscience and vote for the poor people, for the people on the street, for the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and put this amendment across.

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Jirolanio?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question is, has everyone had an opportunity to vote? Apparently so. We are going to ask the clerk to lock the machine and record the vote.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Gerber.

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, my machine did not work so will you please open it up so I can vote?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I can check the results here. Do you declare how you want to be voted on this?

Do you want the microphone Delegate Gerber and then I will recognize Delegate Jirolanio.

The issue is solely whether or not these votes were properly recorded before it is announced.

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, my machine did not record my vote and I tried to switch my machine and it did not work when I tried to vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will be happy to record your vote now. The vote has not been announced. You have a right to announce your vote, if you care to.

DELEGATE GERBER. I feel like I am playing God with a 72-72 vote, but I would like to have it opened up so I could vote like everybody else. If you want me to, I will tell you.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I address myself to Delegate Gerber. I am advised by the Parliamentarian that at this time anyone can check their vote before it is announced. There is no reason for voting over. If yours did not record, we will recognize you and you can state how you want to vote and it will be declared.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President. Has the Clerk confirmed the fact there is no vote for Delegate Gerber?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, there is no vote for Delegate Gerber.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Kline.

VERIFICATION OF ROLL CALL

DELEGATE KLINE. Mr. President, I request the verification of the roll and ask the roll be recalled.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been requested—let me state the request first. I will recognize Delegate Jirolanio.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. First of all, the vote has not be verified. Secondly, our Rules provide that a member sitting in his seat must vote, so, therefore, Delegate Gerber must announce himself yes or no. That is the way the rules say and you can look at them and you will see that I am right.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Jirolanio is right, and we will ask Delegate Gerber to announce his vote. We have also had a request to verify the roll and that request has been moved.

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. Chairman, is a motion for adjournment in order?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No.

DELEGATE GERBER. I vote, "no."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Clerk will record the vote. We had this request for a verification from Delegate Kline. Would you tell us whether your request to have the roll verified still stands?

DELEGATE KLINE. It stands. I want the roll verified.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I ask for verification of the vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will now have the roll verified. The Clerk will first call the affirmative vote. Would all the delegates please take their seat until we have finished verifying the vote and then I will recognize you.

THE CLERK. Brennan, More, Sebastian, Benfield, Aberman, Leach, Tully, King, Desmond, Shoemaker, Croop, Prendergast, Murray, Quiles, Cortese, Meyer, Warman, Rappaport, Shettig, Harding, Kline, Devlin, Westerberg, Goldman, Waldron, Redick, Powell, Goldstein, Benedict, Barry, Pott, Miller, Popil, Van Sant, Brown, Bashoff, Shrager, Allison, Kelly, Dailey, Silverman, Wilmarth, Hocker, Ruth, Scales, Mattioni, Otto, Reynolds, Caputo, Pasquerilla, Fay, Fohl, Barron, Leonard, Solomon, Orbin, Stroup, Camardella, Jirolanio, McGlynn, Rovner, Henderson, Banes, Heyburn, Erwin, Fagan, Dumbauld, Orban, Irvis, Cain, Markley, Mangery.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair asks, are there any corrections to the affirmative vote as just stated by the Clerk? The Chair recognizes Delegate Thomson.

DELEGATE THOMSON. I would like to be recorded voting "aye."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will hold it for just a minute.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Fleming.

DELEGATE FLEMING. I have a parliamentary inquiry, sir. I was not present when the vote was taken. I understand the vote has not been announced. I would like to have the privilege of voting.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes. I have your request.

We will rule on your request as soon as we have ruled on the request of Delegate Thomson. The Chair is about to rule.

The ruling of the Chair in connection with Delegate Thomson is that under the Rules as set forth on page 18 it says, "After the voting machine is locked, no delegate may change his vote, and the votes of tardy delegates will not be recorded." That has been interpreted by the Parliamentarian as meaning that if you were not present to cast your vote on the machine, your vote cannot now be received.

DELEGATE THOMSON. Mr. President, in that case, if you are not on the machine, you could not be recorded in spite of the fact that you are present in the Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is right, unless, of course, as in the case of Delegate Gerber, somebody says their machine did not operate when they tried to record their vote, which is the distinction between Delegate Gerber's situation and your situation, Delegate Thomson.

APPEAL FROM RULING OF THE CHAIR

DELEGATE THOMSON. Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, Delegate Thomson.

DELEGATE THOMSON. What is the procedure for an appeal from the ruling of the Chair?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You can take an appeal right now from the ruling of the Chair.

DELEGATE THOMSON. I so do, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Has anyone seconded the appeal of Delegate Thomson?

DELEGATE BANES. I second it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have had a request for an appeal by Delegate Thomson. Is anyone going to second the motion for the appeal?

DELEGATE BANES. Yes, Mr. President, I second it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been seconded by Delegate Banes, and we, therefore, have an appeal in connection with the vote of Delegate Thomson with respect to the ruling of the Chair.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, I understand that Delegate Pott voted "aye." It is not so recorded.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand that we verified number one, the affirmative roll, and that has been verified, and he has also been recorded here as voting "aye."

Now, the question is now on the appeal.

DELEGATE THOMSON. Do I understand from your statement that I am not recorded as voting "aye?"

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No, indeed, the question by Delegate Jirolanio was in connection with Delegate Pott.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I move to suspend the rules.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. There is an appeal pending at the present time, and we will now proceed to discuss the appeal if they want it discussed, if not, we will put the question—

The Chair recognizes Delegate Cosetti.

DELEGATE COSETTI. May I ask a question in the way of a suggestion?

These gentlemen who wish to vote—and you are now ruling that they are not entitled to vote under our rules—are they permitted to move to reconsider under having lost or having not been recorded with the prevailing side?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No. They have not voted.

As I have ruled, unless the Chair is overruled, they cannot, those who have not voted cannot move to reconsider.

DELEGATE COSETTI. They cannot.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. They cannot. They have to vote on the prevailing side.

APPEAL WITHDRAWN

DELEGATE THOMSON. Mr. President, I withdraw my appeal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The appeal is withdrawn by Delegate Thomson.

Now, let us have the negative roll verified, because there was a request for the verification of the vote. The Clerk will read the negative vote.

THE CLERK. The negative vote is as follows:

Miller, Fortney, Percey, Aurentz—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Just a moment. Let us go back and find out what happened here. Let us start the negative vote over again. We are starting the negative roll call.

THE CLERK. R. Miller, Fortney, Percey, Whittum, Clinger, Shively, Laputka, Gabreski, Michael, Krill, Welsh, K. B. Lee, Bloom, Gouger, Wilcox, Griffith, Cosetti, Cunningham, Curran, Sharp, Clark, Scranton, Hannum, Braham, Forster, Bagenstose, Corey, Moorhead, Gerber, Gehrlein, Shapiro, Rea, Michener, Amsterdam, Himes, Woodring, Filson, Hook, Horne, Baldrige, Scott, Fawcett, Sprogell, Roberts, Sahli, Hatter, Lee, Caron, Richter, Feather, Baldus, Buck, Tate, Nelson, Kauffman, Manderino, Bunting, Scarlett, Johnson, Leinbach, Burkholder, Casey, J. Keller, Thornburgh, Stout, Butera, McGeary, Woodside, Huggins, O'Donnell, Strickler, Pelletier, and Broderick.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are there any corrections?

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. We heard the name of Delegate Aurentz mentioned on the first roll call and we know she is sick and is not here. I would ask for a specific verification of whether Mrs. Aurentz was counted as voting on that last vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Aurentz was recorded as not voting and that is the reason we asked the Clerk to start the negative roll call over, because the Clerk had made a mistake. There is no vote recorded for Delegate Aurentz. Is that clear?

Now we recognize Delegate Gerber.

DELEGATE GERBER. It seems, in view of the questions raised here, that it is only fitting to move for reconsideration and give everyone a chance to vote. I, therefore, move for reconsideration.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have not announced the vote as yet, so we cannot make a motion to reconsider until we announce the vote.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

A DELEGATE. I would like a parliamentary inquiry with respect to Rule 19, page 19.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. What is your question?

A DELEGATE. If there were two delegates who made such a request, would there be a new roll call?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am advised by the Parliamentarian that that section applies where we have a voice vote and not where we have a vote by the electric roll call machine.

The roll, as verified, was recorded as follows:

MOTION TO RECONSIDER VOTE

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, in view of questions brought here as a result of the machine, or anything else, with all the heat, maybe we should generate light and give everyone a chance to vote without any question. I do not think this issue should come out of this Convention with a question in anyone's mind, either here at the Convention or anywhere else in the Commonwealth.

Therefore, I make a motion to reconsider and vote again.

DELEGATE HUGGINS. I second that. We both voted "nay."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want to ask how you voted.

DELEGATE GERBER. I think it is public record. I voted "nay."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You therefore voted on the prevailing side.

DELEGATE HUGGINS. I seconded that motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. How did the gentleman vote?

DELEGATE HUGGINS. I voted "nay."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Also on the prevailing side. It has been moved and seconded that we reconsider the vote by which the Jirolanio amendment was defeated.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. On a question of parliamentary procedure, after this vote is recorded, will this issue be up for debate again? It has been debated for perhaps an hour or so this afternoon?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If the motion carries, the matter will be up for debate, unless someone wants to move again to terminate debate.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis.

DELEGATE IRVIS. May I address myself to a serious situation here and may I urge the delegate body to consider the situation in which we now find ourselves.

This is not a matter of substance alone to which I have to speak. I am now thinking of our own posture, vis-a-vis the public, which will be watching us. Several months ago all of you read of the embarrassment of the Legislature on absentee voting. Many of you chuckled to yourselves about it and when many of you came here you decried it. Now it happened in the last vote. I would suggest, if we are seriously interested in doing the serious business of rewriting the Constitution and if we are seriously interested in the people giving serious attention to our efforts, we conduct ourselves seriously, that we decide this matter—

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Michener. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE MICHENER. I rise for a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE MICHENER. As a point of information, this body has been charged with voting an absentee member. May I please know the details?

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE IRVIS. I rise for a point of personal privilege.

DELEGATE BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Irvis, do you stand for interrogation by Delegate Michener at this time?

DELEGATE IRVIS. If he wishes.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Delegate Irvis, I think you just said there was absentee voting on the floor just now.

DELEGATE IRVIS. I said that, sir.

DELEGATE MICHENER. As a man who led the fight against this last week, who was most concerned about it in executive meetings this week, I would like specifications, please?

DELEGATE IRVIS. I will not specify. I will not name the man who was absent and who was voted. He was absent; he was voted. I will not say anything further. I am not interested in accusing the Convention nor of accusing any delegate. I am interested, Mr. President, that this confusion be ended and that we come to a clean-cut vote on an important issue, viz., that the only people voting will be those actually in their seats.

DELEGATE MICHENER. When this matter came up under my attention, I got two witnesses and I made a very careful check. I put it in writing. I know exactly what happened and I turned it over to the Rules Committee. It seems to me that this is a responsible action.

DELEGATE IRVIS. I may not be as responsible as you and I do not claim that I am, but I am as interested as you in the appearance of this delegate body.

I reiterate my statement. It did happen. I witnessed it. I do not intend to say anything further about to whom it happened or who did it.

DELEGATE MICHENER. As Secretary of this Convention, it falls to me to preserve as much as I can the good name of this Convention and I simply refute the charge.

DELEGATE BUTERA. Will the gentleman yield?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Which one?

DELEGATE BUTERA. Both of them.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Butera wants to know if Delegates Irvis and Michener will yield?

DELEGATE IRVIS. I will be delighted to yield.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We recognize Delegate Butera.

DELEGATE BUTERA. I do not think it falls upon the Secretary any more than it falls upon everyone else to correct an alleged wrong. Let us correct it and cut off this debate, which is only degenerating into something which we do not like.

DELEGATE IRVIS. I thoroughly agree with Delegate Butera.

MOTION TO RECONSIDER VOTE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have a motion before the House. The motion is a motion of Delegate Gerber, seconded by Delegate Huggins, and that motion is to reconsider the vote by which the Jirolanio amendment went down in defeat. Those voting "aye" will vote to reconsider. Those voting "nay" will vote against the motion to reconsider.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

The majority having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the affirmative and the motion was agreed to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let the Chair please just state the question. The question recurs now on the Jirolanio amendment. I am going to ask the delegates to confine their remarks to the question before the Convention.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Clinger.

DELEGATE CLINGER. It seems to me we have sufficient debate on this issue and I would like to move the question.

DELEGATE FORSTER. Second the motion.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I would like to make a one sentence statement, please, on behalf of the Judiciary Committee.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. First of all, let me say we have a motion by Delegate Clinger, seconded by Delegate Forster, and that motion, as I understand it, is to close debate and put the pending question. Is that correct?

That means, therefore, that no one can speak on this question after we have voted unless, as I said in the case of Delegate Jirolanio, Delegate Clinger wishes to amend his motion to include a statement by the Committee. Do you wish to amend your motion?

DELEGATE CLINGER. Mr. President, I would accept the amendment that the Committee be permitted to make a statement on the issue before the vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. How long a statement?

DELEGATE CLINGER. One minute.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Therefore, we consider that the motion is that we close debate and put the question on the Jirolanio amendment after a one-minute statement by the Committee.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

The majority having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the affirmative and the motion was agreed to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The representative of the committee, whom I assume is Delegate Kauffman, is permitted to make a one-minute statement.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, the Committee simply wants to make it absolutely crystal clear and certain that the delegates in this body understand the Jirolanio amendment is confined solely to judges of statewide jurisdiction. This amendment does not relate to the method of selection of judges on the local judicial district level. We decided that issue yesterday. We want you to know that the Committee was overwhelmingly in favor of the appointive method of judges for judges of statewide jurisdiction. That is all that this amendment goes to. The Committee very strongly recommends that the judges of statewide jurisdiction be selected by the appointive rather than the elective method.

That is all this amendment goes to and, therefore, we ask that you vote "nay" on the amendment.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

KAUFFMAN AMENDMENT TAKEN FROM TABLE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. In accordance with the procedure set up by the amendment committee, we are now ready for the next amendment and the Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman to call from the table his amendment and the amendment to his amendment which was offered by Delegate Woodside.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, I so move.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question is now on the Woodside amendment to the Kauffman amendment and the clerk will read the Woodside amendment to the Kauffman amendment.

Amend page 1 of the Amendments, by striking out "of two-thirds" in lines 12 and 13 of the amendments

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I now recognize Delegate Woodside. I know you have already spoken on this. Do you want to be recognized again?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. I have not spoken to this before. All I did was introduce the amendment and said nothing about what it does or its purpose.

Mr. President, this amendment would provide that appointments made by the Governor to statewide courts should be confirmed by the Senate by a majority vote, rather than a two-thirds vote, by merely striking out the words "of two-thirds."

There are a number of reasons why I think the two-thirds provision in the Constitution would be unsatisfactory. In the first place, it gives a minority of 35 per cent the same right in the choosing of a judge as the majority of 65 per cent.

If there is a two-thirds vote required, I think all of you realize that in the last year of every governor's administration no appointments will be made to the appellate courts because the party out of power, having control of the situation, will refuse to confirm any appointment with a hope of a change of administration.

I merely call your attention to the fact that that happened in our national government not for a matter of months, but for a matter of years, and it is bound to happen in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

It is bad enough that that provision should be in the Constitution relative to temporary appointments and I know that some of you say, well, it is in the Constitution now, we are not changing anything. But, the truth of the matter is, that it has very seldom been used for the simple reason that appointments have generally been made at a time when the Senate is not in session, but for a 10-year term this would not be possible and nobody could take office as a Superior or Supreme Court judge unless and until the Senate acted on the recommendation of the Governor. So that would mean that for a considerable time while the Senate was considering this the Supreme Court or the Superior Court would have a vacancy and would have to decide their cases on a course of an even number of 6. This is, indeed, a very unsatisfactory situation.

I think there is an even more serious matter, and that is the fact that the minority, whether they be Republicans or they be Democrats, are likely in the future to always want something in exchange for the action which they will take in reference to the appointments and, if there are two appointments, the minority, of course, will want an appointment. When the minority party, whichever it happens to be, says they want an appointment, they are going to pick their appointment and they are not going to let the majority have anything to say about who it will be and vice versa. The majority will insist on appointing theirs and not letting the minority have anything to say about who it ought to be.

It seems to me that by requiring a two-thirds vote we do two things, first, we very substantially delay for months, and in some instances I am sure for years, the appointments which should be made promptly and immediately and, in the second place, we probe the judges into politics under a much worse situation than in any other conceivable form.

I call upon you Democrats in this body not to think of the immediate situation of 3 years, because this Constitution, whether it be for 10 years, or 20 years, or 100 years, is at least going to be a very substantial length of time. This situation I say, unfortunately, will change over those years and sometimes you will be in the majority and you will face the same situation. I think that it is for the best interests of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania that we should consider this matter.

The two-thirds provision in the law today is generally circumvented and not carried out by the appointments being made when the Senate is not in session, but this, as I say, cannot be done under the circumstances of this amendment.

I, therefore, urge the adoption of this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Of course, fellow delegates, we are now on the Woodside amendment to the Kauffman amendment and that is the question before the Convention. Does anyone else wish to be heard in connection with the Woodside amendment to the Kauffman amendment?

The Chair recognizes Delegate Scales.

DELEGATE SCALES. Mr. President, is it proper to ask Delegate Kauffman, the sponsor of the original amendment, for his comments as to why he has suggested two-thirds rather than a simple majority?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation. Will you please answer?

DELEGATE SCALES. Will you please explain to us why your amendment calls for two-thirds rather than for a simple majority as in the Woodside amendment?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. The feeling was that it was necessary so as to insure minority representation in appointments. We wanted to be absolutely certain that by doing away with what we considered to be the evils of the selection panel method of selection of judges, we were not replacing it with something which was just as evil, if not more so, so we determined that we wanted to assure and insure minority representation in the appointments. Therefore, we provided for a two-thirds vote of the Senate.

I think we have to consider that together with the other provisions that the Judiciary Committee has recommended such as the merit retention of judges, and also the judicial inquiry review board. With this method of selection of judges presented, coupled with the judicial inquiry review board and the merit retention, we believe that we have a total package which will provide a method of selection of judges and service of judges, while on the bench which is as divorced from politics as you possibly ever could get, so long as you do not have computers making the selection.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Kline.

DELEGATE KLINE. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to this amendment. I think I have some knowledge on the methods used in the Senate in confirmations, since I have been a member of the minority since coming to the Senate. For almost two years I have had the responsibility of handling the executive nominations that the Democrats, in effect, pass on, because the Republicans never clearly had a two-thirds majority.

I want to say, first of all, on the responsibility of members of the Senate that I challenge anybody in this hall, or any place else in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, to show me one time, since I have been in the Senate, that the minority ill-used its privilege in passing on a nomination requiring two-thirds.

I challenge Judge Woodside, or anybody else, to show me where any office in the Commonwealth, judicial or otherwise, was impaired by that right which is granted to the Senate in the Constitution. It just does not exist. I do not appreciate the suggestion that it does, or that it ever will.

The thinking on this amendment becomes exceedingly fuzzy, however, when you place in your mind exactly what will happen if it passes as part of the Kauffman amendment. What Delegate Kauffman is suggesting is no longer a panel to review judges, but the outright appointment of them by the Governor, and you tell me what animal in this Commonwealth is any more political than the Governor, Democrat or Republican. It just does not add up.

If you are going to have the Governor appoint judges, and Delegate Kauffman's proposal, I admitted to him last night, is charming and interesting. I am interested in it, but if you are going to have the Governor appoint judges without the benefit of a committee to screen them, or recommendations from any special board, just out of his own desire to appoint judges, then you have got to have some kind of check and balance.

I have always felt that the finest government, the most efficient government, could be operated by a dictator. We are convinced in this country that we do not want that kind of government. We want a government of two parties or three parties. We want a minority, hopefully a militant minority, to make its feelings felt so that the majority does not run away with all the marbles, and this is a critical area.

Just a few minutes ago an amendment to put this whole matter to the electorate was defeated, and I submit to you, the minority in that issue was as big as the majority in numbers.

It just so happened that the burden of proof was on the minority, and they could not get over the hurdle. The vote was 75 to 75, and we have to have some respect for that minority, and for every minority, and I certainly think that in the interest of good government, if you are not going to elect judges statewide, if you are not going to accept the panel which was suggested by the Committee, if you are going to place the responsibility of naming appellate judges in the hands of the Governor, then please, please, leave some kind of check on what that political office will do by giving the Senate the right to review it and requiring, at least, two-thirds of the members of the Senate to approve those judicial appointments.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barry.

DELEGATE BARRY. I would like to interrogate Delegate Kline, if I may.

Delegate Kline, what do you think of Judge Woodside's observation that the Senate may deliberately withhold its approval for a long period of time?

DELEGATE KLINE. I do not think there is any validity in that suggestion and I do not think there is any cause for concern.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fleming.

DELEGATE FLEMING. Mr. President, I must find myself in sharp disagreement with the minority leader in the Senate of Pennsylvania in his statement that this has no effect on confirmation in the Senate. I for years and years have been very much an opponent of requiring two-thirds of the elected senators to confirm any appointment of the Governor.

It does, in effect, and I probably should apologize for using this term, it does, in effect, give a rather Russian veto to a minority.

Certainly, if the advice and consent of the Senate is to be a part of our legislative procedure, then we should follow that which is done in the United States Senate and require only a simple majority of the members elected of the Senate, regardless of the party affiliation, for confirmation. I have seen many instances where members of boards, and commissions, and in some cases—and probably this may have happened before the esteemed gentleman from Beaver County became a member of the Senate of Pennsylvania—when judicial appointments were held up for weeks, and weeks, and weeks, because we did have in many instances 26 or 27 votes, as the case may be, but we did not have the necessary two-thirds, which amounted to 34 votes to confirm. We had to go over and plead, conjole, and possibly negotiate in some areas, in order to get a minority to agree with the party in power. I am a great believer in that, that they should have the right to make appointments and, if the majority of a Senate body, which in this instance comprises 50 members, desires to vote for it, this should be done. I can cite to you, Mr. President, instances of commissions—and I can name you a couple of them right in my own senatorial district—where for a two-year period we waited for almost that length of time in order to get the seven necessary votes from the other side of the aisle in order to confirm an appointment of the Governor of Pennsylvania.

I would submit to you, Mr. President, that if the advice and consent of the Senate of Pennsylvania, regardless of which party is in control, means anything at all, make it a simple majority or abolish it completely, and let the gubernatorial or the executive department have the appointing power. Let us accept what they have.

I can think of no amendment offered in this Convention to this particular judicial article which embraces far greater fields, than now embraced by just what it is purported to do than the amendment offered by Judge Woodside to abolish, at least, lay the groundwork, if you please, for a course which this Commonwealth of Pennsylvania should pursue where a majority of the elected members of the Senate of Pennsylvania can approve or can reject any gubernatorial appointment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Barron.

DELEGATE BARRON. Mr. President, I would like to call to the attention of this Convention for just a brief moment that so far we have gone through exactly the deliberative procedure that the Committee went through in coming out with Proposal No. 7.

We first determined an election was not to be had.

In this Convention we have now narrowly defeated it, so we determine that whatever selection system is now to be accepted, it is going to be done privately and it is going to be done with no direct reach into it by the electors of this State, except through the various means of the executive, and I dare say, so far as the executive is concerned, this is a small moment in an election campaign.

We have come full passage now to the consideration of appointment by the Governor. If we require two-thirds, this is a combination of either bipartisan logrolling in order to get the office filled or inordinate, and unnecessary delay in postponing it.

If we go to the majority, as suggested by Judge Woodside, we get into the area of political domination or, if there is a division of between the Governor and the Senate, more inordinate delay.

Where does that leave us?

We are back to the selection panel, like it or not, just what the committee on Proposal No. 7 went through.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, I intended to take the microphone first, but my good friend, Senator Fleming, got there first.

I wholeheartedly endorse the amendment being offered by Judge Woodside and support in toto the comments of Senator Fleming with reference to the difference between a two-thirds vote of the Senate and the advice and consent of the majority.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Gouger.

DELEGATE GOUGER. Mr. President, being unlearned in the law, I confess that I have some difficulty in understanding the workings of the legal mind when it sets forth persuasively and eloquently a plea that politics be taken out of the selection of the judiciary, and then I hear the same people say, but abolish the two-thirds, make it by a simple majority, so that the Governor and the ruling party in the Senate may approve. I was a little startled to hear Judge Woodside make this statement, it gives a minority equal voice with the majority.

Mr. President, I submit to you in plain cow country weaseling that that is exactly what we are attempting to do. We are attempting to keep the majority of any party from making political appointments to the judiciary or controlling those appointments. We are attempting to take politics out of it, if I may use Judge Woodside's own persuasive argument, on the one hand, and by this fundamental process, we do, indeed, give the minority an equal voice, and thus go as far, in my judgment, as it is humanly possible to go to insure bipartisan appointment of the judiciary.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Gerber.

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, I must say that the reason I voted "no" on the last vote is because I feel that a careful study of the Federal system of selection of judges has proven that it has been a most effective system, in that our Federal judiciary has not come under criticism, has not come under challenge. Rather, on the other hand, we probably have one of the finest benches anywhere in the world at any time in the history of western civilization in our Federal courts in this nation. I think it is most important for us to analyze that.

If there is not a two-thirds confirmation by the Senate, as Senator Kline has so eloquently expressed, there will be no opportunity for a check and balance in the selection of judges. We have this in the Congress of the United States, and just in the last decade a President, whose brother was the Attorney General, whose brother was the junior Senator from his State, sent a name to the Senate for a district court judgeship in their State. This nominee was rejected, notwithstanding all that power.

I think it is incumbent upon us to look to this as a model, to look at this as a guide, and, if we approve the Woodside amendment—let me state parenthetically that there is no man on the bench and in this delegation for whom I have greater respect and admiration than Judge Woodside, but in this area I must disagree.

I do not think Pennsylvania can permit one party to select a man for the bench for four years and now with a two-term governorship for eight years. We need to have this check. I think deliberation in the Senate among 50 of the finest men is a necessity. This, in my mind, is the best selection panel we could have. These people are elected, these people must return to the electorate. These people must be responsive and must stand on what they vote for when they take their positions.

It seems to me the only fair way is to have a two-thirds, not a 50 per cent, because a 50 per cent would permit a strong Governor, who can dominate his party, to be able to name whoever he chooses, whenever he chooses. We cannot afford to permit this to happen in our selection of judges.

There was a mention here of delays. It may be a delay for deliberation's sake. We have to deliberate here. We have been accused of delay, we are thinking.

As Delegate Barron said, I think this is wonderful, the Committee went through the same deliberation process we are going through, and I think it is important that we are going through the same intellectual process, because if we did not go through this process we would not be doing our job here on the floor.

Therefore, I must urge this delegation to stand up and be counted, as I have, and vote this amendment down.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Rappaport.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Mr. President, we have been told that both systems bring politics into play. I, personally, have no objection to politics, because its definition is the art of government.

Let us visualize what will happen. Let us assume a Governor appoints someone who is totally unqualified. We have a 51 per cent confirmation rule. Either 25 Senators voting for it—as our President has ruled on one occasion—or 26, as other people contend. The Governor appoints someone, and let us assume he has influence with the majority party in the Senate. It goes through. There is no time for debate. There is no time for consideration. How about if we have the two-thirds rule and the man is totally unqualified? Well, the minority there, the 24, they will see something to hit the Governor on the head with, they will do it, they will talk in the newspapers about it, they will give speeches and they will make sure the public knows every fact about that candidate. They have the power to delay this appointment, they will do so and that is their job. It is the job of the minority party to be the opposition, to point out to the majority party where the executive has made his mistakes. If they try to play politics with this, I am sure the newspapers will jump all over them. No one is going to make any political mileage by opposition for its own sake by opposing someone who is obviously qualified. Any minority that does that is foolish.

I, therefore, suggest that the way to take politics out of it, to force the appointment of qualified men—and it really matters not to me if a man happens to be qualified and he happens to be active in one political party. On the contrary, I think political activity should be considered in some of these appointments. He understands what is going on in the Commonwealth and we do not get ivory towers.

I would, therefore, urge you to vote for the two-thirds. This will assure we have qualified judges and will not permit the Governor to ram some appointment through the Senate.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fineman.

DELEGATE FINEMAN. Mr. President, I rise to ask the delegates to this Convention in a sense of fairness not to adopt this particular proposal. In my opinion, it is the most partisan proposal that has yet been offered in this Convention.

I do not think it is any secret among those who know what transpired on the question of reapportionment that the present setup of the Senate under the existing reapportionment act is calculated to give one party almost everlasting control of that chamber. It will take an unusual set of circumstances, national or otherwise, to break down that contemplated result. Now, to place in the hands of one party the right to appoint judges to the appellate court is a gross violation of everything that represents fairness. That is precisely what will happen if we adopt this amendment.

Not too many days ago we heard Delegate Hocker stand on this floor and condemn any device which will result in the possibility of a court being packed. He said we all knew how this packing process had, in fact, been in existence and he decried and deplored that kind of situation. Judging by the vote that was taken on the amendment then before us, the delegates to this body subscribed to that viewpoint.

I am saying to you, if this amendment passes, there can be packing of that court. I think it is important—and I know that Delegate Devlin shares this view with me because we discussed it—that there be an equal division of philosophies on the appellate court in this State. This is where the philosophies of government are put into play and the law can be bent to accommodate any kind of viewpoint, any kind of direction which the justices want to travel. It is manifestly unfair to have either men who are all liberal in their thinking or men who are all conservative in their thinking sitting on the appellate courts and making philosophies of government by interpreting cases that come to them on appeal from the lower courts. This setup would allow such an end result.

I am afraid Judge Woodside has played a little bit of the numbers game here today. He said it is unfair that 35 per cent of the make-up of that body should have any voice in controlling who shall go on the appellate court bench and he would prefer to have a situation where perhaps 35 per cent of the make-up of that body shall have no voice in the make-up of our appellate courts.

If there have been any kind of shortcomings that have ensued as a result of the two-thirds requirement, they have been minimal in nature. The appointments have always been worked out. This checking right in the minority has not been abused, but if this right to call a stop to whatever name is submitted willy-nilly to that body for confirmation is abrogated, then there will be packing of the appellate courts in this State. You will see only one kind of philosophy of government being expressed in those appellate courts, not a sprinkling of various kinds of philosophies. You will see only a conservative type of philosophy, as things now stand, because of the way we reapportioned that Senate chamber, you will see only a conservative type of philosophy appearing in that court.

I say to you when these appellate courts are handling matters of labor legisation, when they are handling matters of unemployment compensation, matters of workmen's compensation, there has to be more than just one kind of philosophy on that bench. There has to be men on there who represent the spectrum of every kind of thinking.

I say this is the most unfair proposal that has yet to come before this Convention. I would urge the members of this Convention out of a sense of fairness to defeat this proposal.

DELEGATE BALDRIGE. I move we vote.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Devlin. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE DEVLIN. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE DEVLIN. I would like to correct a statement Delegate Fineman made about me which is incorrect, and I would like to make this very clear.

I said I could never vote for Delegate Kauffman's amendment so long as it had a two-thirds vote on it for the reasons that Delegate Woodside stated. I said I could be for the system we are now living under and exercising our vote for statewide offices. I, in turn, told you that I would support Delegate Jirolanio, which I did, to the best of my ability, because I thought that was the proper thing to do. I could not and will not support Delegate Kauffman's amendment, which I told you very candidly.

I can evision on the Supreme Court level a vacancy existing for a number of years. If, for instance, there was a vacancy of a Democrat on the court now and a Republican Governor wished to appoint a fifth Republican, the State Senate, with the numbers it now has, could very easily say we are not going to give you that fifth Republican, we just will not confirm him. I think that is bad government from top to bottom. I just want to correct my views. I am for the Woodside amendment. I am not for the two-thirds, as my dear friend from Montgomery County has proposed as a way of solving this problem.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I would like to ask Delegate Devlin whether he was not the one that suggested that the way to prevent one political party from dominating the other was to have a two-thirds vote in the Legislature at such time as the Legislature would change its own apportionment. Am I wrong about that?

DELEGATE DEVLIN. I do not think this question is germane to the problem we are voting on or talking about. I raised a question on a point of personal privilege and I would like to leave it at that.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I do not think the question has been answered. I wonder whether it should be. It might be helpful in our voting.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The delegate indicates he does not care to answer that because he does not think it is germane. There is no way the Chair can force an answer.

DELEGATE FINEMAN. I wonder if I may interrogate Delegate Devlin?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would you stand for interrogation, Delegate Devlin?

DELEGATE DEVLIN. No, sir, I will not, but I would be very happy to have Delegate Fineman make his point and I will reply to it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, I became considerably disturbed at the partisan sensitivity that there is in this assembly. I want to assure you, Mr. President, when I endorsed Senator Fleming's comments, I endorsed them because they had no smack of partisanship whatsoever. When I endorsed the amendment offered by Judge Woodside, I endorsed it for the same reason, because in Judge Woodside's opinion—and mine—it is the best way to achieve the results which the Kauffman amendment is asking for and to get on with the business of the Commonwealth in due time without excessive delay, by approving his amendment. I am sorry, too, that an irrelevant statement has been made bringing up the situation as far as the State Senate is concerned, and this hurts me and I must speak on it.

Mr. President, I served on the reapportionment committee for two years. Every time the Senate of Pennsylvania came to an agreement on reapportionment. There was no partisan domination in that. It was not in that chamber where we failed, it was in the House where we failed. We had our understanding and agreements. I challenge contradiction to that particular fact, because I know the facts. I lived with it night and day.

May I say to you further, Mr. President, insofar as we stand now, we must remember that it is possible throughout the next 50 or 75 years that you may have a Democratic Governor and a Republican Senate, or a Republican Governor and a Democratic Senate, who can foretell the future, but if you have a demand of two-thirds in this particular amendment, God knows how long you will go until you have an appellate court.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Clinger.

I am not trying to cut you off, Delegate Clinger. I just want to say that we had Delegate Baldrige making a motion to close the debate before, but that motion was not seconded.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. May I have two minutes?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, but we already have Delegate Clinger here now. The Chair will recognize you afterwards.

DELEGATE CLINGER. I have a very brief comment. Having listened to this debate at some length, it underscores to me the necessity for having a judicial qualifications commission in this area. We have listened to the legislative leaders on both sides of the aisle arguing and haggling over this method of selection within the Senate. I suggest that if the political situation was reversed at the present time, we would have heard arguments on the other side from people who are arguing on this side. This really bears out the point that either method, the majority of the Senate or two-thirds of the Senate, keeps judges in politics, keeps them in the political arena, and I say to you that this debate underscores to me the necessity for the judicial nominating commission.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You have a closing on this, you know, Delegate Woodside. You will only be able to speak twice, so do you want to hold it to your closing?

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. I just want to say two or three things before a motion is made.

May I rise to a question of personal privilege that has nothing to do with this matter before us?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. State your point of personal privilege.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, for 13½ days I have listened to people from all over this country tell us how to run the judiciary. I think this body ought to listen to the people of this Convention and hear out the debates on these problems. I think there ought to be no motion for a previous question at any time until everyone is sure that every point has been met, and I do not believe that that has been done in the past.

I am not saying it just because I want two minutes now. I thought it was a terrible thing that Judge Braham the other night was prevented from giving a 10-minute talk on something he had spent his last 10 or 15 years in thinking about, studying about and reading about. We denied him the right to say it. I do not agree with nine-tenths of the things he would have said in that speech, but I think he should have had the right to say it and I think we are moving the previous question when there is still argument to be advanced on these questions by people who have spent a lifetime in considering them. I think we ought to hear the delegates out.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair wants to say that the Chair does not cut off debates. Last night it was a motion that was passed by this Convention and they have, under the rules, the right to move the question. That depends on how they vote on the motion.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. I hope no one here takes what I said as a criticism against the President. It is not. You have been extremely fair and you have tried in every way, I think, to carry out the principle which I have just laid down as one, I think, of importance. I think, however, the body without due consideration has too frequently moved the previous question and refused someone the right to finish.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fleming. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE FLEMING. I rise for a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE FLEMING. Mr. President, I am not quite sure at this moment whether or not I rise to a question, a statement of personal privilege or whether I rise to make a comment.

I have been somewhat cooled off by Judge Woodside's remarks. I believe, and I say this as moderately as I can, that I somewhat resent the statement of Delegate Clinger in which he casts aspersions on the legislative leaders for attempting to lay before the Convention the viewpoint of their respective parties.

I do not believe for one moment Senator Kline or Delegate Fineman tried to lay before this Convention that viewpoint, and I am serious about this, Mr. President, I think they believe in what they said.

I have for 15 years long before, long before, members of this Convention, long before this Convention was ever authorized by the people of Pennsylvania have been an ardent opponent of a two-thirds vote for any confirmation in the Senate of Pennsylvania.

The considerations of whether or not it benefits a Republican Governor at this time, Mr. President, had no affect at all on what I said a moment ago and what I said at this microphone, and I resent any man implying I had any other motive at all in that which I said at this Convention.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Baldrige. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BALDRIGE. I rise for a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BALDRIGE. Mr. President, I resent the remarks made on my motion to close the debate. The delegates here seem to think we have six more months to finish this Convention, and we do not. Most of us have made up our minds and we campaigned on some of these issues, although I realize there are delegates who probably have things they could tell any of us, but somehow or other we have to get through this and that is why I made my motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, I do not rise in resentment against anything that has been said. I do tip my hat to Judge Woodside and I do endorse what he said. I think I probably would have been in disagreement with Judge Braham, too, and I regret we cut him off. I think we need to hear these debates.

I rise, Mr. President, to point out what I think has been pointed out before, but I rise to underline it. Let us not fool ourselves and let us not go out of this delegate body assuring that we have washed our hands, we have cleansed them of politics, because we have not.

When we decided not to elect judges statewide, we did not remove politics from the election or selection of statewide judges, we merely narrowed the political arena, and that is all we did.

What we are now saying is, we will make political assessments of men, we will have the Governor make those political assessments and we are going to decide whether or not the political Senate will join in that assessment, or veto it.

If we are content to let the executive make these decisions, then we are wasting our time talking about a majority or two-thirds. We ought to be honest and simply say we trust the executive power to make the selection of the judiciary. If we follow Judge Woodside's suggestions, that is precisely where we shall be.

Any strong Governor, be he Republican or Democrat, has powerful influence in the House and powerful influence in the Senate. Any Senator would think two or three times before he opposes a Governor of his own party, so if a Democratic Governor sends over to the Senate controlled by the Democrats a nomination for an appellate court, it is practically the same as selection. Though there may be some rumblings and there may be some dealings underneath, it is practically the same as a selection. And the same is true with a Republican Governor and a Republican controlled Senate.

What Delegate Fineman said here at this microphone was realistic, and let us again be honest with ourselves. What we are saying, if we are going to engage in politics in the selection of the judiciary, let the minority party have a say in it, because judges ought to be selected as broadly as possible, in my opinion, and we have now narrowed the point down to practically a selection by the executive. I do not think any executive can be trusted that far as to let his selection be the final say and, if you make it a simple majority you have practically done that to a strong executive. If, however, you make it, make it two-thirds of the Senate, he has a much more difficult time. Again, I am not so much interested in making the task easy for the selection of judges as I am in trying to make it as fair as possible. That is the reason I object to Judge Woodside's amendment and that is the reason I shall vote in the negative.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Woodside.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, I shall be very brief.

May I say, first, the committee did consider specifically the two-thirds majority, debated it extensively and rejected it.

Secondly, I say to Delegate Gerber, what we are attempting to do here is provide exactly the same as I understand the Federal system is, in other words, a majority of the Senate.

Thirdly, may I say to Delegate Fineman, in 1970 there will be a new reapportionment of the Senate.

Lastly, may I say, there seems to me to be four methods of choosing statewide judges and they are one, election, one through the panel method, one through the appointment of the majority and, fourth, the appointment with two-thirds of the Senate.

In my own personal experience of those four, the worst is appointment by two-thirds of the Senate.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

The roll was recorded as follows:

Less than the majority having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the negative and the amendment was not agreed to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I should like to speak very briefly against the Kauffman proposal. I must echo the observations of Delegate Barron a few minutes ago. The Judiciary Committee has been all through this backwards and forwards and has considered every form of selection of a judge known to mankind, two-thirds, simple majority confirmation, judicial panel, election, selection, retention, screening, not less than three nor more than six, and how many others.

The problem is a very simple one, it strikes me, and that is how do we recruit and find competent people to serve on the highest courts of our State?

The problem with the Kauffman proposal as it strikes me is that it tends to close the door of the barn after the horse has left.

The problem is not so much as to what should be done with the gubernatorial appointment once it has been made, the problem is, rather, how to get a proper gubernatorial appointment in the first place.

More succinctly, it is perfectly obvious that the Governor of Pennsylvania must take into consultation many different people. The only difference between what exists now and what has been proposed by the Judiciary Committee is, now the public will be entitled to know the names of the persons whom he consults.

Those who have argued against the panel and against the Judiciary Committee have set up a strawman. They have said, this is a panel which will be under the control of the Bar Association. Nothing could be further from the facts, because we have seen to it that it cannot possibly get under control of the Bar Association because it was forced out of the Judiciary Committee.

There is a provision here that the selection panel be a bipartisan panel. There is a provision here that its lay members be appointed by governors on a standard basis. I think it is unfair to the Judiciary Committee and to its proposal to go and categorize it as some of the speakers have done.

The fact of the matter is that the Judiciary Committee has come full circle on this.

The difficulties of selecting a judge by election were realized, the difficulties of appointing with confirmation by the Senate were fully realized, and we have finally come around to this method. Does this method take away from the hands of the people the right to have a hand in the selection of their statewide judges? It does not. In fact, it puts into the hands of the people more of a right than that which they have today.

Consider this. The Governor of Pennsylvania can make an appointment for three months up until the next election of a justice of the Supreme Court, after which, by party selection, he will serve 21 years in office.

Here, under the Judiciary Committee proposal the Governor will make a probationary appointment for two years, giving the people a full two-year opportunity to judge that person on his own merits. This is not just a sham, because when the people of Pennsylvania vote yes or no, I am sure the delegates will recall, he will not have been placed on the bench in association with a political party at all. He will not already have a band of partisans supporting him.

Is the proposal of the Judiciary Committee novel? Yes, it is.

Is the proposal of the Judiciary Committee an experiment? Yes, it is.

The question of course before this body is, are we Pennsylvanians afraid to experiment?

We have seen on this floor the problem with the forces of time breathing down the backs of our neck. Haste here has made waste. Haste here is making history, and I fear to some extent that haste is writing a Constitution.

We are making an error. This matter has been before the Judiciary Committee for two months and this is the result of the best thinking of that entire committee.

I for one am not afraid to experiment. When my forebearers came over here in the 1840s when they ran out of potatoes, they were not afraid to experiment. I suggest to you the forebearers of every delegate in this room were people who were not afraid to experiment. As a matter of fact, our great State of Pennsylvania has been referred to as the Noble Experiment, and I see no objection to it.

The only difficulty with an experiment is that it requires two qualities, and those qualities are courage and fortitude, in plain language, guts. It is a question of whether our forefathers, who had a contempt for the safe and secure feeling and a willingness to experiment, should be emulated by us, and I think they should. I submit to you that we still have Pennsylvanians and Americans who are willing to, as Delegate Irvis said the other day, put their money where your mouth is.

I read a headline the other day "United States Marines Are Inching Ahead In Bitter Battling." This is the kind of thing that has made the United States a force in the world today, because we have not been afraid. We have not been timid, and I think, in the main, a great deal of what I have heard in this constitutional convention has indeed been afraid, and has been timid and has cautioned against making any experiment or, indeed, any change. We have become, in effect, the victims of what one might really call the "Fifth Horse of the Apocalypse." The fifth horse counsels fear and counsels an unwillingness to take a chance and an unwillingness to turn over to the future better than what we got.

I say to you that the report of the Judiciary Committee deserves the fullest consideration in this body.

I respectfully submit this Convention will steer a fine course between the fallacy of hasty amendments to this judiciary article, on the one hand, and crest fear, on the other hand. Let us vote to support the Judiciary Committee here and now and get out by February 29th. The faster we vote down these amendments to the Judiciary Committee proposal, the faster we shall leave.

Mr. President, on that point of fear, I would like to remind this body, at the very depths of World War II in which I had the privilege to serve, a very famous statesman, Winston Churchill, said, "We have not journeyed all this way across the centuries, across the oceans, across the prairies because we are made of sugar candy." I, for one, am willing to try this experiment for the future of Pennsylvania.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scales.

DELEGATE SCALES. Mr. President, I would like to ask certain questions of Delegate Kauffman, the proposer of this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. He will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE SCALES. Delegate Kauffman, there were three statements made by Delegate O'Donnell that somewhat disturbed me. The first of those statements was that the committee recommendation was the best result of two months of committee work. Is it not correct that at one time the standing committee on Judiciary voted in favor of a system other than the panel selection system?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. That is absolutely correct. There was a vote taken by the standing judiciary committee that did approve a method of selection of judges. It did not include any panel whatsoever.

DELEGATE SCALES. Delegate O'Donnell also stated here that, in his opinion, the panel itself would not be under the control of the Pennsylvania Bar Association. Can you tell us, please, exactly under whose control that is? Who does select the panel?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Actually, I think the panel that has been proposed by the standing committee here is much more susceptible to evils than the panel which was proposed by the Pennsylvania Bar Association. The panel which we have in the present proposal would be composed of four non-lawyers and three lawyers. The four non-lawyers would be appointed by the Governor. However, their terms would be staggered, so that no Governor could ever really influence the panel until at least his second term.

The only individual, or body, that would have continuous and pervasive control over this selection commission would be the Supreme Court which would, of course, continue as the judges continue in office over a great many years. Judges of the Supreme Court appoint three members of this panel and you get into the very interesting situation where you have the judges of the Supreme Court appointing the panel which will appoint and select the judges of the Supreme Court, which will appoint the panel, and it becomes a self-perpetuating type of thing which I do not think any of us in this body would like to have. I think this could lead to tremendous evils, and I do not mean to criticize any members of the Supreme Court.

As we heard time and time again, we are planning not for this year or next year, we are planning for the next 100 years. If you go through 100 years of permitting the Supreme Court to appoint the panel that selects the Supreme Court, you are going to have an elite that I think is the complete antithesis of everything that democracy stands for and something that none of us really want to accomplish. I think everyone in this room ought to understand thoroughly and completely how this panel and how this commission is going to be appointed and how it is going to be controlled.

I am also disturbed by Delegate O'Donnell's comments on experimentation.

DELEGATE SCALES. Is it possible to experiment with a panel system without having it locked into the Constitution forever?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I think it was tremendously significant that Delegate O'Donnell conceded that this is experimental. I think that we should not experiment with a constitutional mandate. I think it is clear—and I know that Governor Scranton has done this himself—that the Governor could either in his campaign platform or at any other time voluntarily set up a panel which could recommend names to him exactly in the manner that the panel which has been proposed by the standing committee could do, but to constitutionally mandate an experiment, I think would be dangerous beyond belief. I think for us to do that would be as wrong as we could possibly be in a constitutional convention.

We must provide for the Governor to appoint, put the responsibility where the power is, and, if the Governor wants on his own to appoint the panel, he certainly could do it. However, he would still be the person who has been elected by the people who would be responsible for that appointment. He could not shirk his responsibility by saying, I had to appoint from a list of 10 names submitted to me by a panel.

Now, I think it is clear—we have had testimony from people from other states—that when you require the Governor to appoint from a list of from 10 to 20, or from any minimum number to any maximum number, you are usually going to get the minimum number.

For anyone to contend that any panel could reasonably and rationally on objective grounds find 10 most highly qualified lawyers to the exclusion of all others of the more than 10,000 members of the Bar of Pennsylvania without doing it on an arbitrary basis, then it just seems to me that I completely misunderstand the panel method of selection.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, throughout this Convention, and while I have been on the floor of it, I have listened long and hard to many comments made by many people about the powers of the judiciary, particularly about the powers of the Legislature, but there has been very little said about the powers of the executive, except in an antipathy thereto.

So far I have never made a comment on the floor of this Convention concerning the executive, frankly, because I thought I was at least partially prejudiced in this, having served in that capacity. Although I have been in the Congress of the United States, I have never been in the State Legislature, and I have never been in the judiciary, but because a great many people in the committee itself, and others, have asked me to do this, and because I think it is of extreme importance in this particular issue, I would like to talk to you for a few minutes about my own experience with regard to the selection of judges.

There has never been a Governor in the history of Pennsylvania so far that has had so much experience in appointing judges as I have, and I do not mean that boastfully, because I did not especially enjoy it. I have appointed far more judges than any other Governor, almost 60 in this State, and I can assure you, first and foremost, that this is a tremendous problem for any Governor.

It takes somebody who is responsible—and I assume that all the Governors are—it takes a tremendous amount of time of those around you, and others, to ascertain who should go in the judicial system of our government, and this is proper, because it is an extremely important appointment.

I had the experience of almost all of these methods, and it is for the reason of my experience, as well as philosophy, that I feel so strongly about what the Judiciary Committee has finally recommended.

Yes, it is absolutely true that the committee went through this, and went through it just as you have been going through it in the last two days, only we took even longer and went even more deeply into it. It is true that several different votes were taken at several times, and finally it came around to what we have presented to you. Just as you are now faced with the decision to make as to whether you want the type of operation that Delegate Kauffman has suggested—and a finer member of our committee we do not have—or the suggestion of the Judiciary Committee that is a majority, a bare majority of them has suggested.

In essence, the difference between these two is that one is, in essence, although not identical, the Federal system, and the other is one which is presently being practiced. It is not experimental. It is presently being practiced in 15 different states in this Union on various bases, some only in the lower courts, some only in the statewide courts, some altogether in all of them.

It is true that we have come up with a slightly different system than any of the others have in the make-up of the panel, and partly that is due to my experience, only partly, and I am now speaking for myself and not for the committee.

I think the intention of this Convention should be, and their objective should be, to try to do their level best to take the judiciary out of politics all up and down the line. I am not talking, and I admit this openly, only of partisan politics, although that is keen, but also of all other kinds of politics, Bar Association, or whatever.

All right. Now, what was my experience in this, and why do I feel so strongly about it? You have heard in the discussion on the Jirolanio amendment a number of people, including the sponsor himself, say that the Federal system is political, that it is entirely different because it brings up different subjects than occurs in the state. This is true, and you have just even more importantly heard the argument on all sides concerning the two-thirds or the majority rule of consent by the Senate. Every single member who spoke on that one said this was clearly political, and indeed, it is, as to who is going to have the power, whether the minority should be involved in it, or whether they should not, and I can assure you from my experience that this is precisely the case.

Now, what is the Federal system and how does it differ? First of all, you are appointing judges for life, or until their retirement, and, secondly, there are Federal questions which Delegate Jirolanio pointed out, which are really far afield from those that ordinarily come out in state courts, diversity, etc.

There is a Judiciary Committee of the Senate of the United States which has a very long tradition of determining the calibre of persons appointed there, and there are two Senators from every state. Frequently they are of different parties, which helps, but I say to you, and you can look up the figures, all the modern ones, and most of the ancient ones in the history of our State, almost every judge that is appointed by any President is of his party, at least, it is overwhelmingly so, and in this it is, I may say, obviously political.

Likewise, I say to you, whether it be by two-thirds or by majority of the Senate, or any other focus you want to put on to it, from my own experience, and you look at it intelligently and objectively yourselves, it is just as clear that any Governor sitting over there, that they make such fun of the front office about, and even those, if there are such, that make deals on such things as this—and pardon me for making a boastful statement at the moment, in not one of the judges that I appointed did I ever make any kind of an arrangement with any Senator or, for that matter, anybody else about votes on any other subject, because I have a very high regard for the judiciary and the importance of it, and I would not let it reach that kind of level.

May I also say to you, and I mean every word of what I am saying, that I had the experience with a panel system. It was one appointed by me. There were two things wrong with it. One was that it necessitated the consent of the Senate, and so this made it at least partly political. The other was that there were too many members of it who were moguls of the Philadelphia Bar Association. This made it partisanly political with respect to the Philadelphia Bar Association, and I have so stated, not only to them personally, which I did, but openly to the public many times, and I think we have learned our lesson on this.

Nevertheless, I say to you, and I mean every word of it, that the judges that were appointed by that system are as fine a group of five judges as have ever been appointed at one time in Philadelphia, and I defy anyone to get up and say otherwise. I point out to the experience that we have had with them and the variations in the type of their backgrounds and in the work that they are presently doing there.

Now we have arranged it so that Governors cannot appoint bar association, or any other type of moguls to run the panel for that very reason, because we do not approve of it.

I say to you in no uncertain terms, we have studied what they have done—yes, in Missouri, but that was only true in St. Louis and Kansas City; and yes, in Colorado, where it is all over the State; yes, in many other places. This is the coming way of operating the judicial appointments, particularly on a statewide basis, where the public really has no jurisdiction over who is selected. If you want to remove politics from it—and this is the test—then I say to you, did you make it possible for a Governor to appoint somebody from a panel which is non-political? Because, otherwise, in the Federal system or in our present system in this State—and I have experienced this—if he must get the confirmation of the Senate, or more important, if he is of one party and has no way to say to that party, "I have a good method of appointing somebody from another party," other than by making a deal, then I say to you that you should accept this method, because every other appointment I made, as every other Governor before me, was primarily from a panel of suggested names that was made to him from a few political leaders. Yes, he can get the finest and highest caliber men he can possibly find, but he was beholden to them and the Senate to make sure, and he needs the votes of all the people on his side of the Senate to do it. I am speaking bluntly now, but this is the truth, you are really choosing between one type of panel and an outrageously political one.

Yet I say to you, if you will do what the Judiciary Committee did—or many of them—and study how this has worked, and then make the choice that was always before me, you will come to the right decision.

DELEGATES BANES. May I interrogate Governor Scranton for just one question?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, Delegate Banes. He will stand for interrogation. You may proceed with your question.

DELEGATE BANES. Governor, during your term of office you stated you appointed 60 judges?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Not 60, almost. The exact number, I do not remember.

DELEGATE BANES. Could you tell us the number in each respective party who were appointed? Do you recall?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. No, but there were not many Democrats. In the arrangement that was made concerning Philadelphia when we opened two new courts there, there were half of them Democrats and half Republicans. In the panel arrangement that we had, from the panel list I got, two of them were Democrats.

DELEGATE BANES. But the balance?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. The balance in the State, I do not remember another Democrat.

DELEGATE BANES. All Republicans.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Rappaport.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I would like to speak to that last particular point.

As part of the arrangement, as I understand it, that was made by Governor Scranton, there were six appointments in the court of common pleas and I believe four in our county courts. The Governor is quite correct. The appointments he made from the panel were excellent ones and are excellent ones. I may have my facts wrong, I see the Governor standing up.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. May I correct him, sir?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Surely.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. The 10 appointments to which you are referring were not selected by the panel.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I am aware of this.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. They were selected by me from the panel.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. The previous group was from a panel, am I correct?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. That is correct, the five.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I am saying those five are all excellent judges, everyone of them. But I also say that the subsequent 10—and I do not say this because one of them is a former law partner of mine—are all excellent judges and they include in the group former counsel to the Republican City Committee and former counsel to the former Democratic City Council Committee in the group of six common pleas court judges.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. May I interrogate?

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I will yield most willingly to the Governor.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Is it not true that the reason this was so arranged was because we were opening two new courts and is it not also true that even, I think, with the high caliber of appointments that I made in most places in the State, out of the 57 judges the rest of them were of my party?

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I am not speaking to that point and I am not aware—I must confess to being very parochial as to what went on in the rest of the State. I am talking about the results of this very partisan selection in Philadelphia. I am saying that these 10 men are as qualified, without question, as the five judges who were appointed from the panel.

I would, therefore, suggest that we are not discussing which system brings about a higher caliber of man, we are talking about the method of selection and whether both parties will have a say in it. I think we run our government by the two party system and, perhaps, the initial appointment of judges might be considered the same way.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Reynolds.

DELEGATE REYNOLDS. I would like to ask the Governor a question.

Governor Scranton, is there anything in the article being presented by the committee to prohibit the next Governor from, if he chose to, appointing a panel of his own to help him out?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. No, there is nothing to prohibit him from so doing. As I pointed out to you, when I had this opportunity—or when any Governor would—if this particular provision is not passed, he must nevertheless get the consent of the Senate and this makes it a difficult political decision. It keeps politics in it.

DELEGATE REYNOLDS. One other question. If the panel should not give him the caliber of persons that he thought he should have, would it be his prerogative to ask them under this article to go back and bring in another person?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. No. Under the article he has a group of no less than 10 nor more than 20, which, for one decision, seems to me to be adequate. From my experience, I think it is adequate.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Sprogell.

DELEGATE SPROGELL. Several delegates have asked me to ask Governor Scranton if he will just finish off by saying in one sentence exactly what he is for and what he is against.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Well, I am sorry I wasted 10 minutes.

I say to you in no uncertain terms that I fully support the committee suggestion on the selection of judges statewide. I may also add that I supported their suggestion locally because I do not think that Pennsylvania is yet ready for the selection of judges on that plan locally unless the voters so desire it. Statewide I not only think we are ready for it, but I think we must have it in order to minimize political interests.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Irvis.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, Delegate Scranton is most persuasive and I say this not to flatter him, but to praise him. If we have a Governor like Bill Scranton in there, if we were to continue to have that caliber of man, I would not fear the commission system and I would not fear it if we were going to get on the commission men who were nonpartisan.

But we are not going to have, always, that caliber of man as the chief executive and, if the Governor is permitted to appoint four of the seven members and if the Supreme Court is permitted to appoint the other three, it becomes capably obvious that a politically motivated Governor could appoint three of his own party and toss a sop to the minority party by appointing the fourth from that party and the Supreme Court could appoint two of the majority party and toss a sop to the minority party and appoint one for the minority. This would give a clear-cut majority of five votes to one particular political party.

I again point out to you that if you think there is any way to divorce judges from politics, you are greatly mistaken. You may reduce the size of the political arena, but politics is going to be involved in the selection or appointment of judges. I suggest that the best way we now have before us is to make certain that the minority party, whichever party it be, will have some sort of veto on the appointive power of the executive.

Under the committee's proposal there would be no power to veto whatsoever. Whatever the Governor said would be it. I am opposed to handing him this sort of power. I fear it. Perhaps it is the way for the future, but I fear it very greatly. I strongly support what we have presently before us, the amendment to permit the Governor to nominate, with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate. It will be difficult, I know, but I think it is safer to have it difficult than it is to make it too easy for a highly partisan Governor to have his own will with statewide jurists.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. May I correct something?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes. The Chair now recognizes Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I am sorry to speak again, but I must correct the gentleman.

Under the provision of the Judiciary Committee the members of the commission shall serve for terms of seven years, staggered so that one member shall be selected each year and no more than four of the members at any time of the commission—I am adding "at any time," but that is obviously what is intended—shall be members of the same political party.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Butera.

DELEGATE BUTERA. Mr. President, I rise in support of the amendment. I do so with mixed feelings. For me, this has been the most difficult decision of this Convention. One of the reasons is that I realize that Governor Scranton and I differ in our opinions on this issue. My brief tenure in public office has been during what I like to refer to as the Scranton era in Pennsylvania. My political philosophy has been largely molded by that man. It is also difficult, because I do not view this as the political issue that so many others have seemed to convey to you throughout this debate.

Rather, I view it in a broader sense, I think, as to what I feel the responsibilities of the office of Governor are. I feel very strongly that judges at the statewide level should be appointed by the Governor. The question that arises is, how shall he appoint them? I think Governor Scranton is the best evidence that he can appoint them—that is, the Governor can appoint judges, competent judges, himself. He can utilize the panels, if that is his wish. He can utilize Bar Associations. He can utilize politicians, and, let us face it, they are not all bad. And he can—and most people will agree he did—appoint good judges. I do not think you can separate politics, as Delegate Irvis explained, from any appointment, judicial or otherwise, provided a politician is making the appointment.

But I say that that politician—in this case, the Governor—should make that appointment in the open. He should not be protected by a panel. He should not be protected by an executive committee of a political party in the case of election of judges. But the decision should be made by an elected Governor and it should be approved by an elected Senate and this Governor, when he is running for office, should, as one of his major issues should this proposal pass this convention, set forth to the people how he will exercise this power. Both candidates should. Both candidates will, I submit. If that particular candidate wants to insulate himself from the political bosses or the political leaders, he can do so very easily by putting them on notice that he is going to use "X" or "Y" methods, which may very well be a panel similar to this or similar to that which Governor Scranton used. But he can do it voluntarily, and we have seen it done in this State in recent years.

I think one of the disappointing things I have experienced at this Convention—perhaps, the only disappointing thing, because I think, contrary to many reports, that it has been a good Convention and it has been a good debate throughout—is the feeling of distrust among this body of politicians and the feeling of distrust has come out in many different ways. One is by restricting the Legislature by, in fact, legislating in writing this constitution. I think that emanates from a basic distrust for the Legislature. I think we are seeing it now in the distrust of the executive. We do not trust the Governor, we are saying—those of us who do not support this amendment—to appoint the judges. We want to, therefore, insulate him and give him some kind of select panel. But we trust them. I do not know what the difference is.

I submit to you that throughout our continued debate, the more restrictions we place on the politicians, on the elected people who run this State, the more we will perpetuate the very weaknesses which we fear in our system. I say, give the responsibility to the people who are willing to run for office and accept it. Once you give it to them and once you see to it that the right people are elected, they will use that power well and they will use it the way it was intended to be used in our system.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, the most essential element of judicial action is finality of action. I move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Do you wish to put that in the form of a motion, that we close debate and that we vote on the pending question? Is that your motion?

Delegate Solomon, I take it you are moving we close debate and put the pending question, is that correct?

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Yes, close debate.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone want to second it?

DELEGATE BAGENSTOSE. I will second it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Bagenstose seconds that motion.

On the question,
Will the delegates agree to the motion?
It was agreed to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are ready. We will unlock the voting machine. The question is, will the Convention agree to the Kauffman amendment? All those voting "yea" will vote to support the Kauffman amendment, all those voting "nay" will vote to reject it.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

WIFE AND FAMILY OF DELEGATE WELSH WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Welsh.

DELEGATE WELSH. I think now might be the time to ask the Delegates and the President for a pause that refreshes. I would like to introduce my wife and three of our older children and would like to ask them to rise. My wife, Kathleen, our oldest daughter Kate, Ann and Tom.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure I reflect the opinion of the fellow Delegates when we say that that was a very refreshing pause and we are very happy to have you with us.

WIFE AND DAUGHTER OF DELEGATE LAPUTKA WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Laputka.

DELEGATE LAPUTKA. I would like to introduce my wife, Audrey and my daughter, Dolores.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want to say again that we are very happy to have Mrs. Laputka with us and we just want you to know Delegate Laputka is doing a great job.

GUESTS OF DELEGATE MICHENER WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes our Secretary, Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. For an unusually refreshing note, last week I was asked to address a group of students from Stroudsburg who came here and, in the course of it, I said, "If you want to get a good view of government in action, why don't you come here and spend a day with me?" Well, they came. I have in the back of the room two delightful girls, Jill Anderson and Wendy Wells and, if they will stand up, you can see what happens when you give invitations.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are very happy to have you with us.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, you do not know it yet, but they will be with you for breakfast tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Well, that is a pleasant surprise. Where are we going to have that breakfast?

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Buck. For what purposes does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BUCK. I rise to a question of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BUCK. I was in my seat. I am not sure my vote was recorded on that last vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Buck, we will check the record.

Delegate Buck, you were recorded as voting.

DINNER OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT COMMITTEE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will recognize Delegate Baldrige.

DELEGATE BALDRIGE. While we are on the pause that refreshes, I would again like to ask the Delegates—especially those of the Local Government—to kindly give me their answer if they are attending the dinner tomorrow night and, also, for the gala night which will take place next Wednesday night.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise for a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. May I ask the Chair how many more amendments there are on this precise same issue? I seem to have one again by Delegate Kauffman, which is perhaps some "combination-flavor" of what we just discussed and I wonder how many others we have pending?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will be happy to answer your question as soon as we call in the outfield here and get instructions.

I am advised we have three more after this on Section 11, which would, I think, if my count is correct, mean that we now have a total of four to work on.

KAUFFMAN AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 5, line 4, by inserting after "appointment": and may fill the vacancy

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 5, lines 6 and 7, by striking out "Such appointment shall not" in line 6, all of line 7, and inserting: In the event the Governor appoints a person other than those listed by the commission, such appointment shall require the consent of two-thirds of the Senate. If the Governor appoints a person from the commission's list, such appointment shall not require the consent of the Senate.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman for a statement on behalf of his new amendment.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, as advance notice, this is the last amendment—at least, that I have—with regard to the selection panel. However, I feel very strongly about this. What this amendment does, in summary, is to provide a safety valve that I was talking about before.

What this amendment provides is that there will be a judicial qualification panel as proposed by the standing Judiciary Committee. The judicial qualification panel will submit a list of 10 to 20 names to the Governor, and the Governor will consider that list and, if he feels that it is a good list, that there are people on there who he would, in good conscience, appoint to a court of statewide jurisdiction, he will make the appointment.

However, the safety valve feature of this particular amendment is that in the event that the Governor, in his conscience, does not feel that any of the names—any of the 10 to 20 names that are submitted to him—are worthy to be appointed to a court of statewide jurisdiction, he may disregard those names, appoint someone on his own, and that appointment will require the consent of two-thirds of the Senate. In the event that he appoints from the list submitted by the panel, no Senate consent will be required.

I think it is important to remember and to keep in mind that the deliberations of this qualifications commission are going to be in secret, behind closed doors. No one will know the qualifications that they consider, and I cannot emphasize enough that the Governor does not—and I repeat and emphasize—does not have the right to ask for a second list under the present proposal. The Governor must appoint from one of the 10 names submitted to him, or he cannot possibly find anyone else to fill the appointment. He has no choice. Even if he does not like any of the names for legitimate reasons, he cannot disregard the list. This amendment permits the Governor to disregard the list, but there is again the safeguard of the consent of two-thirds of the Senate.

This, as I say, provides the safety valve against the very things that we talked about in the debating of the last amendment. I submit it for your consideration.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Will Delegate Kauffman permit a question, please?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, he will. You may proceed.

DELEGATE STROUP. Delegate Kauffman, you may have answered my question, although I did not hear you quite clearly enough, so I direct it to you this way: It has been my understanding all along that the commission system of recommending qualified judges to the Governor would require the Governor to select one out of the 10 or 20—and, if he did not, if he, say, stepped out of that, then such appointment as he would make if this proposal were adopted by the electorate would be unconstitutional.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. That is absolutely correct. He would have no choice, he must select one of those names submitted to him by the judicial qualifications commission.

DELEGATE STROUP. One more question, Delegate Kauffman. If I understand you, in your amendment you are now providing the Governor with an escape clause from the commission's recommendation, is that correct?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Yes. He would affirmatively have to disregard and explain his reason for disregarding the recommendations of the panel. I am sure that any Governor would be very certain not to do that unless there were perfectly legitimate reasons for doing it.

DELEGATE STROUP. Another question, if you will.

This, in effect, destroys entirely, the panel system or the commission system which is recommended by the committee?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. No, I do not think it destroys it at all. I think as a practical matter, it preserves the concept virtually intact. The only thing it does is provide a safety valve against a body not directly responsible to the people in any way, shape or form, selecting a group of names that the Governor in his own conscience could not find a qualified person to appoint as a judge. In the event that he in his own conscience found that the list was inadequate, under the present proposal he has no choice but to appoint from that list. However, under the amendment he would have to consider the list submitted to him by the panel, but he would have the escape valve if he wanted to appoint someone outside that panel, to submit the names to the Senate and it would have to be confirmed by two-thirds of the Senate. I assure you the Governor would have to explain to the people why he was doing what he was doing. I submit the Governor would not do that, except in very extraordinary, exceptional circumstances. It may never happen, but this is a safety provision that I feel would preserve the concept that the Governor should have the responsibility as well as the power. This would prevent the diffusion of responsibility and place it where it belonged, with the Governor.

DELEGATE STROUP. Thank you for the very extensive response. You have clarified the point in issue in the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I would like to interrogate the Co-Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Governor Scranton. I wonder whether he would consent to be interrogated on this point?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Yes, but you scare me.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would you repeat that?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I merely asked if Co-Chairman Scranton of the Judiciary Committee would consent to be interrogated on this point.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation. Proceed.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Does this amendment have the support of the Judiciary Committee, Governor Scranton?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. To the best of my memory, although Delegate Kauffman's memory is sometimes better than mine, this did not come up in the Judiciary Committee meeting, in my opinion. Did it?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. No, Mr. President.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. In my opinion, this literally kills what we have just tried to do, because it then gives, on one hand, the Governor an "out" to be political, but, on the other hand, it also gives the political parties an "in" to the Governor and, frankly, I would sincerely hope that the people in this Convention would not temporize with what we have done by literally killing this possibility, which this amendment would do.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, without inflicting too much punishment on Governor Scranton, I would like to—you do not have to take the podium, Governor. Sit down and take it easy. As a matter of fact, this need not be controverted.

In our judicial section this was discussed at length, one of the features of the Scranton appointments of these five judges in Philadelphia, and, by the way, they did not repeat their performance. It was an excellent performance at that time, was this, that for the third time in the history of the American Bar this appointing panel by a Governor or a mayor was used. The essential feature then was that the appointing power appointed the panel.

The other feature, and our Governor used it, he demanded the right to select additional panels, if needed, and he further charged the panel to come up with additional names.

I believe that in the committee the Governor did say that this panel came up with the nomination of five judges. I believe eight names were only submitted the first time, and he requested further names.

Delegate Kauffman's proposal, this amendment, would do no violence to the selection proposal. In my opinion, it takes some of the ache out of the mandatory selection.

Just three weeks ago, or less than three weeks ago, if we have the record of the Judiciary Committee, Delegate Curran read into the record the proceedings that took place in Mineola, New York, and I want you to listen to this.

In that county a judicial panel was created. This panel attempted to select a judicial nominee. It turned down a man and stated that he was unqualified. To Governor Rockefeller's credit, he made his own examination and actually selected the man that the panel had turned down.

This was known and was made known to every member of the judicial selection committee. This does give, in the instance, where the panel has come up with a name that the Governor does not want, really a chance to send it back to the panel.

At the outset of this Convention, at a first show of hands in our Judiciary Committee, I believe I was the only one who spoke, or at least raised my hand and indicated that in the appellate court system I—and I spoke not necessarily as a citizen or not necessarily as representing anyone, but as a lawyer—would be satisfied with the appointment of the appellate court judges by the Governor without any strings.

Now, I am asking you to help stop breaking our backs. Vote for this amendment. Let us get this off the board. I would like to be able to go home on the 29th without feeling I was either a deserter or absent without leave. I urge you to go ahead and vote on this. There is not anything wrong about it, much of it is right.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I am going to ask that you vote against this amendment so that we can support this judiciary proposal and get out of here.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Do you want to be heard, Delegate Barron?

DELEGATE BARRON. Yes, Mr. President, I would like to use, if I may again appear in the role of a minor prophet, you can select Amos or Micha or whatever the pleasure of the delegates may be, this is but another attempt to rework materials which were discussed time and time again in this committee. I would be the last to deny to this delegation the right to debate and discuss this fully, and I will defend your right to speak upon it.

Please notice carefully, it does violence in two areas, one of which I hold no brief for, the other of which is something to be carefully thought about.

The question is very simple on the first one, the two-thirds rule, which was considered in the last consideration submitted by Delegate Kauffman. The other is whether or not this group wishes to have the Governor have a second list submitted to him. These are the issues. I would ask your earnest, careful consideration of them, and consider that this committee has worked on it very carefully, and I believe you will see in what area your determination should lie.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are the delegates ready for the question?

Do you want to close?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I think Governor Scranton has something to say.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I would like to make one point.

We had a lot of discussion in the committee about the numbers that should be presented by the panel to the Governor. In the panel that I had in Philadelphia we were selecting five judges—I want the whole story to come out. They had submitted 10 names, which I felt was not enough, and I asked for another 10. We were then selecting five judges.

This is for only the selection of one judge, and we are asking for a minimum of 10 names and a maximum of 20 and, frankly, from my experience, I think this is absolutely adequate.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Ruth.

DELEGATE RUTH. First of all, Mr. President, I would say that if we have to take an appointive type system, this is acceptable, but I want to direct your attention primarily to what we just finished a few hours ago and, being so strong for the election system, I have to draw this to your attention.

The vote was 75 to 75, and what did that indicate as far as the feeling of this body? It indicated there are 75 delegates who are in favor of election of judges, and there are 75 who are in favor of appointment in some method. A percentage of those 75 are in favor of either the Governor appointing, with certain approval, and some percentage are in favor of appointment with a panel. Neither of those by themselves would have a majority. The majority interest in this Convention is the election of judges, and I tell you that if you buy even an acceptable appointive system and sacrifice the election system, you are compromising when you should not have to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman to sum up.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, please, please carefully consider this amendment.

I submit to you that it does not do violence in any way, shape or form, with the concept of the proposal submitted by the committee; the only thing it does is provide a safety valve. It provides a safeguard against the panel submitting to the Governor a list of names of all unsatisfactory people, and it could happen in the next hundred years.

We are writing a constitutional mandate which takes away the right of the Governor to appoint and, also, takes away the responsibility of the Governor for appointing.

What this does is to put it back in focus where the responsibility lies. It also permits the Governor, when he in good conscience feels that he must go beyond the list submitted to him by the panel, to so state and to so do.

Let me ask you this, what would a Governor do under this constitutional provision as it is now proposed by the standing committee if a list of 10 names was submitted to him and none of them were satisfactory to him? What would the Governor do? I do not think anyone can answer that question.

The purpose of this amendment is give the Governor a safety valve. He must, let me emphasize, he must affirmatively state to the public and state to the Senate why he has rejected the proposed list by the nominating commission. He would not do that unless there were compelling reasons why he should and, if there are those compelling reasons, Mr. President, I submit that the Governor should have that power.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the Kauffman amendment?

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Swope. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SWOPE. I rise to a question of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Mr. President, I was absent by official excuse this morning, but I am here now. Had I been here this morning, I would have voted against both the Jirolanio and the Kauffman amendments, and I would have supported the committee report.

I hope that that is registered in the Journal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, your remarks will be placed on the record.

GERBER-WOODRING AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The next amendment we will refer to is the Gerber-Woodring amendment. The clerk will read the amendment.

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 5, line 24 by inserting after "serve.": At any municipal or general election in a judicial district in which the matter has been placed on the ballot in the manner provided by law, the qualified electors of any judicial district may, by a majority vote of those voting on the question, elect to have the judges of their district elected on a non-partisan basis. When the qualified voters of any judicial district have elected to elect judges on a non-partisan basis, the names of the candidates at any such municipal election, shall appear on separate judicial ballots or in a separate column on voting machines and in either case without party designation. The names of such candidates shall be placed on the ballot at the municipal election by petition as provided by law without appearing in any primary election.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gerber to speak on behalf of his amendment.

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, the purpose of this amendment is to provide an alternative in each of the state judicial districts for the voters to determine whether or not they would like to select their common pleas court judges either on the present method of election by party, or whether they would like to elect their judges on a nonpartisan basis as individuals.

The purpose, therefore, is that the voters in each district would have the opportunity, then, to elect judges who would not be running on party lines in a year with the county commissioners, the district attorney, city councilmen, borough councilmen, or township commissioners, or supervisors, who would be up for office, and they would have the opportunity to focus their attention upon those individuals who are seeking the office of judge in their judicial district.

It seems to me that this amendment is fair in that the electors in the respective judicial districts would have the opportunity to determine for themselves whether or not they would like to have a partisan election of judges or nonpartisan election of judges.

This would only give to the people of each judicial district the opportunity, first, to determine in a referendum and, if they so choose, to select their judges in their district as individuals on their merits as lawyers, on the basis of their integrity as human beings, on the basis of their achievements through their whole lives, rather than to have the individuals be pulled in on a straight party vote.

It seems to me this amendment is consistent with the arguments put forth on behalf of the Ruth amendment of a day or so ago. It would give the people of each judicial district, who claim they know the people they are voting for, the opportunity to truly vote for an individual for the high office of judge.

I would ask support for this amendment on the basis that we are honestly voting for people for judges in separate judicial districts and not by party line. I would also ask for support of this amendment because all it does is give the people of the respective judicial districts the opportunity to determine for themselves whether or not they want to elect by people or by party line. If the voters of the respective judicial districts choose to retain the present system, they may so do. If, on the other hand, they would rather not be bound to vote by party line and have their vote follow the vote of county commissioners, the district attorneys, and the rest of the row officers, they would have an opportunity to do so.

I, therefore, urge each and every delegate here today, if you who voted for the Ruth amendment, and if you want the people in each of the judicial districts to know who they are voting for and claim they really know the individual, this is the amendment that gives the respective voters of each judicial district an opportunity to do so.

I, therefore, ask you to vote in favor of this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Strickler.

DELEGATE STRICKLER. Mr. President, I appreciate the spirit in which this amendment is being proposed. My reaction is, we are cluttering up the judicial article with too many things for the public to absorb. Here is an amendment which will be passed on to the people again, the question of them having to determine how the ballot will be, whether the judge shall be on the primary ballot or whether it should be a nonpartisan ballot, or what. I think it is too much at this time at this constitutional Convention to consider an amendment of this sort. I think we have made a lot of reform with the committee proposal and I think, therefore, this amendment should not be supported.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Butera.

DELEGATE BUTERA. I rise in opposition to the amendment. I cite this as another example of what I just spoke about, here we go again. Let us peck away at the system, let us distrust the politicians, let us not assume the responsibility of seeing to it that the politicians are good and they put good people on the ballot. Instead, take the power away from them. I think it is patently wrong. Let me give you an example of what happened here in the House of Representatives last year. We passed a bill to provide for non-partisan election of school directors. The bill is presently lodged in the Senate. The day after we passed the bill a group formed in the southeastern part of the State calling themselves a political party for the election of non-partisan school directors. My point is, regardless of how good it sounds, it cannot be done.

We cannot afford the luxury of taking partisan politics out of elective office, and I urge everyone to oppose this amendment because it just does not do what it is intended to do.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Woodring.

DELEGATE WOODRING. Mr. President, I am going to be very brief because we have been debating much too long and much too repetitious on the various subjects.

I have noticed, however, on the debate of the judiciary article there are two principal points in which the delegates are vitally interested. The one is that the people should have the right of franchise and should have the right to vote for their judicial nominees. The other point is that we ought to take judges out of party politics. With both of these propositions, I agree 100 per cent.

I happen to live along the Delaware River, the eastern boundary of our Commonwealth. Just across the river in the State of New Jersey, some of the officials of the various municipalities are elected on a nonpartisan basis. The candidates do not run with any party designation, they are not elected on a regular election day, and let me tell you from personal observation, the system works and works well. It has divorced party politics from those particular offices.

The delegates here have spent a day, one full day convincing each other and themselves that they want to remove the judiciary, the judicial selection for party politics and want the people to vote. Here is the method in which it can be done. I think it is a good amendment and I am going to vote for it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. On behalf of the Judiciary Committee, let me state that this matter was considered by the subcommittee on selection of judges and it was rejected so overwhelmingly that it was never brought to the floor of the standing committee and was never considered by the standing committee.

In the interest of time, let me summarize what the discussion was in the subcommittee by reading to you some excerpts from pages 111 and 112 of our reference manual on the judiciary.

The only reason I read is because it summarizes much better than I could without, but the conclusion was that the nonpartisan ballot system would lower the quality of judicial personnel by making it possible for unqualified persons to run entirely on their own, even though they could never get party support, and they could be elected by means of aggressive campaigning.

Under the nonpartisan system, there is no process of screening the qualifications of candidates before they appear on the ballot. Candidates who would never be considered by a political party may be elected by irrelevant factors such as having a large campaign fund, a pleasing television image, or the proper place on the ballot, and we have seen in recent years just how important it is to have a proper place on the ballot. These factors may be more influential on the outcome of the election than the usual qualifications of character, legal ability, judicial temperament or public service.

I want to point out and emphasize Pennsylvania has, in fact, attempted to use the nonpartisan method of selection of judges and it has failed. The nonpartisan ballot was used for the first time in Pennsylvania for the election of judges for the new municipal court in Philadelphia. Over 40 candidates entered their names in the primary for the six judgeships to be filled, but the dominant political party quickly adjusted to the plan. The late Chief Justice Schaffer of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court reported that a very potent leader of the dominant political party privately selected the names of his favorite candidates for the six judgeships. These names were distributed on several ballots. Despite the prohibition of over-endorsement by a political party and despite the control of Philadelphia's government by a reform administration at the time, five of the dominant party's selections were elected.

Critics of the nonpartisan ballot contended that candidates were plunged more than ever into politics. Deprived of open party support, the candidates were required to create their own campaign organization or to seek clandestine support within the party. The nonpartisan primary encouraged a multitude of publicity-seeking candidates and made an informed choice almost impossible. The Pennsylvania Non-Partisan Election Act was repealed in 1921.

I must urge on behalf of the Committee on the Judiciary that you defeat the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Caron.

DELEGATE CARON. Mr. President, I think we have been discussing this at great length and I think that Delegate Gerber should be permitted to summarize, so I move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are we ready to vote? We will unlock the voting machines. The question is, will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegates Gerber and Woodring? All those voting "yea" will vote to support the amendment, those voting "nay" will vote to reject it.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

BARRON AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron.

DELEGATE BARRON. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE BARRON offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 5, lines 20 and 21 by striking out "the failure of an elected judge" in line 20, all of line 21 and inserting a comma

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 5, lines 24 to 28 by striking out "Whenever in any such judicial district a judge" in line 24, all of lines 25 to 27 and "13." in line 28

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron for a statement in connection with his amendment.

DELEGATE BARRON. The purpose of this amendment Mr. President, is to remove the present merit retention of elected judges. I say again, the purpose is to remove the present merit retention proposal for elected judges. In presenting this proposal, I wanted this issue of the mode and form of retention to be clearly presented to the Convention for its approval or disapproval.

I am in favor, to be quite frank, that if the present elective system is to be retained, as it now seems clear, considering that the Gerber amendment was just recently defeated, that the form of retention of county common pleas judges should remain as it is now. I would like to suggest to you that many of you from the large cities and suburban areas do already have in force a political principle known as the sitting judge. I candidly admit I do not have a sufficient wealth of experience in this area to be able to make an intelligent comment on whether or not the sitting judge principle is as effective upstate as I understand it to be. I say, however, to those of you who come from the smaller and more rural areas, at least in my own county and the counties within the district from which I have been elected, there is no such principle. As a matter of fact, it is the only effective way of defeating a judge who is unsatisfactory to the general public.

I point out to you that the reasons for this are very simple. One, in all of those counties which have but one judge and there are, according to my last count, 29 or 30 of them of the 59 judicial districts, there is no truly effective mode for the bar association to oppose the sitting judge, even on a secret referendum, without incurring the wrath of that judge. No individual attorney can stand up and escape the retribution which a judge so inclined can exact from him.

We are not in the happy position, if Judge A refuses a particular petition or a particular motion out of a sense of retribution, that we can go down the hall and consult with Judge B. We are stuck with whomever we have and we are obliged to appeal from that if we do not like the result. The point being made is simply this, that merit retention is a wonderful concept wherever you have strong enough organizations to permit it to work. However, where you do not have such as a pre-condition to the situation, merit retention is, if I may use the vernacular, is like shoveling smoke. There is no way that effective opposition can be given to the judge other than in the person of someone who can stand up in a clearly understood situation that the judge may be opposed, and this is in the form of a re-election process.

I commend this thought to you for your very careful consideration. I urge you to adopt it so that those counties which wish to continue using the sitting judge principle may continue to do so. Those counties such as my own, which never had that proposition and do not know it as part of our political life, may continue to use the contested mode that we are most comfortable with.

I will suggest one caveat and, since the section is not under immediate discussion, I will have to come back to you with an amendment of Delegate Fohl to Section 13.

However, since we have limited our consideration at the present time to this, this is the place where we can indicate whether or not we ought to have an effective means of making a re-election contest meaningful, or whether we are going to be met with a smoke screen form of alleged merit retention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, the Judiciary Committee voted on this toward the end of January, and at that time the vote was unanimous in favor of the retention election because it was felt to be a very essential part of the effort to keep the judiciary out of the political arena. I might say there were later attempts to overthrow this and the retention election was retained, although not unanimously, but there were some votes to the contrary at a later time.

I might say the provisions for retirement removal, suspension and compulsory retirements of judges takes care in some degree of the various problem Delegate Barron indicates.

Also, I might point out that this has not been tried in the form in which we have it in the State of Pennsylvania, and we feel that this type of retention election will give the persons voting in each of the districts an opportunity to do exactly what Delegate Barron mentioned, mainly, to vote out the judges who do not suit the persons in the judicial district that have their judge, that particular judge, running on a retention election.

We recommend very strongly the Convention turn down this amendment and approve the portion of the judiciary article that provides for retention election.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I wonder if the Co-Chairman of the Judiciary Committee will consent to be interrogated for one question?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will, and you may proceed with your questioning.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. Chairman, is it not a fact that if this amendment were to be approved it would cut the vitals out of another key item in the judiciary proposal?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I did not hear you.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Is it not a fact that if this amendment were approved it would serve to cut the vitals out of another key section in the Judiciary Committee proposal?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. It would cut the vitals out of the very part of the proposal I indicated, there is no question about it, and that is why we recommend strongly it be retained and not amended.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will recognize Delegate Orban.

DELEGATE ORBAN. I would like to interrogate Delegate Amsterdam.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. He will stand for interrogation. You may proceed with your question.

DELEGATE ORBAN. Delegate Amsterdam, I did not hear your entire explanation because I was conversing with one of the delegates.

What effect would this have on a judge who is presently in office, let us say, who would run next year?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. We have provided for judges in office at the present time and they would continue in office. You are talking about a judge whose term of office, after he has served a full term, is terminated following the adoption of the constitution, is that correct?

DELEGATE ORBAN. Let me put it this way. A judge who has completed his term would be required to come up for reelection, let us say, in 1969, since I understand this would come into effect January 1, 1969?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. That is correct.

DELEGATE ORBAN. Would that judge run on a yes-no ballot?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Yes, he would run on his record.

DELEGATE ORBAN. Mr. President, I am in favor of this amendment for the reason that with the system set up by the committee you will freeze in office any judge which the community might want to vote out.

In addition to this, I refer you back to last week when I labeled this, and many others have labeled it, as the Russian ballot. I am not in favor of a Russian ballot in this Convention. I am not in favor of imposing a Russian ballot on the people. Therefore, I oppose the committee's report and vote for the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Michael.

DELEGATE MICHAEL. Mr. President, Governor Scranton earlier pointed out that one of the important considerations of the judiciary is keeping out partisan politics. Now, we have left in in our proposal the original election of judges in the common pleas judicial districts on a partisan basis. However, the committee proposal does give us this choice of a judge on his retention or of his being tossed out of office on the basis of merit. I would like to justify this by one example that was earlier given to us by Delegate Fay. He cited a number of judges in Luzerne County who he felt were good judges. I do not think any of us have argued here on the floor that we have bad, incompetent, or corrupt judges in Pennsylvania. We are merely trying to insure that we can get men of merit to keep running for the position of judge, that we can retain good men and get rid of bad men.

The question is, do these judges want to run on a partisan basis? Would they prefer to be retained or put out of office on a merit basis? Let me just give you one statement that came before the Judiciary Committee in the testimony in December, a statement that was made by a member of the Woodside Commission. Harriet McGeehan, who is a member of the American Association of University Women—when she said 12 years ago—we asked one of the older judges from the Luzerne County bench to come and talk to us about it. She states, "He told us then that he did not favor it because he did not think there has been enough experience. We then said to him, how did he feel about the pressures put on him as a jurist in Luzerne County? Was he ever subjected to these pressures? He spent 20 minutes telling us, first of all, how deeply he resented being ordered to be on the platform of every political rally during certain elections, of being told what he was to contribute to the party, not in an election in which he ran, but in every election, and the threat being made in every area of his life, including that of a bank where he happened to be on the board of directors."

Mr. President, partisan pressure on the judges does not give us the system that we really want. These men, when they are running, should be running on merit and should be running on their record, and this is not a Russian ballot. We can say, yes, this man has done a good job and we want to retain him, or we can say, no, he has not done a good job and we would like to see him removed from office and then another judge, if we remove him from office, is appointed and in two years the voters again have the option to say yes, he is a good man, or no, he is not. All of us, you who have contested that election of judges is the best system, say if the voters are informed they can do this. I think we ought to give the voters the chance to decide on their judiciary, and I think we ought to give the judge a chance to run on a merit basis rather than continuing to run on a partisan basis.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Keller.

DELEGATE J. W. KELLER. Mr. President, I rise in support of this amendment. The merit retention system is also affectionately known as the "till death do us part" proposal. There is merit, as some of the delegates agree, but when we say we are taking something out of politics, we are also saying we are taking the people out of government. Certainly, the people can make an informed decision at the elections, provided they have a choice, but they have no choice under this particular system. This is the painful part.

I can tell you this, in our small county we have had two judges unseated in the last two terms and I believe for good and valid reasons. They were unseated in a contested election where someone could say what their performance was. It is all well and good to say, well, we all know whether or not Judge X did perform well during the last 10 years, but as a perfectly practical matter let us face it, only the people who have appeared before Judge X and the bar association that appears regularly before him are going to be able to go out and speak.

In a large bar—for example, the Philadelphia Bar or the Allegheny Bar—there is not a threat of reprisal because you spread out the problem of reprisal. But in a small bar of 20, 40, 60, how many of those lawyers do you honestly think, in a county where you have one or two judges, will stand up and say Judge X simply is not qualified or Judge X has forgotten that he is a human being?

I say to you, though the courts must be independent, by the same token they must never lose sight of the fact that they, too, are responsible—not responsive, necessarily, but responsible—to the people. They cannot assume that they have become a "gudge." That is a judge who thinks he is God.

So I say to you that I favor this amendment and urge your support for it. I also say that if I could be assured in my county that the judge we presently have was going to remain and that we would always have judges like him, I probably would favor this system. But I do not have that guarantee and, therefore, I fear this "till death do us part" proposal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Croop.

DELEGATE CROOP. Mr. President, I hesitate at this late hour to stand here and say things to you which have been quite obvious. I tried to keep my temper, I tried to keep the patience that the President has exercised here. All I heard is nonpolitical. Let me challenge you members of this delegation. A vast majority of you—at least 99 per cent—are here because your name appeared upon a ballot with a party affiliation in back of it. Remember that, please, when you are talking about nonpolitical. If these were not political parties whose names appeared on the ballot, what were they?

I, for one, would like to stand up and be counted and be called a politician. For 40 years I labored in the vineyards of politics. I never had a job that paid me a dime or a salary. I do not expect any. This is the first one in which a contribution towards expenses has been made. I see no objection to these terms and to the two-party system that we have in the State of Pennsylvania. I was one of those platform members in the City of Pittsburgh who opposed the nonpartisan school director proposition because I did not think it was practical and I did not think it was workable. I had many in high places who did not agree with me. My thoughts were not carried, but may I say to you, if you take politics out of the system of American government, you are going to take out the foundation of that we have been born to and from which we have risen to the heights that we are at today.

I believe in this two-party system. I think it is good. It is as fundamental in the checks and balances in which we labor, as are the three systems of our national government. There is always a place for a minority party to be seen and heard. There is a chance for the majority party to do the best they do. I have said to many of my constituents in my party, be sure you always elect the good candidates. If you do not, you should be defeated by the other party. This is my political philosophy, and I think this goes for every single office to which anyone ascribes. Also I think the judgeships are just as susceptible to this as anybody else.

That is one of the reasons I wanted to take their selection back to the people, because my observance of the people is that they are pretty careful who they select for judges and they exercise their rights, perhaps, many times better than we do. I think they have a confidence. I see no harm in these dirty words that some people want to talk about—politics and political. To me they are the foundation of our system of government.

I urge the support of this amendment and the getting away from all this nonpartisan talk. It does not make sense to me. I have not been able to see it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Barry, you are recognized.

DELEGATE BARRY. Mr. Chairman, I rise briefly to oppose this amendment. I so rise not only for the reasons already advanced by other people, but for another reason. I believe this system will work better than the two-party system now in effect as to retaining elected judges.

There was an instance in Allegheny County where there was a judge who was actually censured by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. This judge was up for reelection several years later and both parties supported this judge. I think they were in a postion where they did not want to jettison the party policy of supporting sitting judges. I submit that the article here, as presented by the committee, will give another alternative. It would give people a chance to express themselves for or against a particular judge and there would not be a sitting judge principle to intervene and prevent it from being done.

Therefore, I oppose the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Brown.

DELEGATE BROWN. Mr. President, I have not spoken before because I felt if I waited long enough I would have most of my questions answered. However, right now I only have one thought. I would like to speak on the principle alone of giving up the opportunity to vote in whatever situation you happen to be in.

Are you going to again give up your vote? It is going to be easier each time you do it. I heard a lot of manly emotion here this afternoon and I will not bore you with any womanly emotion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Caputo.

DELEGATE CAPUTO. Mr. President, I will be very short because most of my arguments have been covered by some of the other speakers. I do want to call your attention to one thing that has not been mentioned in connection with the reference to the Russian ballot. I want to say to you that I am not convinced we are not adopting a Russian ballot, for this very reason. Surely, you can vote against an indivdual who may be occupying the bench, but what alternative do you have when you do vote against him? You simply say to them, "Give me another name," and vote him down. You have no choice of persons, you have no choice of individuals to vote on. You simply say to the man on the bench, "I don't want you," but you have another name for which you may vote. Consequently, this is a Russian ballot and you simply vote for or against the individual and not for one individual against another individual.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the proponents of this amendment realize that at the district level a judge who has been appointed by a governor with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate to fill an interim term and who then has run on a partisan ballot and has been elected on a partisan ballot to a 10-year term would then be required again and again to run on a partisan ballot to keep his seat on the bench?

I rise in opposition to this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron for his closing statement, unless someone else wishes to be heard.

DELEGATE BARRON. Mr. President, just briefly, if you notice, our respective delegates, O'Donnell and Amsterdam, indulged in something I call batting practice. Delegate O'Donnell was fishing and Delegate Amsterdam endeavored to knock the thing out of the ball park. You noticed, however, they came up with no recommendation for protection, as I asked them to do. What we are trying to do here is embalm the sitting judge in his position. Naturally, a judge himself, once there, wants to avoid competition. I suggest to you, however, that there is no effective testing of alleged merits because there is no effective clash of opinion as to the judge's merit.

I conclude with this, there is no true testing time when there is no true adversity.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now we are ready for the question. Will the Convention agree to the amendment being offered by Delegate Barron? The voting machine is now unlocked. All those voting "yea" will vote to support the Barron Amendment, those voting "nay" will vote to reject it.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

WOODSIDE AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Woodside.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1, (Sec. 11), page 6, line 30, by inserting after "courts": with seven or less judges shall be the justice or judge longest in continuous service on their respective courts. The President Judges of all other courts

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, I assume that every member of this Convention has sometimes—and often, many times—been frustrated. The greatest frustration I have had at this Convention has been my inability to persuade the Judiciary Committee to accept the method that has been used in choosing the Chief Justice of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania for 200 years and has been followed throughout the state in determining the President Judgeship, for almost as long. This Amendment provides that in the Supreme Court, the Superior Court, and in all other courts having seven or less judges, the present system shall be retained and that the Chief Justice and the President Judges shall be those who have been longest in continuous service on their respective courts.

I have long been interested in this. We discussed it at great length in the commission in 1959. Chief Justice Stern and I were both members of that commission. We had no doubt of the position which should be taken in reference to this. The rest of the Commission seemed to agree fully that we should retain the method which had been used over the years.

Since that time, everything that happened has convinced me even more that I have been right. Now what happens in a court? Well, when a man first goes into court—take an appellate court as an example, although it is pretty much the same in other courts—he votes first and answers the knock on the door during a conference. He slowly becomes acquainted with the procedures of the court and with the type of petitions that are presented to the President Judge and disposed of by him. These petitions relate to a great number of subjects. Eventually, when two or three of the judges are away on vacation or become ill, he may be the third or fourth ranking judge and he has the experience then of acting as the President Judge or the Chief Justice for a matter of a few days or a few weeks. By the time he becomes the oldest member in point of service on that bench, he has more knowledge about that court and its business than any other judge. He not only has more knowledge about that court but he has more knowledge about each one of the judges on that court. In other words, he is the most experienced and the most knowledgeable in the two things that a presiding judge ought to be experienced and knowledgeable about.

Now, why do I say that you should limit this method to courts of seven and less?

Well, because the advantages that are applicable to a small court are not applicable to large courts. The advantages of electing President Judges in the large courts overshadow the advantages of having the judge longest in service act as presiding judge. It seems to me to be proper to elect the President Judge in the large courts.

Now what has happened in Pennsylvania and elsewhere where the law provides for election of President Judge. There is one court in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania that elects its President Judge. It is the County Court of Philadelphia. I have known the President Judges of that court personally, as many of you people have. Every one was a close personal friend of mine. They were very personable and likeable people, but I ask you delegates from Philadelphia who know under what circumstances they were chosen, were they chosen because they could best administer that court or were they chosen because of other reasons?

What have we done here?

We have provided for competitive votes, introducing a factor of individual contests and factualism which should not be permitted to enter the court.

Now, what has happened in other states. There are a few states in which the courts elect their presiding judge, not the majority of states by any means, but there are a few. What has happened in those states?

Well, I talked to a judge from Missouri who was in here, and I asked him about it, and he said, "Well, we ignore the constitution. Our Supreme Court has arranged another system whereby they pass the chief justiceship around." In other words, it works so poorly in that state that the Supreme Court itself circumvented the constitution in order to adopt a new and different plan.

In Illinois one of the justices was asked about this and he said, "Oh, well, it works pretty well. Of course, when the Republicans are in control, there is a Republican Chief Justice, and when the Democrats are in control, there is a Democratic Chief Justice."

Is that the kind of situation that we want to adopt in Pennsylvania?

The proposed system has not worked well here, and it has not worked well in other states.

It is like having the vice-presidents of a corporation elect the president, then after he is president for awhile they will take him out and put another one in as president, and the president goes back to being vice-president.

What happens to the Chief Justice after he moves up and becomes Chief Justice and becomes acquainted with the administration of the court? What happens to him when he has to step down from the chief justiceship and becomes an associate justice of that court? In many instances in other states that judge seeks to get off that court. An able judge, an experienced judge—often times the best and most experienced justice on that court—steps off the bench, because he considers it demeaning to step down from the chief justiceship to an associate justiceship, so he tries to get a federal appointment, or he resigns to practice law.

Who wants this method? Do any of the justices on the Supreme Court want it? Do any judges of the Superior Court want it? Do the judges of the various county courts want it? Does the Bar Association want it?

Let me just give you some of them that do not want it. The Bar Association of Pennsylvania. The American Bar Association. The judges of the courts. The Institute of Judicial Administration. The American Judicature Society and the 1949 Pennsylvania Commission.

Mr. President and members of the Convention, I may have been wrong in criticizing this Convention for moving previous questions. I may be wrong in the many opinions I have written, and I am sure a lot of lawyers here think I was, but if I was ever right in anything in my life I am right in the amendment I am here offering.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Rappaport.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I wonder if I might ask Judge Woodside two questions?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure Judge Woodside will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Judge, is it your intention to have this apply to the courts, the individual 10 courts of common pleas of Philadelphia County, and to the traffic court of Philadelphia?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. No. It is my intention to have the length of service designating the president judge and the chief justice in those courts which have seven or less.

In Philadelphia, with a large court as they have there, or in Pittsburgh with the large court they have there, this principle should not be applicable. I keep all of the material which is in the proposal of the Judiciary Committee, every bit of it, except that I do not make it applicable or take the applicability away from the Supreme Court, the Superior Court and all other courts having seven or less judges.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Then, sir, assuming the traffic court in Philadelphia has six members, it would apply to the traffic court of Philadelphia?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. If there is no other provision in the Constitution to the contrary, I assume that it would.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Thank you, sir.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. But I understand that there is another provision in the Constitution—that this is not applicable, the election is not applicable, and, therefore, this would not be applicable because of the other provision in the Constitution.

Because, if the present provision of the report of the committee is applicable, then I think they would have to be elected, but there is a specific provision, as I understand it, related to them which takes them out of this provision which I have amended and, therefore, in that respect it would be my opinion that it would not be applicable.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Welsh.

DELEGATE WELSH. I would like to ask Judge Woodside a question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Proceed. I am sure he will stand to be interrogated.

DELEGATE WELSH. Judge Woodside, I am in favor of what you say with regard to the courts of seven members, or less. I am agreed to the way you have it.

My question is this, the way I read the last sentence, or the last part of your sentence, in the amendment it could mean that you might possibly intend that the committee proposal with regard to all other courts, that they should be selected every five years.

Did you intend that? Do you see where it says the president judges of all other courts? Did you intend by that to follow along with the committee proposal, or did you intend that this specific amendment only applied to courts of seven members, or less?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Maybe I could best explain it by reading the section as it would be if my amendment were adopted.

The chief justice and president judges of courts with seven or less judges shall be the justice or judge longest in the continuance of service in their respective courts. Now, that provision would relate solely to courts having seven or less judges.

Now, I go on to the other courts. The president judge of all other courts—and that would mean courts of more than seven—shall be selected for five-year terms by the members of their respective courts, except that the president judge of the traffic court of the City of Philadelphia shall be appointed by the Governor. Then the chief justice and the president judge may resign such position or remain as a member of the court, which would apply to everybody. And in the event of a tie vote, and it would apply only to the places where they are elected, and so on.

DELEGATE WELSH. Is it not true, then, that this amendment is really two amendments as distinguished from one amendment?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. No. I do not understand it to be two amendments.

DELEGATE WELSH. At least, to me it is. I gather that you intend that in courts that have seven members, or less, the president judge shall be the judge with seniority, and all other courts shall be by election.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. That is right, except that there is a provision in here—except that the president judge of the traffic court of the City of Philadelphia shall be appointed by the Governor.

DELEGATE WELSH. So you have two questions in this one amendment?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. I do not see that.

DELEGATE WELSH. For example, some of us who favor seniority in all courts, not only in those of seven members, or less, might want to put an amendment in on this and put it in for all courts.

My question to you is this, is this an amendment which I could favor if there were seven judges, or less? But then, there is no other reference to any other court, perhaps the Court of Allegheny or Philadelphia, or wherever it might be.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. It was my intention to have the committee's report govern the larger courts for the reason which I stated. I felt that it was necessary under those circumstances.

DELEGATE WELSH. You also intend that the committee's report elect their president judges, also in the lower trial court level, is that what you intend?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Of seven or more judges.

DELEGATE WELSH. Seven or more judges?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Yes. Where they have seven or more judges. If they have seven, or less, judges, they do not elect. If they have eight or more judges, they would elect under this amendment.

DELEGATE WELSH. Then that might make a difference, for example, in Delegate Barron's county where he might have one or two judges. You would go for the seniority system in that case, and then when we get to Allegheny County, where we have 30 judges, or Philadelphia where you might have 80—by the time we get finished with this Convention, I mean—you go for the election method. If that is the intention of your amendment, then I am against it, because I think that as far as the present judges of all the courts in Pennsylvania, I am for the seniority method.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, I just want to give the committee's comments about this.

First of all, there is nothing in this provision that prevents the judges of any court from deciding on the seniority system. It does not say that they will be elected, it says that they will be selected, and we purposely did it that way so that the judges themselves could decide how they wanted to do it, and in that respect Judge Woodside is incorrect.

Secondly, the main purpose of this particular provision was the fact that we have now changed the system of courts in Pennsylvania by having the unified court system, and in it we have given to the courts a tremendous amount of administrative work and power.

For example, in Illinois, where they also have the unified court system, they soon discovered that some of the older judges did not want to administer and, as a consequence, they resigned as chief justices—not as a justice—and the other younger ones were given the job of doing the administration.

This provision allows all that flexibility. It allows the courts that want to use the seniority system to use it; it allows a court that does not want to use it because of administrative problems not to use it. Therefore, we feel very strongly that it not only takes care of Judge Woodside's problem, but it also takes care of the new problems that will come into the courts.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Tate.

DELEGATE TATE. Mr. President, I speak in opposition to this amendment. You have on your desk an amendment that bears my name which I will offer in the event that Judge Woodside's amendment is defeated, because I, too, for many of the same reasons, but not all of the same reasons as Judge Woodside, have been concerned about the possibilities that might occur under the committee's recommendation with respect to the election of the chief justice and chief judges of our courts.

Take, for example, the Philadelphia situation. We will have as of this month 56 judges in our new consolidated court and if the schedule is approved we will have 66 judges and we may well have more before we have less. In the event the committee proposal is approved, these 56 or more judges will elect their chief judge each five years. In my opinion, the larger the court the greater the possibility for extreme factualism and favoritism within the courts.

Take, for instance, the situation where you have a family court division, as we will have in Philadelphia, where all juvenile matters are heard, as well as other family type matters, and where a chief judge might permanently or for a long period appoint a judge who might not care to hear cases of that type, since many judges, as we well know, do not like to sit on them.

In recent weeks in Philadelphia we have had three judges who have been sitting just for a matter of months, not long years, in juvenile court who have been asked to be relieved for reasons of their own health and mental stability, because they feel that the pressures of the juvenile court are so great that no man should be expected to sit there for extended periods of time.

In my opinion, the opportunity for a chief judge to create factualism and favoritism within his courts is so great in a court of this size, and in many courts of a lesser size, that the judges ought not to be asked, to elect one of their own peers to serve as chief judge.

I am, however, not attracted by the seniority system. It has, as we know, worked well in many cases in Pennsylvania, but it also has tended to keep judges in senior positions when they really were in advanced years and should not have been so retained. It has, also, from time to time I am advised had judges not necessarily of senior years, but judges who were not necessarily of the best administrative talent.

I, therefore, intend to submit to this body, if this Woodside amendment is defeated, a third alternative which you have before you, which, in essence, gives to the statewide executive and the Supreme Court, depending on which court you are talking about, the appointive power for the chief judges.

In the case of the statewide courts, Supreme, Superior and Commonwealth, the governor, with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate, would have the right to appoint, and in all other courts the majority of the Supreme Court, which already has extensive administrative powers under the committee proposal that we have approved, would make the appointment of the chief judge in each judicial district. In my opinion, the third alternative is the best of the three.

Therefore, I urge this body to defeat the Woodside amendment, after which I will submit my own amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Will counsel to the Committee please look at page 7, line 2, and tell me if that should not be president judge? Has that been corrected?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, we corrected that two days ago.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Sprogell.

DELEGATE SPROGELL. Mr. President, I would like to say on behalf of the sub-committee that when we considered this we felt we did not want to limit the choice of the chief justice or the president judge to amend solely on the critera of his length of experience. We thought there might be many attributes which would be very valuable to that position and we hoped this way we could enlarge the scope of choice.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron.

DELEGATE BARRON. Mr. President, in this Convention I have not often had the opportunity to join with Judge Woodside in something, but in this instance I have, Judge. I might say to Delegate Welsh that I have prepared an amendment which provided for the seniority system to apply in all courts. At the meeting last evening, in order to consolidate things, we got together on the proposition and Judge Woodside's experience in the larger cities of our community, compared with my complete lack of experience in this area, persuaded me to join him in this particular effort.

If I may speak on the main issue, I have found in what little experience I had with judges, whether they be justices of the peace or justices of the Supreme Court, they are men of great capacity. They are also men of ego, they are men of combativeness and these are not qualities to be decried. As a matter of fact, it is these very qualities that got them to the exalted position they hold and permit them to continue to discharge their duties.

We have talked lengthily about how, how, how, we wish to take our judges out of politics, so, of course, we turn around and, in order to be a judge on any of our courts, where there is more than one judge, we put them back into the political concept of the very court on which they sit and at the very closest terms in their antagonism if any there may be between one another.

I urge support of the Woodside amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scott.

DELEGATE SCOTT. Mr. President, may I interrogate Delegate Woodside?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation. Proceed.

DELEGATE SCOTT. Delegate Woodside, for a point of information. Your amendment reads, "with seven or less judges shall be justice or judge longest in continuous service on their respective courts. The president judges of all other courts." This would include Superior Courts of seven and the Supreme Court of seven, and this would not include the County Court of Allegheny which has six, and the Juvenile Court of Allegheny which has two. Would this include the appellate courts also when they revise the schedule?

DELEGATE WODOSIDE. Mr. President, if we adopt this proposal, then these courts will all be unified and, of course, we have gotten by the point on the second reading of this. All of these courts will be united into one court and in this case the president judge will be elected. You are talking about the division of the court. The president judge of the division of the court of less than seven, which seems to me under this language would be the senior in service.

DELEGATE SCOTT. That would be the oldest member or the one whose commission expires first?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Yes.

DELEGATE SCOTT. I rise in support of this amendment.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Welsh. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE WELSH. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I suppose my question should be directed to the counsel or possibly to you, Mr. President. My question is this, if we vote in favor of this amendment, does that also mean that we have, in effect, adopted and voted upon favorably the rest of Sub-section (g) on this Section 11?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think the answer to that question is, if you vote in favor of this, it only changes this much of the language in that proposal that you have in your hand.

DELEGATE WELSH. I understand Judge Woodside to intend by this that all other courts, meaning Allegheny, Philadelphia, etc., would, in effect, have a five-year elective process. So my question is, if we voted in favor of this, we also might be voting in favor of the five-year elective process and then, if there is an amendment concerning those courts, it will have to come up on reconsideration as distinguished from an amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. At this time we are only voting on the language here being offered by Delegate Woodside and we are not approving anything else.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. I do not think there is any question about the fact that you are right in your ruling. If you vote for this, all you vote for are these three lines, or two and a half lines, that are on this proposal here of mine, and all of the rest of the section, or the sub-section, would certainly be before this body to do anything with it that they want to do.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barry. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BARRY. I have another parliamentary inquiry. Would a vote in the affirmative to this amendment prevent a later amendment to include Pittsburgh and Allegheny in the same provision?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It would not.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Otto.

DELEGATE OTTO. Mr. President, during discussions today we were told that the people could not be trusted to vote for certain judges because they did not particularly know what they were doing, or they did not know the candidate. Now I take it we are being told that the judges of the Supreme Court and the judges of the Superior Court cannot be trusted to select their own leader.

I certainly do not feel this is so and, because of this, I feel that we should have trust in the members to make a selection if they want to. If they want to go by seniority, it is perfectly up to them.

I, therefore, urge the membership to defeat this proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Caron.

DELEGATE CARON. Unless the chairman of the committee wishes to make a final summary, I would like to move for the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I see standing Delegate Sebastian.

DELEGATE SEBASTIAN. I have been instructed by the co-chairman of my sub-committee that I had better get up and say that when this was discussed in the sub-committee the majority of us felt it should stay as it is now written, because it is just possible you may have as your oldest judge in service the man whose mind is beginning to fail more strongly than that of the others. In that case we want to give the judges an opportunity to name the one they think can do the best job.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Has everybody been heard that wants to be heard?

Do you want to sum up?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. No, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are we ready for the question? We are ready for the question.

Did the Chairman of the Committee want to make a statement?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. No. I want to point out it is "select" and not "elect."

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

SHOEMAKER AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 7, by inserting between lines 8 and 9: (h) Whenever there is an appointment, selection or election to fill a vacancy on a court of common pleas or orphans court division thereof, such election, selection or appointment shall be to that division in which the vacancy exists and the judge appointed, selected or elected shall serve thereon.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, let me state at the outset that this proposal is, I hope, noncontroversial.

I have talked to Delegate Amsterdam about it and he referred me to Delegate Scranton, who said—I do not want to misquote him, he may correct me if I am wrong—that this was not contrary to the basic intent of the committee proposal and it was something that had been raised, but not necessarily felt necessary to include it, I feel, as have a number of other persons who have endorsed this, that this kind of a provision is necessary and I would like to state why.

As some of you may recall, in a written poll conducted by the Pennsylvania Bar Association the lawyers of the State of Pennsylvania voted three to one for the retention of the separate selection of their judges who were experienced in the practice and administration of the extremely specialized law of decendents estates, and trusts. Of course, this should convince us that it would be grave error for us in Pennsylvania to curtail the quality of candidates for judicial office.

I have no personal axe to grind. I am probably more like one of Delegate Benfield's shrubs than judicial timber. However, I do have a deep interest in the continuation of Pennsylvania's leadership in the nation in the efficient administration of specialized fields of law.

Under the proposed article, with courts such as the orphans' court being a division of the court of general jurisdiction, lawyers who have devoted their legal careers to estate work—and they are legion—will refuse to be candidates for judicial office when they are subjected to the risk of assignment to other divisions in which they are not experienced. By the same token, lawyers experienced in criminal and civil matters are frequently adverse to the detail and accounting of estate work. The same risk of assignment to a court whose work is distasteful will cause such lawyers to refuse consideration for the bench. We have observed this result in state after state which has consolidated all courts.

A few years ago in its judicial reorganization New York state thoroughly studied the problem and decided to retain its separate surrogates courts.

As an experiment in York County, five members of our bar whose expertise in estate work particularly qualified them as leading judicial candidates for orphans' court were asked if they would be candidates without legal assurance that they would preside in estate matters. Without exception, all five said that they would not be interested.

As everyone in the profession will admit, it is presently most difficult to secure qualified judicial candidates due to the reduced compensation compared to legal practice. The committee's proposal will compound that difficulty if it remains as written for the reasons I previously stated.

The recent criticisms of the abuses of probate courts in leading periodicals relate to the many states which have consolidated such courts. It is no accident that such abuses rarely occur in Pennsylvania.

Our former constitutional provisions making them autonomous courts with specialized judges have made Pennsylvania eminent in the most prompt, efficient and economical system for the settlement of estates and the administration of trusts.

It may well be true that a small minority of courts have case loads too small. However, in at least 80 per cent of such separate orphans' courts the judges are working at peak capacity to keep abreast of an ever increasing case load. I believe we should not now sacrifice efficient estate administration, especially for a few inequities that may be corrected. I would point out to you that under the unified system this proposal that is before you would not prohibit the crossover assignment of judges where they had time but would merely guarantee to the lawyer who is willing to be selected—or elected, whatever this Convention decides—to the bench that if he were a specialist, if his desire was to be on the bench in a particular field, that would be his prime assignment. It would not prohibit the crossover assignment for special occasions in the routine administration of the court, and I believe this is essential.

I would ask that you consider it carefully and give it your support.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Chairman Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I should like to ask of Delegate Shoemaker whether this section does not violate what we have provided for in the single unified judicial system?

I heard him say he did not intend to do this, but I am wondering, perhaps, if it ought to be the general counsel who answers this, and whether the words at the end of his amendment reading, "and the judge appointed, selected or elected shall serve thereon," do not mean that the judge is required to serve in the specific division to which he is either selected, elected or appointed. It seems to me, if it does that, it is completely violative of what we have gone through now for two days and have tried to set up as a unified system.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I do not believe, Mr. President, that it does that. I did not intend it to do so. It is intended specifically to allow a candidate for judicial office to know in advance the kind of function that he will be serving on the bench so that a practitioner in the estate field would not suddenly find himself thrust or juggled into a vacancy elsewhere in the unified system.

Under this amendment it is my intention, when a vacancy occurs in a division of the unified system, the person who would be a candidate would know that he would fill the vacancy in that division. This would not be contrary to the other language which would allow his assignment over to fill in gaps elsewhere under the unified system.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I wonder whether under those circumstances a word like "primarily" might not be inserted, so we would know this was definitely intended not to be violative of the system as a whole and the right of the president judges and the chief justices to move judges as needed from place to place in the system?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I have no great pride of authorship here and I would be happy to have Style and Drafting, or the committee, or anyone else, amend the language so that it is clearer to the point I am making. I just feel strongly about the basic point. I agree with your concept. I am not trying to destroy the unified system.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Cosetti.

DELEGATE COSETTI. Mr. President, if the intent of the proposer of this is to have the judge candidate at least name the court he is to sit in primarily, I am not sure I would disagree with that. But that is not what this language says. The vacancy would exist in some division, perhaps, but this language almost fixes the existing distribution of judges by the divisions which now exist. I do not think this language accomplishes this purpose at all.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I was asked a question by the chairman of the committee as to what the opinion of counsel for the Convention, as well as the counsel for the committee, was in connection with the language. They have stated it to me just as you have stated it, Delegate Cosetti, in other words, that the language does not accomplish what Delegate Shoemaker has explained he wished to accomplish.

WITHDRAWAL OF SHOEMAKER AMENDMENT

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Under the circumstances, might I suggest that we table or that Delegate Shoemaker withdraw for the time being his amendment so it can be corrected in the language that does accomplish what he wants and we can have it presented again?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I would so move.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May I suggest it would be easier to withdraw your amendment, because you would not recall this one from the table. You will have another one prepared. Is that agreeable?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I am willing to do that, yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. President, I wish to serve notice that in my opinion this amendment should be entirely rejected. I do not believe we should take any steps looking to the fixing of lines of jurisdiction within the common pleas court. We have now one court, and to allow judges to be elected into a division of that court breaks it all up and we will be back in the old difficulty.

DELEGATE BUTERA. I believe the gentleman has withdrawn his amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The amendment is withdrawn.

DELEGATE BUTERA. I would suggest there be no more debate on the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. There is no more debate on the amendment.

MOTION TO RECESS

The Chair recognizes Delegate Roberts.

DELEGATE ROBERTS. In order to give fair consideration to the other amendments before us, I would move that we recess until 8:00 o'clock this evening.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want you to know, if you are putting that in the form of a motion, we will vote on the motion. Has it been seconded?

DELEGATE REYNOLDS. I will second it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Moved by Delegate Roberts, seconded by Delegate Reynolds, that we recess until 8:00 p.m. All those in favor please signify by saying "aye." Those opposed say "nay."

The "nays" have it so it looks as though we will have to continue to work for a while.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Might it not be well to have a roll call? We had better begin getting one another on the line here. We are not going to get through, if we do not. I would like to have a roll call. Put the names up on the wall.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone else want a roll call? Let us call a roll call and eliminate the doubts.

The motion is that we adjourn until 8:00 p.m. All those voting "yea" will vote in favor of the motion to recess until 8:00 p.m., those voting "nay" will vote to reject the motion.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Bloom. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BLOOM. I rise for a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BLOOM. I do not want to be the perpetual adjourner here, or to ask for recesses, or anything like that, but I believe, in all fairness to us over 70, we should have some consideration, especially those who are under the care of doctors and should get nourishment every three hours, approximately. To ask us to stay here for a five- or six- or seven-hour stretch is against our health. I do not think you would do that to an animal. I just want to be classified as a cat or a dog, and then you can give me my biscuits.

BARRON AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron.

DELEGATE BARRON. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE BARRON offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 5, lines 28 to 30; page 6, line 1, by striking out "Whenever a vacancy occurs for any other reason in the" in line 28, page 5, all of lines 29 and 30, page 5, and all of line 1, page 6, by striking out all of said lines and inserting: Whenever a vacancy occurs for any other reason in the office of judge in such judicial district, the Governor shall fill the vacancy by appointment in accordance with the provisions of Article IV, section 8 of this Constitution.

If such vacancy occurs during the session of the Senate, such appointment shall be with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron for a statement in connection with his amendment.

DELEGATE BARRON. I present this amendment, Mr. President, to a Convention which I sense to be restless and, to a degree, ill at ease. Unfortunately, I also have to confess that I am not entirely sure it has not been covered, but I have searched the careful record which I tried to keep of the amendments and with our change to election, as evidenced by our vote yesterday, at least, in the district court, the clear or plain copy which was on our desk this morning seems to omit completely a provision for filling vacancies as a result of the termination of office in any fashion other than the end of a given term.

As I say, I have checked this over carefully. I am sure the Parliamentarian or counsel for the Convention may have some thoughts on this. I endeavored to do my own research as carefully as possible. I prepared this amendment to rectify the oversight. I would like to claim pride of authorship, but I cannot, because the language is extracted in such a fashion as to put us into the category that was just recently revised.

The primary election called this Convention by way of an amendment to Article IV, Section 8, of the Constitution and, accordingly, my proposal is that the appointment to vacancies as provided for all other elected offices as set forth in Article IV, Section 8, be included. I must confess I did indulge in, perhaps, a surplus of language by adding the last paragraph so it would be crystal clear to those who might not have a copy of the Constitution. I dare put in that if the vacancy occurs during the session of the Senate the appointment should be with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate, which is clearly the language incorporated in Article IV, Section 8.

This comes, perhaps, under the heading of minor matters. Since we are going to have something whole and concise that we can look at in a clean printed form in the morning, I am offering it at this time to try and give us that help. If a conflict occurs, it will be spotted, I am sure, in the revision.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone wish to be heard on the Barron amendment?

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Point of parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President.

I believe this is a matter which was expressly covered in the Ruth proposal as amended yesterday. I think that there is no oversight. I think an interim vacancy is not filled in accordance with the numbered sections of the Constitution, but is expressly required by a two-thirds confirmation of the Senate and was passed upon here yesterday. This would be a clear change, and I believe it would require a motion to reconsider.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. With the question you raised, we are of the opinion that you are correct. Yes, it was, I understand. The Ruth amendment and the O'Donnell amendment to the Ruth amendment, according to the Parliamentarian—

DELEGATE BARRON. Where does this appear in the copy which we got on our desks this morning?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am advised it is on page 6 under Section (b).

WITHDRAWAL OF BARRON AMENDMENT

DELEGATE BARRON. In order to save the time of the Convention, I would like to withdraw the amendment to reconsider at this time and see if it does as I suggested.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We can consider the Barron amendment withdrawn.

IRVIS AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE IRVIS offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 5, line 7, by inserting after "Senate.": In no event shall the Governor make an appointment to the Supreme or Superior Court that results in more than four of the justices or judges of said courts being from the same political party.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, the amendment, I think, speaks for itself. Once it is distributed, I think most of us can make up our minds very quickly as to whether we shall vote "yea" or "nay."

What I am simply attempting to do is to make certain that no governor, by any device, shall be able to pack the court with members of his own political party. I have not addressed myself to the problem of the commonwealth court, but have limited the amendment to the Supreme Court and the Superior Court.

I think nothing further need be said as the proponent of the amendment and, unless someone has a point in debate, I would move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone wish to be heard on the Irvis Amendment? How about the committee chairman? The Chair now recognizes Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. To the best of my recollection, Mr. President, I do not remember that this occurred in the course of the committee. At least, I do not remember a vote on it. I hestitate to be the co-chairman that comments on this for the reason that I gave in my earlier speech this afternoon, viz., that I was a governor once and I do not think you should put this kind of curtailment on his powers to this degree.

I really am apologetic for being the person to speak up on this. I sincerely hoped that someone else would. Since I am the only former member of the executive arm of the government, I think this is distinctly an infringement upon their prerogatives and powers and I do not think it wise, just as the legislative members have spoken up innumerable times to the same degree on things that seemed to bother them.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Lest anyone think there is political partisanship involved, I am of Mr. Irvis' party and I think it is abominable.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Butera.

DELEGATE BUTERA. I agree with the Governor on this for an additional reason. Why, if a person is qualified to become a judge, should he be kept off the bench because in his year, let us call it, there happened to be an imbalance as it pertained to his registration? I think it has nothing at all to do with whether he is capable of serving on that bench and whether he should be appointed in that particular year.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis.

DELEGATE IRVIS. I am getting tired, and perhaps not hearing accurately, but I just want to get the record straight. Did Mr. O'Donnell say he belonged to the same political party as I and that it is abominable, or does he mean my amendment is abominable?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think the Chair can straighten that language out. Was that your summing up, Delegate Irvis?

Delegate Irvis said he summed up, so I take it we are ready for the question. The question before this Convention is: Will the Convention agree to the Irvis amendment? We will now unlock the voting machines and proceed to vote. Those voting "yea" vote to support the Irvis amendment, those voting "nay" vote to reject it.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

STATEMENT BY PRESIDENT BRODERICK

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want to state for the benefit of the delegates who have amendments in here that several of the amendments which have been offered have raised questions that the Chair has not had an opportunity to sit down with the Parliamentarian and discuss. They have raised serious questions as to whether these matters have been determined by the Convention, and I can tell you that the Chair is going to need time to go over these amendments to make the decision because there are serious decisions involved.

WELSH AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Welsh.

DELEGATE WELSH. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE WELSH offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 7, lines 1 to 4, by striking out "be selected for five-year terms by the members of their" in line 1, all of lines 2 and 3, and Governor." in line 4 and inserting: be the justice or judge longest in continuous service on their respective courts.

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 7, lines 5 to 8, by striking out "In the event of a" in line 5, all of lines 6 to 8.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would you want to make a statement in order to save time? We will not vote until they are distributed.

DELEGATE WELSH. Mr. President, my amendment is really something that I spoke to you about before when Judge Woodside put in his amendment several amendments ago. Basically, it deals with Section 11, page 7. It is concerned with Section 11, Subsection (g). Now, I will read it as to how the adoption of my amendment would read with regard to Section 11, Subsection (g): "The chief justice and president judges of all courts shall be the justices or judges longest in continuous service on their respective courts. The chief justice or president judge may resign such position and remain a member of the court."

In effect, this is the maintenance of the seniority system in all of the courts of the Commonwealth, no matter whether we have one judge or 66 judges, and it is in opposition to the committee proposal with respect to elections within the courts. I speak against that because I do not feel that my courts in Allegheny County or, possibly, any court in the State, should be subject to internal rambling, internal politicking, internal elections, or internal campaigning. I have that philosophy, no matter whether it is for the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, Superior Court, Commonwealth Court, or the common pleas court, in any county of this Commonwealth.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, I apologize for bothering the Convention again with the committee thinking on this, but I think it is extremely important, particularly at this level. You are putting into Pennsylvania for the first time a unified judicial system, and the main point of the unified judicial system is to make sure that you have good administration.

Where they have done this in other jurisdictions, they have discovered that, instead of this provision creating wrangling, frankly, it has helped materially because the older judges find that they do not like the added burden of administration. When you get in an enormous court like Allegheny, or Philadelphia, or whatever, it is an enormous job.

Frankly, I did not have the major opposition to Judge Woodside's thought that I have to this one, because it is not of such prominent importance to the Supreme Court and the Superior Court, as they will have an administrator in the Supreme Court and there is relatively little administration in the Superior Court, but on the common pleas level administration is now of paramount importance in comparison to the past.

Might I say to you, if you are worried about Joe Blow or Pete Smith, who as of now may be a judge, he may be maintained by what the committee has said. They have not said that they must be elected. They have said they shall be selected for that very reason.

May I also state to you, it also means that in the future we can have the kind of administration that we ought to have and I think, as soon as the present judges have some experience with this new system, they will find that they will appreciate what the committee has done, those who are so deeply concerned at the moment about their seniority can take care of it by the fact that we have put "selected" in here.

I sincerely hope for the future administration of our system you will think in terms of the committee thinking, which was the opinion of the subcommittee, the opinion of the full committtee, after a great deal of looking into the unified judicial systems in other places.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barry.

DELEGATE BARRY. I rise in support of this amendment offered by Delegate Welsh. I have to confess this is a case of "death bed repentance," because I voted in the committee for the committee's suggestion, but I have had a change of mind and I may as well explain my reasons to see if they are valid.

I think the committee's proposal works well on paper. It should be the younger, more aggressive judges, those that the other judges want that are able to administer the new judicial system. However, in talking to people that have been judges, such as Judge Woodside and Judge Fortney—he is a former judge, a man of few words, but when he says them, he knows what he is talking about—and other judges, and that great bunch of lobbyists, the present courts of the commonwealth, who have probably talked to all of us, I think they are right. I talked to the proponent here of the Supreme Court and the Superior Court. I think he is right.

I do not think the administration of the courts is going to be by the judge elected or selected. It will be by someone else. I think there is still a provision that the chief justice, however he had been selected, elected or appointed, is going to be able to resign. I think the experience of the judges themselves should guide us here to tell us whether or not we have made a mistake in the committee, whether or not we should support their ideas.

I am compelled by their expression of opinion, because sometimes it is against their best interests. There is a younger judge that says this is the way it should be. He is not invoking a seniority principle, he is almost invoking senility principle.

I still say you are going to have politics. I am convinced I was wrong in the committee. I make this "death bed confession." I say to Chairman Scranton that I think it is fallacious to say this is a selection process. If this is left up to the judges they are going to get rid of it one way or another. They will change their policy and adopt something else. It is either one thing or the other. I feel now that I was wrong and that the committee should be overruled.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I am very pleased with Delegate Barry's presentation and appreciate it very deeply. I must say to you that, first of all, the judges he talked to have not served under a unified judicial system.

I say to you secondly, and I hate to be personal about this, but as a former Governor of this State I have some very definite reasons for making this statement. The seniority system does not keep out internal wrangling from our courts.

DELEGATE BARRY. I have never been a judge or governor, of course, and I do not think we are going to prevent wrangling, but you will prevent some of it by keeping the seniority system. I feel the advice of your judges on this ought to be observed.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Welsh for a summation.

DELEGATE WELSH. In summary, Mr. President, I would like to say two things.

No. 1 is, I have not spoken to Judge Joe or Judge Blow and, just to really set the record straight and call a spade a spade, I have not spoken to Judge Musmanno. I have not spoken to Judge Ellenbogen. I have learned and heard that a Supreme Court judge has called several delegates, but I am quite happy to say that he did not speak to me. I am also quite happy to say that Judge Ellenbogen, who is the President Judge of the Common Pleas Court of Allegheny County, has not called me, spoken to me, or sent me any kind of letter or telegram.

Therefore, I am, in effect, saying to you that this amendment is honestly presented and is not in favor of anyone except my own conscience.

No. 2 is, if we adopt this theory, I think that, in effect, says the president of General Motors cannot be anyone with any kind of seniority in General Motors Corporation. The same with the Ford Motor Company and, possibly, the same might be said for any corporation which you men and women might have some connection with.

Therefore, I favor the adoption of this amendment. I think it is fair and I think it prevents internal politics to the courts. I think it is something with which the citizens of Pennsylvania would be well proud.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. All right, we are apparently ready for the question.

The question is: Will the Convention agree to the amendbeing offered by Delegate Welsh?

Those voting "yea" vote to support the Welsh amendment, those voting "nay" vote to reject it.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

The roll was recorded as follows:

BARRY AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barry.

DELEGATE BARRY. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE BARRY offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 6, line 30, by inserting after "courts": except in the County of Philadelphia

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 7, lines 1 to 4, by striking out "be selected for five-year terms by the members of their" in line 1, all of lines 2 and 3, and Governor." in line 4 and inserting: be the justice or judge longest in continuous service on their respective courts.

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 7, lines 5 to 8, by striking out "In the event of a" in line 5, all of lines 6 to 8

ADJOURNMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hocker.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. President, I move we adjourn until tomorrow morning at 9:00 o'clock.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Second the motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Moved by Delegate Hocker, seconded by Delegate Irvis, that we adjourn until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

I am going to open up the voting machine. All those in favor of the motion to adjourn until tomorrow morning at 9:00 o'clock will vote "yea" and those who are not in favor of the motion will vote "nay."

The motion was agreed to and (at 6:40 p.m., e.s.t.) the Convention was adjourned.

PENNSYLVANIA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION 1967-1968

JOURNAL

Volume 1 Wednesday, February 21, 1968 Number 48

The Convention was called to order at 9 a.m., e.s.t.

THE PRESIDENT (Raymond J. Broderick) IN THE CHAIR

PRAYER

THE REVEREND BYRON K. HORNE, Delegate from Lititz, Pennsylvania, offered the following prayer:

God, our Father, we who are limited in Thy sight come to Thee, Thou who are eternal and ever the same. Thou has entrusted to the children of men the duties and responsibilities of citizenship and of government. We bless Thee and we praise Thee for those in the past who have discharged those duties and responsibilities in a worthy manner. We have entered into their labors, we have entered into their opportunities. We pray now that we may with the same diligence discharge our duties and our responsibilities. Lift us, we pray, above all pettiness, enable us by Thy grace to see our responsibilities as sacred, sacred before our fellowmen and sacred before Thee, Thou who art the Lord of Lords and King of Kings.

Bless us now and today. May we think only of our Commonwealth and its welfare and its people in all of our deliberations. Amen.

APPROVAL OF JOURNALS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. There are no Journals to be approved this morning.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes the Secretary, Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, I want to submit the following requests for leaves of absence:

The delegate from the 13th District, A HUGH FORSTER, for February 22 and 23, to go to Washington;

The delegate from the 18th District, RALPH A. CLARK, for February 23, for business;

The delegate from the 6th District, MARTIN W. BASHOFF, for February 21 for father's illness.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you, Secretary Michener.

Is there any objection to the leaves of absence?

The Chair hears none, and the leaves are granted.

QUORUM CALL

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will now call the roll for the purpose of determining a quorum. The delegates will please record their presence by voting "aye."

The roll was recorded as follows:

INQUIRY REGARDING RESOLUTION ON PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Reynolds.

DELEGATE REYNOLDS. A few days ago one of our delegates introduced a resolution to have the pledge of allegiance to the flag as part of our opening services, and nothing has been done. I do not think anything can be more important during these troublesome times to let the world know how we feel about our American heritage and our love and patriotism than to give the allegiance from the floor during our opening services. I understood that morning you referred it to the Rules Committee. If the Rules Committee are too busy to do it, I think we can do it here.

I would like to have your ruling on what has been done and what you expect to be done about it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Reynolds, that resolution was referred to the Rules Committee. I know the Rules Committee had a meeting and at that meeting they did not have a quorum. Yesterday I talked to the Chairman of the Rules Committee and they agreed they were going to call a meeting. I am not positive, but I think they said they would call a meeting today. So the matter will be taken care of, I am sure, because we have a very efficient Rules Committee.

DELEGATE REYNOLDS. I like their efficiency, but I like their action better.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Van Sant. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE VAN SANT. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE VAN SANT. Mr. President, I would only suggest that perhaps the Rules Committee is afraid to report out the pledge of allegiance because of the amendments that might be added.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand that remark.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Otto. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE OTTO. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE OTTO. Mr. President, two weeks ago this Convention passed on to the Style and Drafting Committee, Committee Proposals Nos. 1 and 2 with respect to reapportionment. They have not reappeared. I think some explanation should be given at this time as to what the status of these two important proposals are.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think either one of the chairmen would be happy to report to you.

The Chair will recognize Chairman Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, it seems appropriate that this body should continue to debate the second reading of proposals and, when the business of this Convention on second reading has been completed, obviously, if it is your will, Proposals Nos. 1 and 2 will be reported by the committee. They are ready to be reported.

DELEGATE OTTO. May I ask the delegate a question? Will these No. 1 and No. 2 proposals be the first ones to be reported?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. I do not feel I can answer that with any assurance. No. 1, No. 2 and No. 6, I think, are probably going to be reported on the same day.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Strickler.

DELEGATE STRICKLER. I would like to comment on that. I think it would be a very fine process for these bills to appear on the calendar. It shows the status of all of the bills as they should be on the calendar. When these calendars are passed out to the public, it does not show the status of these bills. I think they ought to appear every day on the calendar and ought to be reported out as soon as possible.

REMARKS BY THE CHAIR

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair would like to make a comment before we take up our calendar. I say sincerely, in my personal opinion, and it is purely a personal opinion, we should, if possible, complete the amending process in connection with the Judiciary Article today, because if we do not in the time scheduled—and I went over that last night and again this morning with our officers—we will be behind schedule. I suggest today for your consideration—I am not trying to make the decision—and I want you to think about it, that today we will recess for lunch at appoximately 12:30 and come back at approximately 2:00 o'clock, that we go to dinner this evening at approximately 5:30 and come back about 7:00 and work for a couple of hours tonight. This would seem to be more in keeping with the desire of some of our younger delegates who get hungry around 5:30 or 6:00 o'clock, the younger men like Delegate Bloom. I say, of course, if we can finish the amending process at 5:00 or 6:00 o'clock today, that will be fine and there would be no necessity of having a night session. The Parliamentarian says, what is wrong with 4:00? Frankly, I do think we have to get on because we only have this week and a part of next week, and one of the jobs I know you want to do is complete on time. We just have to complete on time.

CALENDAR

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON SECOND CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to the second consideration of Committee Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 20, entitled:

A Proposal repealing article five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania relating to the Judiciary and adding a new Judiciary article.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will go right over to the calendar. The first item on the calendar this morning is an amendment by Delegate Barry. Was that read last night? That was read and distributed when we got the motion to adjourn. The Chair will now recognize Delegate Barry in connection with his amendment.

BARRY AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

DELEGATE BARRY. Mr. President, yesterday we approved the Woodside amendment, which provided that the selection of president judges in courts of seven or more be by the seniority method. Delegate Welsh just before we adjourned introduced an amendment whereby this same procedure would be followed in all the courts of the Commonwealth. This was voted down, although the Woodside amendment was approved.

Now, my amendment would provide that in all the courts, except in the County of Philadelphia, the seniority method should prevail. We have an anomaly here. We have the Supreme and the Superior Court selecting their judges and justices by seniority, while in the other courts of the Commonwealth we have a different system.

Therefore, I believe, if Philadelphia wants to be treated differently than the other courts of the Commonwealth, so be it. But Allegheny, I feel—and I defer to my fellow delegates from Allegheny County, if they have anything to say on this subject—should be included within the Woodside amendment. I already expressed myself, as has Governor Scranton last night, and I will say no more.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I think it is clear to all of you, because you were all here yesterday, what the committee feeling is about this. We feel very strongly that, particularly in the common pleas area, when you have a unified judicial system—which we have never had before in Pennsylvania—it is absolutely essential that the administration of it be as good as possible. In fact, for the first time we are giving them full jurisdiction over administration of the judiciary, which is, I think, quite proper and correct, but it is something that they had not been handling before to the degree that they will now.

Consequently, it is most important that they be given the opportunity, particularly on the common pleas level to select the judge that is not only best equipped to do this kind of thing, but also is most willing. The experience in Illinois, for example, where they have had this system for about four years, has been that the older men find they do not enjoy doing this much additional work. It does not, as I explained yesterday three times, deprive the local common pleas group from selecting the senior judge, or even from taking as a principle that they always will, because it is a selection and, if that is what they want and a majority of them want it, they can continue to have it.

I sincerely hope that you will uphold the committee in this effort so that we can have the finest type of administration possible.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fleming.

DELEGATE FLEMING. Mr. President, I rise in answer to Delegate Barry's statement that he would like to hear from some other Allegheny County delegates. I subscribe completely to the Barry amendment. As Delegate Welsh so eloquently put it yesterday—and I know you do not want a repetition of that but at least, I feel, and a number of delegates from Allegheny County and I am sure quite a number of the judges of our courts in Allegheny County—feel, that the Barry amendment would work to the best benefit of Allegheny County.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now let me ask if we are ready for the question on this?

Delegate Otto.

DELEGATE OTTO. Mr. President, as a layman delegate and in answer to Delegate Barry's request, I can only report from what I have seen happen in Allegheny County. I know there is a great deal of contention among the judges in Allegheny County about the present setup, and a number of them have displayed their unhappiness with the present method of selection of the president judge in the common pleas court.

I, for one, am opposed to the Barry amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Morton.

DELEGATE MORTON. Mr. President, being from Allegheny County, I say let the judges decide whether they want to go by the old system or a new system.

I am opposed to the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Banes.

DELEGATE BANES. Mr. President, I rise in support of the Barry amendment. For some weeks we have been discussing the judiciary from many, many aspects and, if we want to support the principle of taking politics out of the judiciary—even in the inside workings of the boards of judges—I want to heartily and strongly recommend and support this particular amendment so that the judge longest in seniority will have the office of president judge.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Brennan.

DELEGATE BRENNAN. Mr. President, I am in favor of the Barry amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We recognize Delegate Rappaport.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Mr. President, I speak against the Barry amendment. I speak against it for one reason, the sentence, "except in the County of Philadelphia." We need justice in the County of Philadelphia the way the rest of the Commonwealth needs it. I see absolutely no reason why the County of Philadelphia should be treated any differently. If seniority is good enough for the rest of the State, we will live with seniority. If the rest of the State wants to elect the president judges, we will live with that. But we wish to be treated the same as anyone else. We are not second class citizens.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, I have had some contact with the courts of Allegheny County over the past 15 to 20 years. There has been some slack about the present system of selecting the president judge. I think that merely reflects some personality conflict among strong-willed and intelligent men. I do not think it amounts to very much.

I, personally, favor the seniority principle and rise in support of Delegate Barry's amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand that Delegate Barry is willing to waive his summation.

Are we ready for the question?

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Barry?

The roll was recorded as follows:

CORTESE AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The next amendment to come before the Convention is an amendment being offered by Delegate Cortese.

AMENDMENT WITHDRAWN

DELEGATE CORTESE. Mr. President, I withdraw the amendment.

FLEMING AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fleming.

DELEGATE FLEMING. Mr. President, I read in place and present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE FLEMING offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 5, lines 1 to 30, page 6, lines 1 to 30, by striking out "(a) Whenever a vacancy occurs for any" in line 1, all of lines 2 to 30, page 5, all of lines 1 to 29 and "(g)" in line 30, page 6 and inserting: (a) Justices, judges and justices of the peace shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State or districts as the case may be.

(b) Any vacancy happening by death, resignation or otherwise, in any court, shall be filled by appointment by the Governor, to continue till the first Monday of January next succeeding the first general election, which shall occur ten or more months after the happening of such vacancy.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will recognize Delegate Fleming for a statement in connection with his amendment.

DELEGATE FLEMING. Mr. President, my statement will be very brief, one of the briefest ones that has been made.

I think we are all cognizant of what my fellow sponsors and myself are attempting to do, and this is to have all the judges elected by the people generally. I think our minds are pretty well made up on our positions on it. I certainly do not want to cut anybody off, but at this moment that is all I have to say.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I see Delegate Scarlett at the microphone.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scarlett. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SCARLETT. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SCARLETT. Mr. President, it seems to me we are just prolonging the debate on all of these so-called changes. If one does not fly, another one comes in. I think it is about time we consider what our President said a few minutes ago, that we consider accepting the proposals made by the Committee.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, for the second time in as many days I am confused on a point of parliamentary inquiry.

Is this not precisely the matter which we have voted upon time and again in the last couple of days? Specifically, to raise this point again, does it not require a motion to reconsider the same matter for the third time?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. To answer your point of parliamentary inquiry, the Chair had considerable difficulty with this amendment. It appears it is not precisely the same matter that we have voted on before, it is somewhat different in some respects. Therefore, the Chair determined that we would submit the amendment rather than requiring a vote to reconsider.

This is a matter that is in the hands of the delegates, but the Chair does think that it is somewhat different than the other proposals.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I do not challenge the Chair's point of view, but I am unable to find the ways in which it is different—even somewhat. Would the Chair mind advising the body in what ways it is different and, particularly, whether it is different in any substantial way?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want Delegate O'Donnell to know that the Chair went over this in great detail after the close of our session last evening, and it was determined that there was a difference between this and the Jirolanio amendment. You can get the Jirolanio amendment and see the differences in the language. I will tell you that it is a close decision.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, may I then ask the Chair whether it has been considered that the material here concerned is not covered, at least, insofar as the judges in district courts are concerned, that is to say, in the judicial district, entirely by the Ruth amendment, as amended.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate O'Donnell, I can say that consistently the Chair has been ruling, where we have had an amendment that has been considered by this Convention, that it would require a vote to reconsider if the amendments were, in effect, identical and so similar as to be identical.

This, after comparing it with the Jirolanio amendment and the Ruth amendment, was determined to have sufficient difference to present it to the Convention without requiring a vote to reconsider. This is something that is within the jurisdiction of this body to change, but this is our determination.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Banes. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BANES. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BANES. Unless Delegate O'Donnell asks for an appeal from the ruling of the Chair, I respectfully suggest that he is out of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. May I just comment to Delegate O'Donnell without losing my right to comment again on this amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, indeed, because I think this is a point of parliamentary inquiry that we are discussing now.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. One of the things that has disturbed me about this Convention is the fact that at times people try to get super-technical about parliamentary things, and I think the Constitutional Convention is above that.

May I say to you that I see no substantive change in this amendment from the Jirolanio amendment at all, and I do not think anybody else does either, but there is some language change, and, if the general counsel of the Convention considers that adequate to make advisable a reconsideration of the Jirolanio amendment, I think we should accept his ruling.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I do not question that. I was merely trying to bring to the attention of this Convention, for practical purposes, that it is the identical same thing which was defeated twice yesterday. I think the sub-committee, the Judiciary Committee, ought to be supported.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. May I interrogate Senator Fleming?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Senator Fleming I am sure will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. President, under this amendment, if it passes, will the Senate have an opportunity to pass upon the appointments of the Governor?

DELEGATE FLEMING. If I may, I have to have the advice of counsel now.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. While Delegate Fleming is conferring—he is ready.

DELEGATE FLEMING. It is my understanding it will not, sir. I did not have a copy of the bill.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. After a period of 10 months service, does the candidate then run in a partisan election? Is that the purpose here?

DELEGATE FLEMING. I would say that would be correct, yes, sir.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I have one more question.

After the term of elective tenure, does the candidate then run for re-election, if he so chooses, in a regular partisan election, or in the retention form of election?

DELEGATE FLEMING. That depends largely on what we do with the rest of the Judiciary article. At the moment I would say he would run again.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. He would run against an opponent?

DELEGATE FLEMING. That is correct.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Does this amendment have that effect?

DELEGATE FLEMING. I think if you fit it in with Proposal No. 7, it would, sir.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Shapiro, have you had your question answered?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I do not know whether I got an answer, or not. Senator Fleming seems a little uncertain about the last answer. He seems to be still looking up the effect of this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Perhaps, we could pass over this and come back to it. We will pass over it and come back to it, if it is all right.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, I think we have the answer to Delegate Shapiro's question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would you proceed to give the answer.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, I was not paying strict attention, and I apologize to you for that. If your question is whether or not Section 13 (d) on page 8 would be affected by this amendment, that is the section, sir, which refers to the retention of a judge, it would not be so affected by this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I think after some three and a half days of working on the Judiciary article we ought to sort of take a look at what we have done.

I think, by and large, that the Judiciary Committee has been justified in its many weeks of agonized labor, because in most of the important instances the items which have been presented to this Convention have been approved.

Even in the case, particularly, of the unified court system it has been strengthened to some degree by what happened on the floor here.

In only one instance, and that is in the instance of a choice of judges in the various judicial districts, where we had provided for a local option to determine whether they might be selected by the panel system as against election, was that changed by this Convention.

I point out, however, that in the case of statewide judges this was an item that was immediately considered and approved by the Judiciary Committee, because of the fact that statewide judges could not possibly be known in the various parts of the State as intimately as the local judicial district judges could be known. For that reason it was determined very early that the appointment by the Governor, with panel selection, although there were a lot of questions as to the type of panel, how many members should be presented, and so on, would be included as an item that should be presented to this Convention. This was done. I might say, also, as Governor Scranton indicated yesterday, this is very much the way of the future. In 14 states around the United States now this is a way of trying to pick judges in a manner that will ensure the best judges in the judicial system.

It has been the feeling of the delegates in the Judiciary Committee that the courts are for the people. They are not for the judges, they are not for the lawyers, and, therefore, it is of the utmost importance that the finest judges, regardless of whether they are chosen by their individual Republican or Democratic committeemen, or whether they are chosen by members of the Bar Association, none of these things are determinative of what should be done.

The important thing is to determine what is the best way to get the finest members of the Bar on the court, members of the various bars of the judicial districts on the statewide courts. Whether they come from the smallest judicial district in the State or whether they come from Philadelphia or Allegheny County, it is quite important that our statewide courts have those who are best qualified.

For that reason it was determined that a qualifying commission, the duty of which would be to study all of the qualified people in the State of Pennsylvania, would have the duty of presenting to the Governor a list of at least 10, not more than 20, names for each and every opening. This was the best way to ensure that our statewide courts would have the finest judges, regardless of whether they were chosen by the political leaders of their individual community, or not.

It is for this reason we are very vehemently trying to suggest to you that the Judiciary Committee's suggestions in this regard be affirmed.

I might say, also, that although a vote was taken on this yesterday and it was defeated, the amendment was defeated by a vote of 75 to 75, I do point out to you that if we are going to reopen each one of these votes because we are dissatisfied with what has happened, it is going to result in our being here long beyond the deadline that has been fixed. I urge upon you that when we have completed a discussion, and then vote, the vote should stick.

I have had a number of delegates who have requested that I join with them in reopening the vote which we had on the matter of local option in the various judicial districts. I have advised very strongly that that not be reopened again, although I am thoroughly in favor of it, on the ground that it has been decided once by this Convention and ought not to be brought up again.

I request at this time that you vote overwhelmingly against this amendment and in favor of the work of the the Judicial Committee.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Ruth.

DELEGATE RUTH. Mr. President, first, I would like to comment that I, too, am basically for this amendment.

Delegate Amsterdam pointed out that we have gone over certain areas before and we should not uproot them, and I agree. I do not think the vote we had yesterday, 75 to 75, is indicative of anything which we have done in other areas, where there was at least some majority. I would like to take a minute or two to refer to some of the things that have gone on here before.

Delegate Buck, for whom I have the greatest respect, a few days ago indicated a history of appointments and he referred to the Federal system, and so forth, and I would draw every delegate's attention to the Judiciary Manual that was supplied to every delegate. From pages 88 through about 93 there is a history set forth about election of judges. I think it is rather interesting that in 1850, the people of Pennsylvania decided by a referendum they wanted to elect their judges, and they made the decision. In 1873, the last time they had a convention, they could not change this, the convention did not decide to change this. In this book it tells you they considered plans that are similar to the Missouri Plan, they considered appointive methods, they considered a compromise of having appointed judges on the State level and keeping the elected judges on the lower level, and they denied that compromise.

I say to you, the people and the representatives before have decided this. This is what they want, so history would be in favor of election of judges.

I also would refer you to the fact that in July of 1967 Mr. Robert Sidman, President of A Modern Constitution for Pennsylvania, Incorporated, at a Preparatory Committee Hearing, said, "On the whole, we have been among the nation's leaders in exemplary judicial conduct," which is quoted on page 4 of his written statement. "In addition, former Superior Court Judge, Honorable Robert E. Woodside, who was the chairman of the original commission to study the needs for constitutional revision, stated at the Preparatory Committee's Hearing on July 27, 1967, that the Pennsylvania appellate courts are tops in the United States and the judges of these courts are competent judges and that all the United States respects Pennsylvania's decisions. In addition, former Judge Woodside pointed out that he did not recommend that the Supreme Court appoint prothonotaries or president judges, indicating this gets 'too political for the Supreme Court.' If appointment of prothonotaries or president judges is too political for the Supreme Court, then it necessarily follows that the appointment of judges in general is 'too political.'"

This month we celebrated the birthday of Abraham Lincoln and tomorrow we will celebrate George Washington's birthday. As Abraham Lincoln once said, "No man is so good as to govern without consent of those governed."

I submit, no man is so good as to judge without consent of those to be judged.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Horne.

DELEGATE HORNE. Mr. President, I think we have heard, in substance, all that can be said and all that will be said on this subject. I, therefore, move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Horne moved the question. Is there a second?

The Chair recognizes Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I would like to just make a very short statement, if I might. Is that in agreement?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think this will be agreeable to the body.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Yesterday afternoon we had in the morning and the day before we had a long discussion in detail and in depth on this subject. I point out to you that you have now gone through precisely what the committee did over many weeks of time.

If you continue to want to upset debates and, indeed, votes that you have previously taken, yes, at some time or other they can be upset, because at one time or another somebody is not here or is here that voted some other way.

Yesterday afternoon we had the fairest vote we have ever had on this floor. There were 150 people who voted, which is the greatest number we have ever had. You will remember there was an original vote, then you remember Delegate Thomson was not here and came in, and then you remember that Delegate Irvis raised a question about the vote. Then you remember it was validated, and then you remember it was reopened, and then you remember that it was left open for a long period of time. I have just checked purposely with the roll call clerk and there are two people here today who were not here yesterday, and we welcome them both, Delegate Swope and Delegate Aurentz. There are 15 people not here, many of whom were here yesterday.

All I am trying to say to you is this, do you want to every hour on the hour try and figure out who is here and who is not here, upset votes that have been taken after a long debate, after the committee has gone into it thoroughly and after the Convention floor has before it an amendment which is not yet clear what it does. The sponsor could not even indicate whether it did get rid of "yes" or "no" retention, or whether it did not.

This is precisely the kind of thing that happened in our committee many times, where once you suddenly decide on a new amendment. You find out after you voted on it that it is different than you can see if you have not thoroughly looked into it.

We certainly thoroughly went into the Jirolanio amendment which, in essence, does the same thing. I therefore sincerely hope, and, you remember, nobody on our side of the fence ever upset anything that was asked for parliamentarily yesterday or today and, if I have anything to do with it, I never shall, because in my opinion a Constitutional Convention is something different than a Legislature or indeed a Tammany Hall determination of work politics. It is on a higher level and it is more important than that.

I sincerely hope that you will vote as your conviction is, but, remember, we did it all yesterday and now you have an amendment in front of you which you are not sure what it will do.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro. For what purpose does the gentleman rise? rise?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. President, I asked the question and I got an answer, and it is my impression the answer is not strictly accurate. I wonder if we can have a ruling from counsel for the Convention?

It appears to me that although Section 13 is preserved, what is now (b) of Section 11, which created the exception which, in turn, brought Section 13 into play, would be stricken by this amendment. This amendment applies to all vacancies, and part of the language which it strikes out stated that when a statewide judge has been appointed under Section 11 (a), or when a district judge who has served a full elective term files a retention nominating paper, then under those circumstances Section 13 (a) comes into play. But 11 (b), which creates that situation, is being stricken by this amendment, and I question, therefore, whether or not the retention election would apply. If it does, we have at least got conflicting provisions if we pass this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will immediately ask counsel for the Judiciary Committee and counsel for the Convention to formulate a reply to your inquiry and have the reply given to you through the chairman, or one of the chairmen, of the Judiciary Committee. I will ask them if they will please do that.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. Has the question been moved and was that motion seconded?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No, that has no been formally put. I am ready for it.

DELEGATE CASEY. I would like to be heard before the motion is put.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It is up to the body. You may proceed. We have not voted on the motion.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, I have been sitting here for several days now listening patiently and with great interest to the many arguments that have been advanced on both sides of this very difficult question. I must say this is one of the most difficult questions for me to resolve in my own mind, as I am sure it is for all of the delegates at this Convention, but there comes a time when all of us have got to search our minds and our consciences and decide what is the right thing to do.

A number of basic things have got to be pointed out with regard to this amendment. As I understand it, if this amendment is defeated, judges at the local level will continue to be elected. The reach of this amendment only applies to the statewide appellate courts in Pennsylvania and, if I am incorrect in that understanding, I wish someone would advise me.

I rise not only as one who is vitally interested in the subject matter of this amendment, but also as an officer of this Convention. I have sat in my seat day after day and seen some of the most significant actions we have taken at this Convention reconsidered the next hour or the following day. It seems to me the integrity of this Convention is now at stake. All of us have lost on votes in this Convention. I have been on the losing side about 99 per cent of the time, but, if you lose, you have to take your licking and go on to the next question. It seems to me the people of this State have a right to expect from us that once an issue is settled we accept the vote and move on to the next subject.

For this reason, which I regard as a fundamental principle as far as the integrity of this Convention is concerned, I rise to oppose this amendment.

I oppose it for a second reason. If I was convinced that the people of this State honestly and really, in reality, have the determining voice in the selection of judges at the statewide level, I would oppose the panel selection of judges, because I believe in letting the people decide. But I submit to you, as one who is just as active in politics and probably more so than anyone in this room, this is not the case. This simply is not the fact, and I think we all have to recognize it. Secondly, if I really believed in my heart that the panel selection would result in discrimination against minority groups, I would be against the panel selection, but I do not believe that that is the fact. I think the panel selection will give us a thorough on-going systematic search for the best judicial talent we can find in Pennsylvania without regard to what party they belong, that is the kind of judicial system we need in this State and that is why I am opposed to this amendment.

I ask all of you to search your conscience and to do the right thing.

DELEGATE WILCOX. I move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Wilcox has moved the question. Do we have a second to this?

It has been seconded by Delegate Woodring.

We have, at the microphone, Delegate Irvis. I will recognize you.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Does the moving of the question prevent those who are proponents from closing the argument?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me say this, Delegate Irvis, if they vote to close debate and move the pending question, it would preclude any further debate, including the closing.

What the Chair has tried to do in these situations in an attempt to be absolutely fair has been to ask whoever it is that is moving the question if they would give the proposer of the amendment an opportunity for a short closing. That will be up to this body and is not up to the Chair. If we have a motion on the floor to close debate and that motion is carried by this Convention, that means we vote immediately and cannot hear anyone else. Is that clear?

I am, therefore, going to ask the proposer of the motion, who is Delegate Wilcox, if he wishes to place in his motion an opportunity for Delegate Fleming to have a short closing.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

DELEGATE WILCOX. I wish to move to close debate. I think we heard it all before.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is there a second to that motion?

DELEGATE WOODRING. Seconded.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been seconded by Delegate Woodring.

We now have a motion on the floor. It has been moved and seconded that debate be closed and that the pending question be put. This means that no one else can speak on this matter, I would say, including the proposer of the amendment, who is Delegate Fleming.

Are we ready for the question? I will unlock the voting machine on this to see how the delegates feel. We have a motion on the floor. The motion is to close debate and put the pending question. All those in favor of doing that will say "aye," those that are opposed to doing that will say "nay."

RUTH-JIROLANIO AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

DELEGATE RUTH. After talking to Delegate Jirolanio, an amendment which we had given to the Drafting Service is being withdrawn.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair thanks the gentlemen.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I am not disturbed at the vote which just took place and which was just recorded. I am, however, greatly disturbed at the motion that was made at that time. The reason why I am disturbed is this, Mr. President, up until then the Chair has always been kind enough to allow—as a matter of fact, if I remember correctly, it was stated by the Chair that the proposer of an amendment would always be given the right to close. On several occasions when the Committee on Judiciary was opposed to something, I have noticed that on more than several occasions members of that committee have been up on their feet, and in spite of the fact that the proposer, or the one whom he has so designated to speak in his behalf, has not been given the opportunity to make closing remarks.

I believe this Convention should establish a rule—and I will make a motion to that effect—that the proposer of an amendment shall be given the last opportunity to speak on that particular thing. As a matter of fact, I believe it is so listed in our rules. "Debate—Limitations," page 46. That rule was never suspended. Therefore, this Convention is going contrary to all the rules that we have in our book of rules.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. On the part of the Chair, Delegate Jirolanio, I wish to state that when we have a motion to close off the debate the Chair has always—unless we had a vote to the contrary—permitted the proposer of the amendment to close.

Today we had a motion, the other day we had a motion, and the Chair asked if they would change their motion to include that. Today the motion was not changed. Convention voted. According to the Parliamentarian, when there is a motion to close debate, that cuts off the proposer. In other words, the Convention has decided.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis.

DELEGATE IRVIS. May I address myself to the comments of Delegate Jirolanio, with the permission of the Chair and of the body?

The delegates are obviously getting a little bit tired and getting a little bit irritable. This is understandable. All of us are human and all of us suffer from these ailments. But I would suggest that in the future it would be wise on the part of any delegate to extend the courtesy of permitting the proponent of an amendment to speak.

In the last situation, two opponents—two very persuasive opponents—spoke powerfully against Senator Fleming's proposal. Senator Fleming, it seemed to me, out of simple courtesy, regardless of parliamentary procedure, should have been granted the same privilege and the same right.

I, too, get tired of hearing speeches and hearing people say over and over again what they said over and over again before. I get tired of hearing myself saying over and over again what I said over and over again before. But I quite agree with Governor Scranton that a Constitutional Convention is not a legislature, it is not a temporary thing, it is not a battle of parliamentary procedure, and it is not a nit-picking affair. These are important decisions which we are making. It does not seem to me, in making such a decision, that we have saved our conscience or our time very much when we are discourteous to the proponent of an amendment to the point of sealing his mouth. I regret that it was done. I trust that it will not be done again, whether I am in favor of or against an amendment.

MOTION TO RECONSIDER VOTE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Cortese.

DELEGATE CORTESE. I move to reconsider the vote by which Amendment 5 to Proposal No. 7 was defeated. I voted in the majority. That is the so-called Kauffman amendment, Amendment 5 to Proposal No. 7.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would the gentleman just remain at ease a second until we get that amendment?

The Chair recognizes, again, Delegate Cortese. Would you state again your motion to reconsider?

DELEGATE CORTESE. Mr. President, I move that the vote re Amendment 5 to Proposal No. 7 offered by Delegate Kauffman be reconsidered. I voted for the defeat of that amendment and my vote was in the majority vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes a seconder—do we have one?

DELEGATE WARMAN. I second it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. How did the delegate vote?

DELEGATE WARMAN. I voted "yea."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. How did the delegate vote?

DELEGATE WARMAN. Well, is this not the vote on the 75-75—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No, it is not.

DELEGATE WARMAN. Then I voted on the other one "nay," as far as I recall.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will have to check the record on the delegate's vote.

DELEGATE REYNOLDS. I voted "nay" and I second the motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will take the second by Delegate Reynolds, "Nay." The "nays" were the prevailing side. You voted "nay," Delegate Cortese voted "nay."

The motion before the Convention is to reconsider the vote by which the Kauffman amendment of yesterday was defeated.

The Chair wants to know if all the delegates know the amendment we are talking about. It was distributed, of course, yesterday. Do we have any additional copies?

DELEGATE HOOK. Was that the proposal that was defeated 63 to 79?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. No, 67 to 79.

DELEGATE HOOK. I am sorry, sir.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Unless the delegates have copies, we better have it reproduced so that we will be able to vote intelligently on the motion to reconsider. Then, of course, if it carries, the question would recur on the Kauffman amendment.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, just so I can be clear, is this not the matter yesterday which was voted "yea" 61 and "nay" 75? Or am I looking at the wrong sheet and the wrong amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want to say, Delegate O'Donnell, that I am asking the clerk to get the official vote tally and I will announce it. We are sending for the official tally sheet on this so we can announce to the delegates exactly what the vote was.

Also, there is some question—not considerable, I might add, but some people want it checked—as to how Delegate Cortese and how Delegate Reynolds voted.

We now have prepared additional copies of the Kauffman amendment in question.

I am looking at the official roll call tally, and it shows this was designated for the purpose of roll call as Amendment No. 5, the Kauffman amendment, and the vote was, yeas 67, nays 79.

We have also checked and Delegate Cortese and Delegate Reynolds voted with the prevailing side.

I understand the vote that Delegate O'Donnell referred to was on another Kauffman amendment, not this one.

Would the Delegates kindly take their seats, because we are going to vote now. There is a motion to reconsider and, if anybody wishes to be heard, they can be heard, but let us please take our seats, so we can expedite this matter.

Are all the Delegates ready? Please take your seats, because the question that we have before us is a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Kauffman amendment failed, and copies, I understand, have been distributed. You should have the amendment in front of you. The Chair wants to know, does anybody wish to be heard in connection with this motion to reconsider?

The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, I urge your reconsideration of this amendment. I will not speak at length because we discussed this fully yesterday, all of the arguments pro and con.

Simply, this amendment would provide for appointment of judges of statewide jurisdiction by the Governor with the consent of two-thirds of the Senate. What this would do would be to vest the responsibility in the hands of the person with the power.

What it would do would be to have officials elected directly by the people selecting your judges, and not a group of people meeting in secret behind closed doors responsible to no one selecting your judges.

This is, in effect, quite similar to the system being used very successfully in the Federal judiciary in New Jersey and Hawaii. It has worked well there, and I submit it will work well here.

I urge you to consider this, together with the other reforms in the Judicial article. This cannot be considered in a vacuum. We have the method of selection, coupled with merit retention once the judge is appointed. He, to all intents and purposes, unless he does not serve well, is in for life. We have provided in this article, as I said, for merit retention. We also have provided for a Judicial Inquiry and Review Board, which will be a constant safeguard against inefficient, ineffective, dishonest judges.

So when you consider all of these factors in a total package, we have a reform that we need not be ashamed to go to the people with. This is reform. It is not anti-reform, and it does not present the dangers, the inherent dangers, of putting into the hands of a selection panel the job and responsibility of selecting your judges of statewide jurisdiction.

So I urge you please to reconsider the vote of yesterday.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, the Chair recognizes Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I know that you all will be glad to know that I do not intend to reiterate the 10 minute speech I made yesterday afternoon on this subject. That was intended, as all of you know, to make clear to you the position of the Governor, which I experienced for four years in this field, but I do say to you in no uncertain terms that the description of this method made by the previous speaker is not my understanding of how it works.

What you are really deciding now once again on the reiteration of the same problem is whether you want a political panel made up of the party leaders of the Governor's party to inform him of the persons that they think are eligible for this job from which he selects one, or whether you want a nonpolitical panel to do the same thing of 10 to 20 names.

What happens with the system in the Kauffman amendment is, the Governor no longer has any out with his party to possibly ever appoint somebody from another party, and as a result he must make all of his appointments so that he gets the consent of all of the party members in the Senate of his party. That is precisely what I did, except in two extraordinary circumstances when we were establishing two new courts, and so we got about 45 additional Republican judges.

I think this is wrong, and I do not think it works correctly. It is precisely, also, what happens in the Federal government, because every president appoints, except for a handful of the opposite party, an overwhelming proportion of his own party.

I think this makes for politics in the judiciary, and there would be a great deal more of politics if we were on the other basis. I have explained to you what happened on the other basis where we did have five men appointed of five different types and groups, and none of them were bar members of the big law firms that everybody is so worried about, not one of them was a member of any of them.

I point out to you very succinctly, and as strongly as I can, if you really want independent selection of judges by the Governor, he is the one who does it, rather than the constant pulling on his coat to have it be a political one, this is the way to do it. I sincerely hope you will turn down this amendment so that Pennsylvania can join 15 other states in contrast to two under the Kauffman theory that are now being operated under that theory. There are 15 states using this one. It is the modern progressive way of doing it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Sharp.

DELEGATE SHARP. Mr. President, I believe the phrase that we are at a turning point is a hackneyed phrase in this Hall and, at the risk of being redundant, I am going to say that, instead of being a turning point, we are at a fork in the road.

I, myself, personally do not find the Kauffman amendment so repulsive that I do not think it could not successfully work in Pennsylvania. It so happens, as a matter of personal preference, I prefer the selection of the committee proposal, but I fear that we are treading on very dangerous ground here in that we are imposing upon the people of this Commonwealth as to the credibility of this Convention if we again reverse that which we have so recently done.

I am reliably informed that the vote on the Kauffman amendment was, I believe, 67 to 79, and I do not believe that within those 12 votes such an important issue as this can have either a positive affirmation of truth or a negative of denial. The very fact that this Convention had voted so closely on this question, it seems to me, shows that the question is meritorious on both sides. I believe that by reversing ourselves, as we have done several times previously in this Convention, we terribly, terribly weaken the work of this Convention in the eyes of the press and in the eyes of the public.

As I said before, I believe this Commonwealth of Pennsylvania could very well live with the Kauffman amendment, but I am not certain that this Convention can live with the voice of the people if we keep reversing ourselves and vacillate from day to day.

I, therefore, urge that this reconsideration be disapproved and that we come to a matter of finality here and let this rest with the people to either sustain our judgment or to impose their better judgment on the 23rd of April.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Hook.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, I rise to oppose the reconsideration.

When we started this Convention on December 1st and the committees were appointed, we had various proposals offered and brought forth before this body. One of the ones I was completely disturbed with, and I am a member of the Local Government organization and not of the judiciary, I was immediately concerned with this question of the judicial nominating commission.

The Bar proposal, which was Proposal No. 1,000, I read through completely, and I did not like their proposal pertaining to the selection of the panel. At this point I went and secured all the Constitutions of the United States of every state and reviewed them all.

If you will check, you will note what this committee has done is adopted the proposal that I put into the committee itself, and I used a format of four laymen and three lawyers to compose this panel. Being a lawyer myself, I was not afraid of what these laymen would do. I believe it is very important that lay people look at attorneys and make their judgments. We are judged by what our clients think of us, and not by any other measure.

I believe the four lay people on this committee has been established by this Commission, and the panel would do the job and protect the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Many delegates come to me and state, "Well, there is still going to be control." Yes. At the same time, they will act back and they will give us something that I think we will be very proud of and some reform that I think is needed in the judiciary.

What is going to be the result of the Kauffman amendment? At the present time there are 27 Republicans and 22 Democrats in the Senate. This is going to mean, in order to get a judicial man approved, there is going to have to be a deal made.

Now, is that in politics or is that out of politics? I will let you be the judge of that. The same thing will occur time and time again, that is, you are going to put the judiciary into the position of having to be dealt with by the public at all times, and this is not what we want. We do not want that to occur.

I speak to this group to vote against reconsidering this motion of Delegate Kauffman's.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Welsh.

DELEGATE WELSH. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to reconsideration and I can possibly put it quite simply by saying it would come down to a real issue here as to whether the judges are going to be political or whether they are not.

I think if you look at the vote yesterday you might be able to find the answer. I would like to state the ex officios at this Convention voted yesterday seven in favor of this amendment and one against it.

I, therefore, stand in support of the President of this Convention who voted "nay." I stand with him and I am in opposition to making the judges political.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, I must rise in support of the position taken on the previous vote by my colleague and Vice President of this Convention, Delegate Casey of Scranton.

I do so in exactly the same position that he does. Like him, I have lost a vote in this Convention by tie votes and made no move for reconsideration. In fact, I was approached for reconsideration and refused to sign the document that would have brought it back for reconsideration, because I trust in the judgment of the delegates here assembled. If they fail to sustain something that I desperately wanted which was, if you remember, the mandated referendum on community courts, I have to abide by that decision.

I speak like Delegate Casey as an officer of a marvelous group of people who are trying desperately to hold themselves together for a good purpose, and I am telling you that we cannot protect ourselves in every point from a flash reconsideration. We just cannot do it, and we are lucky this morning we have a full body here. What is going to happen late some afternoon if Senator Casey and I want to spring a quickie on you, when half of you have gone and we have calculated which half and prized an advantage which is not ours, we will reverse this great assembly with a handful of voters or by a change in things. We cannot protect ourselves from those tactics and we should judge what we want, then hold to it.

Finally, I must associate myself with Delegate Casey's remarks and extend them to this extent. I am not here defending the Judiciary Committee's point of view on anything, we are past that. This is now your point of view and my point of view, and I no longer care what Amsterdam and Scranton want on this.

We have established what we want and I am speaking to our conscience. Let us defend what we have decided.

So, for those reasons, I must strongly oppose reconsideration of this proposal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Baldrige.

DELEGATE BALDRIGE. Mr. President, I respectfully rise in support of this motion. I think I object to extra rehashing just as much as any other delegate in this Convention, but, remember, Mr. President, the Judiciary Committee itself on these recommendations reversed itself many times. We who are delegates certainly have the right to think twice about anything, and especially something like this which is the most revolutionary, wild, far-out change we have even suggested in this Convention be made in our own present Constitution.

This is something which puts in the power of seven men elected by nobody appointed by no elected official. The majority of them are appointed by the Governor, an elected official, but three of them by the Supreme Court which, although they are elected, we do not consider them really elected officials, and certainly they are nonpolitical.

No matter what you do to improve things, there are always advantages and disadvantages on both sides of the fence. It seems to me to put such a terrific power in the hands of seven people who are not themselves elected —the people cannot select them—the power to say that no one except one of those 20 persons appointed can even aspire to a statewide judgeship, is something that is going to be pretty hard, at least for me, to sell to the people of my district.

I certainly think on something as important as this a second look is not necessarily bad.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Thomson.

DELEGATE THOMSON. Mr. President, as a nonlawyer delegate to this Convention and with apologies to the many candidates for judgeship, I move the question.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fineman. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE FINEMAN. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE FINEMAN. When this motion was put, there was frankly some indecision in my mind as to which way I would go, not because I did not sympathetically share the view of Delegate Kauffman, but rather because there is some indecision as to the question of reconsidering once again something that had been past-completed business.

Delegate Welsh, and this is why I rise to a point of personal privilege, has made up my mind for me and I am going to wholeheartedly support this motion for reconsideration, and I would urge the delegates in this Convention chamber to support this motion for reconsideration.

I think it takes a lot of temerity on the part of Delegate Welsh to point out the ex officio members voted in one particular way on this thing, as if to infer that by so doing there was something evil in their vote, that there was a stigma on their vote.

I know it is a fact that Delegate Welsh has been in the mainstream of political life for some time, and why does he ascribe to his viewpoint any more integrity and any better motivation than those things that cause me to vote in any particular way. The fact that I am a delegate ex officio makes my judgment no less valid than that of Delegate Welsh, nor does it ascribe to my vote any evil, any greater evil, than perhaps motivates Delegate Welsh. I think it was manifestly unfair of him to infer that because ex officio delegates to this Convention cast their vote in a certain way, there was no evil involved and there was politics involved. If you get yourself to believe for one moment that there will not be politics involved in this commission, I say you are just utterly naive.

I ask the delegates to this Convention to support this motion for reconsideration.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The motion has been made by Delegate Thomson and has been seconded by Delegate Scarlett. If I may state the motion, the motion is, as I understand it, that we close debate and put the pending question on the motion to reconsider the vote by which the Kauffman amendment went down. Now we have that motion.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Welsh. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE WELSH. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE WELSH. The point is in answer to the previous speaker, and that is that I did not intend, and I am sure he quite well knows that, to decry the way that any delegate to this Convention voted. The only thing I said to this delegation was a fact. I stated a fact and we have come down to a clear issue, in my opinion, whether we are going to have the statewide judges elected or appointed with the consent of two-thirds of the Senate, or whether we are going to have them according to the judiciary article and recommendation. I maintain that the latter is less political.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair is going to put the question on the motion right now. Remember it again, this is on the motion that was placed by Delegate Thomson to close debate.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion to close debate?

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand it has been moved by Delegate Jirolanio, seconded by Delegate Fineman, that we close the debate and vote on the question. Now, we will take a vote. We are going to open up the voting machine and vote on that question as to whether we close debate and vote on the Kauffman amendment. We unlock the machine and those voting "yea" will vote to close off debate, those voting "nay" will vote to hear debate.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, do I understand that the effect of what has happened in this room in the last few moments is that we at first have agreed to reconsider the question of the Kauffman amendment and have now agreed not to consider it at all, not even to permit it to be discussed, but to jam it right to a vote here and now, to overturn what was done yesterday?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair says that right now we are going to vote on the Kauffman amendment. That was the feeling of the majority of this body, and we now unlock the voting machine.

The question is, will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Kauffman. The voting machine is now unlocked and the delegates will proceed to cast their vote. Those voting "yea" will vote to support the Kauffman amendment, those voting "nay" will vote to reject the Kauffman amendment, and that is the question.

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the Kauffman amendment?

MURRAY AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Mr. President, I rise to offer an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE MURRAY offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 7, by inserting between lines 8 and 9: (h) No member of this Constitutional Convention shall be eligible for appointment to any court of this Commonwealth for ten years following the adoption of this article.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, I would like to ask whether an amendment to this would be in order, to insert at the end thereof "except any delegate who is an attorney-at-law and holds the title of dean of a law school." Would that be in order?

Further, Mr. President, looking at this amendment, I do not believe I asked for a ruling by the Chair whether or not this comes within the call of the Constitution. I do not think so. If it does not, it does violate the provisions in Article I.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You know the Chair thought that this job as I went along as presiding officer would get easier as the days drew closer to the 29th. I want you to know that the Chair has been wrong. The job is not any easier. This is a difficult decision that the Chair has to make. The Chair has had—I will recognize you, Delegate Murray—to consider this amendment with counsel for the Convention. Based on the ruling given to the Chair by the counsel for the Convention, the Chair right now is required to rule that this particular amendment offered by Delegate Murray is not within the authority of the Convention because, in the opinion of counsel, it would violate the Bill of Rights.

I want to say that in the opinion of the Chair even lawyers have rights. Frankly, I think we came here to strengthen our judiciary article and not to weaken it by depriving the people of Pennsylvania of some of the best legal minds that have ever been assembled under one roof. Therefore, the Chair rules that this is not within the authority of the Convention.

I now recognize Delegate Murray, who has every privilege to take an appeal.

DELEGATE MURRAY. If this amendment deprives any individual of his right to run for election, I would agree with you. But this deals with appointments, political appointments, in effect, appointing people to positions which they, as delegates, helped to create. Let me state, also, that it does not deal with prior appointments. Judge Hannum, for example, would not be affected. It would only deal with appointments after the adoption of this article.

I would like to study the decision of the Chair and I reserve my right to appeal, which I intend to do.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You have a right, of course, to take an appeal and we will await your decision.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Camardella. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE CAMARDELLA. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE CAMARDELLA. I must disagree with the Chair again, Mr. President. After what happened in the last couple of days, I can wholeheartedly agree with Delegate Murray's proposal here. With all the jockeying, I think we should put a saddle on what has been going on in the last couple of days.

COMMITTEE MEETING

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. May I remind the members of the Committee on Style and Drafting that there will be a luncheon meeting this noon in Room 500 of the North Office Building.

SHOEMAKER AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I have an amendment, Mr. President, to Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER offered the following amendment which was read by the Clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 7, by inserting between lines 8 and 9: (e) Whenever there is an appointment, selection or election to fill a vacancy in a court division, such election, selection or appointment shall be to that division in which the vacancy exists and the judge appointed, selected or elected shall serve primarily thereon.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker, who is standing forward in connection with his amendment.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, yesterday, you will recall, I submitted basically the same proposed amendment and then withdrew it. The reason that it was withdrawn was to add some additional language suggested by Delegate Amsterdam on the part of the committee and, hopefully, to make it more acceptable to the committee and to the unified judicial system.

I point out again and call to your attention that I have no intention of attempting to destroy in any way the unified judicial system as it is proposed under this proposed article, Proposal No. 7. However, I do feel quite strongly that we should recognize several basic points. It is at this that I aimed this amendment.

First of all, the Bar Association, that is, not the Association, but the lawyers of Pennsylvania, did vote on a written ballot three to one in favor of having some distinction between general practice on the bench and specialization on the bench. They favored this kind of specialization in order to get more qualified judicial timber. Pennsylvania currently has leadership in these United States in the estate field, especially, and you will find that treatises on this subject such as how to avoid probate find very little fault with the Pennsylvania bench. I am specifically concerned with the idea that a candidate for judicial office to fill a vacancy which may be in a division, either an orphans' court division of a common pleas bench or a trial division of a common pleas bench, should be the most qualified man available. I think this is the desire of all of us.

I submit to you the only way we can get a successful practitioner out of the practice of law and on to the bench is to give him some assurance—if not a guarantee—that when he leaves a successful estate practice or a successful trial practice to fill a vacancy in a division then open, he would be in that division where his specialty lies.

I do not intend, nor is this aimed at, prohibiting the cross assignment by the president judge of any court of common pleas to fill a gap, on a temporary basis or on a permanent basis, if it is merely a cross assignment by virtue of filling an empty gap—a need—in the workings of the court. But I do strongly feel that we should promote the removal from the practice of specialists to fill the specialties on the bench. I think we get better qualified judicial timber this way.

I re-emphasize that this does not destroy the unified judicial system, it is not so intended, and I have no desire to do so. It does not prohibit the transfer of judges within divisions, or even cross divisions. It is merely aimed at allowing a candidate for the bench to know which division he will primarily serve.

I call to your attention that if you compare this amendment with the amendment submitted yesterday and withdrawn, you will see the insertion of the word "primarily," which was at the behest of Chairman Amsterdam. I understand the committee cannot back this proposal per se because they feel differently than I do, and I suppose Chairman Amsterdam will make his position clear. I do, however, ask your support. You will notice that there is a substantial number of us who have endorsed this concept.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kline.

DELEGATE KLINE. We have been whittling away at the proposal which was brought to the floor by the committee, and I must confess I have been among the whittlers on most of these issues. I think, if we adopt this amendment, we will cut so deeply into one of the basic concepts that has so far survived, that is, a unified court system, that it will be a tragic mistake. We are now trying to do with this amendment what we would not let a qualifications committee do in selecting judges, what we do not want the electors to do in electing judges, and we now say what we want the Governor to do in appointing judges, that is, to make a determination as to the type of person who should be appointed to fill a judicial post.

I do not think you ought to do that or try to do it in the Constitution. If you want a qualifications committee to do it, let them do it. If you want the Governor to do it, let him do it. Certainly, any time a judge is appointed, this kind of thing would be considered by the Governor. But it should not be a compelling point so that we lock in whoever is making the appointments. I think this is contrary to one of the basic principles of the committee proposal which we have accepted and I would, therefore, suggest that it does not belong in the Constitution and that it should be defeated.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Senator Kline said it so well that I hate to take up additional time with this amendment, but I feel you ought to know that members of the Judiciary Committee who discussed this feel that this does do violence to the concept of the unified judicial district which we had hoped would be the justification, in large part, for all the hard work we have done here. As a matter of fact, the Judiciary Article itself does not provide for divisions except in connection with courts that may be created hereafter. However, in the schedule which we have set up, we do provide that in the various common pleas courts there shall be division and the very fact that we did provide that point indicates that the Supreme Court, the top of the judicial system, and the various president judges are to have the authority to move judges from place to place in order to make it the most efficient system possible.

It was for that reason that we suggested it and I believe, if it has any meaning—frankly, I am not at all sure how it applies or what its meaning is, but if it has any meaning, it does prevent the president judges and the chief justice of the Supreme Court from moving judges around to the degree necessary to make the courts most efficient.

Therefore, we recommend strongly that this be defeated as an amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. Chairman, I rise very briefly to support this amendment. There are provisions in the judiciary article right here and now, which have not been disturbed, which permit the Supreme Court through its court administrator to assign or reassign judges as they may be required. That is not disturbed by this Shoemaker amendment.

Secondly, there is a provision in the judiciary article that permits the Supreme Court to assign and reassign classes of cases from one court or division to another and that is not disturbed in any respect by the Shoemaker amendment.

Thirdly, one of the finest arguments in support of the unified judicial system contemplates a person filing a case in the wrong court, and up until now that could mean that your case could go on for a year or so before the court found it did not have jurisdiction. Now that these are merely divisions of the Court, it is a matter of childish simplicity for the court simply to transfer the case, as they do now, from the law side to the equity side, or from the equity side to the law side, or to transfer it from one division to another.

Consequently, I believe that the Shoemaker amendment retains every piece, every vestige, of the best features of court unification and retains, as well, the notion of specialized cases before specialized judges. That is the aim of this Convention and the aim of the judiciary article.

I think this amendment advances that aim substantially, and I speak in favor of it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. President, on this point I believe we have settled that the point to be obtained by this Convention was not specialized courts, but specialized judges.

We will understand this problem better if we consider the meaning of the language that the judicial power of the Commonwealth is lodged in certain named courts. That means that once a case gets within the orbit of the courts it is a part of the judicial system and is under the control of the courts, and the modern theory is that that is true even as against the Legislature. Once we get that concept that these matters within the court are to be controlled by the court, interference from the outside is vexatious and unwise.

For convenience there is reference in the new plan to divisions of the common pleas court, but the common pleas court is supposed to be the general court of jurisdiction in every judicial district. Anything we do to set up barriers, lines, in between there is unwise. It is unwise because it promotes appeal.

One of the difficulties and demerits of the present judicial system, and one of which the public is greatly aware, is the many appeals necessary on the question of jurisdiction. Once you have an elected judge of the orphans' court division, you will have questions on appeal as to what court has the right.

Allow me to point out where some of the distinctions may be. The orphans' court as it now stands has jurisdiction over estates. They also have jurisdiction over trusts. They have jurisdiction over petitions, if it arises out of a will, where as the court of common pleas has jurisdiction if it arises out of a contract, the orphans' court has jurisdiction in questions under the Price Act if it arises out of a will and the common pleas court has jurisdiction if it arises out of a grant.

The orphans' court now has jurisdiction over the estates of persons of unsound mind, and yet the power to gain treatment for that is in the common pleas court.

Everything we do to the end of accentuating these distinctions between the divisions will promote more appeals, more and more appeals, and will have to go to the Supreme Court. That does not mean anything except to the lawyers. I think it is of the utmost importance that we defeat this proposal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Judge Woodside.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, I think there is one point that has not yet been considered either by this body or by the committee itself in the determination of this question now before us, and that is this:

There may be a vacancy in what is now the orphans' court. There may be a lawyer who is particularly well versed in the practice that is carried on in the orphans' court who may know all of the intricacies of the problems of the orphans' court, which I assure you are quite different than those of the common pleas court, and he may run for that office. If he is not elected or running for a specific division, there may at the same time be a vacancy in the court of common pleas and, if there is no division between these two, you may elect to the orphans' court division one who would be very good in the common pleas court, because the orphans' court lawyer will have to run against two instead of only one.

Both the Republicans and the Democrats may put up a very good orphans' court man, but, if he has to run against two or three vacancies on the common pleas at the same time, he will not have the same opportunity, and the people will not have the same opportunity to select one good orphans' court man out of it.

I know way back in 1904 the cliche came about for the first time that we wanted specialized judges, but not specialized courts, but since 1904 when that statement was first made the experience generally has been away from it, because we have gone more and more into specialized courts for one reason. We found that by having specialized courts you have specialized judges, and this gives us an opportunity to have all of the advantages of a unified court and still have all of the advantages of a specialist in the court and in the field with which he has to deal.

I very strongly urge this delegation to vote in favor of this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, I am badly torn by this particular amendment. As you know, an overwhelming majority of the committee, and I think of the Convention, feel very strongly about the unified system. On the other hand, everybody also knows in the field of legal areas that it is helpful to have specialist people, but what bothers me terribly about this particular amendment is that I have already received five different interpretations as to what it may or may not mean, and how or how not the Supreme Court might interpret it if you put it in the Constitution, and I just think this is a mistake under those circumstances.

I think if you are going to put more and more verbiage in the Constitution, which is questionable in legal entity minds—I am not of that caliber, I do not know enough about the law to say so, but I have talked to our counsel and I have talked to the counsel for the Convention, and Delegate Shoemaker and I just heard Judge Woodside, for all of whom I have tremendous respect, but I say to you that I think this particular provision is going to be contentious, and Supreme Court contentious for some time to come. We are not now knowledgeable of precisely what it will mean permanently, and I, therefore, hope you will not put it into the Constitution.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker for the purpose of summing up.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. May I merely say in summing up that I suggest that under the unified judicial system, where the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania is the supreme power in determining jurisdiction and in interpreting the Constitution, that I am sure they will interpret it in the fairest light for the unified system, as well as in the fairest light to preserve the specializations of the courts, where it will be promoted to the ends of justice. I have the utmost confidence in the court, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, in so interpreting this provision. I apologize for any poor verbiage therein, but I tried to get the consensus of both sides to make this acceptable.

I again request strongly your support and, if I have it, I will be satisfied.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Then I take it that we are ready for the question, and we will now unlock the voting machine.

The question is, will the Convention agree to the amendment being offered by Delegate Shoemaker.

The question recurs,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

Less than the majority having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the negative and the amendment was not agreed to.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Am I entitled to vote, or has my vote been recorded?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand that we have already decided that you were tardy in connection with this, but your remarks will be spread on the record here.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I would like my remarks to be that I would vote against this if I were permitted to vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The record will show your remarks.

BARRON AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron.

DELEGATE BARRON. Mr. President, I offer an amendment to Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the the proposal on second consideration?

Delegate Barron offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 5, lines 28 to 30; page 6, line 1, by striking out "Whenever a vacancy occurs for any other reason in the" in line 28, page 5, all of lines 29 and 30, page 5, and all of line 1, page 6, by striking out all of said lines and inserting: Whenever a vacancy occurs for any other reason in the office of judge in such judicial district, the Governor shall fill the vacancy by appointment in accordance with the provisions of Article IV, section 8 of this Constitution.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron.

DELEGATE BARRON. Mr. President, I believe this is under the category of good housekeeping, although it may stir up a matter of philosophy and, of course, if this is the case, we will consider that as well.

As I now read the clean copy, which is on our desks today, we have provided generally in case of a vacancy that the vacancy may be filled by the Governor with the consent of two-thirds of the Senate.

The problem arises thusly, however, if the Senate is not in session? Under the most recently adopted set of amendments, those which were passed at the same primary in which it was determined that we should have this Constitutional Convention, the following language was expressed and adopted to cover the situation. I consider this very important if our Senate and House of Representatives ever get back to the idea that they will rise in April, or May, or June, and not continue throughout the entire year as occurred last year. As our language now reads, "should the Senate and House arise in April, there would be a vacancy for a full eight months," which would be impossible for the Governor to fill without reconvening the Legislature. Of course, if they arise in June, the situation of six months arises and so on down to the end.

The language which I propose to incorporate by this reference is in Article IV, Section 8, of the Constitution as amended last spring, which reads this way:

"Except as may now or hereafter be otherwise provided in this Constitution as to appellate or other judges," he may, and I will interpolate, referring to the Governor—during the recess of the Senate fill vacancies happening in offices to which he appoints by granting commissions expiring at the end of its session and fill vacancies happening in the office of Auditor General or State Treasurer or in any other elective office he is authorized to fill.

"If the vacancy happens during the session of the Senate, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, he shall nominate to the Senate, before its final adjournment, a proper person to fill the vacancy."

Then the language goes on to provide concerning terms that in the case of a vacancy in an elective office a person shall be elected to the office on the next election day appropriate to the office, unless the vacancy happens within two calendar months immediately preceding the election day, in which case the election shall be held on the second succeeding election day appropriate to the office.

This is now Constitution language, and I suggest there are many circumstances, particularly in counties such as my own where there is but one judge, where there is a positive and vital need for interim appointments.

I think the concept has been very carefully considered by the drafters of the amendments which passed last spring's primary. I would propose to keep the system uniform for everyone falling into the general category of offices as covered in Article IV, Section 8, of the Constitution.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I have a question, Mr. President. I believe last evening this was ruled to require a motion to reconsider, inasmuch as it is in direct contravention of the language of Delegate Ruth's amendment, as amended. Am I correct in that?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me say that my understanding is that Delegate Barron withdrew this amendment last night. I do not recall that we ruled on it. I think he withdrew it. Is that correct?

DELEGATE BARRON. My recollection is that we had a discussion and a conflict seemed to come up. We were anxious to get out of here and I withdrew it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If you are raising a question in connection with this, we will be at ease and we will review it again.

Delegate O'Donnell, the Chair has consulted with counsel and, based on counsel's opinion, we do not feel that a motion to reconsider would be necessary in connection with this amendment, because this amendment concerns itself solely, as I understand it, with the interim appointments. We have not voted for or against interim appointments as such.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. May I speak against the amendment then, sir?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may speak against the amendment.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. This amendment flies in the face of everything, it seems to me, that was decided in the last couple of days, even if it is possible to figure out what that is.

As of this morning we said the Governor will fill statewide offices with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate.

As of the day before yesterday, we said in judicial districts, that is to say, as opposed to statewide offices, the Governor would require the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate.

This amendment would permit the Governor to make appointments with the advice and consent of nobody at all, but to simply wait until the Senate got out of session, then get his appointment without the "yes" or "no" of anyone whatsoever.

I think that is in opposition to everything that has been decided on this floor, and I strongly urge the defeat of this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want to say that Delegate Barron asked for recognition, and he can only speak twice. He may wish to hold his comments.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BARRON. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BARRON. If I may rise to a point of personal privilege in connection with this, the distinguished delegate, Delegate O'Donnell, is in error. I would suggest as a point of order that counsel might wish to clear up the matter of Delegate O'Donnell's suggestion as to what can happen while the Senate is in session. I believe he stated that erroneously.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will have counsel report to the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, and they can report to the body as to the effect of the Barron amendment.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Kline.

DELEGATE KLINE. Mr. President, I would like to ask the sponsor of this amendment a couple of questions for clarification.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, indeed. He will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE KLINE. Mr. President, does this provision apply to the judicial vacancies on both the statewide appellate courts and also the local courts?

DELEGATE BARRON. Since we have gone to a system of gubernatorial appointments this morning and this amendment language was drafted yesterday, it would be my quick curbstone opinion that, no, it does not apply to appellate courts, but it does apply to elective offices.

The language throughout Subsection (a) of Section 8 of Article IV, and also of Subsection (b), which is the portion I read in length, related to elective offices.

DELEGATE KLINE. Thank you.

DELEGATE BARRON. Do I make myself clear? This is curbstone advice, I frankly recognized it as such when I gave it to you in light of what has transpired this morning.

I firmly believe I am correct, but, of course, that is the reason you bring in a second doctor to consult with when the operation is imminent.

DELEGATE KLINE. With all due respect to Delegate Barron, who is probably a pretty good curbstone lawyer, I would suggest that we not put any curbstone law in the Constitution. I suggest we settle this matter and clearly understand precisely what type of judicial appointments this provision covers, because it is a very serious matter. If it does not refer to interim appointments on the appellate courts and his position about the urgency of filling vacancies is valid, then we should, perhaps, address ourselves to that.

I am concerned about this kind of language, and I just want to know exactly what it does.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Kline, I have requested counsel for the Judiciary Committee, as well as the counsel for the Convention to get together again with the chairman of the committee so that the chairman can report an answer to the two questions that have been raised, one by Delegate O'Donnell and one by Delegate Kline.

MOTION TO TABLE

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, may I suggest that we table this amendment until that is done, because, quite frankly, a number of us are a little up in the air as to precisely what it now does in view of the Kauffman amendment and two other things that the Convention has recently done.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I only ask the question now of the chairman whether he thinks we should table it, or can we just be at ease for a few minutes to get the answer? Would you rather this be placed on the table?

I just want to point out that this is the last amendment we have to this section.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. May I say to you that I would be glad to move that we go on to the next section with the understanding that we will come back only to this amendment, if that would be agreeable, but I would like it tabled because of the fact that there is now discussion between several attorneys who do not agree.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May I ask, is there an objection to tabling the Barron amendment?

I guess not, so we will declare that your motion to be, pursuant to that request that was unanimously accepted by the body, that it be placed on the table and that it be recalled from the table just as soon as we can get the answer to some multiple legal problems that have come up.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Yes. Good, we can move on to other things.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
The motion was agreed to.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Did I understand Governor Scranton's motion to foreclose any further amendments to this section?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No, I do not think that would foreclose any further amendments.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I am about to prepare one.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think he made a motion that we all agreed to that this be placed on the table.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. All right.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is the Barron Amendment.

I will say this, if anybody has any amendments, I sincerely plead with you to get them in, because we want to conclude the amending process to this Judiciary Article today if we can, and I think we can.

PROPOSAL No. 7, SECTIONS No. 13 AND 14

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will now recognize Chairman Amsterdam with the understanding that he will give a brief discussion on Sections 13 and 14 of the Judicial Article.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. It seems to me that the matter of tenure of judges, which is Section 13, and the matter of later sections are so clear that it really requires very little in the way of explanation. I am wondering whether, in light of what we said previously today, in order to save time, why we cannot go directly into any suggestions for amendments that there may be. We had gone into this in a very general way at the time we presented the entire article to the Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, indeed, and I think it is an excellent suggestion. In the interest of conserving time and expediting our conclusions, I will ask if the amendment committee we have, Vice President Casey and Vice President Orban, will come forward and see what amendments we have that we are ready to take up. I urge any fellow delegates, if you have any amendments, or are thinking about amendments to the judiciary, please come up with them so that they will be considered by the committee.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I would like to have an explanation of Rule 19, the first paragraph thereof, on pages 15 and 16 of the rule book that was distributed.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. What is your particular question? I will try to have the Parliamentarian answer the question. We will either distribute the answer or give it to you now.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. My understanding from the way—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want to ask the gentleman here. You know, it is difficult enough to have to rule on these things quickly during the heat of debate, but when we have an opportunity to stop and consider, we would appreciate the opportunity to do so.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. As I understand this rule, in order to be absent from voting, you must have an excuse to do so. If you do not vote and you are in the hall, or if you are here, you are voted "no." Is that correct or incorrect?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will have the Parliamentarian look into that question, and we will give you an answer.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. While you are considering that, Mr. President, I think a definition of the term "necessarily prevent" might cure the problem one way or the other.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am endeavoring to obtain an answer, but I understand the Parliamentarian says that we will not get the answer immediately, but he will get it to you later on.

SCRANTON-AMSTERDAM AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We now have an amendment which is labeled the Scranton-Amsterdam amendment.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

Delegates Scranton and Amsterdam offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 13), page 8, line 17, by inserting after "any" where it appears the first time: Statewide

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 13), page 8, line 17, by striking out "of Statewide jurisdiction"

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes either Chairman Scranton or Chairman Amsterdam to speak on this amendment.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, this is simply an amendment of a technical nature that is required by the fact that we have been careful heretofore to use the term "statewide court" as distinguished from "statewide jurisdiction." This is simply to provide in the case of so-called statewide courts they are the ones to which the various tenure provisions shall apply and are not courts of statewide jurisdiction, but statewide courts.

I do not believe there is any objection.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegates Scranton and Amsterdam?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, I would like the record to reflect my vote as "aye" on this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will have the record show you have voted "aye."

TATE AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Tate.

DELEGATE TATE. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE TATE offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 14), page 10, line 2, by striking out "years." and inserting: or as shall be provided by the General Assembly.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY SESSION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I have been advised that I should announce that tomorrow is Washington's Birthday and we will all be here to celebrate. There will not be any special ceremonies, but I understand the cafeteria will be open to accommodate us.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Tate.

DELEGATE TATE. Mr. President, may I ask all the delegates to look at their Printer's No. 20 on which we are working, at the top of page 10? The pending amendment which I am offering deals with a very important committee proposal in, perhaps, a minor way, but I think it makes an improvement. This deals with the question of mandatory retirement at age 70 for judges.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Amsterdam. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. May we assume that there are no other amendments to original Section 13 on tenure and that is why we are going on to Section 14?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand we cannot make that assumption.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Are we going out of order? Is that what we are doing at the present time?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Our understanding was that we were discussing 13 and 14 together and, in order to save time, we were just moving ahead.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. We will ask the other co-chairman to come up. We thought we were just taking Section 13.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will the other co-chairman come up and confer with Chairman Amsterdam, because, if it meets with the approval of the Convention, I would like to move the amendment. This happens to be the next one ready, and we still have two on 13. We will go back to it as soon as they are ready.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Tate.

DELEGATE TATE. We could go back to the top of page 10 of our Printer's No. 20. This deals with the first two lines of that page and deals with the question of mandatory retirement at age 70.

I am in favor of a mandatory retirement age, as long as it is coupled with the committee proposal and that is coupled with the post-retirement service. I think the committee has done an extraordinarily good job on this entire subject.

This amendment would add one element of flexibility to this which, I think will be a good addition. It would permit, in addition to mandatory retirement at age 70, the Legislature, the General Assembly, to make such changes in that mandatory retirement age as it might deem appropriate from time to time. There are two questions, I think, which might arise here in the future. None of us knows sitting here today what medical science may be able to do with our longevity. It may be that age 70 will be entirely unrealistic 30, 50, or 75 years from now.

In addition, there are many who feel it might be dictated by experience that it would be wise to make a different retirement age, for instance, for the appellate court than for the trial courts, after we leave this mandatory retirement age for a little while. Therefore, rather than have to go through the cumbersome task of a mandatory process, I would like to open the door for the Legislature to make some changes here. I do not want to throw the thing completely into the laps of the Legislature, because they might not act in this situation or might not feel it was necessary to act promptly. Therefore, I would like to see the retention of the age 70 as it stands in the committee proposal, but I would like to see this additional door opened, this additional flexibility, by the addition of the words shown in the amendment.

Therefore, I urge your support of this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Strickler.

DELEGATE STRICKLER. Mr. President, speaking for the sub-committee on Retirement, this committee considered this for a long time and we went over all the other states that have similar provisions, a lot of them were 70 and some of them were 80, but they are almost all mandatory.

We felt we should make it mandatory in the Constitution and not leave it to the Legislature for the simple reason that, when a man runs for judge, or is appointed a judge, he wants to know how long he is going to be in there. If the Legislature can change it to 60, 65, or 75, he does not know what his plight is before he runs.

Secondly, we feel this is in line with business with the military forces, where they have a definite retirement age. There are a lot of good men who have to retire. All in all, considering age, a lot of them cannot function properly after 70. We feel the Constitution should state that specifically. There is a grandfather clause in the schedule which provides that those that are now serving a term can continue on until the end of the term or to such other time as this Convention may decide. I think the Judiciary Committee, the main committee, also considered this and we are practically in full accord with the sub-committee's recommendation that we do not leave this matter up in the air for the Legislature.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Thomson.

DELEGATE THOMSON. Mr. President, in view of the fact that I celebrated my 78th birthday this week, I, at least, have to make a token endorsement of Delegate Tate's amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Filson.

DELEGATE FILSON. Mr. President, in accordance with the remarks of General Strickler, I might add that this was debated very vigorously and it was unanimously conceded by the sub-committee that the age of 70 was an age at which the best of any judge would be given to the public. The best years that he could conceivably contribute would be from whatever period he might be elected up to the age of 70 years. We did take into consideration the fact that men who have attained 70 may be, both physically and mentally, extremely competent and may conceivably give something of everlasting significance to the judiciary. In accordance with this, the committee recommended that these judges who are over 70 years of age, although they were retired, could be used by the Supreme Court on temporary assignments throughout the Commonwealth.

In addition to this, I might say that this has become an extremely important area where the Supreme Court might be able to call upon judges who can sit from time to time in areas where the press of business is very severe. We also took into consideration the fact that the longevity of people, while the age has been raised, has been raised because of the fact that infant mortality has been overcome to a large degree, a lot of drugs, and that sort of thing, which are on the market, have allowed people to live for a longer period of time, but, generally, the life span of people is really no longer than it was 150 or 200 years ago. We believe that there will not be any changes within the next hundred years which might conceivably bear upon the figure that we have set out for mandatory retirement of judges in all the courts of the Commonwealth.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Redick.

DELEGATE REDICK. Mr. President, I rise to support the committee's proposal, being one of the committee members, and the only one, opposed to the report from the committee. Since that time I have given considerable consideration to this report and now I apologize to the committee and wish to join the committee.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I think this is a relatively simple matter to decide upon and I move the previous question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We do have Judge Woodside up. Do you want to second the motion?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. One half minute.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. I thought the delegates might be interested in what happened in New York. I just learned this very recently. New York submitted to the electorate in 1966 two proposed amendments to change the 70 age limit. One of them passed, the other one did not. But the necessity of doing so indicates that there is change in a matter that might well be dealt with by Legislature instead of special constitutional amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. The reason I favored the mandatory retirement at 70 is that I fear the present tendency to reduce the age of retirement. Delegate Redick had the idea of retirement at 67. The difficulty with that sort of thing in the law is that it takes a man so long to get started. If we begin limiting his time from the top, then it does not leave enough time.

Senator Croop has another idea that I think is important on this point. I wanted to see 70 retained as the bottom limit. I would not object to having it 70, and above.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Croop.

DELEGATE CROOP. Just a brief word. I think I am now probably speaking in favor of this amendment for this reason, it seems to me that we are saying to all prospective candidates for judgeships in the future that if you are in the realm of 60 years, or more, you are eliminated because you could not serve a full term.

I find, as you look at the judges who are presiding throughout the Commonwealth, many, many of them are doing their best work and rendering their best decisions in this realm between 60 and 70.

It is a rather discouraging note to a lawyer who is coming on, who has made a good career and who is in the shadows of 60, to have said to him, you are eliminated from running because you will only be able to serve for half a term, or three-quarters of a term, or something like that.

In view of this, I think some provision should be made. I believe this is the Tate amendment that I speak in favor of.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, I have two things.

No. 1, the committee, as Delegate Filson made clear, allows any judge who wishes to, after retirement, to continue to actively participate as a judge, which takes care of those people who are concerned about the fact that there are a lot of people after the age of 70 that are still competent, and willing and able.

No. 2, the point about the Legislature that is being made by Delegate Tate, I think, is not in the least well taken. For many, many years the Legislature has been unwilling to put a period of time in here, any time. One of the reasons, as Senator Kline just reminded me, is because a lot of them feel that, by statute, this is a discriminatory type of thing to do and they are anxious to have it in the Constitution, where I think it properly belongs, much as I am opposed to numbers generally. But this is one of the basic reasons the Legislature has never moved on this subject and why we have so many comparatively elderly judges now.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I did make a motion, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You did.

We have a motion by Delegate Pasquerilla that we close the debate and put the pending question.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the motion?

It was agreed to.

I think we are ready for the question.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Tate?

SCRANTON-AMSTERDAM AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The next amendment to be considered is the amendment referred as to the Scranton-Amsterdam amendment to Proposal No. 7.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATES SCRANTON and AMSTERDAM offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 14), page 10, line 2, by inserting after "Former": and retired

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 14), page 10, line 7, by inserting after "A": former or

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes one of the proposers of the amendment, that will be either Chairman Amsterdam or Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Delegate Filson, who was the co-chairman in the sub-committee, will speak on it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Filson.

DELEGATE FILSON. Mr. President, this proposal is introduced for the purpose of clarifying line 2 on page 10 of Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 20.

On the second line, without this amendment, the article would read: "Former justices, judges and justices of the peace shall receive such compensation as shall be provided by law."

Throughout the State there were apparently some judges who felt that this did not take care of those judges who might conceivably retire voluntarily at the age of 68, or 67, or younger. In order to include that particular category of judges, it was suggested that this language be changed. In accordance with the committee's desire, this particular proposal was formulated so that it would now read, this is line 2, page 10, "Former and retired justices, judges and justices of the peace shall receive such compensation as shall be provided by law."

The second would be on line 7, which is subsection (c), actually, which would then read after the amendment, "A former or retired justice or judge may, with his consent . . ."

There is no substantive change actually in respect to this. It just gives the assurance that those judges who retired voluntarily before they reached the age of 70 would be under these provisions in the Constitution, and the committee recommends its endorsement by the delegates.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Whittum.

DELEGATE WHITTUM. May I interrogate the sponsor of this amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes. Proceed with your question.

DELEGATE WHITTUM. May I ask how this amendment and the proposal would affect judges who have been defeated for election or removed from office for incompetency?

DELEGATE FILSON. In Section (c) under the new amendment, which would read, "A former or retired justice or judge may, with his consent, be assigned by the Supreme Court to render such temporary judicial service as may be prescribed by the rules of the Supreme Court," it seemed that it would be self-evident that the rules of the Supreme Court should take care of any situation wherein someone who was defeated for election might want to be used in this category.

DELEGATE WHITTUM. So we can make it a part of the record, can we assume that the rules of the Supreme Court would not allow the service of a defeated judge or an incompetent judge?

DELEGATE FILSON. I can say this for the record, in connection with the sub-committee's proposal, this was very definitely the intention of the sub-committee, that judges who were defeated for re-election should not be used to sit on the bench again by way of appointment on temporary duty.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Clinger.

DELEGATE CLINGER. Mr. President, just to reiterate, the sub-committee used the word "retired" only because we thought that this would eliminate those who got on the bench or who ran for the 10 years and were defeated for re-election. However, there does seem to be some confusion on the part of many judges who feel that by not including the word "former" a man who ran and then did not choose to run again would be excluded from this provision.

I think it does clarify it and I think the Supreme Court rules would prevent a man who had been defeated or removed from being assigned to judicial services.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Woodring.

DELEGATE WOODRING. I think it should be said, additionally, in answer to Delegate Whittum's question that the present Constitution adopted by referendum about a year or two ago specifically excludes judges from additional service who have been defeated. That is already a constitutional provision, also implemented by Act of Assembly.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Keller.

DELEGATE J. W. KELLER. I would ask Delegate Filson whether he does not feel some concern about this provision using the word "former" without anything to clearly indicate in the language that it is not to include defeated judges or justices who have been removed?

DELEGATE FILSON. It is our feeling that they would not be used, but we left this to the wisdom of the rules which would be promulgated by the Supreme Court.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegates Scranton and Amsterdam?

FOHL AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fohl.

DELEGATE FOHL. Mr. President, I offer an amendment to Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

Delegate Fohl offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 13), page 8, lines 28 to 30, page 9, lines 1 to 21, by striking out all of said lines

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 13), page 9, line 22, by striking out "(e)" and inserting: (d)

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fohl for a statement in connection with his amendment.

DELEGATE FOHL. Mr. President, the thrust of this proposed amendment is very direct and not the least bit oblique. It would eliminate the merit retention plan for all judges.

The merit retention plan is known as the "yes-no" vote. I have heard it referred to as the Russian ballot and many other accolades. In most instances in this Commonwealth most counties currently abide by the sitting judge principle. There is, however, occasionally a rare case where what we refer to as a sitting judge is thought to be by many an unsatisfactory judge and he should thus be removed.

Under the merit retention plan, he could be removed by a vote of "no." I can think of some instances in recent years where I am not sure that that unsatisfactory judge would have, indeed, been removed on a straight "yes-no" vote.

I would just close this brief presentation by saying that if we have a judge who is not properly doing the job and we do want to remove him at the end of his term, I would hark back to the old political saying of, "You can't beat somebody with nobody." I submit that an alternative must be presented at the same time, rather than just a "yes-no" vote.

I urge adoption of this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Burkholder.

DELEGATE BURKHOLDER. The sub-committee on tenure discussed this matter very carefully and was almost unanimously of the opinion that in order to preserve and implement the sitting judge principle, the merit retention plan—that is the "yes-no" vote—should be adopted. If the pressures that can rise against a judge—which are of a political nature—are to be mitigated or reduced, then the "yes-no" vote is the way to remove those pressures.

We had the testimony of various people from other states where they used this system and they were unanimously of the opinion that it worked, that it was effective and that it reduced political influence on the judges who were in office.

The Committee is against the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Goldman.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. I rise in support of this amendment and I would like to suggest to my fellow delegates the reasons for my rising in its behalf.

For the last couple of days—perhaps, for this entire week—we have been involved in questions of whether or not people know our judges. We were involved with the question of whether or not people should be permitted to continue to elect their judges. It seems ridiculous in this day and age to continue having them elected by the people when they do not really know who they are. We have, by the effect of the proposals that we have put through, eliminated the right of the people to vote for their judges. However, in the merit plan we are again asking our people in the election of their judges to say "yes" or "no" as to whether or not a candidate or a judge has been good or bad.

I raise the question that if the people do not even know the man's name, how will they know whether he has been good or bad? The merit system in this respect is just absolutely ridiculous. If you do not know his name, how will you know whether he has been good or bad. That is No. 1.

No. 2, we come to the question of how are they possibly going to know whether he is good or bad when you have nothing to compare him with? Let us give the voters of Pennsylvania a little bit of credit for having some intelligence and let us afford the voters of Pennsylvania the right to make a choice between two candidates. Let us just not simply say is this man good or bad, but let us say is he good or bad by comparison with someone else. That is the whole thrust of this amendment, as I see it. Let us permit the voters to have a choice.

I support the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Silverman.

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. Mr. President, I rise in favor of the committee proposal and against the amendment.

This was discussed extensively in the committee and I just want to bring to light one method of judging judges on their past record that the person from Missouri told the committee. The bar that practices before the judge is polled and the lawyers who practice before him are asked what kind of a judge he is and whether they favor his retention. This poll is given wide publicity in the newspapers, so that the public is informed as to what the members of the bar think of this judge. According to the reports that we got, the poll of the bar carries great weight. I do not know whether this is done in other counties—in Philadelphia right now I do not believe this is done—but I think this would be a valuable tool to the voter in deciding whether a certain judge ought to be retained.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Sharp.

DELEGATE SHARP. I should like to add only one thing to what has been said here. I rise in opposition to this amendment. Although I have other thoughts concerning the selection of judges, let me say it seems to me that a judge who is initially in politics in order to get his commission is in a much different position than he who, having been on the bench, must still engage in politics to retain his commission.

It is much like the old saying of taking a boy out of the country and taking the country out of the boy. It seems to me if this amendment were adopted, what you would be doing is permitting judges, or forcing judges, to continue in political activity, while it seems to me that the lesser of two evils—by far the lesser of two evils—is to permit the judge to engage in the hurley-burley of politics and first be elected, but, under all circumstances, once he is elected do not make the pressures of politics such that he must continue in political activity and must engage in partisan politics.

I, therefore, urge that this amendment be defeated.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Tate.

DELEGATE TATE. Mr. President, I hope this body feels that it has now emasculated the committee proposal sufficiently on the selection of judges.

Therefore, I urge the defeat of the amendment and move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, I would not rise if I did not think that this was an extremely important part of the Judicial Article.

There is a phase of this whole question that has not been presented to this body, as far as I am concerned. This is the practical way in which judges are initially selected under the elective system at the local level and the practical way by which they run for re-election under the present system. I think it goes to the independence of the judiciary in Pennsylvania, it goes to the integrity of the judicial system in Pennsylvania, and it goes to the confidence, or lack thereof, that the people of Pennsylvania have in their judges.

Consider the plight of a lawyer who is practicing law and has a fairly lucrative and successful practice. Is he going to want to aspire to judicial office if he knows that 10 years hence he must submit his fortunes once again, not only to the people—and this does not particularly concern me too much—but to both political parties?

What effect does this have on a judge in office who may have a large family, who may have substantial financial commitments of a family nature, who knows as his term draws to an end he must go hand in hand to the chairmen of both parties and get their blessings?

Let us assume, further, that the chairman who was in that position when he first ran is no longer there. What does he do then? His fortunes are subject to the arbitrary whim of the leaders of both parties.

I have no objection to the working of the political process of the two-party system in Pennsylvania or in the United States, but I think it is misplaced when applied to this particular context. Consider a case of a lawyer who does not get organization support for re-election. He then must go out and raise money, he must go to lawyers, or they, who practice in his court must come to him and make contributions to his campaign. Does this make for the integrity and the independence of the judiciary? It does not. Does this make for confidence of the people for the judicial system in this State? It does not. These are very practical reasons which, in my judgment, argue in favor of the retention system.

I rise to strongly oppose this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hannum.

DELEGATE HANNUM. Mr. President, Vice President Casey has stated so well my sentiments that I see no reason why I should repeat them here. I oppose the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is this body ready for the question?

We have Delegate Fohl, who is the sponsor of the amendment.

DELEGATE FOHL. I just want to reiterate one thing that Delegate Goldman touched on. The very same people who yesterday and in previous days were telling us that the people are not knowledgeable enough to vote for their judges are now telling us that they are knowledgeable enough to vote "yes" or "no" a short time later. That line of reasoning I just cannot buy, and I do not think that the great overwhelming majority of good, competent judges would be affected by this. I think they would be retained under the sitting judge principle we have.

I again sincerely urge your adoption of this amendment.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the Fohl amendment?

GERBER AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The next amendment which we have ready is referred to as the Gerber amendment to Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE GERBER offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 14), page 10, line 2, by striking out "seventy" and inserting: seventy-two

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Since Delegate Gerber, the sponsor of the amendment is not here, the Chair recognizes Delegate Woodside.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. May I suggest this be postponed until Delegate Gerber returns?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. We think Delegate Gerber ought to forfeit on this amendment.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Cosetti. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE COSETTI. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE COSETTI. Did we not vote previously affirmatively on age 70?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. My understanding was that we had no amendment on that, it was part of the proposal.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Laputka. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE LAPUTKA. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE LAPUTKA. My question was the same as Delegate Cosetti's. I thought we considered this before and are we not under reconsideration?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We did not consider the age 70 specifically before. Frankly, I want the Convention to know that this is the last amendment we have to this section.

We have the Barron amendment, which was placed on the table and, if we could, it would be nice to get them out of the way, but I do not want to deprive Delegate Gerber if he wants to speak on it.

MOTION TO PLACE ON TABLE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Aberman.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I do not see Delegate Gerber here. While I am opposed to this amendment, may I suggest as a courtesy to Delegate Gerber that this amendment be placed on the table and give him the right to have it called up when he returns. The Gerber amendment, I think, will be taken care of by another amendment which I intend to propose to the schedule.

This problem is primarily directed to the people who presently sit in court who may not be 70 when their next term arises.

I think the proper place, if the chairman of the committee will agree with me, would be to deal with this entire problem as part of the schedule. This does not relate to an attempt to raise the mandatory retirement age, but attempts to resolve the problem of the people who are now justices. I would ask on that basis it be tabled and be considered at the same time as my amendment to the schedule.

I would ask the Governor and Delegate Amsterdam whether they would consider it in that manner.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I have no objection. I think Judge Woodside knows better. I think Judge Woodside knows Delegate Gerber meant this to be in the Constitution.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is Delegate Gerber in the vicinity?

DELEGATE MICHENER. I can speak for Delegate Gerber without his knowledge.

Delegate Gerber has a group of very beautiful women from his home district here. He has been very eager to provide them with a luncheon. I was supposed to go to that luncheon, but I begged out because of the debate here. He is in a state of frenzy right now trying to cover his tracks, and he should be excused at this moment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is there any objection to tabling the Gerber amendment until after lunch?

There does not seem to be any objection, so we will table the Gerber amendment.

DELEGATE BUTERA. I think the record should point out, in view of Delegate Michener's remarks, that Mr. Gerber's wife is with that group of lovely women.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair has no comment.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
The motion was agreed to.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scranton. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Are there any more amendments to Nos. 13 and 14? They come in at the last gasp and get all mixed up. Has anybody any other amendments forthcoming other than the Gerber amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Is Governor Scranton referring to old No. 14 or new No. 14? The numbers have all been changed. I have amendments to a section formerly numbered 15 and now numbered 14.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I am referring to the tenure of judges, justices, justices of the peace and to the compensation and retirement of judges, justices and justices of the peace.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I think I have no amendments to that.

BARRON AMENDMENT TAKEN FROM TABLE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The next amendment we are going to take up is the amendment that we had on the floor a couple of times and it is back on the floor again. That is known as the Barron amendment and I want you to know that it is being reproduced, but in the interest of saving time, with the consent of Delegate Barron, perhaps, he would not mind talking on the amendment and we will have it distributed before anybody votes on it.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Barron.

DELEGATE BARRON. Mr. President, the reason for the reproduction is that at the behest of counsel in the course of the discussion as to the legal intent here, counsel suggested that we change the language in the second line of the underlined language from "judicial district" to "Provide other than in a statewide court." Frankly, after seeing the words judicial district three times, at least, in that section as it is now amended, I thought that the words "judicial district" were commensurate with the occasion, but I bow in deference to learned counsel.

Let me just briefly review what we are trying to do here and, also, what we are not trying to do. On the appellate level, so far as appointment is concerned, as now adopted in the Kauffman amendment, this proposal of mine does not attempt to upset that in any way whatsoever. It seems to me to be manifestly clear that whether the Senate is in session or not, when there is an appellate court vacancy, it will have to await for final confirmation upon the reconvening of the Senate and the recuring of a two-thirds vote of the Senate on the Governor's appointment. On the district or local court level only, I propose that if the Senate is in session, as is now in Article IV, Section 8, of the Constitution adopted last spring, the Governor must submit during that time before the Senate rises a name and secure two-thirds approval. If he fails to do so and the Senate rises, no appointment.

The alternative is, if the Senate is not in session—this was really my purpose, and the problem I wanted to get at, because I related that if we ever go back to the idea that the Senate and House will rise in April, May or June, it, for particularly one-judge counties, creates a long period of vacancy in an office, and is most difficult to handle. This vacancy, actually, if it occurs two months before an election can create a vacancy for as long as 26 months.

I do know of one occasion where there was a vacancy for 15 months in an adjoining county to mine and the situation was terrible, despite the effort of two very able judges to pinch hit and fill in.

Let me point out that if you will look at the clean copy that is on your desk, on page 6 in Section 11 (b), including Delegate Kauffman's amendment, if the judge is appointed under the provisions that I now hope to insert in the Constitution, and generally, of course, if the city judge fails to file a declaration of intent, there must be an election. By virtue of the Governor's vest pocket appointment, in the event there should be such, this person could not be perpetuated in office merely on a retention ballot.

The language is in the alternative. It says if there is a vacancy in office, or if there is a failure to file a certificate by the district court judge, there must be an election.

If I have left anyone completely mystified, it is unintentional, and I would stand for such interrogation as may be appropriate, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, does anyone wish to be heard? Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I have had problems with this before, Mr. President, and I would ask Delegate Barron if he would kindly try to clear up some of the things that are bothering me.

I now have in my hand Article IV, Section 8, of the Constitution, at least, as it is reproduced in 1967, and in it it would indicate that if there is a vacancy in a judicial office—in a judicial office, of course, I understand you except out "other than in statewide courts"—if the vacancy shall happen during the session of the Senate, the Governor shall nominate to the Senate before their final adjournment a proper person to fill said vacancy.

First of all, may I ask, Delegate Barron, suppose a vacancy occurs two or three days before the Senate shall go into recess, what happens under your proposal?

DELEGATE BARRON. I understand, of course, that there has been no case law on this newly adopted section. My interpretation is that it will be a very unfortunate circumstance, but the Governor will be unable to appoint.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Consequently, the office could continue to go vacant indefinitely, is that correct?

DELEGATE BARRON. It could, sir.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Let me put another case to you, suppose the Senate were not to recess, or were not scheduled to recess, perhaps, for two or three weeks, would that not mean that the post would have to be filled with phenomenal haste, before, for example, the local bar association, or anyone else, could be consulted on the qualifications of the candidate?

DELEGATE BARRON. This is entirely possible. I would suggest that the filling of the vacancy in this situation is a whole lot better than the present situation as proposed in the language we now have before us in Section 11 (b) where the same situation would have to occur and, if it should have to be filled when the Senate has risen, there could be no filling of the vacancy.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, again returning to Article IV, Section 8, it would seem to me that it spells out very clearly here that he requires two-thirds of the Senate, that is to say, the Governor requires two-thirds of the Senate, and that is of all of the members of the Senate, to appoint the Secretary of the Commonwealth, the Attorney General, the Superintendent of Public Instruction and certain other persons.

We wander down through Article IV, Section 8, and it says that he shall nominate to the Senate, if the vacancy occurs during their session, a name to be filled. Is there anything in the following language that indicates after he nominates to the Senate a candidate for a judicial office that it requires the two-thirds?

DELEGATE BARRON. I would say that in sub-Section (b) the answer is, no.

However, it is clearly, in my humble judgment, provided in sub-Section (a), because it says in the lines which I have here "of such other officers as may be specified by law, shall be subject to consent of two-thirds of the members elected to the Senate."

Surely, the Constitution is a part of the law, as would be any other office, and it would be required to be filled in such a manner as provided in sub-Section (a) of Section 8, Article IV.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. So, then, sir, my final question is this:

Under the new rules, as it were, in which the Senate does not really meet just every two years, but is considered to be continuous—and I do not have my finger on that at the moment, but I understand that is one of the effects of one of the recent amendments—when is the Senate out of session specifically under your proposal?

DELEGATE BARRON. Mr. President, my answer to you on this subject is, whether or not the State Senate as a continuing body has, in my humble judgment, not been settled by law. In the event that it is a continuing body and that such law is satisfied, so long as its continuance is in existence and it is in session—note the emphasis on the word session—the situation would apply as mandated here, and that would require the two-thirds consent of the Senate, in addition.

If, on the other hand, the law as is, as it has been heretofore in my humble judgment, that when the Senate or House rise their life expires at that time, it would permit the interim appointment.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I have one final question, if I may.

There is no doubt in the gentleman's mind, I do not think, or much doubt in anyone else's, that the Senate hereafter will be in session most of the year every year, is that not correct?

DELEGATE BARRON. My crystal ball is cloudy. Let us face it. We have seen a most difficult situation this past year and the past several years. Certainly I am optimistic enough to hope for some improvement as to the length of time consumed. However, I am satisfied, in any event, that we have provided with reasonable security to all persons' interest a good method of filling interim appointments by this proposal.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Well, Mr. President, my problem recurs and that is this:

If the Senate is going to be in session, and I think it will be in session most of the time, does it not then create the odd situation in which a vacancy which occurs while they are in recess, but which would be filliable while they are in session, is treated in a special category, whereas all other vacancies in judicial office require two-thirds of the Senate?

Your proposal would require none at all, is that correct?

DELEGATE BARRON. For an interim appointment when the Senate is not in session, your answer is exactly correct.

However, may I point out to you this marked difference, the alternative is in the appellate courts. There we have now adopted this morning a situation where there will be an initial appointment by the Governor to be confirmed by two-thirds of the Senate. I do not provide for any interim ideas in this area, because I feel that none are necessary.

My reasons are these, I think it would be ludicrous to have the Governor propose what I would call a vest pocket or interim appointment, have the Senate come back and refuse his appointee.

I further point out that the likelihood of more than two vacancies occurring at any one time is, in my judgment, extremely remote, and the usual situation will be there will be only one. Five judges or six judges, have in the past and can in the future, carry on the work of the appellate courts.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. My question was, and I will put it more directly, your entire amendment is pegged on when the vacancy occurs, not when the appointment is made, is that not correct?

DELEGATE BARRON. Yes, sir, that is right, because the use of the timing of the appointment has been subject to some criticism in the past.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. All right.

DELEGATE BARRON. I think that the fact should not be debatable in any way that when a judge dies a vacancy occurs, when a judge resigns, a vacancy occurs, and when he is retired, or whenever he may be disqualified under the provisions we are about to come to, the vacancy occurs as of a given day.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Then, if a vacancy should occur in any judicial office on January 1, 1969, let us say, when the Senate does not happen to be in session that day, but they are in session the following day, that would give the Governor the privilege to go ahead and make the appointment to fill the vacancy that occurred on January 1st without consulting the Senate at all?

DELEGATE BARRON. As I understand this, Mr. President, you are confusing recess and the end of a session. A session continues, as the sessions of this Convention have continued from day to day, to day to day, and we have recessed overnight, very shortly overnight on recent days, but, nonetheless, we have been in recess. We have, however, in my humble judgment, and I believe it is the opinion of counsel, been in continuous session since December 1, 1967, and presumptively will be as such until February 29, 1968.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Would it then follow that the Senate by simply, instead of adjourning altogether, by recessing for a period of a month or six weeks could then defeat the purpose of your amendment?

DELEGATE BARRON. Yes, it would, as it does today.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. After that interlocutory intermission, I think everybody is utterly confused at this point, at least, a number of the people around here are. I would like to try, with Delegate Barron, to straighten this out. My understanding is it is a very simple thing, really.

With the result of the Kauffman amendment, the whole committee's thinking concerning this particular issue no longer pertains and, therefore, it is up in the air to do with it as you wish. Under the Kauffman amendment the statewide judges would be selected by the Governor, confirmed by two-thirds of the Senate, and that is it.

Consequently, it seems very clear to me that there should not be an interim appointment of statewide judges under those circumstances, because, obviously, you want the Senate to have their two-thirds, and this is proper under that kind of an arrangement, and Delegate Barron's statement does not change that at all.

What it does do—you can interrupt me, Dave, if I am wrong—it gives the Governor an interim appointment on local judicial district judges in the event that the Senate adjourns in a given year.

It is true that in this last year, and recently, they have been in session for a considerable length of time, but, heaven only knows, in the next hundred years I sincerely hope they will change that system, as they have in New York State, which is a state that has just as much business for the legislature as we do here in Pennsylvania. They normally have their sessions over in New York, because they do all their committee work ahead of time, by the middle of May. If this were to occur, you would have a long period of time without a judge in a judicial district.

I say openly to you, I think this proposal of Delegate Barron's, in view of the Kauffman amendment and in view of what you now have decided, is very much in order.

I sincerely hope you will support it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I would like to interrogate Delegate Barron, please.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. He will stand for interrogation. You may proceed.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. President, is the Senate in recess at present?

DELEGATE BARRON. I am not aware of the Senate's affairs. I have been kept busy enough in this Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I do not think he heard your question. You had better repeat it.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I am informed that the Senate is presently in recess, reliably informed, and I, therefore, ask you, if during this period while the Senate is in recess a vacancy occurs in a judicial office, in a judicial district office, the Governor could then appoint to fill that vacancy without any consent from the Senate, is that correct?

DELEGATE BARRON. You are asking me a question of technical expertise, which I frankly do not have at my command.

My entire thrust in this endeavor was to follow the law as it has existed heretofore and has just recently been redrafted and rephrased. Should you wish an inquiry of that nature, consult someone with the expertise required on this subject. I cannot give you the answer to that.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Let us assume for the moment that the answer to my question is, yes, that the Governor can appoint. The question I was leading up to is, how long does that appointment last?

DELEGATE BARRON. As it is now provided, the appointee shall be elected to the office on the next election day. If it would happen today, in 1968, the term would terminate, and I believe judge's terms terminate on the first day of January of an even year, and the election for the office would be held in the municipal year of 1969.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. As I understand Section 8, it reads, he may during the recess of the Senate, fill vacancies happening in offices to which he appoints by granting commissions expiring at the end of its session. Would not such a judge's commission expire at the end of the Senate session?

DELEGATE BARRON. Just be careful, you laid as a predicate the suggestion which I took from you to be law in an area I frankly did not know, and that was, I assumed that you considered the present session of the Senate in recess, a period wherein there could be an interim appointment, and, of course, this is not the suggestion that you are now making in response.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. It is my understanding that the Senate is presently in recess. I got that understanding from Senator Van Sant, who says it is in recess.

If it is in recess and an appointment is currently made—and let us not tie my question to Senator Van Sant's answer—if an appointment is made while the Senate is not in session, while the Senate is in recess—I am reading the language of Section 8 (b) of Article IV, it says "During the recess of the Senate the Governor may fill vacancies happening in offices to which he appoints by granting commissions expiring at the end of the session."

Is that applicable here? Is that language applicable to this situation under your amendment?

DELEGATE BARRON. I, frankly, think you have two things confused. I think that is the reason for your suggestion about recess. As I understand it, the session still has life but has not risen without a day. Consequently, it is my personal judgment, but I do not suggest this as an opinion on the law, that at this moment the Governor could not make an interim appointment. I may be utterly in error, but I do not believe I am. I believe, to the contrary, that you are in error.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Let me take another illustration.

After the session adjourns this year for the year, if a vacancy then occurs and the Governor makes an appointment, how long would the appointee hold office?

DELEGATE HOOK. While this discussion is going on, is a motion for recess until 2:15 in order so that these two men can get together and compare their facts?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think a motion for recess is in order.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I withdraw that question.

I have one other question to ask Delegate Barron, which is not a difficult question of law.

Delegate Barron has stated, in answer to a prior question, that he did not include statewide courts in this amendment because he felt the work of a court of seven judges would not be hampered by a vacancy of limited duration which gave the court only six judges. May I ask Delegate Barron whether he would amend his motion so that it does not apply to courts which have seven or more judges?

I should like to point out in support of this that I think his principal concern is with the counties or judicial districts that have a limited number of judges. I think he is overlooking the effect this would have, particularly in Philadelphia, where an interim appointment is given and has the effect, by reason of bar association practices, of virtually assuring the appointee's reelection even though he has not been confirmed by two-thirds of the Senate. There is no distinction in Philadelphia, as I understand it, in the bar's treatment of a judge who has been appointed to office without the confirmation of the Senate. There is no difference in that situation from the one in which he has been confirmed by two-thirds of the Senate. Therefore, I ask Delegate Barron whether he would limit his amendment to courts which have seven or less judges.

DELEGATE BARRON. I have not given your problem sufficient study at this time. I am frankly interested in providing a general concept, and at this particular moment I cannot accept your amendment. I certainly would be happy to consider it and discuss the problem with you further.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE CHAIR

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Before you leave, the Chair wants to make this request:

This afternoon we are going to consider Sections 15 and 16 of the judiciary article and anyone that has an amendment in connection with Sections 15 and 16, I request you, sincerely, to bring it forward, because we have asked the staff to stay so those amendments can be prepared and so that we can proceed to terminate discussion on the amendment process in connection with the Judiciary Article this afternoon.

COMMITTEE MEETING

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hook.

DELEGATE HOOK. Style and Drafting has a meeting at lunch. They should have an opportunity to be a bit longer, so that is why I make the motion for 2:15 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair has heard two motions for a recess. Unless there is objection, we will recess until 2:15 p.m.

The Chair hears none, and the Convention is now in recess until 2:15 p.m.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time of recess having expired, the Convention will come to order.

WIFE OF DELEGATE GERBER AND GROUP OF FRIENDS FROM PLYMOUTH TOWNSHIP WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Mrs. Gerber is now present and I am going to ask her to stand so the delegates can give her a warm, cordial welcome.

With her are a group of friends from Plymouth Township, which I can tell you is the garden spot of Pennsylvania. Will you stand up and we will give all those ladies a cordial welcome.

Before we return to the amendment under discussion before we left for lunch, I would like to call on Delegate Gerber for a statement in connection with his amendment.

GERBER AMENDMENT WITHDRAWN

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, pursuant to the amendment that was drafted with my signature, I have had an opportunity to review the issue to which I had addressed myself there, which was to be able to avoid doing any injustice to the incumbents of our present appellate court, with particularity to the Superior Court of Pennsylvania.

I have been advised that this problem could more easily, and more properly, be achieved in the schedule rather than freezing certain language in the Constitution itself.

Therefore, Mr. President, I ask permission to withdraw the amendment at this time and proceed on that issue at the time of the schedule, in order that we do not do any inequity to our incumbents in the Superior Court.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Therefore, we can consider the amendment withdrawn?

DELEGATE GERBER. Yes, Mr. President.

BARRON AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Before the luncheon recess, we had under discussion the Barron amendment. I suppose we should continue discussing the Barron amendment, and I now recognize a man standing right at that same place before lunch, Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, I wonder if the proponent would take time out. I realize he is all-knowing, but it would be appropriate if he would again read the last sentence in Section 8, sub-Section (b), Article IV, of the present Constitution which relates to the situation of a vacancy in elective office.

I am in favor of this amendment provided the proponent will take a little time and explain it.

DELEGATE BARRON. I would be happy to, Mr. President.

The last sentence of sub-Section (b) of Section 8, Article IV, of the Constitution, as amended May 16, 1967, provides as follows:

"In the case of a vacancy in an elective office, a person shall be elected to the office on the next election day appropriate to the office, unless the vacancy happens within two calendar months immediately preceding the election day, in which case the election shall be held on the second succeeding election day appropriate to the office."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scott.

DELEGATE SCOTT. Mr. President, may I have the privilege of interrogating Delegate Barron?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. He will stand for interrogation. You may proceed.

DELEGATE SCOTT. Delegate Barron, does this apply to local courts only? I think this should be clarified for some of the delegates who do not understand it clearly.

DELEGATE BARRON. Yes, sir. Every intent I made in this direction this morning and now this afternoon is meant toward that, and only that.

DELEGATE SCOTT. If the Senate failed to act on this appointment, would this postpone this interim appointment for approximately three months to 28 months or to the next municipal election under 11 (b)? Am I correct in thinking this?

DELEGATE BARRON. If the vacancy occurs while the Senate is in session, the answer is, yes. If the vacancy occurs when the Senate is not in session—and I am now as a result of some homework prepared to define that—the answer is, no.

DELEGATE SCOTT. This seat could be vacant anywhere from three to 28 months, in other words, is that correct?

DELEGATE BARRON. 28 is a little long. My own calculation is, because it is pinned down to two months ahead of election, that it would be up to 26½ months.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, it is my impression that there is now being prepared an amendment to this amendment to limit the application of this to those jurisdictions to which the problem is real, that is to say, in those jurisdictions in which there are five or fewer judges. I ask that that amendment to the amendment be distributed before action is taken on the amendment proper.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand your impression is probably correct, that there is an amendment to the amendment being prepared. The Chair has not received it or seen it as yet.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. Chairman, are we going to await the presentation of the amendment to the amendment? If so, I will refrain from speaking at this time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. As far as the Chair is concerned, the Chair would like to urge you to continue your discussion on this so we will not lose any time, because, if I may say at this time, this morning I suggested that we go to lunch at approximately between 12:30 and 2:00 p.m., and I also suggested that we have a recess for dinner at about 5:30 p.m. I have had many, many delegates come up to me and say that because of a dinner that had been scheduled this evening, they would prefer to work until around 7:00 o'clock and then recess for the day.

Frankly, this is something that is entirely up to the delegates. I only say, if we move on and accomplish our work by that time, we are that much further ahead of the game. So we will just work along to see how far we can get, and then it will be up to you to make a decision.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Is the answer to my question "yes" or "no?" Are we proceeding with this amendment, or will we wait for the amendment to the amendment to come out?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are proceeding with this amendment, unless I hear to the contrary.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. If we are proceeding with this amendment, I would like to speak against the amendment.

I am sure Delegate Barron's county, and other counties, have a problem that needs a solution. On the other hand, the same problem does not exist in many other counties and the solution which he proposes for all counties would work an injustice in some of the larger counties. In those counties in which the number of judges is—for example, as in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia—so numerous that the loss of one judge is not quite so serious, we already have other provisions of the Judicial Article. Under the new unification of the courts, it would be permissible and possible for the judges of the Supreme Court or the administrative judges to assign other judges into the courts and relieve that problem to some extent.

But what happens if we pass Delegate Barron's amendment is that it is entirely possible for the Governor to make appointments for vacancies that occur—I do not know whether the term used is recess, or adjournment, whatever it is, but it is possible for the Governor to make appointments under certain circumstances without any consent or advice from the Senate. It seems to me this body has voted overwhelmingly several times to add a two-thirds consent of the Senate to any appointive power on the part of the Governor with respect to judges.

In Philadelphia other provisions of this article of the Judiciary Committee's proposal will provide for the selection of a large number of judges for Philadelphia to take office on the effective date of this constitutional revision. It certainly is possible under those circumstances for those appointments to be made by the Governor without the consent of the Senate. In Philadelphia it has been our experience that once judges are appointed to the bench, if they hold office for a few months, the Bar seems to treat them in the same category as if they had held office for many years and treat them as sitting judges if they pass a plebiscite among lawyers. I think the evil to be done in Philadelphia and some of the other counties where there is no such need far exceeds the advantage that is to be gained from the smaller counties.

If the amendment I heard about is to be prepared and if it would take Philadelphia and some of the other larger judicial districts out of this amendment, or make them unaffected by this amendment, then, certainly, I would be for the amendment, but as it presently stands, I must urge all of you to vote against this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone else wish to be heard?

The Chair recognizes Delegate Manderino.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. Mr. President, I should like the opportunity to interrogate the proposer, Delegate Barron.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation. He has not disappointed us yet.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. Mr. President, as a result of the homework you did, may I ask, in Section (b) of Article IV what does "recess" mean and what does "until the end of the session" mean? Is it that the qualification is good until the end of the session?

DELEGATE BARRON. Let me answer the latter first, if I may.

The qualification "until the end of the session" means a situation where there are officers who are commissioned on that basis. I realize in discussing it this morning I may have lent some confusion unnecessarily. That does not apply to judges.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. What does "recess of the Senate" mean?

DELEGATE BARRON. May I say, Delegate Manderino, in deference to your position as Dean of the distinguished Duquesne Law School, I have carefully refrained from stating my opinion as a lawyer as compared with my advocacy as a delegate on a proposal, but I will drop that now and say that it is my legal conclusion that when the Senate goes into session it may recess from day to day and adjourn at the end of the day to a day. Until it adjourns sine die, it is in session and the Governor may not appoint during such period of time without the approval of two-thirds of the Senate. When the Senate adjourns sine die, the interim appointment situation comes into play.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. In other words, if the Senate were to take a week off, that is not a recess because they have not adjourned sine die?

DELEGATE BARRON. Yes, it is a recess, but it is not the end of a session until they adjourn sine die. During such recess the Governor may not appoint someone without the two-thirds vote of the Senate.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. I am still confused. This article does state, does it not, that appointments can be made during recess of the Senate and, if a recess is going home for a week, would there not be a recess?

DELEGATE BARRON. It is my informed opinion that the recess, as stated in the Constitution, refers to total and complete recess following adjournment sine die. There is case law—no citations of which I can give you here—to that point.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. Assuming that "recess" means only that period which follows adjournment sine die, is that correct?

DELEGATE BARRON. Yes.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. If that is so, another amendment to the Constitution, Article II, last year—

DELEGATE BARRON. Section 4.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. Yes, Section 4, stated that the General Assembly would be a continuing body during the entire term for which the Representatives and Senators are elected. Can there be such a thing as adjournment sine die if the Senate is a continuing body for the entire four-year term?

DELEGATE BARRON. Yes. In my professional opinion, and also as a delegate here, Delegate Manderino, I suggest if you continue reading Article II, Section 4, as it is now amended, it provides that the Legislature may be called into special session by the Governor on address of its members if he believes the public policy requires such. I suggest to you that it is my understanding—and I believe that it is sound—that the body is continuing for a period of two years during the term of the representatives. This means that in the first year of the term, an odd year, if there is legislation pending, it will be carried over to the even year, but in the even year, such legislation cannot be extended beyond that. However, the continuing body concept does not relate to the concept of continuing session. If this was the intent, there would be no reason whatsoever of providing in the same section for the Governor to call a special session as distinguished from a general session, convened, I believe, the first or second Tuesday of January.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. With that interpretation, might I ask this, if the Senate were in recess, as it has been defined, and there was a judicial vacancy, could not the Governor call the Senate back to Harrisburg to confirm his appointment?

DELEGATE BARRON. Yes.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. In other words, even under the present Constitution without this amendment there need not be any interim period without a judge. Once the Governor has made up his mind on the appointment, he could call the Senate back into session for one day to approve that appointment, could he not?

DELEGATE BARRON. He could. The wisdom of doing such a thing is questionable in my judgment, but that is a matter of debate.

JUDGE LEE F. SWOPE WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I would like you to yield for just a second in order that the Chair may introduce what I consider a special guest, because he has two reasons to be introduced.

One, he just happens to be the President Judge of Orphans' Court of Dauphin County, and more than happenstance that he is, also, the son of our distinguished Delegate Swope, so I am going to ask Judge Swope if he would stand up and be recognized so that we can give him our warm cordial greeting.

I want you to know that we are very, very proud of your dad. He is doing a great job, and we are happy that he is with us.

BANES AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Banes.

DELEGATE BANES. Mr. President, I should like to offer an amendment to the Barron amendment here on the floor.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Barron to Committee Proposal No. 7?

DELEGATE BANES offered the following amendment to the amendment offered by Delegate Barron:

Amend page 1, line 6 of the amendments, by adding after "Statewide court,": in a judicial district having less than five judges,

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Banes.

DELEGATE BANES. The dialogue which we just heard between Delegate Barron and Delegate Manderino points out the serious problems which are involved in the proposed Barron amendment. I am sure all of us appreciate the difficulties which our small counties have in the event there is a vacancy in the office of judge. The effect of the Barron amendment would be that if the Legislature was not in session it would circumvent completely the Kauffman amendment, which was adopted this morning by this body.

I should, therefore, like to offer an amendment at this time which would limit the effect of the Barron amendment to a judicial district having less than five judges.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. In accordance with our procedures, we have to confine our discussion to the amendment to the amendment, in other words, to the Banes amendment to the Barron amendment, and we will vote on the Banes amendment first.

Now, is there anybody that wants to be heard either pro or con on the Banes amendment?

DELEGATE BLOOM. The only thing I want to say after listening to all the complicated arguments in connection with this amendment, it seems to me if you have a unified system such as we hope to have at the end of this Convention to offer to the people, that situation can be taken care of, because a neighboring judge, or a judge from some other district, can be sent in there at any time to take care of that particular situation. I think that we are just adding a lot of verbiage to the Constitution that need not be, and I am going to ask for the question.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand what you are saying is that you want to close the debate and move the question in connection with the amendment to the amendment, which is the one under consideration?

DELEGATE BLOOM. That is right, Mr. President.

DELEGATE CROOP. Second the motion.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I believe that Delegate Bloom's observations are germane, indeed, to the amendment as a whole, but clearly not germane to the Banes amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. He has made a motion and it has been seconded by Delegate Croop.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the motion?

It was agreed to.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment being offered by Delegate Banes?

WOODSIDE AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, the last maneuver was so successful that I think we will try it again. Unless there are questions with regard to the articles under discussion, we will simply invite those that have amendments to put them in at this time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I agree with everything the Chairman has stated except the term "maneuver." We are ready for the first amendment and that is the amendment offered by Delegate Woodside.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Woodside to Committee Proposal No. 7?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 15), page 10, line 26, by inserting after "salary": and expenses

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Woodside.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, this is a correction of language more than anything else. There is a reference on line 25 of page 10, "no justice, judge or justice of the peace shall be paid or accept for the performance of any judicial duty or for any service connected with his office, any fee, emolument or perquisite other than the salary provided by law."

There have been cases that have held that expenses are emoluments or perquisites. There are also cases which hold the other way.

Inasmuch as expenses may be considered emoluments and perquisites, certainly it was not the intent of the committee to cover expenses as part of the emoluments and perquisites, it seems clear the word "salary" should have added to it "and expenses," because there are many occasions where expenses of judges traveling in other districts are provided by law, and they, of course, should be permitted and paid. That is the purpose of it. It is very simple, it is nothing important.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Curran, who is representing the committee.

DELEGATE CURRAN. Mr. President, we would refer to Judge Woodside's past experience with expenses, and agree to this particular amendment as satisfactory.

The question recurs,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

BURKHOLDER AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Burkholder.

DELEGATE BURKHOLDER. I also have an amendment to the proposal, Mr. President.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE BURKHOLDER offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 15), page 10, line 23, by striking out "or" and inserting a comma

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 15), page 10, line 23, by inserting after "peace": or any officer serving process or enforcing orders, judgments or decrees of any court or justice of the peace

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 15), page 10, line 25, by inserting after "office,": or employment,

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Baldus in connection with what we are referring to as the Burkholder amendment.

DELEGATE BALDUS. Mr. President, the purpose of this amendment is to broaden the scope and protections provided by Section 15 (c). This is in line with the amendment adopted by this body several days ago, the O'Donnell amendment, which was an amendment to Section 17 under judicial administration which included within the scope in the authority of the Supreme Court's administration and control, constables.

Section 15(c) states, "No justice, judge or justice of the peace shall be paid or accept for the performance of any duty or for any service connected with his office, any fee, emolument or perquisite other than the salary provided by law."

That is, all judges and squires must be paid salaries.

The purpose of this amendment is to expand the coverage of this requirement to include other important participants in the judicial process, particularly at the lower levels, that is, the man who serves the papers, the processes that are issued by the squires and, also, the men who execute on the judgments and enforce the orders of the squires. These constables are not constitutional officers, they are established by legislation and, in the same way the squires today are paid by fees, these men as well are paid by fees.

It is the purpose of this amendment to include the prohibition on fees to these individuals, because the way the situation now stands under the proposal it is unlawful to pay fees to squires, but the constables are permitted to be paid fees.

You may ask, why does this create a problem? The problem is that there are potentials for abuse and I will point to two of these potentials. One is, the difficulty with the fee is that the man will perform his judicial duty not because he believes that it is proper to do it, but to obtain the fee.

If you permit one person to remain in the minor judicial process who will benefit from the amount of business he gets, then you create the dangers we have in the present fee system. Furthermore, particularly with underprivileged people and people who cannot comprehend, the fee system is a potential for abuse, overcharging and mischarging. This amendment would upgrade the constables of our Commonwealth. It would require that the Legislature enact a salary for them and give them the same dignity and stature that we are attempting in this proposal to give to the entire minor judiciary. There is, I believe, widespread support for the reforms we are adopting for the minor judiciary to extend throughout the minor judiciary and to include the constables.

I believe this proposal, which would prohibit the payment of fees to any officer serving process or enforcing orders, judgments or decrees of any court, would accomplish that end. It does not abolish the constables, it increases their stature, and I ask for your support for this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barry.

DELEGATE BARRY. I will yield to Delegate Reynolds.

DELEGATE REYNOLDS. Mr. President, this was brought up in our Judiciary Committee at a late date, and it was suggested that we handle it directly on the floor by the co-chairman of the Committee, and that is why it is here now.

I am very much of the opinion, if we do not help to upgrade the constables, we are leaving a big hole in the gap so far as this Judiciary Article is concerned.

My experience of six years as a magistrate was that most of the criticism that was brought on the magisterial system was because of a few bad constables, and they were mainly made bad by the fees they were getting.

I am of the opinion, if these fees were paid directly into the state government, or the county government, or whatever place it should go, and they collect a salary commensurate with the work that they are doing, it will raise the standards of the constable and will do the entire jurisdiction of Pennsylvania great good. I do not take it that this is any reflection on the constables. I just think it is a bad system. If we are going to do away with the fee system, let us do away with it altogether and lift everybody up on a high standard.

Pennsylvania needs this branch to be lifted up, and I believe the constables will certainly share and fare better under this.

So I ask that we vote for this amendment to help again raise the standards of the judiciary in the State of Pennsylvania.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will recognize Delegate Tate.

DELEGATE TATE. Mr. President, this subject was brought to my attention some weeks ago. I was disappointed to find out when the Judiciary Committee reported, that it, apparently, had not included something on this subject in its proposal, and I hope it was just an oversight that might be corrected here now.

In Philadelphia and, perhaps, other parts of the State this situation has long needed correction. It is only within recent years, after some investigations we had in Philadelphia and with the greatly increased interest, much of it brought about by civic agencies and anti-poverty groups, that abuses of the constable system have been brought to general public attention.

We do know that we do need to upgrade the constable system, and I think this is one very good way to do it.

If I just might quote from an editorial which appeared in last evening's Bulletin on this very subject, quite timely and, coincidentally, I think, it might put in perspective what the situation is, at least, in Philadelphia and, perhaps, in other parts of the State. It says, "The activities of constables in Philadelphia in recent years make just as dreary reading as the history of the magistrates whose orders the constables execute. Constables serve 'paper'—subpoenas, warrants on scofflaws in traffic cases, eviction notices, they can sell a debtor's property up to the amount owed, all for a fee under a schedule written by the legislature. Some of these elected, quasi-law-enforcement officers ignore the schedule, charging whatever they can collect on the strength of their badges in neighborhoods where debtors and renters don't know their rights, hence are easy prey to threats and exploitation. In a '67 study the Philadelphia Housing Association said that much of this unwitting surrender to exploitation comes from the confusion in the slum-dweller's mind 'between the constable's public role as an attache of the magistrates' courts' in executing eviction notices and 'his private role as the rent collection agent of the landlords . . .' It is this confusion some constables have exploited to collect back rent for landlords, all the while presenting themselves as 'court officers on magistrates' business."

In my opinion, the record indicates that this is a correct assessment, at least, insofar as Philadelphia is concerned, and I hope very strongly that this body will adopt this very, very necessary amendment at this time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Croop.

DELEGATE CROOP. Mr. President, I do not quarrel with the statement that it is necessary in Philadelphia, or, perhaps, in Allegheny County and in Pittsburgh, or other large urban centers. However, certainly if I were to go home from this Convention with this kind of a penalty put on the taxpayers of the rural counties, I would hate to think whether I could live there. Many of our process servers, many of our constables, are local police officers who are under full salary from the boroughs or municipalities for which they work.

This is given to them as some extra-curricular activities to help raise their salaries as police officers. If we put all of these constables out in the rural area where they may have only one or two tasks a week, or even less, on a salary basis, we certainly would bankrupt the rural counties. They could not pay it, frankly. It is not possible or workable out in the rural counties. I have not talked to any of the delegates from the other rural counties, but I am certain my circumstance is no different than theirs and that this is an impossibility.

As I say, I have no question but what this may be a necessity in the larger urban centers, but certainly out in the rural counties we could not stand from a tax standpoint to pay the cost of these salaries. I speak against the amendment because it is too extensive and too broad. It takes in the entire state. It would be an impossibility for us to handle anything like this.

I do not want to go back to my county with some kind of burden composed of the salary of the constables in my small county, so I urge the defeat of the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, this particular matter I do not recall being discussed—or, at least, at any length—at any of the meetings which I attended in the Judiciary Committee. I would speak to it as it presently exists and would possibly be in favor of it if there was not this tremendous down-grading of the constables per se. Where we come from constables do perform the high office of being a peace officer. They have trouble getting constables, they do not run for the job. In the further discussion of this, if the horrible mess which you have in Philadelphia and the miserable conditions which exist in Allegheny County are not continuously brought to our attention, some of us will have to vote against it. I want to be for this, but I do think you overburden the easement, so to speak.

I know, if this becomes the law, we will have a body of peace officers in this State who will have no express emoluments and who must look to the Legislature. That is all right with me, but, after we leave this particular field of battle, we do not want to be left without our peace officers.

I am hoping that implementing this will be something in the schedule providing for the referral of salaries, perhaps, for our constables to the schedule, so that the Legislature may properly appropriate it. I am opposed to the fee system from top to bottom. I served as a district attorney, and I can tell you that even in those cities where they had a paid police department we depended upon our constables. Our state police—and we do have a major patrol located in our county—would be helpless without the present constabulary force that we have which is raised from among our citizens.

I am not speaking for an archaic system. We have had constables as long as I can remember, but I do think we should have spent a little time on this. I will be in favor of this amendment, but I will ask that the proponents of this amendment do a little more work and tell us before the vote is taken that they have taken care of us in the schedule.

At the same time I would like to say this to the body, much of the evil we talk about does not come from the office of the justice of the peace or the constable, it comes from the misery and the poverty of the people that they deal with. When a man is arrested on Saturday night, he is arrested on Saturday night. It is his miserable poverty that keeps him in jail over the weekend. He just cannot put up bail. If the Lord alone was the justice of the peace or the constable serving the law, he could not be helped very much under our present law.

Now, this is it. This is a misery court, but our constables are peace officers. I feel I can go back to Lawrence County and face a few fine men who serve in that office. We rout out our bad ones, they do not come back a second time to pick the pockets of the poor. That is the function of the lawyer up our way and not the layman constable.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Keller.

DELEGATE J. W. KELLER. Will Delegate Baldus stand for interrogation?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. He will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE J. W. KELLER. Did you and the other signatories to this amendment give any consideration to limiting the number of constables?

DELEGATE BALDUS. No, we did not. We figured this was a proper function for the Legislature, since the constables are presently a legislative office.

DELEGATE J. W. KELLER. Do you have any idea how many constables and deputy constables there are in the Commonwealth?

DELEGATE BALDUS. I believe there are constables elected in the same districts where squires are presently elected, and I believe there are deputy constables appointed by the constables in those districts. There are a great number in the Commonwealth today.

DELEGATE J. W. KELLER. This would be in excess, then, of the 4,500 JPs we have been talking about?

DELEGATE BALDUS. Yes, I believe it is. One of the difficulties in determining a number is that when the size and business of the magisterial districts will depend on the number of constables that will be needed to devote their time exclusively to the service of process and execution of judgments.

DELEGATE J. W. KELLER. Have you given any consideration to what kind of salary you are talking about in your amendment?

DELEGATE BALDUS. We discussed the question of salary and speculated on the possibility of putting that in the schedule, but again we decided, in contrast to the treatment of the squires, which are constitutional officers, it would be better to leave that to the Legislature.

I believe the Legislature, with a better comprehension and understanding of the classes of magisterial districts and the amount of work that would be involved in these jobs, would be more competent to make a determination of the proper and fair salary.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Keller.

DELEGATE J. W. KELLER. Mr. President, I feel the same concern as was expressed by Delegate Croop. There is a vast number of constables. Some do a very excellent job and many do nothing at all. I do not know why they run for the office, but in my county there are only a few constables who are actually working. I am in favor of the salary system as opposed to the fee system, generally, but it seems to me that until we have some more definite information as to what kind of a burden we are imposing upon either the counties or the Commonwealth this amendment is fraught with a great deal of financial danger.

I oppose the amendment at this time and in this form.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hook.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, I rise in support of this proposal for numerous reasons. One of the basic reasons is that we came to this Convention to upgrade the judiciary. One of the points that the committee did not consider was this problem of what to do with the constables. In every other area of the Constitution that we discussed on salaries and fees we determined to make everything on a fee basis. I, for one, have faith in the Legislature that they will take care of this matter and they will set the schedule.

I call your attention to the schedule that the Judiciary Committee has presented pertaining to the magisterial districts. They are only recommending for the time being how these JPs are to be paid. Actually, the Legislature itself will have the right to do that. I feel it is a mistake to consider this as a part of our Constitution. This should be put on a salary basis, as I feel it should be, and it is for us to sit down and mess with whether we will pay them one or two thousand dollars a year or what we will pay them. Let us put this up to the Legislature to handle and have faith that they will do it.

The reason I rise for this matter, I know in my county —a small country county—we have problems getting papers served. We have one constable in our whole county that will serve papers, and half the time you cannot find him. If you have a man on a salary, you know he will be there. We do use the sheriff's office in our county continually to serve papers.

At the same time, this is something else that should be discussed, whether or not we want to retain this in the sheriff's office in some of the rural counties rather than as a constable. This was not considered, either, and I do not think I will bring it up on the floor.

I would like to say, let us keep the salary and go along with this proposal and amendment as presented to this body.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. President, I shall speak principally in support of some of the material already advanced. This was first called to our attention in the late days of the deliberations of our commission. I made a preliminary study of it. The first pressure upon us was to abolish the constables. We discovered that they are the general peace officers all over the county and it lies beyond the purview of this Constitutional Convention to change them. The only point at which we could bring the authority of this Convention to bear upon the constables is in cases where they act as servers of process in the judicial establishment.

I need not cover all the matters that were discussed, but there is one feature to which allusion must be made. A community court has been mandated for the City of Philadelphia. It is assumed that there will be commissioners —that is, the servers of process, the adjutants for the court—but there is nothing in the Constitution about that. Presumably, there will be nothing for them to do until the court is established and some functionaries are appointed. In the meantime, service must be made. The same thing is true about the offices of the JP as they are now in operation. If there will only be one-fourth as many, then no one can very well speak at this time as to what the salary of the remaining JP necessary for the establishment should be.

Furthermore, we must remember that if salaries are fixed they will probably be fixed in connection not only with the services with respect to the judicial establishment, but in the manifold services as peace officers, for example, at the time of election day, and as guardians of public property, and that sort of thing.

It seems to me it is primarily a matter for the Legislature. The only authentic purpose to be served by this amendment, as I see it, is to call the attention of the Legislature to the necessity for overhauling this whole subject and make such provision for constables as may be necessary in view of the changes we have made in the judicial establishment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, I would like to interrogate the sponsor.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure the sponsor will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Delegate Baldus, what effect would this amendment have on the constable and the fee that he receives for attending elections, primary and general, being at the polls?

DELEGATE BALDUS. It would have no effect whatever on his fee received for nonjudicial functions. The sole purpose of this amendment is to eliminate the fee of the constable only when he is in the process of serving a paper and enforcing an order.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Does this amendment portend to place the constable within the framework of the unified judicial system and subject him to the same controls of the Supreme Court as are presently imposed under this article on the justices of the peace?

DELEGATE BALDUS. Yes. It intends to bring within the framework of the unified judicial system, the constable, with respect to his judicial functions only, and this Convention made that decision this week in adopting the O'Donnell amendment to Section 17 of the article.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Then I would speak on the amendment, Mr. President.

It seems to me, Mr. President, that this is the only step necessary, outside of a few name changes, to revert the present system that we have in Pennsylvania to the community court. If that be the intent of this body, let us not play games with ourselves, let us name it the community court. Let us name the justice of the peace community court judge and let us name the constable as the commissioner, or what have you, attendant to that community court.

As far as I can understand, the only differences between the alternate, the community court and what we now have, if this amendment is adopted, would be that, instead of lawyers on the bench and calling them judges in the community court, we can have trained laymen or lawyers on that bench, and we have the name of justice of the peace rather than community court.

I am sure this amendment will have the same effect on the voters as putting community court on the ballot. We might as well go the whole way.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, I am questioning this particular amendment because of the possibility of cost. I do not know how many constables there may be at the present time, or how many may be necessary throughout the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, but if this amendment were adopted it would be necessary for a salary to be given to each constable, and it might run into a considerable sum of money. It might even get as high as what it costs to maintain our State Police.

In addition to that, I listened to a lot of what we have done here, and I am wondering whether the delegates are conscious of the cost of what we are doing in many of these areas.

I would have no opposition to this amendment, which I think has an excellent direction, if it were possible for the constables still to receive their emolument for the services which they render. I rest my case with that comment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. May I ask the privilege to interrogate the sponsor?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. He will stand for interrogation. Proceed with your question.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, in my city the police serve process from the office of the justice of the peace. They serve the warrants and they also serve the complaints. What would happen under that particular set of facts?

DELEGATE BALDUS. I did not get the question, sir, What is that, the police serve the process, is that what you stated?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Yes. The policemen of my city, being the peace officers, have the right to serve the warrants, the search warrants and the complaint of the arraignment upon a defendant.

DELEGATE BALDUS. The police officer is salaried, I assume he is, and this amendment would in no way interfere with his present function.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Of course, they do that in addition to their line of work.

This is merely a question of inquiry. How about those who engage in process serving? I understand that you do have certain people that do serve process. What happens in that particular case?

DELEGATE BALDUS. Well, certainly, there are attorneys that serve process, and they are not paid for their work. Now, an individual would not be an officer of a court. For example, if an individual were hired by an attorney to serve a complaint of equity on another individual, he would not be considered an officer serving process within the meaning of this amendment.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. You do say here "of any court or justice of the peace." It is in the alternative, if it be serving an order for the court or if it be serving an order for the justice of the peace. A state policeman in my area also served a lot of the process for the justice of the peace, warrants of arrest, search warrants, and so forth.

DELEGATE BALDUS. Is he paid a fee for that?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. No, he is not entitled to receive any additional compensation.

DELEGATE BALDUS. Then this amendment, sir, would have no application at all.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. What would happen if they would stop serving in the community where you do not have enough constables? Like in my city of almost 82,000 people, we only have approximately two or three constables that are actually doing their work, or able to do their work, because the others are employed and do not have the time to serve process at the time when they should be doing it.

DELEGATE BALDUS. Delegate Jirolanio, I think you misunderstood me.

The amendment being offered would in no way interfere with the present role of the police officer as a process server in your community if he were paid no extra fee for that service.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I hate to address this assembly on this issue, it has been discussed, but I think there is a salient point that has just not been brought out at all.

Delegate Reynolds properly said that the constables should be paid commensurate with their work. Well, that is the problem. Some work a great deal and some do not, so how is a salary going to achieve that laudable purpose?

Mercer Tate has pointed out that in Philadelphia frequently constables have demanded and gotten sums which were in excess of the fee prescribed by law, and that they have taken advantage of the ignorance and lack of education of those with whom they deal. Will a salary automatically prevent these people from demanding and getting fees in addition to a salary, as they are now demanding and getting fees in addition to the fees? Will the salary automatically keep these people from taking advantage of the ignorance of the people with whom they deal? I suggest to you, sir, that it will absolutely not do any of those things.

The problem with this amendment—and I have gotten a very interesting education at this university here in Harrisburg, I must say that, and the education I have learned is, do not fool around by putting a proposal into a committee and giving them time to think about it for two months, put it in at the last hour and sort of carry it on the general feeling of being in favor of good and against sin.

I am not speaking in favor of sin, but I am speaking in favor of trying to solve a surgical problem with a scalpel instead of a shillalah.

Our Supreme Court has now within its power the right to prescribe rules of practice and procedure and govern the conduct of these people. Let us see if that works. If that does not work, our Legislature has all the authority in the world not only to fix the number of constables, but fix their salaries and duties as well.

Let us approach this problem not on the shotgun-shillalah approach, but on the scalpel approach. I urge the defeat of this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Barry.

DELEGATE BARRY. Mr. President, I rise as an individual delegate and not as a member of a committee to remind the delegates that this matter did not come up with discussion in depth at the subcommittee or committee hearings and that, therefore, there is nothing really to report from the committee as a whole about this problem. I urge that you consider the words of Delegate O'Donnell, which I think are very well taken.

There has not been a study of this problem in such depth that we are prepared now to act on it. A constable is not a constitutional officer, at least, he was not until this Convention, at which time we placed him under the control of the Supreme Court and its rule-making powers.

I believe the proposal of Delegate Baldus and Delegate Burkholder is worthy of great consideration, and to take the constables out of the fee system would be a wonderful thing, but we do not know what the financial impact of this will have upon the judicial system of the Commonwealth and it is premature to decide one way or the other. They are still subject to the control of the Supreme Court, they still can be legislated on as far as their judicial functions are concerned by the Legislature.

We are not attempting to interfere with their other nonjudicial functions, but I think this thing should be deferred, left up to the Supreme Court, and its rule-making powers and left up to the Legislature to control it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are we ready for the question? I think we are.

Delegate Baldus, the sponsor of the amendment would like to close.

DELEGATE BALDUS. Mr. President, I would like to make a few remarks, and one is with respect to the cost. I anticipate the payment of the cost of the constables under this system to be the same as payment of squires, that is, the State Legislature will pay from the general funds the salaries of these men and, if this amendment passes, I will prepare for submission to this body a schedule which will require that the salaries for these men be paid by the State.

Second, with respect to the surgical problem, the surgical problem that the Legislature will face with broad expertise in the areas of constables is no more of a problem than was faced by the Judiciary Committee in reshaping and refashioning the magisterial districts for the minor judiciary in our present article.

I note it was Delegate O'Donnell who was one of the chief surgeons on the job of reshaping the magisterial districts and providing the framework for the new system of minor judges, and I submit that the Legislature has the competence and the ability to do the same job with respect to the constables.

I would also like to point out to the delegates that the prohibition of fees throughout the entire judicial process is one of the major items of reform that has been adopted in a number of states that have recently reformed their judiciary articles, and I believe that this can be handled by the Legislature. This is an important prohibition to place in the Constitution to provide the guidelines for later legislative reform, and I urge the adoption of this amendment.

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment being offered by Delegate Burkholder?

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Under Rule 19 I would like an explanation for all those not recorded as voting, which was evident before the machine was locked, and to ask for the explanation of those not recorded as voting and have them recorded as voting "no," with the exception, of course, Mr. President, of the three delegates whom I understand from the clerk have been excused formally from this Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If there is any delegate who refuses to vote, he shall be deemed and recorded as a negative vote.

Is there any delegate present who has refused to vote?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Before the machine was cleared, Mr. President, there were quite a number of empty lights on the board.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will have the recorded statement here so we have not lost the recording. I just want to point out that the rules do say that any delegate who refuses to vote who is at his desk shall be deemed and recorded as a negative vote.

This has to be called to the Chair's attention and the delegate has to be interrogated, and I can only tell you that there is no other way for the Chair to recognize whether or not a delegate has been present and refused to vote.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Prendergast.

DELEGATE PRENDERGAST. I am in a quandry. I was asleep and nobody woke me up at the time the vote was taken. I was awakened after the vote by Delegate Shoemaker.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Shoemaker awoke you?

DELEGATE PRENDERGAST. Yes, he did.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. At least, I served one purpose.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, do I understand that you want to be recorded?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. No, Mr. President, I cast my vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am referring to Delegate Prendergast. He stated that he was at his place and was asleep.

DELEGATE PRENDERGAST. Yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think, since the vote has not been announced and since he was in his place, we will certainly record his vote.

Which way do you vote?

DELEGATE PRENDERGAST. I would like to be recorded as voting "aye."

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Burkholder?

The roll was recorded as follows:

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, I do not believe my point of order has been complied with, and I would request that it be so.

There is a total of 123 votes. There are three excused delegates from this Convention, and there are more than 123 people here who are on the floor, who are, according to the rules and my understanding, not duly excused or necessarily prevented from attendance and voting. I want the remainder of those delegates, the difference between 123 and 150, recorded as in the negative.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair has ruled that it is necessary that these names be called to the attention of the Chair. I thought you were referring to Delegate Prendergast, who stated his reason for not having pulled the switch. If we have another like situation, it has to be called to our attention.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. There are 40 other situations, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, perhaps we need some clarification on this "no" vote. I think it refers, if I understand the rule, only to those who are in their seats at the time the roll is taken and do not vote, then they shall be recorded as voting "no."

If, for any reason, they shall be absent from the hall of the Convention, or if they have been excused, then, of course, that does not pertain to them at all. Am I correct?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, you are correct.

It also has to be called to the attention of the Chair if the delegate was in his seat at the time the vote was taken, then we will interrogate him and see whether he voted. We will check it, and if he refuses to vote, he will be recorded as a negative vote.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. If the Chair would supply me with a copy of what was on the board before the lights were turned out, I could certainly assist you.

I can say, as an example, for instance, that Delegate Silverman was in his seat and did not vote. I will be happy to stand corrected if that is not so, but, otherwise, I think he should explain his vote.

Either we ought to comply with these rules or dispense with them. I asked before to have them clarified and I do not think they are clear.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate King.

DELEGATE KING. I recognize the fact that it is unusual for me to stand and say something other than move for the adjournment, but I have been sitting here for a number of days—perhaps "uncontentious"—not having much to say about anything.

I find, however, that I am one of the delegates who is probably culpable of not having cast a vote on this last amendment and having been in my seat. I ask for an explanation, the same as my brother delegate did earlier today, with respect to just what my position is if I choose not to vote.

My understanding of the rules, as I read them, indicates that if I do not vote, or if I do not choose to vote, I must stand and give some reason for not voting, whether it be ignorance of the issue, whether it be pecuniary interest, or whether it be some interest that might be contrary to the amendment itself. Then the Chair must rule on whether or not I have good and sufficient reason for not voting.

Now this is a matter that has passed already. I do not think my failure to vote, if added to the negative votes, will affect the amendment in any way, therefore, I would be willing to comply with my brother delegate's request that I be shown in the negative.

However, I would like to express the intention, if I read the rules correctly, that each time I decline to vote from this point on I shall rise and I shall address you, Mr. President, and ask whether or not I can be excused from voting.

Is my interpretation of the rules correct?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Your interpretation is correct, and then the body will pass on your excuse.

DELEGATE KING. The body will pass on my excuse prior to the roll being taken, is that right?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is right, prior to it being announced. That is the reason the Chair has said to Delegate Shoemaker that we have to have this called to the attention of the Chair during and at the conclusion of the voting process before the vote is announced.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I think I did so. I could go down this list and call out about 30 more people who were in attendance and in their chairs, or close to them, and did not vote.

I would be quite willing to leave this point of order if we would have some definite clarification and some definite understanding with regard to what attention will be called to those delegates who are outside of the door in the phone room, or in the rest room, outside. On several occasions I understand there has been no notice given and a number of delegates, I know, missed votes where they either sponsored or spoke in favor of or against certain amendments that were presented.

I think it is unreasonable for me to stand here and pursue the point of order, except if we can solve something. I would request the Chair at this time to make some definite commitment about ringing the bell, or sounding the gong, or doing something, so we know when these roll calls are taken and so we are called to be here.

Perhaps we ought to suspend Rule 19, the first paragraph, if we are not going to comply with it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want to say for the benefit of Delegate Shoemaker, it is my understanding that the clerk will ring the bell to warn the delegates that a vote is about to be taken.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Silverman. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. By way of explanation to Delegate Shoemaker, I was preparing an amendment and was not able to hear the discussion and understand the substance of the motion. Therefore, I refused to vote. If Delegate Shoemaker wishes me to vote without understanding the substance of the motion on the floor, he should say so.

I now understand the substance. If the vote has not been announced, I would vote in favor of that amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The vote has been announced. Your remarks will be placed on the record.

I might say that in the future, if this occurs, where a delegate in his seat does not vote, any delegate can call it to the attention of the Chair and he will be interrogated as to why he did not vote, or he can voluntarily make his statement and then we will pass on his excuse.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Just one question of clarification.

I believe on page 16, "Excused from Voting," is all that is necessary. When someone in his seat desires to be excused he is to make the statement and the President can rule on that excuse, and not the Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You are absolutely correct. It says "without debate."

I recognize Delegate Shapiro, who has been up.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. Chairman, a few moments ago we adopted an amendment presented by Delegate

Barron which Delegate Barron explained as being an amendment to provide for appointment of judges when the Senate was not in session. I have reread the amendment. I have discussed it with counsel for the Convention. I should like to have a ruling from counsel for the Convention as to the effect of this amendment on appointments made when the Senate is in session.

The language that was in the proposal prior to this amendment clearly indicated, or created, a constitutional requirement for a two-thirds consent of the Senate to an appointment under those circumstances. That language has now been removed and we are referred only to Article IV of the Constitution, which I submit is not at all clear.

I request that we be given a ruling as to whether or not the adoption of Delegate Barron's amendment has changed the situation with respect to confirmation by the Senate of appointments made when the Senate is in session.

MOTION TO RECONSIDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Pursuant to your request, we will have counsel for the Judiciary Committee and the counsel for the Convention get together and prepare an answer to your question, which answer will be given through the chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Rappaport.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. With respect to Delegate Shapiro's request, I would, depending on the answer, ask to be recognized at that time to move for reconsideration. I, likewise, labored under the same misapprehension as Delegate Shapiro. I voted the prevailing side of that particular amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. In other words, when you hear the opinion of counsel, you want to be recognized?

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I am stating now that, depending on the answer from counsel, I would like to be recognized on a motion to reconsider. Otherwise, I will make it now, if the Chair desires.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We cannot give you an answer immediately. You have to give counsel an opportunity to look into the problem, naturally. If you are moving now for reconsideration, we will consider that. If you want to wait to hear counsel's opinion, we will do it then.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I think, perhaps, we might. To obviate the necessity of counsel doing even more work, I would like to move to reconsider the Barron amendment. I was on the prevailing side and I would like one minute to explain it, if I have a seconder.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Moved by Delegate Rappaport that the vote by which the Barron amendment was adopted and accepted by this Convention should be reconsidered.

Does that have a second?

DELEGATE KING. I would like to second that, Mr. President. I voted with the prevailing side.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate King states that he voted with the prevailing side.

According to the voting record, they are both recorded as having voted with the prevailing side.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kline. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE KLINE. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE KLINE. On a point of order, so that all the delegates understand what we are doing, I would like to ask for a clear ruling from the Chair.

It is my contention—and I request a clear ruling on this—that in the debate that now follows the only issue is on reconsideration of the vote and reasons for reconsideration, and that the merits or demerits of the amendment, as such, are not debatable.

I bring that up because we have taken far too much time on these motions to reconsider by hashing over things we already discussed in the debate. I would not limit anyone, but I would like from the Chair a clear ruling as to precisely what the delegates may now debate on this motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendment failed.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I have been requested for a ruling.

Delegate Kline, the Parliamentarian has called attention to where it says when the question to be reconsidered is debatable, the entire question is opened to debate by the motion to reconsider.

The Chair so rules, according to the Parliamentarian that, therefore, the entire question is open to debate.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Rappaport.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Mr. President, I must confess that the arguments presented by my learned friend, Delegate Barron, were very convincing.

However, I was under the impression that his amendment applied only to one-judge counties. I agree with him it could be a tremendous problem where there is only one judge to go without a judge for six or eight months. I understand that was one of the reasons why appointed judges were eliminated in the Constitution of 1838 and they required elected judges. I was unaware of the extreme ramifications and the possibilities of political control by a governor manipulating adjournments and the effect it would have on those multi-judge counties.

I would, therefore, ask for reconsideration.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I would like to comment on that, since I am the only former Governor here. May I say to you, sir, in no uncertain terms that we have had this in the Constitution for many, many years under Republican and under Democratic governors, and governors do not manipulate the appointment of judges in the interim period for purposes of gaining votes in the State Senate.

There is nothing new, there is nothing different, about what the Barron amendment does than what is presently the case in this Commonwealth of ours, and has been for a very long time under both types of governors. I deeply resent your comment.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Rappaport. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Mr. President, I did not in any way imply, nor did I intend to imply, that any present governor, or governor in this century, has ever done anything like that. I do not imply that they would. However, when I was able to study the amendment, I observed what I consider to be a hole in the amendment and it was something that would have convinced me to vote otherwise on the amendment.

I did not imply that Governor Scranton, or any other Governor, has ever done that. Governors, of course, are political animals.

We, in the first months of this Convention, lived through the finality of a fight on the budget. It took over a year, where one vote was very important, and I was not very careful how I cast my vote. I voted under a misapprehension, perhaps out of ignorance, and for that reason I ask for a reconsideration.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fineman.

DELEGATE FINEMAN. Mr. President, I want to say that I support the request for reconsideration of this proposal so that an opportunity may be given to give second consideration to the Barron amendment, with which I am not in agreement at all.

Time after time this delegate body in its collective judgment has indicated that there should be a measure of minority control by requiring two-thirds approbation of the Senate chamber to appointments by the Governor.

I view the Barron amendment as but a device to circumvent what has been the prevailing collective judgment of this delegate body, which I must say was a judgment rendered on a truly bipartisan basis without giving consideration to advantages that would accrue to one party or the other.

It was stated in support of this proposition, that we had to have some emergency procedure to put into effect in the event that a vacancy developed in a judicial post so that that particular judicial district would not be without a judge.

I wonder how valid an argument that was in view of the fact that the proponents turned down the amendment offered by Delegate Banes to except from the provisions of this proposal those judicial districts that had five or more judges, or six or more judges. Certainly, in those districts with multiple judgeships there never could be that single emergency which would arise through a vacancy developing in one or two judicial posts which would call into play the emergency such as the Barron amendment would seek to invoke.

It is for this reason I would ask this body to support this motion for reconsideration and then at the time of the vote to vote down the Barron amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does Delegate Barron wish to be heard?

DELEGATE BARRON. Mr. President, quite frankly, in this circumstance I am not amazed, by any measure, that there would be an effort to reconsider. Quite frankly, not intending to respond to Delegate Fineman, I was quite amazed that there was no debate on Delegate Banes amendment.

I was approached during recess for lunch by a number of delegates who come from the big cities. They told me, on the one hand, "This is the existing situation and it works all right." Some told me, on the other hand, "It does not work all right. Would you accept an amendment?" I said, "No, quite frankly I will not. I will neither oppose nor propose an amendment to what I suggested in regard to those areas which have larger courts, because I do not know sufficient about it either as to the judicial aspect of the thing or as to the political aspect of the thing."

Quite frankly, while it is time for true confessions here of late, Mr. President, I did not vote at all on the Banes amendment and, if I am called to give an explanation, I would give it. I heard no debate. I did not know what I was going to do on the situation. No one had convinced me either way and I took the position of calmly sitting in my seat not pulling the lever in any direction. If there has been any imputation, and I have not taken any offense certainly by it, that I was endeavoring to change the prior considered, and from my point, concluded position in regards to amendments and the requirement of the two-thirds majority of the Senate, my intent was not to disturb that in any way so long as the Senate was in session. But it was my intent to provide—and, perhaps, my inability in the area of legal draftsmanship, or particularly legislative draftsmanship, is wanting, and this very well may be true—I endeavored to compare against a clean copy what I thought was the language. I endeavored to compare it and put it in the frame of Printer's No. 20 to provide for an interim arrangement. It seemed to me that Article IV, Section 8, of the Constitution provides the happy situation.

If this body is not coming to the same conclusion, if this body feels I have failed because of my inability to accomplish my purpose, I suggest you reconsider it. If you believe I have accomplished a purpose and you still consider it worthy of merit, I urge you to vote that you do not.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. President, I did not make a motion to reconsider. In the absence of a clear-cut ruling on Delegate Barron's amendment—the effect of Delegate Barron's amendment was not limited to the statement he just made—I rise in support of the motion for reconsideration.

I rise to support that motion because prior to the amendment we had this language in Proposal No. 7 with respect to appointments when the Senate is in session and with respect to appointments when the Senate is not in session. That language read, "Whenever a vacancy occurs for any other reason in the office of judge in such judicial district, the Governor shall fill the vacancy by appointment with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate." That is quite clear.

As a result of Delegate Barron's amendment, we now have language which, instead of stating what is required, simply refers us to Section 8 of Article IV of the Constitution which reads as follows, Section 8 (a), "The Governor shall appoint an Attorney General, a Superintendent of Public Instruction and such other officers as he shall be authorized by law to appoint. The appointment . . ."

The Barron amendment surplanted the language I first read with, "Whenever a vacancy occurs for any other reason in the office of judge in a court, other than a statewide court, the Governor shall fill the vacancy by appointment in accordance with the provisions of Article IV, Section 8 of this Constitution."

Those provisions read, and I started to read them, "The appointment of the Attorney General, the Superintendent of Public Instruction and of such other officers as may be specified by law, shall be subject to the consent of two-thirds of the members elected to the Senate." I stress, "such other officers as may be specified by law." It goes on, "except as may now or hereafter be otherwise provided in this Constitution as to appellate and other judges, he may, during the recess of the Senate, fill vacancies happening in offices to which he appoints by granting commissions expiring at the end of its session and fill vacancies happening in the office of Auditor General or State Treasurer or in any other elective office he is authorized to fill. If the vacancy happens during the session of the Senate, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, he shall nominate to the Senate before its final adjournment a proper person to fill the vacancy. In the case of a vacancy in an elective office, a person shall be elected to the office on the next election day appropriate to the office unless the vacancy happens within two calendar months immediately preceding the election day in which case the election shall be held on the second succeeding election day appropriate to the office."

I submit that what that language means is not nearly so clear as the language we had previously with respect to appointments when the Senate is in session.

I, for one, do not know in the absence of a written ruling just what the language in Section 8, Article IV, does mean with respect to that issue. In view of that, I strongly urge that we reconsider the Barron amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone else wish to be heard?

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I will, with pleasure, yield to my friend, Delegate Scott.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scott.

DELEGATE SCOTT. Mr. President, I speak in opposition to reconsider the Barron amendment. We have been handed a clear-cut mandate by a vote of 68 "yeas" and 65 "nays." I have listened to so much debate in the last three days that I think we ought to get on with the business.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Rappaport.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Mr. President, if I were convinced that this amendment cures the problem which it is alleged to cure, I would vote for it. I think, perhaps in haste, this amendment was drawn a little too broadly and I would like to see it drawn a lot narrower to cure the problem that has been raised.

However, in its present form it is much too broad and I ask it be reconsidered.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are ready for the question.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We just listened to Delegate Rappaport in summation. In accordance with our procedure—

DELEGATE BANES. I do not want to make a speech, I only want to inquire as to whether or not counsel has prepared the opinion requested, so that we may have that before we vote. I do not think this delegate body can vote intelligently unless we have a ruling from counsel.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Counsel has not been able to complete its opinion. That was evident, I thought, when Delegate Rappaport made his motion.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Then I take it that counsel is not able to make up his mind that he is certain on what this amendment does or does not do, is that correct?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Counsel have not completed their opinion. I cannot tell you any more than that. We do not have it. The question is on the motion to reconsider the vote by which the Barron amendment was adopted. Those voting "yea," will vote to reconsider. Those voting "nay" will deny reconsideration.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE CHAIR

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think it is fair that the Chair announces at this time before I announce this vote that in the event we have the question of a delegate in his seat who asks to be excused from voting, the Chair wants you to know the only excuse that will be accepted, as far as the presiding officer is concerned, is a physical or mechanical inability to vote or having a conflict of interest.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion to reconsider?

The majority having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the affirmative and the motion was agreed to.

The question recurs,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

MOTION TO TABLE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. It is quite obvious that many of us are not prepared to vote on the Barron amendment. I move it be tabled until we receive the proper legal opinion.

DELEGATE BANES. I second the motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. A motion has been made by Delegate Pasquerilla, seconded by Delegate Banes, that the Barron amendment be tabled until we get a counsel opinion.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
It was agreed to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Barron amendment will be on the table until counsel for the Judiciary Committee and counsel for the Convention issue an opinion to the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, who will give the opinion to the body.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Michener. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE MICHENER. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, I rise to a point and I just do not know what to call it. I am sure the assembly will be sympathetic. I want to confirm the fact that in that last vote Delegate Prendergast did fall asleep. It is embarrassing for me to admit that the book he was reading was one I had written. I hope the minutes of this meeting can be so edited to mask that fact.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I do not know whether you are trying to sell more copies to the delegates, or not, by that statement.

BALDUS AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Baldus.

DELEGATE BALDUS. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE BALDUS offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 15), page 10, line 11, by removing the comma after "duties" and inserting: and

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 15), page 10, line 12, by removing the comma after "law" and inserting: . Justices, judges and justices of the peace shall not

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Baldus for a statement in connection with his amendment.

DELEGATE BALDUS. Mr. President, the purpose of this amendment is to give to the minor judiciary and the judges who serve in the minor judiciary the same protection and advantages that are enjoyed by the judges of the courts of record. If you will look at Section 15 under the caption, "Prohibited Activities," it states, "Justices and judges shall devote full time to their judicial duties, shall not engage in the practice of law, hold any office in any political party or political organization, or hold any office or position of profit in the government of the United States or of this Commonwealth or any municipal corporation or political subdivision of this Commonwealth, except in the armed service of the United States or of this Commonwealth."

You will note in reading Section 15 that the justices of the peace are not included in these prohibitions.

Before turning to the contents specifically of my proposal, I would like the delegates to think of the purposes behind Section 15 as it applies to courts of record. Why is it that the committee recommended that judges and justices may not hold any office in any political party or organization, or hold an office in a government of the United States or in this Commonwealth? This is the issue I am raising here. Why were the squires omitted from this?

The way to understand that is to understand the reason why judges are prohibited from these activities, and I am addressing myself to the political provisions in lines 13 through 17 of the clean copy that I have. The reason is that participation in politics to the extent of holding an office in a political party, or organization, or working for a public government, reduces the appearance that decisions are not affected by political consideration.

The committee was concerned that if judges became active promoters of the interest of one political party against another the appearance of impartiality on political questions and political considerations would be impaired. It was for this reason the committee adopted the provisions of Section 15. However, they omitted the squires from these protections and permitted squires to hold office in a political party, in a political organization.

This amendment I am offering will prohibit squires from holding office in a political party or organization but would not prohibit their participation in politics. It would simply prohibit what is prohibited a judge. It would also prohibit them from holding office or a position of profit in a Commonwealth or a political subdivision government. It would not prohibit a squire from engaging in the practice of law or engaging in another occupation.

It may be that in the large communities of the first class magisterial districts the squire's job in those districts will be a full-time job, but in the smaller magisterial districts it will only be a part-time job.

Therefore, the squire must be able to have other work, and it is in recognition of this that the amendment merely prohibits the holding of an office in a political party, or organization, or employment by a state or local government.

I believe that these are important protections and, if the minor judiciary is not to be a second cousin in the judicial system, I believe the courts and the judges in that system need the very same protections on these important matters as do the judges in the courts of record, and I ask your support.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Thornburgh.

DELEGATE THORNBURGH. Mr. President, I rise in support of the amendment, and I only want to point out what I think is an interesting fact.

The presentation made to the preparatory committee and to the Judiciary Committee by the Pennsylvania Magistrates Association called for the use of the canons of judicial ethics to govern the conduct of the minor judiciary.

At the hearing of the Judiciary Committee the representatives of the Magistrates Association appeared, and the committee questioned them closely about this matter, regarding particularly Canons 28 and 30 which relate to political activities of judges and justices of the peace if the canons were to be so applied. In both the testimony and upon questioning it was clear that the representatives of the association were in favor of imposing the same rules with respect to political activities to justices of the peace and judges. As Delegate Baldus pointed out, this is a somewhat lesser restriction, and I think deserves our very serious consideration in view of the fact that the Magistrates Association—I am sure that this surprises some of us—supported the imposition of the canon of judicial ethics upon the minor judiciary.

I would, therefore, urge that we honor their request and this proposal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gerber.

DELEGATE GERBER. May I interrogate the chairman and inquire as to why the committee proposal came out in the words it did?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, indeed. I am sure the committee chairman will stand for interrogation. Delegate Barry is now representing the committee.

DELEGATE GERBER. For the benefit of the rest of us who did not have the opportunity to participate in your deliberations, could you tell us why your committee reached the conclusion that it did in order that we hear your side as well, sir?

DELEGATE BARRY. I do not know what conclusion you are talking about.

DELEGATE GERBER. The conclusion that is in the proposal that Delegate Baldus seeks to amend. It seems to me that somebody must have been for it the way the proposal came out.

DELEGATE BARRY. Under Section 15(b) we specifically provide that the justice of the peace shall be governed by rules or canons which shall be prescribed by the Supreme Court, and we thought that was ample protection for setting such standards which could later be applied to the justices of the peace.

It was mainly to apply some inflexible canon rule right now which might not be appropriate under all circumstances or to all people.

DELEGATE GERBER. Is this flexibility that you attempted to achieve through your proposal still the feeling of yours, at least, and the committee?

DELEGATE BARRY. This was definitely the opinion of the sub-committee, and the sub-committee report was adopted in toto by the standing committee. This was discussed, although there was not a vote taken on it. This was the general consensus of the standing committee.

DELEGATE GERBER. I noticed that Chairman Amsterdam of the standing committee was nodding his head. Is this also the feeling of the standing committee in their deliberations, as well?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Delegate Barry spoke for the standing committee and that was exactly the recommendation of the standing committee. Of course, it appears in Article V, as we brought it to the floor.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Keller.

DELEGATE J. W. KELLER. Mr. President, I recall that in the sub-committee's discussions one of the reasons why they did not include the justices of the peace within the blanket provisions of sub-Section (a) as this amendment would deal with, is because it does prohibit holding an office of profit in the government of the United States or this Commonwealth, and this has been construed by the courts to include being a janitor in a school or a school bus driver. When you are talking about the minimum salary which the Judicial Committee assumed would be granted in the smaller magisterial districts, this means that some men would not be able to hold some jobs, which surely has nothing to do with politics or government as such.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. May I just amplify what Delegate Keller and Delegate Amsterdam have said?

Mr. President, we have been trying to keep as much out of this Constitution as we have put in, which is a little difficult to do when everybody wants to put everything but the kitchen stove in it.

Frankly, as you know, we are making tremendous changes in the magistrate or justice of the peace system, and it was the general thinking, although we took no vote of the committee, that to keep putting in all these proscriptions with regard to the justices of the peace when we were changing their whole setup so tremendously was not in good order in the Constitution, particularly as they come under the Supreme Court and the canons and the ethics of the Supreme Court. Any rules the Supreme Court wants to set up, which was not the case before, would now pertain. As they go into this new system, the court would be able to ascertain what kind of things the justices of the peace should be able to do and what they should not do, rather than we proscribing it and writing it all out in a lot of sentences, which might not really pertain when they get the implementation of the new system going.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, I wonder with this explanation if the proponents of this amendment are not satisfied and, if they are satisfied, we would ask, perhaps, that they withdraw their amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes the sponsor of the amendment, Delegate Baldus.

DELEGATE BALDUS. The proponents of the amendment would like the delegate body here to decide that question. We think this is an important provision and should be included in here, and we do not consent to its withdrawal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me ask the body if we are ready for the question.

Do you want to sum up, Delegate Baldus?

DELEGATE BALDUS. Yes, Mr. President.

Mr. President, I have heard no reason given here this afternoon in this debate, nor before the Judiciary Committee have I heard any reason given, why the squires should be treated differently than the judges of the courts of record. I think the reason for the adoption of these articles applies equally well, in some instances with greater force, for the minor judiciary than to the courts of record.

Secondly, I would like to point out, as Delegate Thornburgh mentioned, the magistrates themselves have requested these protections and they themselves also asked that the canon of judicial ethics be applied to them, and even more stringent requirements and prohibitions against political activities are embodied in the canon of these judicial ethics. I think this is an important provision to insure that the minor judiciary is not a second class judicial system.

We are trying to create a unified system and the policies that we are enacting here to apply to the courts of record should be applied throughout the judicial system in conformity with the concept of the unified system, unless there is a good reason advanced why they should not be. I submit there has not been any reason advanced here today, or at any time advanced.

For that reason, I ask support for this amendment in applying these protections throughout the judicial system.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate King. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE KING. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE KING. Before I inquired of the Chair with respect to the rules concerning voting. Perhaps, I am a little slow, or I do not understand as well as the rest of the delegates. I understand, according to the rules, that if I am not in my seat, then there is no question about whether my vote will be recorded as negative, or not. I was standing in the back of the hall.

It is my understanding, then, since I am not in my seat, my vote will not be recorded in the negative, it will be no vote recorded at all. Is that interpretation a correct interpretation of the rules, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I do not know whether this is contributing to the writing of this Constitution.

DELEGATE KING. I do not mean to be an obstructionist, but I do not wish to vote on anything that I may not understand, and I do not wish to vote on something that I am not for or against.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. My Parliamentarian has called to my attention that the beginning of the rule here says, "Each delegate shall be present within the Convention hall during the session of the Convention, unless excused or prevented, and shall be recorded as voting for or against each question stated."

Now, the interpretation of that is that if you are inside the Convention hall—

DELEGATE KING. That I am constrained to vote or, if not, recorded as voting in the negative, is that right?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is right, or, if you ask to be excused, the Chair has already stated that as far as excuses are concerned I only will accept excuses based on a physical or mechanical inability to vote or a conflict of interest.

DELEGATE KING. Thank you very much, sir.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want you to know that the Chair is not trying to put Delegate King on the spot.

DELEGATE KING. I appreciate that.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment being offered by Delegate Baldus?

PHILIP STOUT WELCOMED

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, I am pleased today to introduce the son, the oldest son, of my running mate who is here as a delegate, Philip Stout, who is the son of William B. Stout from Washington County. I would like Philip to stand up at this time in the back of the room.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, indeed.

Philip, will you stand up so we can give you a cordial greeting.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Redick. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE REDICK. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE REDICK. I would like to point out the fact that the electronic machine did not meet my approval. I am taking a beating for some reason, or another.

I must say that back on the Barron amendment I voted "yea" and I noticed on the electronic machine that there was no marking there for me whatsoever. There was no mark indicating whether I voted for it, or against it, or whether I was not voting. I just wonder what is going on with that machine.

I also want to bring to the attention of the Chair that I have voted on amendment No. 11. I voted on the "nay" side and the thing registered "yea."

Someone could be pulling a joke, but I do question this other roll call. I had no markings on it whatsoever.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I must say, Delegate Redick, that nobody has had an opportunity to tamper with this machine. I understand that there are occasions when the machine does not register, and any time a delegate sees that he is not registered, if he will immediately call it to the attention of the Chair, we will see that your vote is properly recorded.

DELEGATE REDICK. I am referring to the roll call sheet. It is not marked on the roll call sheet. I am not referring to the board.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You are referring to the roll call this morning?

DELEGATE REDICK. This is the Barron amendment. Mr. President, this is the written record of the roll call.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will have it verified.

WIFE OF SECRETARY MICHENER WELCOMED

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, I rise to note that in studying all of the journals that have been so ably kept by the Secretary, Mr. Michener, where he has inserted his humor at the expense of many of us, this grammarian has not yet brought to the attention, at least, for the purpose of the journal, the 164th Delegate to this Convention, his lovely wife, Lorene.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will give her a cordial welcome. Mrs. Michener, I want you to know that we are happy to have you with us. We have seen you here practically every day. I think that is really great devotion both to our cause and to your good husband.

FAMILY OF DELEGATE THOMSON WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Rappaport.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I note the presence of the daughter and grandchildren of a gentleman whom I became very fond of since I have been here, Delegate Thomson.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We want to welcome you and tell you what a wonderful job Delegate Thomson is doing. It is nice to have you with us.

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE ROBERTS. As you know, there are four ministers who are members of this Convention. Last night we had a clandestine clergy caucus meeting without the knowledge of the chair, and we have fashioned a resolution to defend ourselves against the new vocabulary we all had to learn. With the permission of the President, I would like to share it with the Convention if appropriate at this time.

This has been sponsored by myself, by the Reverend Byron Horne, the Reverend Richard L. Huggins, the Reverend William Gray, and "Rabbi" Solomon seconds our efforts.

DELEGATE ROBERTS requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, February 21, 1968.

WHEREAS, The delegates to this Convention for Constitutional revision have exhibited conscientious perusal of the lengthy epistles and other printed materials that have flooded across their desks; and

WHEREAS, The delegates have fashioned and created a feeling of Koinania that has been experienced and shared by all; and

WHEREAS, The delegates have exhibited genuine Kenosis in their toleration of the naughtiness of the barristers and publicans in their glossalia . . . and of the ex-officios in their analysis of exegetical propondurances; and

WHEREAS, The delegates, on occasion, have exhibited evangelistic zeal in their kerygmatic speaking on the floor of this Convention; and

WHEREAS, The delegates have exhibited genuine ecumenism as they have welded themselves together into a community; and

WHEREAS, The delegates have moved beyond the point of existentialism even to a position of transcendentalism in their efforts to provide means for better government for the Commonwealth; and

WHEREAS, The delegates with great insight selected one to serve as "Malech Godol" who has proven to be a prophetic leader maintaining the wisdom of Solomon and the patience of Job . . .; and

WHEREAS, The delegates have come to an eschatological moment and are about to present an instrument to the people—apocolyptic in its scope; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the clergy of this Convention, in the apostolic tradition of Holy Church, do hereby commend and praise this Convention for Constitutional revision.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, "Rabbi" Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Truthfully, I was the one who was referred to as the "Maleeh Godol." In Hebrew that means "the great King," but I do think that the spirit shown by these good Reverend gentlemen and the very fact of their variety points up something to us, and I would like to speak on that for a moment if the Convention would like to hear something. It will be good.

Truthfully, from the variety of opinions we have received from the nonclergy, we can only say we have in evidence a variety of religions as indicated by the body here, and this only goes up to point that by reason of these different faiths and conflicting faiths we all should come to the conclusion that there is not only one way, but that there are many ways that can attain our idealism and our belief in the fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man. A friend of mine, who has long since passed, truthfully envied me, and I found that I had something appropriate. I did not write it. Do I believe in God? Is that the price of a nice hat? Has he commanded that His name be written everywhere the same? Have all who lived in every place identified his hidden face? Who knows, but he may like as well, my story is the one you tell, and so long as that story is epitomized in the brotherhood and the spirit of the recent paper delivered by our good clergy friends, I think that the land is fine and the spirit of the Convention is good. The sun is high and I have done this sober, believe it or not.

PATRICIA KLINE WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want to say that we now have back with us the daughter of Delegate Kline, Miss Patricia Kline. Would you stand up so this body can give you a warm cordial welcome.

SHETTIG AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shettig.

DELEGATE SHETTIG. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE SHETTIG offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 16), page 11; line 7, by removing the semicolon after "Court" and inserting a period

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 16), page 11, lines 7 to 9, by striking out "two non-judge members of the" in line 7 and all of lines 8 and 9

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 16), page 12, line 6, by removing the period after "duties" and inserting: but in no event shall any justice or judge be suspended or removed from office or otherwise, for or by reason of any decision rendered by him.

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 16), page 12, lines 7 to 19, by striking out all of said lines and inserting: (c) The board shall keep itself as fully informed as may be of fact and circumstances relating to justices or judges, by such methods of procedure as prescribed by the Supreme Court for receiving complaints, investigations, hearings, attendance or testimony for the production of documents, in so far as the same may bear upon grounds for suspension, removal, discipline or compulsory retirement.

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 16), page 13, lines 11 and 12, by striking out all of said lines

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shettig in connection with his amendment.

DELEGATE SHETTIG. Mr. President, I would like to interrogate Delegate Curran and Delegate Barry because we had a discussion and I want to make sure that the discussion is on the record. I think possibly part of this amendment is already covered by the committee proposal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed. Delegate Barry is ready.

DELEGATE SHETTIG. Mr. President, I call attention to page 13 of the committee proposal, line 11, where you say the Supreme Court shall prescribe rules for procedure under this section. Does that apply to the procedure before the review board itself?

DELEGATE BARRY. Yes, that was the intent. I think if you have any objection to not including this procedure, that answers that objection.

DELEGATE SHETTIG. If that is the definite understanding, so I can know, I can withdraw the last part of the proposed amendment. That was the only concern I had there, that the Supreme Court would establish the rules and the procedure under which the complaints would be filed, accepted and investigated.

DELEGATE BARRY. That is our intent, to provide a procedure under this section whereby the board would receive definite rules of procedure from the Supreme Court as to how to proceed with its hearings and other acts.

DELEGATE SHETTIG. And that also applies to the acceptance of the complaints, whether they are formal or informal types of complaints?

DELEGATE BARRY. We specifically provide that they shall receive complaints informal or formal in another portion. Here is our theory on that, we likened it to a grievance committee of the bar association. There should be no formal way that a person has to make a complaint against a judge. If he wants to make a telephone call about a judge, if he wants to file a written complaint, he should not be required to do it in any format or any formal manner, the same as a complaint can be lodged against a lawyer. We felt there should be no specific procedure set up, but it should be free and flexible. The going through the complaints and sifting them out and holding hearings is where we first apply stringent rules and protection for the judiciary there.

DELEGATE SHETTIG. Mr. President, in view of the answer by Delegate Barry, I am willing to withdraw that last part of this amendment and consider only the first two sections of the amendment. The last part would be, "Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 16), page 12, lines 7 to 19, by striking out all of said lines and inserting . . ." I would request that they be stricken from the proposed amendment and only the other sections be considered at this time.

If I may, I would like to direct myself for a few seconds to both of the first two sections of this proposed amendment.

The first part of the amendment deletes from the review board the lawyers and non-lawyer members and leaves instead a board composed entirely of judges. Now the purpose for this is two-fold:

One, It adopts the theory used by the New York Judiciary Review Board;

Two, and I think most importantly, it eliminates the criticisms raised and pointed at the Review Board in the State of California. They have discovered that in the Judicial Review Board in California the lawyer members have used that as a means of advertising their wares in Martindale-Hubbell, and this has led to criticism. They also discovered that the non-lawyer members were seeking the lawyer members as their own personal lawyers. So you have a little clique working there together. I believe all of the attorneys in this room would rather, if they were on the bench, be reviewed by a board of judges. This is the purpose of that first one.

The second part of the amendment, which reads, "in no event shall any justice or judge be suspended or removed from office or otherwise, for or by reason of any decision of any decision rendered by him," is designed to take care of the situation where a judge may be in the position of sentencing individuals on a Monday afternoon, sentencing one person for two to six months and the very next one from two to six years and the facts may look similar. This is the whole purpose and reason for a judge using his own judgment. If he will be subjected daily for every decision he makes to be brought before a review board, this will enter into every decision and will affect, ultimately, his decisions.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Goldman.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. May I question Delegate Shettig, please?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. He will stand for interrogation, I am sure.

MOTION TO DIVIDE

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Delegate Shettig, would you agree to separate these two proposed amendments? I understand you have taken out the last two.

DELEGATE SHETTIG. The last one.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. The reason I suggest that, I see much merit in your first portion to leaving the review panel to only judges and leaving non-judges and lawyers off this panel. I think that has a great deal of merit.

I am somewhat concerned about the last section, because I can see a very distinct possibility where a judge has undergone a mental or physical disability and it may well prove itself in some of his decisions.

Therefore, I would like to know whether or not you would agree to have these two separated so we might vote on them separately? Is that permissible?

DELEGATE SHETTIG. I have no objection if that is permissible, Mr. President, and I so move.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me say that under our rules, unless we have an objection from the body, it is permissible. If we hear no objection, then it could be separated.

The decision will be up to the proposer of the amendment, Delegate Shettig.

DELEGATE SHETTIG. I said I had no objection, if it was permissible and if there are no objections from the floor.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let us determine where we will separate this amendment into two amendments, in effect.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. It would be my suggestion, subject to Delegate Shettig's approval, that we take the first amendment to be the first four lines of the proposed amendment and the second amendment to be the next five lines.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. In other words, you want lines 1 to 4 to be the first amendment.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. First, we would vote on that. That would be in line with taking the non-judges off this panel.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Then the portion beginning "Amend Section 1 (Sec. 16), page 12," from there on to the end would be the second portion, is that right?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. That would be continued for the next five lines, which would include "but in no event shall any justice or judge," etc.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Why are you dividing this into three parts, then?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. I am not. That is the second.

DELEGATE SHETTIG. That is perfectly all right with me, dividing it into just those two parts. The bottom section beginning with "Amend Section 1 (Sec. 16)," I stated before that I was willing to omit from this. This was after I questioned Delegate Barry. That is already covered.

Mr. President, let me start from the top and work down. If we take the first two paragraphs, which begin with "Amend Section 1 (Section 16), page 11, line 7," and follow that down to where we have "lines 8 and 9," that would be No. 1.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are with you. Thank you.

DELEGATE SHETTIG. Then you start with "Amend Section 1 (Section 16), page 12," and follow down to the last three words "rendered by him," which are underscored, that would be No. 2.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. What about the rest?

DELEGATE SHETTIG. The last part I have removed from the amendment as a result of the answers which I received from Delegate Barry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved. We vote twice.

The first part is as you have designated; the second part is as you designated; the third part, in effect, will be withdrawn.

DELEGATE SHETTIG. That is correct.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
The motion was agreed to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate More.

DELEGATE MORE. Mr. President, depending on your point of view, the last two days, to some, have been dark days with respect to the provisions on selection. If this is the case, I ask you to take heart, because I believe that the committee has come up with an excellent section on removal, suspension and discipline.

While a great deal of emphasis has been placed on the selection of judges and the manner of selection, I believe that the area of removal, suspension and discipline is equally as important, if not more so. This has been the greatest void in our judicial system. For the first time we are offered an effective method of removing, suspending and disciplining judges who were lazy, who neglected their duty, who are incompetent, who are disabled—both mentally and physically—who have attempted to—well, I should not say "attempted," but who have, in many cases, been hesitant about deciding causes and thereby hindering litigants. For the first time we have an opportunity to effectively cope with this problem.

A great deal of thought went into this particular section. It is based a great deal on the California system, which has been extremely successful and which is presently being practiced by a great many states, and a great many other states are anticipating putting this system into effect.

The present proposal provides for a judicial inquiry and review board made up of five judges, two lawyers and two non-lawyer members. We believe that every segment of society should be represented on this board. Though the judges should be the majority in a board like this, they certainly should have the benefit of the advice of both men in the legal profession and laymen. I say that if we adopt this amendment and compose the board of five judges, we are emasculating this particular section and I think we are doing great harm to the entire area of removal, suspension and discipline.

Delegate Shettig brought up the question of New York. Under the New York system there is no permanent committee such as we would have in this division here. Under the New York system, which is composed of a panel of five judges, it is an ad hoc committee. Since 1948, which was the date of its creation, that ad hoc committee has been convened only three times. You can see what can possibly happen when you have a committee which is made up entirely of judges. It is extremely important that both lawyers and laymen have a distinct say in the operation of this committee. I cannot express how strongly the entire committee felt about this particular area.

Let me say this, of all the proposals that were submitted by the sub-committee, this particular proposal was the only one that came out of the sub-committee that was adopted by the entire committee without a single word changed.

I implore you—and this is the first time I have spoken on the floor of this Convention—to defeat this amendment and to leave the entire section intact.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Buck.

DELEGATE BUCK. I wish to speak in support of the committee's proposal. Next to merit selection, upon which this assembly has already spoken, I do not think there is anything that would do more to improve the administration of justice than the adoption of the provision of the Judiciary Committee in regard to removal, suspension, discipline and the compulsory requirement of judges. I certainly urge this assembly to support the committee proposal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barry.

DELEGATE BARRY. I speak on behalf of the committee briefly, Mr. President. The co-chairman did not give any explanation of this new section to the Pennsylvania Constitution, but I think, in looking at it, it is a new and novel thing in which for the first time there is some system of disciplining judges who up to this time, as our co-chairman has said, are heads of groups in Pennsylvania. We feel that if there is anything wrong with our judicial system, this is a long step forward to remedying what ailments there are in it.

As far as the specific proposal is concerned, the amendment that there be only judges on this board, we feel that this would be a mistake. It was discussed at some length in our sub-committee and before the standing committee. We feel that if a man should be tried by his peers, a judge should be tried ultimately by judges. But the public, besides the judges, has an interest in this board and should be represented; the legal profession has an interest; laymen have an interest.

We have no way of saying whether or not the New York board should have met more often than it did, but if there are laymen on the board and if there are lawyers on the board, there will not be the same imputation of misconduct as if it is composed entirely of judges.

We feel, as a matter of fact, that this board will not meet too often because the Supreme Court is going to call an erring judge in and say, here, we made an investigation, we feel you should do this or that. You should get out of this incompatible activity, you should do this, you should do that, you should resign. We feel that the hearings that will be held by this board will be few in number, but, if you have a board composed entirely of judges, you are going to have, perhaps, some difficulty because of the fact that only judges are represented and the people will ask what you are doing.

We feel that the public interest is best served by having laymen on it and by having lawyers on it, but still having a majority of the board composed of judges, so that ultimately the erring and the unerring will be tried by their peers.

This was very carefully thought out in the final conclusion of the sub-committee and the standing committee.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. President, it is difficult for me to understand the change that this amendment represents. Nothing of this sort was considered in the committee. I can only assume that this change is proposed now in view of the change that was made in the idea of selecting judges. You will remember the screening committee, if I might call it that, was to be composed of lawyers and laymen with the majority laymen. That has all been knocked down in the day of great struggle in this assembly so that now we have gone back to the traditional method where selecting judges by any selective process must be exercised only by the political authorities. We are back to the status quo.

Assuming we are back to the status quo, we will add to it the fact that we have the amendment allowing a vote, of the operation of the sitting judge rule, to lock the people selected in their offices as judges. The hope is that we can keep them in there for their lifetimes.

Mr. President, when it comes to any dispassionate inquiries as to whether they meet up with the standards the public wants in their judges, all of the laymen are to be taken out. It is about time we began to consider the posture in which this Convention is putting itself in the eyes of the public. I believe this amendment should be defeated.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Curran.

DELEGATE CURRAN. Mr. President, I think that there is some little misunderstanding with respect to this particular amendment and, perhaps, that is our responsibility for not explaining in more detail the exact composition and procedure which will be required under our new judicial inquiry and review board.

For the sake of meeting the Shettig amendment head on, may I just explain to you briefly, because I do not want to overtalk this particular issue.

In our particular judicial inquiry and review board which is composed of nine members, five of which are judges, that particular board is only constituted for the purpose of receiving, investigating complaints, taking testimony and making a recommendation to a higher body.

We feel in that regard we have given sufficient protection to judges, if judges disagree with this concept. By that I mean, in the first instance, the judicial inquiry and review board, which is composed of nine members, has the controlling number of five members being judges, but they actually take no specific action on any complaint.

The judiciary inquiry and review board makes recommendations to the Supreme Court where there are seven judges, and these are the people who actually make the final decision regarding suspension, removal or discipline, so that in that regard, if there are any judges or anyone who fears that judges will be crucified, we only say to them that we feel they are well protected, and rightly they should be. But please understand that this amendment may well be confused in that for the purpose of advocating this amendment we are saying that we want five judges because they are going to make a decision. That is not true. This board is only going to make a recommendation and in that regard we thought it salutary if there were lawyers and lay people on that board, not only to understand judges but, perhaps, to understand the complaintants.

We ask you as the committee to defeat this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, I believe that the Judiciary Committee has explained this fully and I hope to the satisfaction of the proponent of the amendment. I move the question.

DIVISION ONE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We open the voting machine and we are going to vote on the first division first.

Is there any question that we are going to vote on this in two parts, and the first part we are going to vote on consists of the first four lines, down to line 4 where it says, "members of the in line 7 and all of lines 8 and 9." We will unlock the voting machine. The question is, will the Convention agree to the amendment being offered by Delegate Shettig in connection with the first four lines on your printed sheet.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the first part of the amendment to the Shettig amendment?

DIVISION TWO

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will recognize Delegate Shettig for discussion of part 2.

DELEGATE SHETTIG. Mr. President, I had discussed briefly part 2. It has been called to my attention by one of the delegates that one of the words that should be in that sentence was left out when it was transcribed.

This amendment has been changed, and I think the word that was left out on the second line after the word "otherwise" should be the word "disciplined." So it should read, "But in no event shall any justice or judge be suspended or removed from office or otherwise disciplined, for or by reason of any decision rendered by him."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think we can all make that correction in connection now with the typographical error at this time.

Is there any delegate that has any question of where the word "disciplined" goes?

DELEGATE CURRAN. Perhaps a brief statement will make this whole amendment very simple. This amendment relates to a section regarding the standards for which judges would be subject to review.

We had said to Delegate Shettig that we in no event intended any judge to be subject to review for the import or content of a particular decision that he has made. We feel there are already sufficient remedies in our procedure for reviewing decisions. I think the misunderstanding comes from two phrases in our particular standards which relate to conduct which prejudices the proper administration of justice or brings a judicial office into disrepute. If, perhaps, we have not made this clear and there is some misunderstanding that a judge could be reviewed for the contents of a decision, then we would have no objection to this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I think Delegate Curran just answered my question, that the committee would have no objection to this language being inserted.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. I was not on that sub-committee, but as one of the members of the Judiciary Committee I certainly object to inserting this language. Anybody ought to know that this is the law. A child graduating from high school could tell us, I believe, that we should not put this in a Constitution. The judge is not to be penalized because he makes a decision someone does not like. I think we would be somewhat in the nature of a laughingstock to put this in the Constitution. I am sorry to speak so plainly, but that is what I think.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the second part to the amendment offered by Delegate Shettig?

SHAPIRO AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 16), page 11, lines 28 and 29, by striking out "subsection (c)" and inserting: subsections (c) or (d)

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 16), page 11, line 29, by striking out "or judge" and inserting: , judge or justice of the peace

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 16), page 12, line 4, by striking out "or judge" and inserting: , judge or justice of the peace

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 16), page 12, line 8, by striking out "or judges" and inserting: , judges or justices of the peace

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. President, I hope someone on the committee will correct me if I am wrong in my statements that I am about to make with respect to what went on in the Judiciary Committee with respect to this article.

The present provisions submitted by the committee with respect to removal, suspension, discipline and retirement of justices of the peace simply reads and I am reading from page 13, sub-section (d), "Procedures for the removal, suspension, discipline, and compulsory retirement of justices of the peace shall be as prescribed by general rules of the Supreme Court." I stress the word "procedures."

The section which precedes the sub-Section (c), which starts on page 11, deals with the suspension, removal and discipline of justices and judges.

At one point in the discussion of this article before the Judicial Committee the question was raised and the statement was made that it was intended that the judicial inquiry board be empowered to deal with misconduct in office of justices of the peace, as well as other justices and judges. At some point or other someone made the statement that the word "justices," as it was then ruled, and it was some weeks back, was intended to include justices of the peace.

I have examined the two sub-sections as they came out of the committee in the present Proposal No. 7. It is my humble opinion when we say "Procedures for the removal, suspension and discipline and compulsory retirement of justices of the peace," does not cover the matter entirely and there are several places in sub-Section (b), if we mean to include justices of the peace and put them under the jurisdiction of the judicial inquiry and review board, we must say justices of the peace, as well as justices and judges.

The sole intent of this amendment is to make sure the judicial inquiry board has the power to suspend, remove or discipline a justice of the peace. I do not think that saying at the end of the section in a separate sub-section that the procedures for doing so shall be as prescribed by the general rules of the Supreme Court is sufficient, unless we have previously given to the judicial inquiry board the power to do that, that is to suspend, remove or discipline those officers.

Accordingly, I have inserted in lines 28 and 29 on page 11, I have changed the language in sub-Section (b) to sub-Section (b) or (c), the (c) referring to justices of the peace.

I have inserted the words justices of the peace in line 29 and I bring them specifically under the jurisdiction of this board.

I have inserted the words "justices of the peace" in the place which says that any justice or judge may be retired for disability seriously interfering with the performance of his duties, so it now includes justices of the peace.

In line 8 on page 12, "The board shall keep itself as fully informed as may be of facts and circumstances relating to justices or judges," I want to insert "justices of the peace" there.

There are several other places where reference is made to justices or judges, and I have not inserted justices of the peace because they clearly are procedural and sub-Section (c) takes care of that.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barry.

DELEGATE BARRY. Mr. President, the appellation which includes justices of the peace is correct because in sub-Paragraph (d) on page 13 there is a provision that, "procedures for the removal, suspension, discipline and compulsory retirement of justices of the peace shall be as prescribed by general rules of the Supreme Court." The Supreme Court, if it chooses, makes the justices of the peace subject to this judicial inquiry and review board. I would rather think they would not, because we have at present about 4,000 justices of the peace in Pennsylvania and under the new Constitution we will have about 1,000. It seems like this would be an awful number to be subject to special appointees, being nine in number, have formal hearings, have to report to the Supreme Court, and then having the Supreme Court review the whole thing and come down with a decision about these 4,000 men. It was not our intent to make them subject to this rather elaborate machinery unless the Supreme Court so wanted it.

We have about 300-some judges in Pennsylvania, seven justices and seven judges of the Superior Court. We feel that this is what we intended to do to cover the major judiciary, not the minor judiciary, but the procedure and mechanics are here for the Supreme Court to implement that at a later time.

We are very much against making it mandatory in the Constitution.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. May I examine the chairman of the sub-Committee?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Certainly. Delegate Barry will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Does the phrase, "any justice or judge may be suspended, removed from office or otherwise disciplined for violation of Section 15 of this article, misconduct in office, neglect of duty, failure to perform his duties or other conduct which prejudices the proper administration of justice," does that provide for any procedure?

DELEGATE BARRY. Not precisely. I will refer you to sub-Paragraph (e), "Any justice, judge or justice of the peace who shall be convicted of misbehavior in office by a court of competent jurisdiction, who shall be disbarred as a member of the bar of the Supreme Court, or who shall be removed from the Supreme Court, shall automatically forfeit his judicial office and thereafter be ineligible for judicial office."

That provides a specific provision about justices of the peace, and specifically in Section 15, as Delegate Curran pointed out, and we have pointed out in sub-Paragraph (b), "Justices of the peace shall be governed by rules or canons which shall be prescribed by the Supreme Court." It is taken care of both in Section 15 and Section 16.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I will not belabor the point, but I do not agree with you that it is covered, and I have not by my amendment, subjected justices of the peace to the elaborate procedures set forth in sub-Section (c). I have simply provided they may be removed from office. I have provided the board shall keep itself informed of their activities. I left the rest of it to sub-Section (d) which does provide for procedures. I submit, that the first parts of (c) do not deal with procedures for removal, they merely set the grounds for removal.

DELEGATE BARRY. Just briefly, we feel they should be not part of any of this board's apparatus, their investigating procedures, or anything else. Even the investigation may be more of a burden on this board than any other thing it is required to do. Unless the Supreme Court requires it explicity, we feel it should not be mandated in the Constitution.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, may I move the question?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may. Are we ready for the question? Did you want to make any further statement, Delegate Shapiro, or are we all set?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I do not want to make any further statements, except that I do not think the committee was listening when I made my point.

I have not required the board to do any of the things with respect to the justices that they do as judges. I simply put the justices under their jurisdiction.

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Shapiro?

SHAPIRO AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 16), page 13, line 22, by striking out "or judge" and inserting: , judge, or justice of the peace

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will hear from Delegate Shapiro in connection with the amendment.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. President, I realize that this adds further language, specifically four words to the proposal, but I should like to see justices of the peace under the same sanction with respect to running for public office while they hold the office of justice of the peace as our judges and justices. It seems to me the same considerations apply.

All considerations which compel us, or which persuade us, that judges who sit in judgment with respect to matters of perhaps more consequence, all these things tell us these men should not run for political office, while they remain judges. I think all of those arguments apply in the case of the justices of the peace, even though the matter is of, perhaps, a lesser consequence. They are of equal consequence to the people that come before them.

We will not have justice if we allow justices of the peace to remain in office as justices of the peace and run for other offices.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May we hear from the committee in connection with this amendment?

DELEGATE BARRY. There are all kinds of prohibited activities, and we feel this is one that unduly restricts justice of the peace activities. It is not a major judiciary office the same as the court of common pleas judge, and we feel this would be an unwarranted invasion and it is unnecessary.

As Governor Scranton now points out, if the Supreme Court should at any time feel this is necessary, to provide by rule or canon that they not be allowed to secure other public office, this is still within the framework of the flexibility of our provision.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Rappaport.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Can Delegate Shapiro answer a question for me?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Certainly. Proceed.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Delegate Shapiro, do you include within your definition of justice of the peace all judicial officials sitting in courts not of record, regardless of the particular title they might have?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I do not know what else we have, Delegate Rappaport. I think we have only judges, justices and justices of the peace under the judicial proposal that we now have before us.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Curran.

DELEGATE CURRAN. This amendment strikes a familiar tone. I think I might point out, when we were considering the amendment to Section 15, I think it was Delegate Baldus that had an amendment similar to this which would have prohibited justices of the peace from holding any other office in political parties, or political organizations, or elected office for profit, something similar to this that we already considered.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are we ready for the question? Would you like to be heard again Delegate Shapiro?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. No, Mr. President.

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Shapiro?

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Bunting. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BUNTING. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BUNTING. Mr. President, I know that a few days ago I asked the status of the register of wills, and Delegate Amsterdam suggested that we could bring it up under the schedule, but I would like this committee to give their reasoning as to why the register of wills was not included as being expressly subjected to the canons of ethics. Would either Delegate Curran or Delegate Barron enlighten me on that point?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Bunting, would you restate your question? Some of the delegates did not hear the question.

DELEGATE BUNTING. I feel as though I have been complimented because they would like to hear my question.

I would like to know the thinking of the committee, the sub-committee, as to the status of the register of wills and why that judicial officer was not made expressly subject to the canons of ethics.

DELEGATE BARRY. There is a lot of judicial officers besides judges, such as the board of viewers, and other bodies, that have a judicial or quasi-judicial function.

The register of wills, of course, has the judicial function in passing on matters coming before the register, but this is not a judicial officer in the sense that a judge is a judicial officer.

This is an intermediate hearing body, even though it has judicial functions. It is passed on in that case to the orphans' court or to the new orphans' court division, and we could not include such officers to have a quasi-judicial function that are really not judges.

DELEGATE BUNTING. Mr. President, the particular cause of my concern is the fact that the register of wills does have original jurisdiction in probate matters to determine whether a will is executed by a person of sound mind, and with that not being subject to undue influence, and then the present rules provide that orphans' court will have appellate jurisdiction as distinguished from original jurisdiction.

Is it the intent somewhere along the line that the orphans' court can acquire that original jurisdiction?

DELEGATE BARRY. The board of viewers, for example, hears cases and as a judicial function until someone takes an appeal from the board of viewers to court. In performing such a judicial function, it is not actually acting like a judge. It was not intended that these intermediate or lower forms of judicial functions, so-called, would be subject to the provisions of this article. It is not a real judicial function.

DELEGATE BUNTING. All right.

But then the Supreme Court can by its own motion, if you will, include the register of wills under the canon of ethics, if it so desires?

DELEGATE BARRY. The Supreme Court is, of course, in charge of the entire judicial system, and I think it could set standards for anything underneath it that it wanted to.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY JUDICIARY COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, who is going to, as I understand, discuss the schedule.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, the schedule to the Judiciary Article, which begins on page 15 of Committee Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 20, and goes through to page 31 is before us at this time. Since the schedule will naturally have to follow the changes in the article itself, those changes will be made automatically. I would hope that would be done within the course of the next 24 hours, if it is at all possible for the committee to do so. They will be changes that will be automatic as a result of changes that were made in the schedule.

However, there are a number of items, I understand, such as an amendment to the schedule that various delegates have proposed, and I wonder whether we might not at this time take those which have been presented to the Chair so that we can see whether they do affect the items of the schedule which will not be changed, unless they are changed by this assembly.

Mr. President, I suggest at this time that we start the amendments and see whether it is workable. That would save some considerable time at a later date.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want the delegates to know that I certainly am in wholehearted accord with your suggestion that we try to complete this amending process this evening.

SHOEMAKER AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule (Sec. 3), page 15, line 29 by striking out "orphans' " and inserting: estates

Amend Schedule (Sec. 3), page 16, line 3 by striking out "orphans' " and inserting: estates

Amend Schedule (Sec. 4), page 16, line 6 by striking out "orphans' " and inserting: estates

Amend Schedule (Sec. 4), page 16, line 9 by striking out "orphans' " and inserting: estates

Amend Schedule (Sec. 13), page 20, line 25 by striking out "Orphans' " and inserting: Estates

Amend Schedule (Sec. 13), page 21, line 2 by striking out "orphans' " and inserting: estates

Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 21, line 13 by striking out "orphans' " and inserting: estates

Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 21, line 25 by striking out "orphans' " and inserting: estates

Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 23, line 24 by striking out "orphans' " and inserting: estates

Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 24, line 5 by striking out "orphans' " and inserting: estates

Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 24, line 9 by striking out "orphans' " and inserting: estates

Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 24, line 11 by striking out "orphans' " and inserting: estates

Amend Schedule (Sec. 15), page 27, line 11 by striking out "orphans' " and inserting: estates

Amend Schedule (Sec. 15), page 27, line 23 by striking out "orphans' " and inserting: estates

Amend Schedule (Sec. 16), page 28, line 15 by striking out "orphans' " and inserting: estates

Amend Schedule (Sec. 17), page 28, line 24 by striking out "orphans' " and inserting: estates

Amend Schedule (Sec. 18), page 29, line 3 by striking out "orphans' " and inserting: estates

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, my statement on this is going to be very short.

There is quite a question as to whether or not we have enough basic guts to make a change, but we have made enough changes to the judiciary system and I understand the only reason why the name of the orphans' court was not changed to what it really should be, the Estate Court Division, is that we had some sort of temerity expressed. I say if we are going to call a spade a spade, let us call it the Estate Court Division of the Court of Common Pleas, and that is the effect of this amendment.

I ask for the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let us hear from the committee.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I can tell this assembly that the committee did discuss the possibility.

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Shoemaker?

SILVERMAN AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Silverman.

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE SILVERMAN offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 21, line 19, by striking out "ten" and inserting: thirty, no more than fifteen of which shall be from the same political party,

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, I do not know whether I am in order at this time, but I would like to see this amendment tabled. I have asked some court personnel for some statistics which they promised to have for me tomorrow, and I think it is necessary to give it to this body before we can make intelligent decision on this very vital issue to Philadelphia. So, if I am in order in asking my own motion that the amendment be tabled, and I now so move.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair can only say that you are in order in asking it to be tabled. The Chair is also hoping, and it has been hoping, that we could complete the amending process on the judiciary this evening, so we can have it produced and put on the calendar tomorrow for second consideration, and I will say final second consideration.

I am going to ask the body if they have any objection, then, to putting this on the table?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. May I just make one comment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. As of the present moment, we have only three more amendments and the Barron amendment. This would mean that if we continue at this rate, which I have every hope we will, that yours would be the only amendment tomorrow, and it would hold up the whole procedure of the whole Convention one day.

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. Mr. President, in light of what Governor Scranton just said, I think that the body could proceed on this. I would like to make a short opening statement.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will say surely. The Chair appreciates that attitude.

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. I believe this body has heard much about the judicial backlog in Philadelphia. I just want to give you my particular experience as a plaintiff's attorney.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes. The Chair recognizes Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I just made a misstatement. I apologize to both you and Delegate Silverman. I was just informed by Delegate Barron, that what he calls both sides of the House have asked him to hold his over until tomorrow and, if that is the case, we will have another one, Leon.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I can only say that is bad news, indeed. Perhaps, there could be a reconsideration of that decision in connection with the Barron amendment. But, all right, you heard the facts.

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. I have no objection with continuing. I think since it has been started, we might as well go on.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Strickler. I just wanted to pointed out that Delegate Silverman still has the floor.

DELEGATE STRICKLER. I understand that if we act on this there will be none go over to tomorrow?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No. I think we have nine more amendments.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. On the judiciary?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. What we were hoping to do, and what I personally thought we could accomplish today, was to complete the consideration of the amendment and have this on the calendar tomorrow for second consideration. I am personally worried that we are not up to schedule and I want to see us get up to schedule so we can get finished.

DELEGATE STRICKLER. The only reason I talked to the chairman of the ad hoc committee on arrangements, we have to have this thing move along fast, but if we are going to have to continue to vote, from day to day, we cannot do our work.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I cannot do anything but agree with you. I just want to point out that Delegate Silverman has the floor.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I want to hear what Delegate Silverman has to say.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes. Would you proceed now?

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. Currently, a plaintiff has to wait seven years before his case comes to trial in Philadelphia. I believe that the current Judicial Article attacks this backlog in two ways which are very helpful.

First of all, we provide an increased and better judicial administration so we can take judges and put them where they are needed.

Second of all, I believe we have provided the machinery to remove physically or mentally incapacitated judges, but I feel that we need the third prong and, possibly, this is the most important prong, and that is, we need additional judicial manpower. I believe the 30 judges that I have asked for are really a minimum.

Now, Mr. Spector, who is District Attorney in Philadelphia, has supplied some statistics which I have been handed, and I assume they are correct. They show that jury trials in criminal cases have increased over 300 per cent in the last three years. I believe a lot of delegates had gotten this same letter. They show a civil backlog of untried cases approaching 17,000, and that does not include non-jury cases which are untried, which are in excess, I believe, of 2,300.

Added to this is the fact that recent U. S. Supreme Court decisions have made it more and more timely to try juvenile and other criminal defendants. The Gault decision, which I think we have heard something about, requires that juveniles be given the right to counsel and this, of course, makes the trial of the juvenile much more timely. The Supreme Court decision providing right to counsel in other criminal cases also makes the trial of criminal defendants much more timely, time-consuming.

All of this adds up to an enormous backlog which exists now, and all points of the backlog rally rather than shrink. There is no question that this is probably something that should have been handled by the Legislature. The seven-year backlog did not grow up in the space of five minutes. This has been accumulating for the last five, six and seven years, and the Legislature has not acted.

I think we all know there are reasons why they have not acted. These reasons do not affect this body. We can make the judicial system in Philadelphia an effective functioning order, but we need this additional manpower. I, therefore, respectfully ask for your careful consideration. This number of judges will be put in the schedule and can be changed by the Legislature. It is not something that is fixed for all time.

I have plaintiffs who are suffering and they would be most happy and most grateful, and so would I, if we could add these additional judges.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, I feel that this is one of the crucial issues in this Convention and one upon which the non-legal delegates like myself really need instruction, so I am going to ask a few simple questions in the spirit of the little boy who saw the king walk down the street naked. Everybody knew he was naked, but nobody would admit it until this little kid says, "Look, he has no clothes on."

I start with this:

I believe this Convention ought to consider very seriously the plea made by Delegate Devlin to the effect that Philadelphia needs 30 new judges. The figures have been dropped by some quarters to 24. I will buy 24. But if we need 30 new judges in Philadelphia then we make some silly kind of compromise on 10 judges, just does not make any sense to me.

I am much inspired in my remarks by the interview that Governor Rockefeller gave in New York last Saturday which was reported in the Sunday paper, in which he pointed out that a political impasse in New York lasting over two years to four years, has meant a deficit in the New York courts of, I think, 53 judges, many of them focusing upon the City of New York.

In other words, their problem is the same as our problem. Governor Rockefeller said that the reason he could not appoint these judges was because the two political parties could not get together in a sensible understanding and he was very sharp in his statement. He said this has got to stop, sensible men who are intelligent enough to run great political parties ought to be able to get together and tell me how many judges they need, where they should come from and then let me set in motion the process to provide the 53 judges that are deficit.

I think we face the same thing in Pennsylvania, we need more judges. I understand there are complex political reasons why we cannot get together on this. They are reasons which I do not understand and I do not minimize them. I told you of my participation, in part, in Bucks County in protecting the Democratic Party as firmly as I could. I would certainly expect the leaders of the Democratic Party in this body to protect themselves in this vital situation.

I do not want to see 30 judges fall into the hands of the Republican Party in Philadelphia when, as the last election showed, the citizenry of Philadelphia are slightly preponderant on the Democratic side. I respect the leaders of my party. If they are going to say, we would rather have none than have that, I think it is silly when politics degenerate to that, but I think that sometimes it has to be done.

Now, I would like to interrogate Delegate Silverman for a few moments, if I may, please.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation. Proceed with your questions.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Would the gentleman agree as a resident of Philadelphia, with Governor Rockefeller that the time comes when the Gordian knot must be cut in these matters? Is it his belief that between 10 and 30 new judges is vital to the political welfare of Philadelphia?

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. Yes.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Does he think the Democratic and Republican leadership of our State and our city is intelligent enough to get together some way to authorize these judges?

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. I am not sure I understand the thrust of that question. I have a feeling I have been led into a trap here. I am the lawyer, Delegate Michener, remember that.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Delegate Silverman. I am a country boy just like the rest of the delegates here.

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. I am finding that out.

I think I will answer that by saying that this seven-year backlog did not arise overnight. It has been growing and it continues to grow. As of this present time certain factors have prevented the Legislature from solving the problem. I am not enough of an analyst to give you the problems and analyze them in depth. All I know is that the problem exists, and I would like to solve it here. I think we can solve it here.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Do you think we are legally empowered here to do the work of the Legislature?

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. I do not believe we are empowered to do the work of the Legislature, but I think we are mandated to provide Pennsylvania and Philadelphia with a fine, workable judicial system. A person that has to wait seven years to have his case decided certainly does not feel that Pennsylvania has a fine, workable judicial system. I do not want to usurp the power of the Legislature, but if the Legislature has not acted and we are left with a situation where no matter what we do we are still not going to come up with a workable judicial system, then I think we have no choice but that we must act.

DELEGATE MICHENER. In that last statement I agree with you thoroughly, and there was no trap.

Do you think, however, if we mandate the number of required judges, that that will do the job? Will we get the judges?

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. I do not think there is any doubt about it. I believe we will.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Do you think if we do not mandate them that we will then fall in the position that New York is in now?

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. I am afraid of that.

DELEGATE MICHENER. In other words, you doubt that the Legislature will come to a conclusion on this very quickly?

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. I am afraid that there is a substantial chance that they might not resolve this problem.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, the final question, I think, cuts to the heart of the thing.

Do you think that your phrase "no more than fifteen of which shall be from the same political party" is enforceable?

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. The purpose of this phrase is to try to get bipartisan support for the 30 new judges. I am interested in having 30 new judges. I would like to take politics out of it as much as I can. I do not believe that anything else will be done. I think 15 of each party will be appointed. I believe that. But this is a safeguard to those who feel that there is a danger that the judges may not be chosen representing each political party and that is why it is there, and for no other reason. I do not think there will be any problem with enforcement. I hope not.

DELEGATE MICHENER. May I then, in conclusion, say that as a citizen who has lived in a variety of states, who has seen this problem firsthand in many parts of this country, I can only say that it is our responsibility to cut this Gordian knot. We are going to fall into the same error that New York is now in. We are going to have delays for extraneous reasons. I think we are intelligent enough to bypass that. I hope that some kind of assurance can be given us in the discussion of this amendment as to whether 30 is the point we are really interested in and whether the second part of this admirable suggestion can be put into effect. Can we safeguard the minority party?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I have been here now for about two months and I have a matter of great concern to express to this Convention. Since I have been here, we have created a commonwealth court of seven judges and we have created 66 or 67 public defenders and now we have 30 judges. Do we have enough attorneys to fill all these jobs? There are only 67 in the Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. President, I shall certainly oppose this with all the power I can and I am going to give you briefly my reasons.

When we came into this Convention, we were aware of the great giant down on the Delaware, the great city that so many people judged as so important to this Commonwealth. We came with a plan for a modern judicial system and we presented that plan. We were met by a monolithic wall this side of Philadelphia. We have tried to reach a point of agreement with the gentlemen in the big cities.

I represent the people who were pushed more than pulled into this matter. I have heard talk about the Bar Association doing all this.

Let me tell you one incident. When I was made Vice President of the Pennsylvania Bar Association, I was assigned to the task of working on Project Constitution, and I began going all around this State. I found the lawyers everywhere against it. I found the judges generally against it. They passed a number of resolutions. All the judges in Philadelphia were against it. My little movement seemed entirely futile. Somehow in the course of the next year the atmosphere changed. I will tell you why it changed.

The press, exercising its immemorial and proper function, undertook to tell the people of this Commonwealth what their judicial system was like, the shape it was in, and they also told the story on the air. That changed the thinking in the most exciting fashion, until we had this Convention.

Oddly enough, in back of this is not lawyers. Lawyers are the slowest people in the world to undertake any change. We learn a little law and a little practice in school and come out and we are dead against anybody that wants to make us learn anything new. The real moving force in this Convention, behind this Convention, is the aggregations of women and public spirited citizens everywhere who have been studying this for years and they are, more than anyone else, the ones responsible for our being here.

One of their cherished purposes is to improve the quality of judges and, particularly, they have been sold on the merit plan for judges. They have been convinced, by their own observation and what they have learned, that the minor judicial system is a burden rather than a benefit in the judicial system. They have a number of others like this.

I want to call your attention to what has happened. We voted for 10 additional judges to go to Philadelphia County. Now, Mr. President, I do not know whether we can sell this in our part of the country. When we tell them it is 30 and, if we were to go home and say to them, oh, we promised them 30, what did you get when you got 10? Very little. We got some valuable things here, but nothing like the improvements. There is no improvement in the selection of judges, the justices of the peace are fastened on the body politic forever, and here we are asked to vote for 30 judges. We cannot sell 10 with all we have.

I was interested in what Delegate Michener had to say. I might say to Delegate Silverman that when he talked about Delegate Michener as a trapper, he has mistaken his man. He is thinking of Robert W. Service. Maybe Delegate Silverman is too young to know about Robert W. Service and Dangerous Dan McGrew. Service was the trapper, not Delegate Michener. However that may be, I think the time has come for us to try to help out our distinguished and capable President in his power to demand unanimous consent and see if we cannot get together here in some kind of agreement.

Goodness knows, I will not be one of the negotiators. I am not a negotiator, I am just a storm trooper, or the equivalent of that, that is usually shot down, too, in the process. But I think there ought to be some conferences here. It is not going to be all on one side, however. I say that these proceedings, these programs that we have fostered so carefully all over the State and brought down here, have not amounted to anything.

Let me call attention to this last debate where we could not have any selection committee, but we could have a committee to examine and remove judges. We had an attempt immediately to take the laymen off that so that the lawyers would be locked in. That is just what they have been saying about them. This is not a lawyers' meeting. This is not a lawyers' movement. It is a movement of public spirited people.

I, for one, want to speak definitely against this. I will fight with all I have against it because it is not fair. It is an imposition on the people of this Commonwealth for us to go out and tell them that we are to give 30 judges to Philadelphia.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Thomson.

MOTION TO TABLE

DELEGATE THOMSON. Mr. President, I, with a number of other delegate laymen here who are not attorneys, have sat here and we have heard debates, we have heard discussion, and I want to move this entire subject be laid on the table because it is not a Constitutional matter at all. This is a legislative matter, pure and simple. I do not think it has any place in this Constitutional Convention. I, therefore, move to table it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have a motion by Delegate Thomson.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I will second that.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It is seconded by Delegate O'Donnell. The motion is to put the Silverman amendment on the table. I am going to unlock the voting machine because all those voting "yea," will vote in favor of tabling the Silverman amendment. Those voting "nay" will vote to reject the motion.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hocker. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE HOCKER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE HOCKER. I have a parliamentary inquiry. If we table this, at a later date will we have a right to offer amendments to this same section?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has to be called off the table.

DELEGATE HOCKER. The section pertaining to the—PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, I understand. You will have the right to offer other amendments to the same section and, if you want to discuss this amendment, it will have to be recalled.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Murray. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE MURRAY I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE MURRAY. This morning I presented a proposal. It was ruled by the Chair to be out of order in the Convention. Could I have a reason and what my prerogatives are in this matter?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Murray, you are inquiring about the appeal from the order?

DELEGATE MURRAY. Yes. I did not understand the reasoning. It was against the Constitution, I was told. I would like to know what section.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It was the Bill of Rights, but we will have an opinion written and we will have it distributed to you.

DELEGATE MURRAY. I would like to reserve my right of appeal until after I receive a written opinion. Is that all right? Do I have that right?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You will have the right to appeal tomorrow, the Chair has ruled, because you are entitled to get a copy of the opinion. You will get a copy of the opinion late tonight.

CAVEAT TO ALL DELEGATES

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair wishes to recognize Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, a caveat to all of us who are delegates in this Convention. Out of the schoolboy book of verse:

"Time was when time had all the time time ever had. Now time has no time at all and time moves on very much apace."

Thank you, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I thank the delegate.

SILVERMAN AMENDMENT No. 2 TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Silverman.

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE SILVERMAN offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 22, line 6 by removing the period after "business" and inserting: , and shall be responsible for the orderly administration of all courts within the judicial district, subject only to direction in administrative matters of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. The President Judge of the common pleas court may appoint one or more administrative directors to serve at his pleasure for purposes of assisting him in performance of his administrative duties. He shall promulgate administrative regulations as he may deem necessary.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes again Delegate Silverman in connection with this amendment.

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. Mr. President, I apologize for taking the time of the Convention. This is a very simple amendment which writes into the schedule dealing with Philadelphia the office of court administrator, which already exists. I feel that we need this because of the large problems which a large judiciary presents in Philadelphia.

The system which we have now seems to work quite well and I would like to make sure that there is a provision for it so that it can continue to function.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is there any discussion on this amendment? Does the committee have any position on this amendment?

Delegate O'Donnell will now speak on behalf of the committee.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, this is a matter which was extensively discussed in the Judiciary Committee, originally in sub-Committee E, so-called, on court administration and on court structure, that is, the Woodside-Sprogell Commission, and later the approval of the full Judiciary Committee was derived on this precise point.

The thrust of the Silverman proposal would be largely to destroy the unified system which has been erected throughout the length and breadth of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania outside Philadelphia. It would do it in this way, the Judiciary Article, in chief, not only requires the Supreme Court to appoint a court administrator, but permits the Supreme Court to appoint such subordinate administrators as the Supreme Court shall decide as the need arises.

Now, that language was put in there and put in there for a very good reason. It was put in there for the reason that we know there are some jurisdictions in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania which are not handling their business very well and, if you will just bear with me a moment, I will give you some of the statistics which we reviewed.

We noted that Philadelphia is about six years behind in its legal business. We noted that next to Philadelphia is Pittsburgh, which is about four years behind in its legal business. We also noticed something else. We noticed that a county which is adjacent to Philadelphia, with a population that is close to and, at present, projected to be greater than Pittsburgh, to wit, Delaware County, has a zero backlog. In fact, the trial lawyers' complaint from Delaware County—and I am sure Mr. Curran, one of your own delegates, will back me on this—is that they get to court too fast in Delaware County, not too slow. It takes about three months between the time a case is filed and the time a case is tried.

We know it is going to be necessary for the Supreme Court under their administrative setup to make a determination as to what it is that is holding each of these jurisdictions up. Why is it that some handle their business so well and others so poorly? The thrust of this item in the schedule would be to take Philadelphia, in part, out from under the jurisdictional supervision of the Supreme Court.

I urge that you reject this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Silverman.

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. I do not think there has been anyone in this Convention more in favor of a unified judicial system than I am. I just cannot see how providing for a court administrator to help Philadelphia run its judicial business in any way defies a unified judicial system. We have a computer which is ordered and which requires handling by skilled personnel. It is due to arrive this year or next. The court administrator has been working for two years so that the entire expedition of judicial business can go forward.

I just want to provide by way of this amendment that it continues, that there will be no hiatus. I am sure in my own mind that the chief justice will make such provision, but in order that the work can go forward in an orderly fashion and that Mr. Blake and the rest of his staff will continue to function once this article goes into effect, I ask that this provision be incorporated in the schedule. If we see that something happens and it does not work, the Legislature can go ahead and remove it. It is not something that may be permanently engrained. The president judge of the common pleas court can make changes in it. The chief justice of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court can make changes. This is not something that is permanent. It is designed as a transient paragraph which will help in the judicial business of Philadelphia go forward smoothly.

I ask your support on this amendment.

The question recurs,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Silverman?

ABERMAN AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Aberman.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE ABERMAN offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule (Sec. 7), page 17, line 7, by removing the period after "hereafter" and inserting: and present justice and judge of the Supreme and Superior Courts may be elected to and complete one more term of office provided that such justice or judge has not attained the age of seventy at the time of such election.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Aberman.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Mr. President, it is that time of the evening when we once again become solicitous of the general health and well-being of those members of our delegation who have on succeeding evenings reminded us we were rapidly approaching the end of our working day.

Without picking on my good friend, Delegate Bloom, I was moved when I read Section 7 and I heard some of the discussions this afternoon about the question of the mandatory age being the age of 70. It struck me that we are working an injustice on certain members of the appellate courts because of the fact that they did not choose to run under the system that we are now creating. I have no exception to the system we are now creating, I want you to understand that. We have now placed an element of unfairness upon these appellate court judges because of the fact that they may be retired before the age of 70 by virtue of the existing provision and have not been able to accommodate their economic well-being for this transitional period. I think we must take advantage in this limited area of an amendment to the schedule. I think that the experience on the appellate court is valuable and I think we are not attempting to remove that experience. I think that in this limited area we should not work an injustice upon these men and, accordingly, I think that this in this limited area works what I consider to be a fair form of justice and requires them only that they not be 70.

Now, we have talked about the mandatory age. You heard my prior comment this morning.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Filson.

DELEGATE FILSON. I would like to ask Delegate Aberman a question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed.

DELEGATE FILSON. Mr. President, precisely what would this do with the present justices of the Supreme Court and the judges of the Superior Court? Are they not presently on a long-term basis?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. It is my understanding, Mr. President, that the language of the original Printer's No. 20 in Section 13 provided that the terms of the justices and the judges shall hereinafter be 10 years.

What this means in terms of this amendment is that the present justices who had not attained 70 at the time of the potential or possible re-election would be precluded from serving any additional term.

Now that was the purpose for putting in this amendment, to permit these people to have the additional term.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Burkholder.

DELEGATE BURKHOLDER. The Committee on Tenure considered this entire question and felt that it would be unfair if judges who were elected, say, at age 63 for the first time would be forced to retire at age 70. So we approved the provisions of Section 7 of the schedule, which provides that any judge who is now serving—whether he is serving a 21 year term as a justice of the Supreme Court or a 10 year term as a judge of the Superior Court, or a local judge—shall have the right, in any event, to finish out his current term.

For example, in Lancaster Judge Brown was elected at age 63, I believe, and he was very much concerned that he would not be able to finish out his term and qualify for the pension to which he would normally be entitled. The purpose of the schedule is to do just that.

I must confess that I do not quite understand what the purpose of the proposed amendment is. Is it to give Supreme Court justices a chance to run for another 21 year term or is it to give them a chance now to run for an additional 10 year term regardless of their age?

The Committee opposes this amendment.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Mr. President, if I may respond, I do not think you have dealt with the problem I concerned myself with. Suppose Judge Brown was now 66 and wanted to run again. Suppose he was now up for re-election today and he were to run? You are now saying to him that he must retire at the end of four years.

DELEGATE BURKHOLDER. That is correct, and that is the purpose of the article and the purpose of the article as presented to this Convention by the committee.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I am sorry, it is late in the day, I am tired and I have a cold, but I seriously do not understand this at all. You do not want to give a member of the Supreme Court—incidentally, every one of them will be over 70 when their 21 years are over?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. That is the information I have, but there are other members of the other courts that may not be.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Then I would think you want to take the Supreme Court out of here right away. That is No. 1.

No. 2, with regard to the Superior Court, we give them the opportunity of completing their present terms, which are 10 years. They can then run again if they wish to until they are 70 years of age. If they do not want to run again, they may be used, under the retirement plan, in any way that they and the Supreme Court sees fit. I think we are giving them a very fair deal.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Put it this way, you are not allowing them to remain on the Superior Court under your plan, is that correct?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. No.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. They cannot be appointed to business of the Superior Court.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. They can run for the Superior Court, but your point is well taken in only one instance, that is, where you have a Superior Court judge whose term runs out and he can only run for 10 more years, which is what he can run for now, incidentally, there is no change in it. He might be between 60 and 70 years old.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. That is right.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Our point is that we take care of them in two ways, one, he could run and retire at 70, and another way, he does not have to run and he could continue to function as a judge under the retirement plan. Is that not correct?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. That is exactly right.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. We think this is just as fair as you can be.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I am suggesting that simply permitting him to run and complete an additional term would be fair. I never asked a judge to come from the Superior Court to serve in the common pleas court. I do not go into court that often. I am sure the appellate bench would much prefer to serve on the appellate bench.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. May I interrogate?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. So that we can have this matter before us four-squared, it seems to me, Governor Scranton is absolutely right. This certainly could have no application whatever to any justice of the Supreme Court, that would seem to be crystal clear. I have here in my hands the Pennsylvania Manual, and I looked down the list of the Superior Court judges to see when their terms expire and I just checked their dates of birth and, unless I am radically mistaken, the only judge who could gain any advantage of this would be Judge Montgomery, which would authorize him to run once more, which would then put him into the area of giving him about a half term if a limit of 75 years of age were placed on it.

I would suggest this, I do not know what the feeling of this body is, but I would wonder if Delegate Aberman would be willing to accept an amendment to exclude the words "justice and" in all reference to the Supreme Court in its entirety and simply add in there, "provided, however, that no judge shall serve after the age of seventy-five." That is the only way I think this could be acceptable at all.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I should like to call Delegate Aberman's attention to the Act which is presently in effect in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in the particular area in which this particular amendment is disposed. There would be no reason why this man who might be 68 years of age and who wanted to run again for Superior Court could not do so. If he ran again for Superior Court and was on the bench for two years and was mandatorily retired, the present Act which is in effect in Pennsylvania would permit him to be retired from the Superior Court and draw his full salary for the remainder of his term.

Upon this basis and for this reason alone, if for no other, I would suggest that the amendment be voted down.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I would like to ask Delegate Aberman a few questions.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, indeed. He will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Are you saying by your amendment that if a man is 68 years old and he wants to run for another term of 10 years, you want him to finish out his term until he is 78?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I did not get a chance to accept Delegate O'Donnell's amendment before you started to inquire.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. We are not on that now. I do not care whether it is 75 or 78.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I happen to think it makes a difference in terms of experience.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. In other words, you are, in effect, defeating the whole wonderful committee proposal of mandatory retirement at the age of 70, which I think the committee has done an excellent job on.

Therefore, Mr. President, I have to rise in support of the committee proposal. I think this is a very simple question to settle in the minds of the delegates.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Is this interrogation, sir?

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I have completed my interrogation, sir. I am now making a statement.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I have not responded.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will give you an opportunity to respond.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Therefore, Mr. President, it appears to me that the committee has adequately taken care of this problem, and I move the previous question, and I will now give Delegate Aberman an opportunity to make his closing remarks.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. That is very nice of you. Thank you.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We promised Delegate Aberman that opportunity, and we will work it out.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I should respond now and save my closing. The answer to Delegate Pasquerilla is not that I am attempting to destroy any wonderful plan. You know as well as I do that we have created some wonderful plans around here which I am very much in favor of, and there is not one writ or one motion here that attempts to destroy that mandatory requirement which we had established.

As I now find myself down to naming Justice Montgomery, when, much to my surprise, I thought I was dealing with three or four men, the point I am making is simply this, you are creating a transition. You are creating a situation where judges do not have a chance to readjust.

If we deal only with Justice Montgomery, I will speak about him. He came on the bench, and now you are saying to him that you mandatorily retired. Change your life. I say that is manifestly unfair, and, if I have to deal with one man, I will deal only with one man. You are being unfair to him, and that is my response to you.

I am not attacking your mandatory requirement. I am simply saying, if you are going to legislate in a schedule—and I feel very strongly about this and I have studiously avoided getting up with respect to this entire article before—if you are going to legislate this article, be fair to the one exception that you are going to put out of business.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Strickler. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE STRICKLER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE STRICKLER. In the proposal now under the amendment, it says that the justice and the judge of the Supreme and Superior court may be elected. Has not this Convention already decided that all those people shall be appointed? Would this not be contrary to that which we have passed?

I am asking a parliamentary question.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I would note in the scehdule from which this language was drawn that the word "elected" is in the fourth line. I would be happy to amend it to make it consistent. This is retention on a "yes"-"no" ballot.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The answer to your question is, I think the delegate is right.

Now, the Chair recognizes Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. We have gotten this thing down to where we are not talking about the Supreme Court any more, because that obviously has no pertinence to it. We are talking about one judge on the Superior Court.

We made arrangements for all kinds of judges all over the universe in this arrangement. I have no objection to making an arrangement for one judge on the Superior Court, but this demands that we must take the amendment back and rewrite it so that it says that. If you do not mind, I suggest we table it until it is rewritten.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is that a motion to table it?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Mr. President, may I suggest, since everyone has a copy and Delegate O'Donnell's amendment is available, that we simply delete the words : "justice in the Supreme Court," and then vote it. I do not want to hold up this Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gouger.

DELEGATE GOUGER. I happen to be one of the pioneers of American industry in the subject of compulsory retirement. I have been given credit in various places in the industrial world in knowing as much about it as anyone and having dealt with the problem as much as, anyone. That is a matter of record. We learned in industry that retirement at 65 makes a great many things of great value to industry. It produces mobility. It provides for the young ones to come on. It provides for fresh ideas. I cannot agree with my good friend, Delegate Aberman. I disagree with him on this violent adjustment. There are many men in the room who retired early and it is not violence. I disagree with our distinguished delegate, Delegate Scranton, to make an exception for one person. This is manifestly unfair to everybody else that you retire at age 70. I think we ought to face it forthrightly. The weight of the evidence is clear and unmistakable, there is no great emotional problem in retiring at 65, and to carry a judge on to 70 or 75 is just, in my judgment, a most ill-advised move.

I think we ought to vote on this now.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does everybody want to vote on it?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I merely point out, despite what Delegate Gouger says, Judge Montgomery is in, and, I have just rechecked, he will be the only person that the schedule has not made some provision for.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Before we vote, did you want to make a statement, Delegate Aberman?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I will never disagree with my good friend, Delegate Gouger, on any point.

I would only point out to you that since we have narrowed this down to one person—I was not aware of that when this started—I accept Delegate O'Donnell's amendment of 75. I looked through the schedule and I found out that we may be treating unfairly the eleventh man from Philadelphia who will not become a judge, and the seven magistrates who will not get on the traffic court, and all the other things that are in the schedule.

I find it very difficult to say to Judge Montgomery, your experience has ended at 67, and with that I close.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

MOTION TO LIMIT DEBATE

DELEGATE THOMSON. Mr. President, we have suffered through these attorneys' free legal advice for the better part of two days, and there seems to be no end to the flow. I, therefore, in an effort to cut it a little make a motion that all debate on all future amendments in this article be limited to five minutes.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I second it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Thomson, seconded by Delegate Rappaport, that all debate in connection with future amendments on the Judiciary Article be limited.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Do we not have a rule somewhere in our rules that takes care of this matter, that you are allowed to talk so many minutes? We passed upon it before, and it was reported on by the Rules Committee.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes. We do have a rule in connection with that. Our rules provide that in connection with the amendments there is no limit on debate, that every member has a right to talk for 10 minutes and cannot talk more than twice.

DELEGATE THOMSON. I move for the suspension of that rule and that my motion should stand.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I would just like to make a suggestion from the Chair. We may be getting ourselves into a situation, Delegate Thomson, which we would not like tomorrow or the next day. I want to say that at any time, as you have noticed, we can move to close debate, and I feel that this body would be in a better position if we did move to close debate after we had determined we heard sufficient debate on it. I think it would be more elastic than providing a definite rule. This is up to you.

DELEGATE THOMSON. Mr. President, the elasticity you speak of seems to be carried to an extreme degree. If we really ever do have an emergency in the law of emergency on whether you talk for five or ten minutes, my motion was an over-all time limit on all debate in an effort to stop a laughingstock being made out of this Convention and, in order to try to meet the necessary deadline that is imposed upon us by the Act under which we are organized.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Redick. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE REDICK. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE REDICK. Mr. President, I rise for a point of information.

Does that not require a two-thirds vote to amend the rules?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will check it for you. It requires 82 votes to amend the rules.

DELEGATE FOHL. Mr. President, I think you may find it requires 82 votes to amend the rules when it has gone to the Rules Committee, but in order to suspend the rules you need 109 votes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is right.

Will the Convention agree to the motion?

STATEMENT BY DELEGATE CAMARDELLA

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Camardella.

DELEGATE CAMARDELLA. The motion that was just defeated, I urge this Convention, and especially the attorneys, they are not in court, they are not getting paid by the hour or the day, let us cut the "malarky" out and get down to business and get this thing over with.

TATE AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Tate.

DELEGATE TATE. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE TATE offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 26, lines 17 and 18, by striking out "and to be elected to and serve for one additional term"

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Tate.

DELEGATE TATE. Mr. President, this is a small effort for consistency within the Judiciary Article.

I think our general procedure has been to allow all presently sitting judges to complete their terms before they fall under the provisions of this judiciary article.

There is, however, an exception. For the 22 present magistrates who will make up the municipal court of Philadelphia, in accordance with the provisions under subparagraph (u) on page 26, they are provided not only with their present terms, but one additional term. In my opinion, this is unnecessary. I think that it would be consistent with the rest of the article if they were given a simple grandfather clause. I urge this body not to create a new experiment, an experiment for a great-grandfather clause, not just a grandfather clause, which, if adopted, in my opinion, will be an experiment in infamy.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, we have discussed this on the floor many times with regard to earlier considerations in this Convention.

We discussed it in the committee at some length and decided that the fairest thing to do, in our judgment, was to give them the initial term, since it is a shorter term than that of judges. Consequently, we were attempting to do approximately the same for everyone in length of time. It is not identical, but it is an approximation thereof.

That is all I would like to say.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is there anyone else who wants to be heard?

Delegate Tate, do you want to make a closing statement? If not, we are ready to vote.

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Tate?

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hocker. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE HOCKER. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. President, I would ask, approximately how many more amendments do we have to decide?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will endeavor to answer that.

DELEGATE HOCKER. You do not have to give me a number. Do you have a pile of them, or do you not?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have approximately 10 amendments that are sitting here.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Then, obviously, we cannot finish tonight.

MOTION TO ADJOURN

DELEGATE HOCKER. I am going to make a motion to adjourn.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, it is perfectly clear that the delegates want to finish this up as rapidly as we can. So do I. So does everyone.

From the last time I made this comment, there have been 14 more amendments coming in. Frankly, I just think this is beyond the pale. They had five days to put them in and suddenly at the last minute they bring them all in here.

Has anyone else got any amendment for the schedule on any other part of the Judiciary Article?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Yesterday, I think, or the day before, there was an amendment with respect to the commonwealth court from which there was inadvertently stricken one sentence which we were then assured would be put into the schedule.

Is it necessary for me to present that amendment, or is it necessary for me to make a special request to have that amendment prepared, or is it being prepared, or is it one of the 14 that Governor Scranton refers to?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Apparently, it is not one of the 14, unless you have asked to have it prepared. I think, if it has to be changed, there should be an amendment.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I was under the assumption it would be prepared by the staff, since it was inadvertently omitted from an amendment, and we were assured it would be.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Very well. Is there any other amendment?

DELEGATE BARRY. On the effective date of the commonwealth court, I think it was agreed there would be in the schedule an effective date of January 1, 1970. I am not putting in an amendment on that formally, but is it the understanding that this will be done?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Right.

Anyone else?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Westerberg.

DELEGATE WESTERBERG. I want to inform Governor Scranton that I have an amendment here on which I have 23 signatures. When I get 59 more, I am going to put that in and maybe, if this keeps going on very much longer the way it is going, I may put it in early.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I know about Delegate Westerberg's.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. There is also one other amendment I had prepared which I withheld from offering because I was waiting for Delegate Barron to complete action on his revised amendment that is under reconsideration.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Then we have one more Shapiro amendment coming?

Perhaps another amendment of his is coming, and that is all.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Baldus.

DELEGATE BALDUS. The delegates of Allegheny County, Governor, have a correctional amendment for the Allegheny County schedule and, also, I have an amendment which has been referred to Delegate O'Donnell for consultation on the language of it relating to the venue of the magisterial courts that I would like to present.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. May I ask a question? How many are left to go over there?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We understand we have 10 here.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. And there will be three more, that is 13.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Silverman.

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. Governor Scranton, I may have two more.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gabreski. How many amendments do you have?

COMMITTEE MEETING

DELEGATE GABRESKI. We have no amendments. We just wanted to make an announcement, if we could, of the Rules Committee meeting immediately after the adjournment of this session in Room 401.

As you know, we have some important matters to discuss and to bring back to the floor of this Convention. If we can have a quorum present, we would appreciate it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. This is a very happy announcement. I am sure we all heard it.

DELEGATE HOOK. I have one amendment I am working on trying to get drafted. It is one that Delegate Keller and I have been working on all day pertaining to a problem dealing with constables and law enforcement officers.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am advised that if we include yours now we are up to 16.

Could we have 17?

The Chair recognizes Delegate Curran.

DELEGATE CURRAN. On behalf of the magistrates association of Delaware County, we have a request that there be 2,000 more magistrates in Delaware County.

SON OF DELEGATE KELLER WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want to tell you that one of our delegates has his son here. Where is John Keller, the son of Delegate Keller? He also has with him a friend, Ken Clark. We want to extend our cordial welcome to John.

ADJOURNMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hocker.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. President, I want to move that this Convention do now adjourn until Thursday, February 22, 1968, at 9 a.m., e.s.t.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Hocker, and seconded by Delegate Banes that this Convention do now adjourn until Thursday, February 22, 1968 at 9 a.m., e.s.t.

The motion was agreed to, and (at 7:00 p.m., e.s.t.) the Convention was adjourned.

PENNSYLVANIA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION 1967-1968

JOURNAL

Volume 1 Thursday, February 22, 1968 Number 49

The Convention was called to order at 9 a.m., e.s.t.

THE PRESIDENT (Raymond J. Broderick) IN THE CHAIR

PRAYER

THE REVEREND THOMAS MAY, pastor of the State Street Evangelical Church, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, offered the following prayer:

REVEREND MAY. Let all of us pray now. Eternal God, our loving Heavenly Father, early in this new day we turn to Thee with worship, prayer and praise.

We come into Thy presence, O Lord, to seek Thy blessing and benediction upon this body.

We thank Thee for the great land which by Thy mercy and grace it is our privilege to enjoy. We thank Thee Father for the faith of founding fathers in having trusted in Thee, they never faltered nor failed. We thank Thee Father for our great Commonwealth, for its fertile fields, its deep mines, the diligence and the devotion, the godliness of its peoples over the years whose efforts Our Father Thou hast blessed. We come Our Father praying Thy blessing upon this deliberate body and accept and thank Thee this morning for this Convention, as a new moving of Thy Holy Spirit in the hearts and the minds of the peoples of our Commonwealth.

We pray Our Father that this body shall serve godly purposes and then of every citizen within its bounds calm our hearts right now for the labors of this day.

We pray for Thy peace, the greatest gift Thou canst give us so that our thinking and our efforts today shall come out of hearts and minds that are pure and just; that we shall share trust today in the new way in our deliberations, in our planning.

We pray Our Father unknown to this body for Thy blessing to come its way and we would ask Thee now in these busy heavy days that lie before its close, Thou wilt bless each one; the one presiding and every delegate here, so that that which has been done with such high and literally holy expectation, shall therefore wish a new day, a new life in the Commonwealth and above all, bring honor and glory to Thee. We would pray Thy blessings upon the President of our nation, the Governor of this state, the Lieutenant Governor and those who provide leadership in this body and grant an even title, God, a sense of victory, the satisfaction of a job nobly and well done. We pray in the name and the spirit of our Blessed Lord, Thy Son, Our Saviour, Jesus Christ. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE TO THE FLAG

The Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag was recited by the Convention, led by Delegate Redick.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes the Secretary, Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, I want to submit the following requests for leaves of absence:

The delegate ex officio, DELEGATE DONOLOW, for February 21st and 22nd, because of illness in the family.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you, Secretary Michener.

Is there any objection to the leaves of absence?

The Chair hears none, and the leaves are granted.

APPROVAL OF JOURNALS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. There are no Journals to be approved this morning.

QUORUM CALL

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will now call the roll for the purpose of determining a quorum. The delegates will please record their presence by voting "aye."

The roll was recorded as follows:

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gouger. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE GOUGER. I rise for a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE GOUGER. Mr. President, there are those of us unlearned in law. There are those of us who in the judgment, I suspect, of our young crusaders have reached the age of mental senility. There are those of us who listen with great patience to the clarion voices and watch flaming swords of these young crusaders who have been so helpful to us. I do not know how we could have made it along without their invaluable help and, on behalf of all of us in this category, we want to express our profound appreciation to them. As an expression of our appreciation, may we say to you, you gallant gentlemen, learned, eager, and no doubt possessed with the great zeal of youth to do a great job for this Convention, that we are going to permit you to rest upon your labors, sheath your swords and mute your trumpets, they have been recorded in history by this time, and let those of us who are not so mentally agile do the best we can to stumble on through this thing.

May I suggest just one or two little things that may rest you from your labors. If you have a point of parliamentary procedure, for the love of heaven, go down and ask the Parliamentarian and do not grab the microphone and display your great acumen and your wisdom in posing this question.

If you have a question to the distinguished committee who is presenting this thing, please go down and ask them. You blessed people from Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, my goodness, have not we served you well up to this time? Those of us from the great middle part of this country have listened again with patience and with understanding, but rest on your labors, gentlemen.

I am going to prove that I am an old man. We cannot turn you across our knee and spank you, but there is a little button on this desk that says "nay," and there are a great many of us that have reached the point where in our impatience we may just vote "nay" to try and get it over with. I must warn you in advance, there is a little senile coalition here that is going to call the question pretty rapidly from this point on.

CALENDAR

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON SECOND CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to the second consideration of Committee Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 1, entitled:

A proposal repealing article five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania relating to the Judiciary and adding a new Judiciary article.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will proceed next to the calendar.

We are still on Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 20, and, as a matter of statistical information for those of you that think we have not been covering any ground, I want you to know that since we have been on the Judiciary Article, you have considered 92 amendments. But the figure that is, I think, more fantastic than all the other figures is, we have had prepared 164 amendments to this judiciary article and 72 of them were withdrawn. With 92 and 72, we have, in effect, been dealing in the last few days with 164 amendments. I hope our record does not go very much higher.

CORTESE AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The first amendment to be considered this morning is an amendment being offered by Delegate Cortese.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE CORTESE offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 21, line 27 by striking out "appointed" and inserting: designated

Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 21, line 29 by striking out "appointed" and inserting: designated

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We recognize Delegate Cortese.

DELEGATE CORTESE. Mr. President, the staff has advised me that the word "appointed" is much more accurate than the word "designated." This is, in a sense, correctional.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. When you say "the staff," do you mean the committee?

DELEGATE CORTESE. The committee, the legal staff.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. As soon as you finish your statement, I will ask the committee to make a statement.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. The Committee will make one now. We have no objection to this at all.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gabreski.

DELEGATE GABRESKI. Mr. President, while we are waiting to have the amendment distributed, perhaps Mr. Cortese can tell us what he means by the words "as designated by the Governor," the phrase, "The twenty-two present magistrates, as designated by the Governor," in both lines 27 and 29.

Is he meaning to infer that the provisions as to appointment of judges and justices within the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania will not apply in the City of Philadelphia?

DELEGATE CORTESE. Under the present proposal the 28 magistrates in the City of Philadelphia would constitute both the municipal court and the traffic court.

The Governor would designate from the 28, 22 to constitute the municipal court and six to constitute the traffic court.

DELEGATE GABRESKI. The provisions for appointment that are provided for in the proposal as to justices would not apply in this particular instance?

DELEGATE CORTESE. This only applies to the municipal court and the traffic court.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I would like to ask Delegate Cortese a question, if I may.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Does the change in words from "appoint" to "designate" eliminate the requirement of the two-thirds confirmation by the Pennsylvania State Senate?

DELEGATE CORTESE. This is a transition from the magistrates court to the municipal court and the traffic court. It is a transitional designation.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. You have not answered my question, either it eliminates it or it does not?

DELEGATE CORTESE. It would seem to me that the Governor would designate without confirmation.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. In other words, this is not just a correctional thing. This is a serious change of substance, is that correct?

DELEGATE CORTESE. It is a change in substance, but it is more accurately expressed to carry out the intent of the proposal, because in the proposal there is express language authorizing the Governor to designate 22 from the 28 magistrates to constitute the municipal court and six to constitute the traffic court. This is to give implementation to that expression. The authority is there. The Governor must under the proposal make his designation from the present incumbent magistrates.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Delegate Cortese, what happens if there is a vacancy between now and then, since we do have a magistrate running for the Legislature who will probably be elected?

DELEGATE CORTESE. If there be a vacancy, that appointment will be filled not under this provision, but under the standard formula of appointments and confirmation.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I see. You feel you want to eliminate the word "appointed" so as to eliminate any question of the State Senate becoming involved.

DELEGATE CORTESE. I think the word "designated" is absolutely necessary so that the Governor may carry out the authority given him in the proposal elsewhere to constitute both courts from the current personnel of the magistrates court.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Without the intervention of the State Senate?

DELEGATE CORTESE. Without it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will recognize Delegate Shrager.

DELEGATE SHRAGER. Delegate Cortese, is it your purpose not to have any check at all upon the Governor from our Legislature as to this appoinment, so he can choose any of the present magistrates and put in the traffic court?

DELEGATE CORTESE. That is a matter within the discretion of the Governor as to who should go into the municipal court and who should be designated for the traffic court.

DELEGATE SHRAGER. Do you feel it is a good idea not to have a check by the Legislature of these matters?

DELEGATE CORTESE. Mr. President, I have to repeat what I said before; there is specific authority in the Proposal authorizing the Governor to make up the municipal court and the traffic court from the personnel now in the magistrates court. He has the discretion to say by his designation who shall go into the municipal court and who shall be part of the traffic court.

DELEGATE SHRAGER. Is this not just another method of trying to do away with the two-thirds, as you have been trying to do with previous amendments?

DELEGATE CORTESE. Absolutely not. This is in the light of the authority given to the Governor in other parts of the proposal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. As a non-attorney, I fully understand what we are trying to accomplish here. This is in the schedule, and in the schedule they are providing a transitional period of appointing 22 of the present magistrates by the Governor who shall become judges of the municipal courts. I think that all this is doing is clarifying the intent of the committee. The committee has so stated that they will accept the change. It is very clear.

As I understand it, if there are new appointments, it is taken care of in the regular Judiciary Article. I think it is a very simple matter and, since the committee has said that it is acceptable to them, I would move the previous question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kline.

DELEGATE KLINE. Mr. President, this is obviously an attempt to substantially change the proposal of the committee. There is no question that there is a vast difference between the words "designate" and "appoint." An appointment carries with it the understanding, as we all have known and thought about it, that the Senate will confirm the appointment. Designation does not carry with it that weight.

I can understand that from the 28, 22 will be something and six others will be something else. But there is also a question of which shall be what or where. I think that is important and I think there ought to be a check on the Governor.

I am disturbed, first of all, with the amendment, which I will vote against, and it is up to you to vote otherwise. I am also disturbed about this, I am tired, too, but I do not think anyone should try to walk in here early some morning after a speech about how we ought to get on with our business and try to slip something through like this which means a great deal to the largest City in this Commonwealth. I do not think we should try it, and I am sure that if we try it again someone will be at the gate to guard against it.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Cortese?

The roll was recorded as follows:

CORTESE AMENDMENT No. 2 TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now we are ready for the next amendment, and this is another amendment from Delegate Cortese.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE CORTESE offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 27, line 5 by striking out "by" and inserting: in Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 27, line 5 by striking out "in the manner provided by law." and inserting: by a referendum.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed, Delegate Cortese.

DELEGATE CORTESE. Mr. President, in Philadelphia ever since 1873 the office of the prothonotary has been an appointive office. I want to make sure that I am clearly understood in the statement that this does not affect or in any way disturb any prothonotary in any other county in the Commonwealth.

Under the current Judiciary Article in Section 7 there is a provision for the appointment of the prothonotary of Philadelphia by the Board of Judges. The Judiciary Committee has removed from the office of prothonotary the constitutional protection it now has under Article II, Section 7, the reason being that that office should not be provided for in the constitution.

As you know, in Philadelphia we have the Home Rule Charter. The thought was that the office of prothonotary, in the event the electors of Philadelphia so desire, might be integrated into the Home Rule. As the law now stands, and as we have received the law from the Supreme Court, both the office of prothonotary and the office of the register of wills are outside the Home Rule Charter.

The current provision in the schedule suggests that the office of prothonotary might be made part of the Home Rule Charter under the passage of an appropriate law.

Now, here is the gist of my amendment, the basic concept of a home rule charter is to give the people who must live under that charter the right of expression, the right to say whether or not they want a home rule charter, and the electors of Philadelphia so expressed themselves, but these two offices were not included, others are, for instance, the office of the clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions, and other offices in the city government.

So my amendment merely says that if the office of prothonotary shall become a part of the Home Rule Charter, then the people of Philadelphia by a referendum should say whether or not this office should be part of the Home Rule Charter.

I may suggest that the prothonotary in Philadelphia, as against the practice, and tradition, and custom, and law, of all of the other counties in this Commonwealth, does not do all of the work, does not render all of the service that the prothonotary does in other counties. In Philadelphia, by and large, the office of the prothonotary is one of custodial records, and the work is an intra-office work.

We have, however, in Philadelphia the office of court administrator. Now, the office of court administrator does the work that is done by prothonotaries in other counties. The office of the court administrator now has supervision over the prothonotary's office to the extent that the court through the administrative judge and through the court administrator is streamlining the work and service of the prothonotary and is doing a great deal by way of programming the work, so that today in Philadelphia the office of the prothonotary is welded into the judicial structure through the office of the court administrator.

So we say if we are going to extricate the office of the prothonotary in Philadelphia and inject it into the Home Rule Charter consistent with the basic concept that gave birth to the Home Rule Charter, that should be done only by a full opportunity on the part of the electors to so say, and that is by a referendum.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. May we move the question.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. No, sir, we have not heard the facts yet.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mercy, Mr. President. Mercy.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Any time you want to make a motion to close debate, say so, and see if it has a second, and we will take a vote on it.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I yield to the chairman of the committee.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, the committee considered this in some detail on several occassions and we had agreed and it was overlooked by an inadvertence to add the words, "covered in the Home Rule Charter," by a referendum in the manner provided by law.

The words are being added by Delegate Cortese, but he has taken out the words, "in the manner provided by law." I do not know why, because the reason for it was that under the Home Rule Charter in Philadelphia the only way it can be amended is by referendum and it was agreed it would be amended in a normal way by a referendum in accordance with the rules of the Home Rule Charter. Assuming that is exactly what is meant here, this was approved by the committee.

DELEGATE CORTESE. May I say that what Delegate Amsterdam said is absolutely correct and the intent he expressed is the intent I give to the amendment I offer.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I wonder if Delegate Cortese would be good enough to accept an amendment to his amendment which would simply leave in the words, "in the manner prescribed by law?"

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. May I suggest, Mr. President, since Delegate Cortese has indicated that this is his intent, it now becomes purely a matter of style and drafting. If the Style and Drafting Committee feels in order to carry out the intent which is expressed that those words should go in, that would be sufficient, and I suggest we go to a vote on that assumption.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I want to ask the delegate whether a referendum is the only manner in which the Home Rule Charter can be changed to include an office not now covered by the Home Rule Charter?

DELEGATE CORTESE. That is correct. In other words, this amendment is in a sense technically correctional.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are we ready for the question?

DELEGATE TATE. I would like to ask the opinion of counsel, because I think Delegate Cortese has just made a misstatement of fact. I think the Home Rule Charter in Philadelphia can be amended other than by a referendum. I would like counsel to rule on that question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I do not know whether counsel can rule on that immediately. I doubt that they can. Are we ready for the question or are we not?

DELEGATE TATE. It is very material to this vote. That fact is very material to this vote, Mr. President, and it has been stated one way by Delegate Cortese, and I think he may be wrong.

DELEGATE CORTESE. Mr. President, may I answer Delegate Tate?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes.

DELEGATE CORTESE. Mr. President, in order for, let us say by way of example, the office of the clerk of the court of Quarter Sessions to become part of the Home Rule Charter, it is only necessary that an ordinance to that effect be passed. But to bring in an office which is not in the charter at all, as is the case with the office of the prothonotary, a referendum as provided by law is necessary.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are we ready for the question? We will unlock the voting machine and the question is, will the Convention agree to the amendment being offered by Delegate Cortese. All those agreeing to the amendment will vote "yea." Those that wish to reject the amendment will vote "nay."

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Cortese?

CORTESE AMENDMENT No. 3 TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The next amendment is the third amendment being offered by Delegate Cortese.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE CORTESE offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule, (Sec. 18), page 29, line 15, by removing the period after "court" and inserting: except that judges who are now serving in the orphans' court or the family court may not be so assigned without their consent.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Cortese for a statement in connection with his amendment.

DELEGATE CORTESE. Mr. President, I could explain the thrust of this amendment in one sentence. This represents the consensus of the judges of the orphans' court and of the county court, so that when these judges become members of the divisions of the Common Pleas Court they will not be able to be assigned to other services without their consent.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Chairman Amsterdam for his statement from the committee.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, we believe that this is contrary to the spirit of the unified system which we have proposed and which has been overwhelmingly approved by this body from time to time. Actually, we had a vote earlier on whether the orphans' court should in some way be separated and decided it should not. We have no doubt that the president judge will certainly keep those very qualified to handle certain cases on those cases and we need not assume, it seems to me, that they will act unintelligently or in some way that will be inimical to the best interests of the court. Therefore, we oppose this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hook.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, we have covered this subject at least 10 times at this convention, and I hereby move the question at this time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are ready for the question. We will unlock the voting machine. All those voting "yea" will vote to support the amendment. All those voting "nay" will vote to reject the amendment.

Have all the delegates present voted?

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scales. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SCALES. I rise for a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SCALES. My machine is not working and I would like to be recorded as voting "No."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Scales indicates his machine is not working. We will send out one of our electronic engineers, but in the meantime he will be recorded as having voted "No."

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Cortese?

SCHEDULED CORTESE AMENDMENTS TO PROPOSAL No. 7 WITHDRAWN

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Cortese.

DELEGATE CORTESE. Mr. President, may I suggest that as to the next two amendments which I have that they be not called at this time. In terms of sequence, this is not the time for these amendments, as I see it, to be offered.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Cortese, the only thing I can say is the committee that sets up these amendments is here and I am going to ask Delegate Orban and Delegate Casey if they will please come over, because they number them for me. The Committee does this in the morning, and I want them to determine the order. I will ask Vice President Orban and Vice President Casey if they will please come forward.

Do we have an amendment we can take in the meantime?

Delegate Cortese, the committee has decided these amendments have to be taken up now, unless you want to withdraw the amendments. You may always withdraw your amendments and you can submit them again or you may table them. This is up to the body.

DELEGATE CORTESE. Mr. President, will I have an opportunity to offer them at a later time?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. This is going to be up to the delegates. We have up until this time, Delegate Cortese, given every delegate an opportunity to withdraw his amendments. We have given him an opportunity to offer them. I do not want to deprive you of the same opportunity, but this convention can vote otherwise.

I have always permitted a delegate to withdraw any time he wanted to withdraw.

DELEGATE CORTESE. Mr. President, do I understand, if I do not offer these amendments now and want to offer them later, I need the consent of the majority of the delegates?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No, you do not need the consent of the majority of the delegates, but a majority of the delegates could vote, I think, not to accept amendments at some time or other, but that is a very serious problem that we have not faced as yet. So if the delegate wishes to withdraw the amendment, we have always applauded the withdrawal of amendments.

DELEGATE CORTESE. Rather than receive the applause, I say at this time I shall not offer them and I will offer them later.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Cortese, I just want you to know the position we are in. The Committee gives me these amendments and your amendment is next. You have another amendment. Unless you withdraw that amendment, this is the one that has to be taken up next because that is the decision of the committee composed of Delegate Orban, Delegate Casey and the attorneys for the committee. The decision is yours.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Cortese. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE CORTESE. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE CORTESE. Mr. President, for my procedural enlightment, will the President please suggest under what parliamentary authority does the Chair make that ruling?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair makes that ruling on the basis that the Chair set up a committee, a committee composed of our two vice presidents, the attorney for the Convention and the attorney for the Judiciary Committee, to furnish the Chair amendments in the proper sequence, and this is the manner in which the Chair has been conducting the Convention. I will also say to you, this body and this Chair has never denied any delegate the right to withdraw an amendment and submit it again. But, as I say, the ultimate decision on all of these things is in the hands of the body.

AMENDMENTS WITHDRAWN

DELEGATE CORTESE. I withdraw the amendments.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The amendments are withdrawn.

HOCKER-MORTON AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The next matter is an amendment being offered by Delegate Hocker and Delegate Morton.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATES HOCKER AND MORTON offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 21, lines 17 to 20, by striking out "The" in line 17 and all of lines 18 to 20

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hocker or Delegate Morton in connection with this amendment. I see Delegate Morton at his microphone, so you may proceed.

DELEGATE MORTON. Mr. President, I say to all the non-lawyers, welcome aboard on this one, because it is a non-technical one all of us can understand. The sole purpose of it is to amend to eliminate the legislation creating 10 new judgeships for Philadelphia.

I was not elected here as a member of the House of Representatives, I did not run as a member of the House of Representatives, I ran to be a constitutional delegate. I think each and every one of you ran to be a constitutional delegate and not a member of the House of Representatives. It is the House of Representatives which has the duty and the chore to create courts. This is purely a legislative matter, the creation of courts, and I say a constitutional body should not legislate. Yesterday we had the question of 30 additional courts for Philadelphia, and we overwhelmingly tabled it. In my opinion, there is no difference in legislating for one court, 10 courts, 30 courts, 50 courts, or 100 courts, it is simply legislation.

We recognize that there may be problems and there may be ills, and we may criticize the Legislature for their failure to act, but does the mere fact that the Legislature may fail to act, or have a good reason for not acting, empower a constitutional convention, those who are dedicated to writing a constitution, to begin legislation? I think it is easy for us to look and say, let us create judgeships, let us do this and let us do that, because we do not have to provide the funds for doing this.

Do we recognize that the average court costs the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania approximately $55,000 a year and 10 new judgeships would be approximately $550,000, or whether it be 30 judgeships? We do not have to provide that money, do we? Yes, it is easy for us to legislate. Is it easy for us to legislate because of the seven-year backlog over here in Philadelphia and the four-year backlog in Allegheny County? Why do we not legislate for them? Maybe Erie County has a backlog. Let us look at this backlog. We used the judges as the whipping boys for that, but I am one attorney who will say to you, and I have proclaimed that, for too long the attorneys have pointed the fingers at someone else and said, "There is a backlog because we need more judges."

The backlog exists because, for example, in Allegheny County last year out of all the cases called for trial less than 20 per cent of them went to a jury trial. The lawyers settled them on the eve of trial. If they could have settled them then, they could have settled them shortly after they were filed. This is one of the reasons for the backlog. It is not a lack of judges. I think the lay people should recognize this, that the backlog is not only because of the lack of judges.

It was very interesting for me to get a complete record from the board of judges of Philadelphia comparing what they wanted compared to the Pennsylvania Bar, and in that they did not request more judges.

I sympathize with the problem, I appreciate the problem throughout the State, but I earnestly implore you that you are here to write a Constitution, you are not here to legislate. There is no question in my mind that the creation of one, 10, 30, 50, or 100 judges throughout the State is purely a legislative matter and should be left to the Legislature.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Sprogell.

DELEGATE SPROGELL. I rise to oppose this motion for 10 new judges in Philadelphia. I protest against any new judges in Philadelphia being put in the Constitution. It does not belong here. As Delegate Morton has said, this is a legislative matter, not a constitutional matter.

Philadelphia may need them, indeed, but we have been told in our Judiciary Manual that simply putting new judges in does not take care of the backlog. When 25 per cent of the court was increased, only three per cent of the backlog was eliminated. I think they should put their house in order first and see what a new administrative job does for them. Eliminate the judges that are not doing their jobs. Try and get the lawyers to cooperate and see that the continuances are discontinued.

I feel that this is a legislative matter and I think the Legislature is better equipped to look at this more clearly than we are, and with more time. Time is not of that much essence. If Philadelphia can say that they can great-grandfather clause their magistrates in, what is 12 years? I think we have the time to look at this more carefully if the Legislature does it. I am sorry to say this but I think the Legislature is more aware when its arm is being twisted.

I think this body has lost its vision. I hope it does not lose its senses. I think our Constitution that we have now is distinctly unpalatable in many aspects, and if we put this in, it is going to be unsalable.

DELEGATE CAIN. Mr. President?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Cain.

DELEGATE CAIN. I certainly think the Convention should like to have the benefit of the committee's thinking on this before we jump to conclusions about the constitutionality and the need in Philadelphia.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, the committee also had some difficulty in trying to decide whether this was within the proper function of the Constitutional Convention. It decided that it was. We can point to a precedent as early as 1873, being the schedule for the last convention that was held in this State, that Convention also provided for additional courts and additional judges in Philadelphia.

I might say that there was considerable argument as to whether there should be 30, or 26 or some other number. It was decided that there was clear evidence that there was some additional number desirable for Philadelphia and since we were making a change that was going to be helpful to the entire judiciary system of the State, we felt that it was proper to add some additional judges, at least, to the extent that it was clearly proven to be necessary. The number 10 was chosen as the proper number in the light of whatever was given to us in the way of comments and evidence at that time. Therefore, the committee recommends we continue to have, as scheduled, the provision for 10 additional judges in Philadelphia County.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Himes.

DELEGATE HIMES. I speak for this amendment and in opposition to the committee report, primarily for one reason that has not been discussed too much on this Convention floor.

I come from an area of our State which for many years sent to our Congress in Washington a very respected and able man by the name of the Honorable Robert F. Rich. He was not only known throughout our State, but throughout all of the nation for his ability and also for one question which he posed many times to his colleagues. That was: "Where are you going to get the money?" Mr. Rich is retired now from active participation in political life, but he is still honored and revered by all who know him.

I would like to use Mr. Rich's statement for our benefit this morning, where in the world do we, as delegates to this Convention, expect to get all of the money that we have already instigated and applied to this new Constitution?

I quickly wrote down some of the things that we have already done. In the last 10 days we have brought in these tax exemptions to include the aged, the needy, the redevelopment areas, and we have given tax easements to both builders and contractors. We have taken funds from our General Assembly, funds which they have collected and distributed them about the State, rather than for us, ourselves, to tax utilities. We have set up a whole new series of commonwealth courts. We have put all JPs on a salary basis—and heaven only knows, when this is over, we may have all the constables under salary, also.

Now we are talking about creating more courts. Yesterday Delegate Pasquerilla asked where we would find all the lawyers to fill these courts. I ask today, in all seriousness, where will we find the money to pay all the lawyers? There may be some within this august body who have unlimited funds, but, again I speak for my area, which is the largest geographical area of senatorial districts in our State, and I know of no one, not one single person, that is not already concerned about the tax burden he is now carrying, and we all know that taxes are certain to increase in the years to come. We pride ourselves here that we are the architects of a new and progressive Constitution. I suggest to you that with that pride also goes some responsibility for us to give our finished document a sound economic basis. Then when we take it back to the people at home, it will be worthy of acceptance.

Therefore, I would like to suggest that at this time, if I am not already too late, that each proposal which comes before our faces in the few remaining days should perhaps be read with some dollar signs in front of our eyes. It may take a little longer to get through it, but it might make a lot more sense.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Thornburgh.

DELEGATE THORNBURGH. Mr. President, I rise in support of the amendment offered by Delegate Morton. As a member of the Judiciary Committee I was troubled during our consideration by the fact that an amendment had been offered and incorporated into our proposal which provided, first, 30 and then 10 judges for the City of Philadelphia.

The feeling grew within me that this was a gross usurpation of the legislative process, and it would be improper to provide a specified number of judges for a specified Judicial District, particularly, as has been pointed out, when we have framed and adopted a new unified judicial system not only for the State of Pennsylvania, but for the judicial district in which Philadelphia lies. It seems to me, which you are at this time to decide in this body, which does not have to deal as a continuing matter with the correction of judgeships just willy-nilly to create a magic number of judges for Philadelphia.

We have heard the complaints on this floor that the political processes of the Legislature make it difficult to get these judgeships. It is ironic to me that the very persons who raise this complaint are those to have discarded a nonpolitical method of choosing judges in this State.

It seems to me the City of Philadelphia should do as every judicial district in this Commonwealth has to do, come to the Legislature to make its case, then, if it is entitled to the judges, to speak and get them.

I vigorously support Delegate Morton's amendment and would move that any denomination of specified judges for any judicial district not appear in this Constitution or in this schedule.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scales.

DELEGATE SCALES. Mr. President, if we are not careful, someone is going to come up with a list of what judges we need in other counties in the State. Now, by pure coincidence I happen to have such a list. In my county, Mr. President, we need two judges, provided, of course, that they are of the right political party. Cambria County is apparently expecting a crime wave, because they requested five new judges, and my good friend Matt Gouger, tells me that in Franklin County they need one and three-quarter judges. My good friend, Delegate Jirolanio, would like two new judges, but he does not particularly care what counties those judges go into. A number of delegates have asked me to announce that they would like one judge less in their particular district, and they have asked me to withhold their names and the names of their counties.

Mr. President, the point is that we are here to write a Constitution. I would like to go home and tell the people that we have written a Constitution, and for that reason I support this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, I yield to Delegate Devlin.

DELEGATE GERBER. I move the question.

DELEGATE HOOK. I will second the motion.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I was recognized before the question was moved.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. There is no question but that I recognized Delegate Kauffman before.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Devlin.

DELEGATE DEVLIN. Mr. President, there has been some bitter consternation over whether or not we should put into the Constitution a number dealing with judges, and arguments for both sides can be heard as to whether or not this is a legislative matter or a matter of constitutional nature, and I can agree with both.

I did not, under any circumstances, ask my very close and very dear friend, Delegate Silverman, to try to increase the number in our Proposal No. 7 from 10 to 30, and, indeed, I asked Leon not to do that. I did not think it was the proper way to approach this problem. I am not admonishing him and he knows it, and I will be just as close to him, if not closer to him than before. I said, "Leon, if you think you made a mistake and, if that is the only mistake we have made up here, we are on the side of the angels."

Let me tell you what you have done for me personally, if you want to think that way, but let me tell you what you have done for 2 million people in the City of Philadelphia for which I am so pleased and so proud that I can go home as a party leader and be for something worthwhile. This is what you did.

The Pennsylvania Bar Plan is a good plan, generally speaking, but what it did not do, it did not move immediately into solving the unified judicial system of Pennsylvania. It set up the same work which will be carried out. I came to you as a stranger and I presented a plan, after seeing what was happening up here for a few weeks, which was known as 1204, and the only thing that I did for my court system in Philadelphia was make it unified and put it into operation immediately, and you did that for me.

The Bar plan did not have a unified system as we now have. It had a separate orphans' court, and for reasons we will not go into now, but you know why, we do have that orphans' court in the common pleas court. The municipal court, community court, I do not care what you want to call it, but you gave Philadelphia a community court, if you want to think of it that way now, and it is the only jurisdiction that has one, and I am grateful.

You are allowing us in Philadelphia now to immediately attack the backlog by not having those minor offenses that are now clogging up the common pleas court adjudicated and tried at the municipal court level.

You have allowed us immediately to up-date our minor judiciary and make it a court of record.

You have allowed us to set up an administration of our justice in Philadelphia immediately so we can, if you please, administer the operation of the judicial officers by moving judges from here to there, using all the court rooms.

With regard to the judges let me tell you this, I am not interested in 10 judges. The bar association and all the interested parties such as the Greater Philadelphia Movement, which Delegate Amsterdam is a member of and Governor Scranton, our jurists, our lawyers, they were all interested in trying to do something for Philadelphia while we had the opportunity. I presented the figure they gave me for your due consideration. This figure was whittled down to 10. If I can get one more extra judge for Philadelphia, I would be providing a service, and that is what I am up here for.

If this distinguished body does not want to help Philadelphia immediately in this one area, in this one area alone, I bow to your considered judgment. It will not be the end of all, you have given me everything that I had ever dreamt of when I came up here. This is really not too important, but if you feel you can add to the success of our judicial system in Philadelphia by allowing our people to get their cases tried immediately, then you shall, perhaps, give us 10 extra judges in this Constitution.

I need not talk on the merits of why 10 are needed, or why we should not have 10. I just want to leave this microphone in the next few seconds and tell you again that I am indeed grateful, extremely happy, and I will never forget what you have done for me and my city, I, a stranger to you, and I would rather not have anybody who is a proponent of the City of Philadelphia seeking ten additional judges speak on that point. I wish you would extend me that courtesy. I know that this fine young man on my right who tries cases in Philadelphia would like to, but I would just like to leave you with the thoughts I gave you.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, I would like to take a moment to talk as a lawyer who practices in Philadelphia and try to explain to you—

DELEGATE HOOK. I believe Delegate Kauffman is out of order. When he yields the floor, he yields the floor.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I have to agree with Delegate Hook that Delegate Kauffman has not been recognized. You did yield to Delegate Devlin, and I think that in this respect I would have to call on someone else. That does not mean I cannot come back and recognize you, but it is not fair that two delegates line up that way.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. Chairman, I believe you said that I was not recognized to move the question. I now move the question.

DELEGATE HOOK. I second it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question has been moved by Delegate Gerber and it has been seconded by Delegate Hook.

This may be a controversial matter on moving the question, and the way we interpret that, you move that we close debate and put the pending question.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the motion to close debate?

O'DONNELL AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I offer an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule, Section 12, page 20, by inserting between lines 14 and 15: Effective immediately upon establishment of magisterial districts and until otherwise prescribed the civil and criminal procedural rules relating to venue shall apply to magisterial districts; all proceedings before aldermen, magistrates and justices of the peace shall be brought in and only in a magisterial district in which occurs an event which would give rise to venue in a court of record; the court of common pleas upon its own motion or on application at any stage of proceedings shall transfer any proceeding in any magisterial district to the justice of the peace for the magisterial district in which proper venue lies.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell in connection with this amendment.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. This amendment does not in any way contravene Proposal No. 7. In fact, it supplements it in the one or two areas which were overlooked, as it came out of the Committee proposal very similar to the situation of constables. This merely says and carries out the fundamental philosophy of Proposal No. 7 that there will be no more playing games between one magistrate and another in which you cannot, in effect, check your own magistrate nor permit the magistrate to move his or her house trailer around, and what have you.

This says that in order for a case to be brought before a magistrate that case must arise in the magisterial district. I do not believe there is any opposition to this proposal whatever, to the best of my knowledge.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair would like to hear from the committee chairman in connection with this proposal.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I do not know whether there is any opposition, or not, but the committee did not go into a discussion on this and does not consider it inconsistent with the committee's proposal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Shoemaker.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, I would like to interrogate Delegate O'Donnell, please.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation. Proceed with your questions.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, would the delegate kindly state to me what would happen if I were involved in some, let us say, intersection collision in a magisterial district, which under this total proposal, I understand, could be rather large. For instance, it might cover the whole City of York, my county, which would be about 60,000 people in quite a few hundred square miles. If I were involved in some sort of scrape and I wanted to bring an action, and if the magistrate in that district decided he either was sick, or was on vacation, or if he maybe had died and had not been replaced, would this not prohibit me from bringing my action and keep me out of court?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Indeed, it would not, Mr. President.

First of all, I would like to point out to the delegate that he would have under the rules of civil procedure essentially two choices in a vehicle collision. He may sue the defendant either in the magisterial district in which he lives or can be served, or he may sue in the area in which the accident occurred. That gives him two choices.

Secondly, under the general administrative rules of the judiciary article, an unfilled magisterial district, whether through lack of qualification, or sickness, or illness, or what have you, will be covered by assignment of the local court. It will simply assign a magistrate in there to fill that spot.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. What would happen if I had a bill to collect for an out-of-state company, let us say, and the defendant was passing through or lived in the City of York, and the magistrate there was personally involved and did not want to handle it? What would I do then?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. He would disqualify himself and the court would assign a magistrate to hear it.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. In other words, I would have to apply to the court of common pleas to get somebody assigned to handle that particular case?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. The delegate would have to do exactly the same thing which he now has to do if the claim was larger. I understand that he is talking about an assumpsit claim under $300 or a motor vehicle claim under $500.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I am referring to an assumpsit claim under $500. I think you have the figures reversed.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Yes, that is right.

If the case were larger and it was in a one-judge county, we would have an identical situation. The judge would have to disqualify himself and another judge would come in and sit. In like manner if the magistrate felt for any reason that he was disqualified, then another magistrate would be assigned and come in and sit, that is all. It is as simple as that.

In other words, the clear scope, unless you are attacking the entire theory of committee proposal No. 7 regarding magistrates, unless you are attacking the entire reform program, this follows as of course that people should not be permitted to shop around for the magistrate of their choice, which is one of the greatest evils presently in the system.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, if I understand the committee proposal correctly, and I am talking about the county I know something about, instead of having about 113 magistrates in York County, it would be anticipated that would be cut down to maybe 10, or 15 or 20, districts in the county?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. This county, I believe, is York County, is it not?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. That is correct.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Our computation was 29, just for sake of interest.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. And previously, as the law now exists, there have been maybe two justices of the peace in the townships and in the City of York we have 15. That would be cut back substantially, correct?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. That may be correct. In fact, it is correct.

What these comments are doing is attacking the entire theory of Committee Proposal No. 7 for remedying the abuses of the magisterial system. They are not germane to this particular proposal.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, it may be that I am not particularly happy with the compromise that came out of the committee on the magisterial districts, because it does not establish a community court and it does upset what has been traditional, but I believe you have here a piece of legislation, or more properly, under the judicial system, the unified system, something which the courts would be empowered to write the rules for.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. The delegate is absolutely correct. All this does is take care of that interim period before the rules are written.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, I would speak to the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Proceed Delegate Shoemaker.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, I frankly am not sure I completely understand this hastily placed forward amendment, but it is quite clear to me that this is an O'Donnell amendment and the committee did not study it.

The committee did not figure the ramifications of this, and I would hardly besiege every lawyer in this room to look carefully at what is before you in this amendment. If you know anything about the procedure in the minor judiciary, even as it exists today or as we hope it to be, and look at the effect of this on the present system, I suggest that you are going to find a dozen different holes in it.

I do not believe this Convention is here to legislate—and this has been repeated over and over again—we have just torn 10 judges away from Philadelphia, primarily because it was not our function. Now, apparently because no one else seems to oppose this situation, we are about to legislate something for which we have clearly said the Supreme Court and the unified system is going have the responsibility.

I suggest that this amendment is ill-conceived and ill-designed, that this is legislation and should not be hastily passed. I am opposed to it very strongly. I am quite sure that the courts can cover this situation under the unified system without the necessity of this amendment. I am opposed to it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Laputka.

DELEGATE LAPUTKA. Mr. Chairman, may I interrogate Delegate O'Donnell?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Proceed.

DELEGATE LAPUTKA. Mr. President, in line 2 are inserted the words "until otherwise prescribed." Will he explain to the delegation how it would otherwise be prescribed?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Throughout the entire judiciary article and, as a matter of fact, under Style and Drafting, throughout all of the articles everywhere the word "prescribed" appears in the Constitution which we are now writing it refers to rules. Everywhere where the words "provided by law" appear, they concern legislation.

Consequently, this would be prescribed by rule of the Supreme Court. If you turn back to Committee Proposal No. 7, in its administrative proceedings you will observe that the Supreme Court, and the Supreme Court alone, has the power to prescribe by general rule for practice, procedure and conduct of justices of the peace, as well as the Court. This is all it would do and this merely prescribes what happens while the Supreme Court is preparing their rules.

DELEGATE LAPUTKA. In effect, we have a transitional type amendment here until such time they are prescribed?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Purely transitional. I might remind delegates, that there is no legislation in here whatever for this reason. Under the present Constitution, in one of the articles which we are not permitted to disturb, venue is taken out of the hands of the Legislature and put into the hands of the courts.

DELEGATE LAPUTKA. I, therefore, Mr. President, rise in favor of this amendment and would move its adoption. Therefore, I move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Laputka has just moved the question.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I ask for the floor. I would like to interrogate Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE GERBER. I would also like to interrogate Delegate O'Donnell.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let us proceed with the interrogation quickly.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Delegate O'Donnell, I direct your attention to Section 11 (a) on page 18 of the schedule. Is not this amendment inconsistent with 11 (a)? I realize you have used the word "venue," but it seems to me we discussed at some length the question of whether we were going to allow the justices of the peace to continue to serve out their existing terms and to continue to earn whatever they could earn by exercising whatever jurisdiction they are entitled to exercise at the present time.

Would this amendment not interfere with the exercise of their jurisdiction and their continuation in office for the balance of their terms?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I do not think they will. I think the delegate is confusing "jurisdiction" with "venue."

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I am not confusing them. Which would prevail, Mr. President? If this amendment were to read that it would take effect when each justice of the peace now in office has served out his term, I would understand it, but, as I see it now, he is interfering with their exercise of the prerogative of their office.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I believe the question confuses the notion of "jurisdiction" with the notion of "venue." If I may give you a parallel, a court of common pleas under the new judiciary article will have unlimited jurisdiction, for example, in all criminal cases, but that does not suggest that a criminal case which arises in Pittsburgh can be tried in Philadelphia, except upon assignment in a unique situation where there is a change of venue. Consequently, the fact that the case can be tried in common pleas is a jurisdictional matter; the fact that it ought to be tried in Pittsburgh is a venue matter.

Under the present selection governing jurisdiction before a justice of the peace, he has a certain fixed jurisdictional amount, shall we say, in an assumpsit case. He will continue to have that same jurisdiction. There is nothing in any piece of legislation existing today which permits a justice of the peace to hear cases outside of his own bailiwick. The only reason he does hear cases outside of his own bailiwick is that his bailiwick has never heretofore had boundaries. We are merely adopting venue rules to supplement the jurisdictional requirements that are presently in the law.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. If the court does fix boundaries to a justice of the peace district, or a bailiwick, as the delegate states, would that not limit the number of cases that he can receive during the balance of his term?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. It would have that effect.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Are we not, in effect, negating or conflicting with the decision of the committee which was to permit the justices of the peace now in office to serve out the balance of their term and to continue to do whatever it is they presently do?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. That may be his opinion. I think this is in accordance with the committee's proposal to limit the jurisdiction of magistrates to the area in which the problem arises.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. If I may, sir, I do not think I have been the champion of the justices of the peace in this Convention, but on this matter I think the committee did speak and I think he is in conflict with what the committee had decided.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gerber.

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, is this proposal of his an attempt to cure one of the problems that presently exists in the justice of the peace system where there is what is known as "squire shopping?"

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. It is. And I might say, to the delegate, that this proposal did not arise with me, personally. I was simply given the chore of drafting the language which would incorporate a number of suggestions that were made to the Judiciary Committee. I have no pride of authorship in this at all.

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, would the delegate please tell me and my fellow delegates what some of the problems have been up to date in what we country lawyers know as "justice of the peace" or "squire shopping?"

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Yes, very easily, Mr. President, and I thank the delegate for asking the question.

It is very simple, indeed, for one neighbor in a neighborhood dispute to harrass another neighbor unmercifully. You take a situation that might arise, shall we say, in Red Hill in Montgomery County. Two neighbors are annoyed with one another, one charges the other with disorderly conduct. Under these rules, that case will have to be heard in Red Hill where they and their witnesses and everyone else are available. Under the present situation the neighbor willing to annoy and harrass his friend—or former friend—could take the case all the way down to Abington, as long as it was still in Montgomery County. He could take it to the extreme limit of the county and make him, and all the witnesses, and everybody else, thus pile up constable costs, and the whole works, in taking it all the way to the extreme limit of the county. This corrects that problem.

DELEGATE GERBER. Does it also reach the problem of claims where certain creditors have their own private justices of the peace or squires with whom they do business regularly?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Of course, it does, and that is one of the most important criticisms of the present magisterial and justice of the peace system, that there were certain major creditors who threw all of their cases into the hands of one justice of the peace or into the hands of one magistrate, who became, in effect, a collection agency. This will stop that procedure for all time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hannum.

DELEGATE HANNUM. Mr. President, would Delegate O'Donnell stand for interrogation?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes. Proceed with your question.

DELEGATE HANNUM. Mr. President, conceding, as I do, that his proposal is salutary, what is his definition of "constitutional" vis-a-vis "legislative?"

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, that is a rather difficult question, but let me say this to you, "Venue" now under the Pennsylvania Constitution is not a legislative matter. This proposal deals exclusively with venue and, therefore, I must respectfully suggest that it is not legislative on that ground alone.

But on a broader basis than that, I think that, of necessity—and particularly in the Judiciary Article—there are transitional things that must take effect immediately for the system to work. This merely contemplates, you understand, that if the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania wishes to adopt a rule differing from this, they can do it on the day after the magisterial districts go into effect. We merely had in mind that it took the procedural rules committee of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania almost 20 years to get around to adopting uniform rules of civil procedure for the Commonwealth. We have merely suggested the kind and character of uniform rule which would go into effect.

DELEGATE HANNUM. Mr. President, possibly the delegate attempted to, but you have not given me, as I understand his comments, any definition of "constitutional". Believing, as I do, that this is clearly a legislative matter, I propose to vote against your proposal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Curran.

DELEGATE CURRAN. Mr. President, I would like just a few words of interrogation of Delegate O'Donnell.

It is true, is it not, that this is not a relatively new concept with the Judiciary Committee. This is not an idea that he has discovered since the Judiciary Committee has adjourned.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. No, Mr. President. As I pointed out before, this idea does not originate with me. It is not a last minute proposition. It is a matter which had been discussed time and time and time again in the Judiciary Committee, but we never came up with a specific solution. This is the specific solution.

DELEGATE CURRAN. As a matter of fact, I recommended this particular idea to the sub-committee when you had your first open meeting for the Judiciary Committee.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. That is correct, and our subcommittee adopted his recommendation, and thought it was splendid, but just did not write the implementing material in the schedule.

DELEGATE CURRAN. There is one particular problem I have, and that is, how would this particular requirement relate to what we know as the committing magistrates in, for instance, the third class cities?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. In a third class city, Mr. President, if my recollection is correct, I believe they have the alderman situation who acts as a committing magistrate and, in effect, is the justice of the peace for a third class city in a certain area.

What this means is that when a magisterial district boundary is drawn by the Supreme Court, unquestionably, perhaps five or six of these aldermen would be included within the one magisterial district. With this Proposal, you can go to any one of those five or six, so long as they continue in office and they are "grandfather" to the end of their terms. But one cannot go and shop around and take it out of the city, or into the next township, or wherever.

DELEGATE CURRAN. The requirement is in the schedule. There is no question that any defect that may arise in this particular language can be cured by the Legislature or by the Supreme Court in their rules.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. By the Supreme Court instantly, no problem.

MOTION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Banes.

DELEGATE BANES. Mr. President, it has been amply shown that this is a transitional provision. I move that the debate be closed and we move the question.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the motion?

It was agreed to.

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate O'Donnell?

SCHEDULE OF REMAINING AMENDMENTS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, if it is your desire to finish, as it is everyone's, I would like to report to you that, through the offices of Delegate Amsterdam and myself we have been able to persuade—that is what we have been running around here about—a great many delegates to withdraw amendments.

We are now in the following position:

We have four amendments left. We have one by Delegate Baldus, which has just been given out to you—which, incidentally, the committee has no objection to, whatsoever. It rearranges slightly the situation in Allegheny County, and it is my understanding, although I was not at the meeting, that the Allegheny County people are in agreement on this.

Secondly, there is the amendment put in by Delegate Barron.

There may be an amendment by Delegate Shapiro.

There will be an amendment by Delegate Sprogell.

Under those circumstances, I ask all of you to please not put in any more amendments. I say to you, openly, that if there are any more—if we start to get any more—I am going to offer a motion to have no more amendments. Is that clear?

DELEGATE BANES. I have an amendment to the Barron amendment pending since yesterday. I want to correct Delegate Scranton in that respect.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Do I understand Delegate Banes to say he has an amendment?

DELEGATE BANES. Yes, I do, Mr. President. That was placed with the drafting bureau and certainly should be on their list.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will ask Delegate Banes to come forward. We will check that. It may be in process some place.

BALDUS AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Baldus.

DELEGATE BALDUS. Mr. President, I rise to offer an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment on second consideration?

DELEGATE BALDUS offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule (Sec. 15), page 27, lines 9 to 30 and page 28, lines 1 to 8 by striking out all of said lines and inserting: Section 15. Court.—Until otherwise provided by law, the court of common pleas of Allegheny County shall consist of a trial division, an orphans' court division and a family division. The courts of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery and quarter sessions of the peace, the county court, the orphans' court, and the juvenile court are abolished and their present jurisdiction and powers shall be exercised by the court of common pleas of Allegheny County. Until otherwise provided by rule of the court of common pleas and, except as otherwise provided in this schedule, the court of common pleas shall exercise the jurisdiction and powers of the present court of common pleas and the present county court through the trial division. Until otherwise provided by rule of the court of common pleas, the jurisdiction and powers of the present orphans' court of Allegheny County, except as otherwise provided in this schedule, shall be exercised by the court of comomon pleas through the orphans' court division. Until otherwise provided by rule of the court of common pleas, the court of common pleas shall exercise jurisdiction in the following matters through the family court division:

(a) Domestic Relations: Desertion or nonsupport of wives, children and indigent parents, including children born out of wedlock; proceedings, including habeas corpus, for custody of children; divorce and annulment and property matters relating thereto.

(b) Juvenile Matters: All matters now within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court of Allegheny County.

(c) Adoptions and Delayed Birth Certificates.

Amend Schedule (Sec. 17), page 28, lines 19 to 30 and page 29, line 1 by striking out all of said lines and inserting: Section 17. President Judges, Allegheny County.—In Allegheny County, the present president judge of the court of common pleas shall be president judge of the court of common pleas for the remainder of his term as president judge; the present president judge of the orphans' court shall be the president judge of the orphans' court division of the court of common pleas for the remainder of his term as president judge, and the present president judge of the county court shall be president judge of the family division of the court of common pleas for the remainder of his term as president judge. The present president judge of the juvenile court of Allegheny County and each of the foregoing president judges now serving shall be entitled to a salary no less than the salary he presently receives as president judge until the end of his present term as president judge. The president judge of the trial division shall be selected pursuant to section 18 of this schedule.

Amend Schedule (Sec. 18), page 29, line 15 by inserting after "court.": The exercise of the supervisory and administrative powers, however, shall be subject to the supervisory and administrative powers of the Supreme Court.

Amend Schedule (Sec. 19), page 29, lines 17 to 24 by striking out all of said lines and inserting: Section 19. Inferior Court in Pittsburgh.—Upon the establishment of magisterial districts pursuant to this article and schedule, and unless otherwise provided by law, the traffic court and the housing court, the city court and the police magistrates in the City of Pittsburgh shall continue as at present. Such magistrates and courts shall be part of the unified judicial system of the Commonwealth and shall be subject to the general supervisory and administrative authority of the Supreme Court. Such magistrates shall be subject to the provisions of this article and schedule regarding educational requirements and prohibited activities of justices of the peace.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barry.

DELEGATE BARRY. Mr. President, the Allegheny County delegation has gotten together to resolve its own housekeeping problem. Twenty of the 21 delegates here present have signed the amendment. The other delegate has agreed to it. It was not possible to secure his signature before it was printed. Three delegates are missing but I think I can speak for Senator Fleming, that he, or a member of the Judiciary Committee has agreed to these amendments.

They, in effect, change the schedule in some respects by agreement of the entire delegation to provide for the "grandfathering" of our president judges, to designate the judges of which courts shall be the judges of the new trial divisions, the jurisdiction of the family court division is set forth in full, and, as per agreement with the entire delegation, the inferior courts in Pittsburgh are preserved until such time as the Legislature changes their present structure. The traffic court, the housing court, the city court and police magistrates in the city shall continue as at present.

We wish to call Style and Drafting's attention to the fact that because of the last amendment the venue requirements in the City of Pittsburgh should remain as at present, rather than as per the amendment, until such time as the Legislature changes the system. We do provide specifically, however, that the magistrate shall be subject to the educational requirements and to the prohibited activities of the justice of the peace, and the other portions of the Judiciary Article, and we provide very specifically that they shall be part of the unified judicial system.

This has, as I say, the agreement of the entire delegation from Allegheny County. Unless there are questions, which I will be glad to answer, I would hope that someone would move the question.

MOTION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, although it is obvious that no judicial coal shall be carried to Newcastle, I still move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Solomon and seconded by Delegate Roberts that debate on this question be closed and that we now vote on the pending question.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
The motion was agreed to.

The question recurs,
PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question before the Convention is: Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Barry and by Delegate Baldus?

The roll was recorded as follows:

WOODSIDE-BARRY AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Woodside.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. I offer an amendment on behalf of Delegate Barry and myself to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATES WOODSIDE AND BARRY offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule, page 15, line 10, by removing the period after "1969" and inserting: except that the Commonwealth Court shall come into existence January 1, 1970.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. This was an amendment which I did not name a few moments ago and Judge Woodside brought to my attention that this has been in the works for a long time, because the Committee agreed on this a long time ago and we just neglected to put it in the proposal.

Obviously, it will take some time to get the commonwealth court established because, as you know, we left it up to the Legislature to determine a good deal about it and we want them to have the time to do that. Yet, at the same time, we want it done. That is why this date of January 1, 1970, is placed here.

MOTION

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I would like to move the question, sir.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let us vote on moving the question and before we vote, we will have it distributed.

The motion has been made by Chairman Scranton that debate on this question be closed and that we vote on the pending question.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I second that.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
The motion was agreed to.

The question recurs,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegates Woodside and Barry?

BARRON AMENDMENT TAKEN FROM TABLE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The next amendment is one offered by Delegate Barron. I understand this amendment was placed on the table and Delegate Barron wishes to withdraw it and substitute another amendment, is that correct?

DELEGATE BARRON. That is correct.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You are recognized for that purpose.

BARRON AMENDMENT WITHDRAWN

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want you to withdraw your amendment and just state you are offering a new one and we will have the Clerk read that.

DELEGATE BARRON. I withdraw the amendment, based on the advice of counsel as stated in writing, and submit the present amendment, Mr. President.

SUBSTITUTED BARRON AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron.

DELEGATE BARRON. Mr. President, I am now offering my substituted amendment to Proposal No. 7.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE BARRON offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 5, lines 28 to 30; page 6, line 1, by striking out "Whenever a vacancy occurs for any other reason in the" in line 28, page 5, all of lines 29 and 30, page 5, and all of line 1, page 6, by striking out all of said lines and inserting: Whenever a vacancy occurs for any other reason in the office of judge in a court other than a Statewide court, the Governor shall fill the vacancy by appointment in accordance with the provisions of Article IV, section 8 of this Constitution.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron.

DELEGATE BARRON. Just a moment of brief introduction and some advocacy on this point. Counsel has very kindly, in the last paragraph of his opinion, advised as follows:

"In order to eliminate any problem of interpretation, it is suggested that the language of Proposal No. 7 be self-sufficient. Accordingly, the amendment should be rewritten to recite independently what is the intention of this Convention without reference to any other article of the present Constitution."

In presenting this amendment to you, I have endeavored to comply with this statement of counsel and I have endeavored, by reason of the language employed in this particular amendment, to provide in our present proposal precisely the state and existence of the law as done heretofore by reason of the Constitution of 1874.

Lest there be any confusion, the basic proposition is this, when a vacancy arises for other reasons than those specified by the expiration of term, the appointment may be filled by the Governor. If the vacancy occurs during the session of the Senate, the appointment shall be by the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate. This language is now in the proposal.

The real nub of my suggestion and amendment is that if the vacancy occurs during sine die adjournment of the Senate, such appointment shall not require the advice and consent of the Senate. I again emphasize that this applies at present only to the common pleas, those local county courts. This does not—nor do I, nor have I ever intended that it—have any relation to appellate courts. It is the status quo now as relates in Philadelphia County, Allegheny County, Potter County, Mifflin County, and the other 63 counties of the State.

May I suggest to you just this, in the short period of time we have had to operate, I found that in 1964 the General Assembly rose sine die on June 16th of 1964, and for a period of six and a half months, while it was in sine die adjournment, there could have been no vacancies in office of county court judges filled during that interim period. It has been suggested to me by a number of sources that this is a vital political issue in various areas. If this is so, so let it be.

I point out to you on a philosophical note that nature abhors a vacuum. On a practical point, I say that if the office is there, it needs filling. If it has been determined, as this present assembly has determined, that there shall be no more judges in Philadelphia, it is plain to me that replacements in vacancies must be seated promptly, and I urge to you as strongly as I know how that the time for the creation of the appointment will be determined by when the vacancy happens and not by when the appointment is made.

Hence, there is no room for hanky-panky or juggling around. The facts of the creation and existence of the vacancy will clearly set in the future how the appointment shall be made.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gabreski.

DELEGATE GABRESKI. I rise in opposition to this amendment. We had this situation in Venango County, where we did not have a judge for six months. Our people did not suffer as a result of the failure of the Governor to make an appointment. We had the adjoining judge from the county nearest to us sit on our bench and dispose of all judicial matters.

This is more substantive today when we have the unified judicial system in effect under our proposal, and I cannot foresee any substantial problems in having the Supreme Court assign justices to that particular vacancy in a small county to make sure that their particular problems are resolved immediately.

I think that the appointment of a judge is such an important matter that it requires the consent of two-thirds of the Senate and, if they are in adjournment for six months, I think that county can wait for six months to have a permanent judge appointed. May I also point out that the longest period of time under the proposal to the Constitution would be that a vacancy would exist for a period of 22 months.

Of course, even at the longest period of time with the six-month adjournment of the Senate, there would be a 16-month period of time that a candidate or a person who is appointed by the Governor with the consent of the Senate could sit as the sitting judge on that particular bench.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kline.

DELEGATE KLINE. I do not know where Delegate Barron received his information that no judge could be appointed during the interim period after the Senate and the House had adjourned sine die. I question that. But that is really not an issue here.

I simply want to completely understand him before I make up my mind. At the present time if a vacancy occurs, or in the past if a vacancy has occurred, the Governor could wait until the Senate adjourned before he made an interim appointment.

As I understand this language, it clearly says that if the vacancy occurs while the Senate is in session, then the Governor cannot make an appointment without two-thirds of the Senate agreeing. Do I understand that correctly?

DELEGATE BARRON. Yes, that is its intent, and I believe the language so states it.

DELEGATE KLINE. The language also clearly states that if the vacancy occurs during a period after sine die adjournment and the resumption of the next session, the Governor can make the appointment without the advice and consent of the Senate.

DELEGATE BARRON. Yes, the happening of the vacancy will apply the test by which mode the appointment shall be made.

DELEGATE KLINE. So actually, if someone were to die a day before the next session began, even though the Senate may technically be in session, the Governor would not have to get the two-thirds of the Senate. It depends on the time of the vacancy.

DELEGATE BARRON. Yes, that is my intent and I believe it is clearly expressed.

DELEGATE KLINE. After the appointment is made, what forces move into play to bring about the election of a judge?

DELEGATE BARRON. If I may check the clean copy that appeared on the desk today, I will cite the page.

It is in Section 11 (b) and it now appears in the clean copy. This provides as follows:

"Whenever in any judicial district a vacancy occurs in the office of judge by reason of the expiration of the term of office of an appointed judge or the failure of an elected judge to file a declaration of candidacy specified," and so forth.

It is in the alternative and this judge certainly will be an appointed judge. The clear reference is in any judicial district which is precisely the situation we are addressing ourselves to.

DELEGATE KLINE. If I understand this correctly, if new judgeships are created, the vacancy will have to have occurred while the House and Senate are in session and, consequently, the Governor would need two-thirds for newly created judgeships by the General Assembly.

DELEGATE BARRON. As I am sure the gentleman well knows, this will depend on the effective date of the act, if my understanding is correct. If it is made effective immediately and they pass it in session, yes. If it is made effective on some other date and they are in adjournment sine die, I say no.

DELEGATE KLINE. He would not want to make a wager on when I would make it effective, would he?

DELEGATE BARRON. No, I would not.

DELEGATE KLINE. Thank you. I only wanted to find out what the amendment provided for. I am now satisfied personally—and I am close to this because the problem is mine—that this is a good amendment. It does make sense and I intend to support it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, I see that the delegate and Dean of Duquesne Law School is standing. I move the question, but rather expect that he will be heard.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We also have the chairman of the committee standing, so if you will just amend your motion to include that we hear from both of them, you may move the question.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. With your permission, I recognize both of these distinguished gentlemen.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you. We will first recognize Delegate Manderino.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. Mr. President, a question, first, to the proposer of the amendment:

Mr. President, again I should like to state, as I stated yesterday, that I have absolutely no objection to the intent contained herein and the objective to be achieved. I still have some concern about whether or not in the future interpretation can be given which will allow something other than what was intended.

The term is used in here "if a vacancy occurs during sine die." It appears to me that that term constitutionally has no meaning and with the new constitutional amendments that the General Assembly is a continuing body, there can be a dozen sine die adjournments during one year. What would prevent that? Let me give you this example, because I am asking for information and perhaps I am wrong on this, what would prevent the Senate from adjourning sine die on March 1st of a given year and then be called back into session two weeks later?

DELEGATE BARRON. There is a most distinguished majority leader of the Senate right behind the gentleman, and I would defer to his practical experience, knowledge and skill as a fine lawyer from Bedford County.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure Delegate Solomon's motion would also include the distinguished Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, there seems to be some confusion between the term "session" and "continuing body."

By joint rules of the General Assembly adopted pursuant to the Constitution in relation to this subject, the General Assembly remains a continuing body, but when it adjourns sine die that session is over and it cannot come back into session during that period after the sine die until or unless the Governor should call them into special session.

I believe that answers the delegate's question. If not, I shall be happy to respond to further ones.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. It answer the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I just want to make a one-sentence statement.

I think this is an extremely important amendment and is absolutely necessary for the carrying on of the powers of the Governor vis-a-vis the powers of the Legislature.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are, therefore, ready for the question.

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Barron?

SHAPIRO AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I rise to offer an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 6, line 29, by inserting after "of": two-thirds of

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. The effect of this amendment would be to require the approval of two-thirds of the Senate to the appointment of a justice of the peace to fill a vacancy.

I present it solely because we have amended practically everything now with the sole exception of interim appointments as provided by Delegate Barron's amendment. All other appointments of a judicial nature under Proposal No. 7 now require a two-thirds majority. I understand this is also in conformity with existing law. Justices of the peace presently require approval of two-thirds of the Senate and this will make our provision with respect to filling such vacancies consistent with what we have elsewhere in this proposal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May the Chair now ask the committee if they have a position in connection with this Shapiro amendment?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, in all honesty, I must say we did not give this a great deal of discussion, but it was brought up twice. On both occasions the committee did not take a vote, but the overwhelming feeling was that they should not come under the two-thirds consent. The main thesis for this is that there will still be, even if this proposal goes through, that is the committee's new Article 5, a very large number of justices of the peace and justices, presently the instant, we thought the clearance of their appointment ought to be more rapid, as it is presently.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anybody wish to be heard on this?

BRAHAM AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. President, I offer an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, may I just make it clear to the Convention about this. Judge Braham came to me after I made my previous announcement and pointed out that a long time ago he asked both Delegate Amsterdam and me if he could introduce amendments on the two subjects, this one and the one following, and I was reminded that he was quite proper in this request. So this is in accordance with a long-term agreement.

I do not mean that I want to comment on the Committee's likes or dislikes about it, but simply that he had the right to make the amendment.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE BRAHAM offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 24, lines 11 to 13, by striking out "except that the orphans' court division" in line 11, all of lines 12 and 13, and inserting a period

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Braham for a statement in connection with his amendment.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. President, this is another amendment which seems necessary to clear the jurisdiction of the common pleas court as a general trial court of each county. It is in aid of the effort to clean away all of these artificial distinctions which might lead to appeals and quorums about jurisdiction.

In our contemplation, the common pleas court should have jurisdiction to decide how to handle the business within its borders. One of the thorny problems has been, what about the orphans' court? In this draft there is ample provision for taking care of orphans' court work in the orphans' court division. However, in Paragraph O on page 24 there is this language "The Court of Common Pleas through the Orphans' Court division shall exercise its jurisdiction heretofore exercised, etc."

You have in equity cases a question whether you are in common pleas or in the quarter sessions, and that is wrong. It is sufficient if they are all handled within the common pleas court and we want the court to be uniform, so, therefore, I think this should be taken out.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone wish to be heard? I now recognize Chairman Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, this was acted upon by the Judiciary Committee and, although we cannot find the record, we believe that by a relatively narrow vote it was approved. It was one of the elements in 1204. I would say that Delegate Braham's amendment does not do violence in any degree to the unified judicial system concept which has been the basis for the entire work of the Judiciary Committee.

In view of the fact that the Supreme Court can move cases around in any way that is desirable, this would certainly not be in opposition in any regard to the main context of the article.

MOTION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, before making the center field motion, I would ask that the Convention adopt the recommendation of Judge Braham. It makes sense. I now move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The motion has been made by Delegate Solomon. He moves that debate on this question be closed and we vote on the present question.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
The motion was agreed to.

The question recurs,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Braham?

INTERROGATION REGARDING BRAHAM AMENDMENTS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. While we are preparing the next Braham amendment, I am not sure that it is ready for distribution yet, the Chair recognizes Delegate Tate who wishes to interrogate the Chairman of the Committee.

DELEGATE TATE. Mr. President, I became concerned yesterday quite coincidently with the same problem in different areas than Delegate Braham has just raised by the amendment which was just passed, that is, the detailed jurisdictional provisions in the schedule for Philadelphia. I discussed this with the counsel for the Judiciary Committee and counsel for the Convention, and I think it is proper at this point to place upon the record some questions and answers which I would like to do by way of interrogation of Delegate Amsterdam.

Delegate Amsterdam, am I correct that the schedule set forth detailed jurisdiction for various divisions of the common pleas court, or municipal court, or the traffic court of Philadelphia?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Yes, sir, that is correct.

DELEGATE TATE. Am I further correct that this is because these are new divisions and new courts, and it is necessary to give some directions as to how jurisdiction of the old courts to be abolished are to be divided among the new division of courts?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Yes, this is a timing problem and was included in the schedule for that reason.

DELEGATE TATE. Am I further correct, while in most instances there are no substantial changes in the allocation of jurisdiction in Philadelphia, there are some changes which may be of importance. For instance, the divorce jurisdiction, including the right to appoint masters, is transferred from the trial division, formerly common pleas, to the family division, formerly county court, and municipal court will have similar jurisdiction up to $500 instead of $100?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Those are the two major changes that remain since the equity jurisdiction, specially set apart, was taken out of the orphans' court division. That is correct.

DELEGATE TATE. Am I also correct that in all of these matters the committee proposal permits the General Assembly to change the allocation of such jurisdiction?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Unquestionably.

DELEGATE TATE. Can the General Assembly do so between April 23, 1968, assuming the people approve the proposed judiciary article, and January 1, 1969, the effective date of the proposed judiciary article, if such legislation is to be made effective on or after January 1, 1969?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. This was the intention and we certainly anticipate that the law is as you have indicated. In fact, we talked to general counsel and we have had that confirmed.

BRAHAM AMENDMENT No. 2 TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. President, I offer an amendment to Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE BRAHAM offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 7), page 3, line 19, by inserting after "district": initially before the expiration of five years following the adoption of this article and thereafter shall not be placed upon the ballot

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. President, this is the only amendment of any substance I have presented during our sessions and, frankly, it may involve matters which seem to have been decided in one form or another. Let me be candid with you, I have been greatly disturbed by the manner in which we have left the situation with respect to the community courts and the justices of the peace.

I am greatly concerned about the large structure of judicial substance that we are building up about the justice of the peace courts granting them tenure, granting them salaries, making them subject to review by the Supreme Court, and in many respects treating them like full scale judges in a full scale court.

I was quite impressed by the remarks of the young lady delegate this morning about the cost of the proceedings. People have assumed that the establishment of a community court meant large public outlay.

One of the mistakes—I will not say it was a mistake, one of the unfortunate circumstances in this Convention's deliberations is that the whole body of delegates was not able to hear the testimony given by the gentlemen from the states where the new type of judicial system has been adopted.

We had a judge from Missouri, we had the young brilliant administrator from Chicago, we had a judge from Denver, Colorado, and they gave us first-hand information as to how these courts have worked.

Now, on the subject of expansion, here is what the young administrator of the courts of Illinois said.

He said that after they did away with the justices of the peace and established the community courts, far from losing money, he said they took in by the operation of the community courts enough in the way of fines and costs to run the entire judicial system of Illinois. He said as the law was set up, it did not all go to the state headquarters, but the amount of money going to the local municipality and going to the state was enough to carry the cost of the entire judicial system of Illinois.

Previously I heard this two years ago, the then head of the Illinois judicial system, the administrator, I heard him speak on the same point, and this gentleman was the retired general counsel of the Illinois Central Railway Company. He gave the figures about how in a certain year under the justices of the peace the justices of the peace had collected, perhaps, in fines and costs $250,000 to $500,000. After they got the community courts, a much smaller number, just a fraction of the number of judges collected $2,500,000 in fines and an extra million dollars in costs. So this is not the great problem that you think it is.

However, a great deal of the sentiment that was behind the calling of this Convention related to this subject. I hate to go back home and tell the people we did not do anything to rectify the system with respect to the justices of the peace beyond educating some justices of the peace, cutting down the number and then freezing them forever.

Accordingly, I am taking the liberty of asking you to consider an amendment to Section 7, that is on page 3 of our last copy, which begins in this fashion; it is Section (b):

"The question of whether or not a community court shall be established in any judicial district shall be placed on the ballot in the primary election by petition," and so forth, and you will remember that the matter of how the question was put on the ballot was to be handled by the appropriate officials.

The difference in my proposal is that this question cannot be placed on any ballot before five years after the adoption of this Constitution. After the adoption of this Constitution, and some of the community courts have been in operation, then people will have a better opportunity to judge it, and we are allowing any court in the Commonwealth, except Philadelphia, to place this question on the ballot and vote on it at any time after the period of five years.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, may I interrogate the sponsor?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scranton for the purpose of interrogating Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I just want to make sure I understand this.

What you are asking us to do by approving this amendment, as I read it, is to put off any election, or to exercise the option to have an election on the community court, as compared to the justices of the peace system, until five years have passed to see whether this system is working well, or not?

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Yes, Mr. President.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Is that what he is asking?

DELEGATE BRAHAM. That is it, yes.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Is that correct?

DELEGATE BRAHAM. That is true.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. The delegate would not have any community court at all for at least five years, is that correct?

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Except the one in Philadelphia.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Yes.

DELEGATE HOOK. Also, does this not say once it is put on the ballot it can never be put on again?

DELEGATE BRAHAM. No, the question shall not be placed upon the ballot in any judicial district at more than one election during a five-year period.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Once again let me inquire, I think it will clear up this in everybody's mind, what he is trying to do by this amendment is to keep any election from taking place on the local community court, other than the arrangement for Philadelphia, anywhere else in the State—

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Yes.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Until five years have passed after the people have approved of this Constitution, if they do?

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Yes.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. So that there would be no community court anywhere for five years, and thereafter they could have an election once every five years, is that correct?

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Yes. It seems to me we have made such explicit provisions about community courts and about justices of the peace that it would be rather incongruous for us to start right in working it all over again. I think that a period of five years might be a decent interval during which we would see how the new justice of the peace arrangement operates.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. May I inquire of either of the co-chairmen of the Judiciary Committee with regard to the position of the committee on this amendment?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Bluntly, this never came up, as far as I can remember, in any of the meetings of the committee at all. I think it is fair to say that the committee as a whole is generally eager to have the people have an option to decide on this probably sooner than five years, but there was never any vote taken. I think you just have to guess, really.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, I am not being presumptious, but I think I can help the judge out.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. You have before, Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. What the judge intends is not to delete any of the present language in 19 and 20.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. That is correct.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. And he adds this other language, so I will say this to my good friend and neighbor, there is little or no danger in this.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. There is not as much danger in me as you might think sometimes, either.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, I repeat, if you will look at page 3, Judge Braham's amendment does no violence to lines 19 and 20. Is that correct, Judge?

DELEGATE BRAHAM. I do not have it now.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. It is a little before—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would you yield a second to Delegate Casey?

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Yes.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, I think it is fair to say, however, that the great majority of the committee intended that there should be an election if the petition was available and enough people signed it before five years. I think that is clear from the language in the proposal, and it does change it to that degree, quite obviously.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, the Chair recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, I would submit with all deference to Judge Braham that his amendment works a material change in what the committee proposed regarding this matter and, in response to Delegate Solomon, it is a dangerous amendment, depending upon your point of view.

If you feel that the people should have an immediate right to decide this question for themselves at the local level, then this amendment is extremely dangerous because it takes away from the people for a period of five years, as I read it, the right to do this.

If, on the other hand, you feel that this decision should be deferred for five years, the amendment is not a dangerous one from your standpoint.

I regard this amendment as a step backward and I intend to vote against it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hook.

DELEGATE HOOK. Judge Braham, will you please read the section as you want it to be stated? I have an inconsistency in the way this is going to read, the whole sentence, "The question shall not be placed upon the ballot in a judicial district."

I want you to read that because, starting with line 18, I think you have an inconsistency there in your proposal.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Understand me, please.

I would have been glad to have the question placed upon the ballot immediately. My view was not in accord with the view of the majority about the justices of the peace, but I thought we have in this Convention established these provisions, and therefore, I thought it was only sensible to let them work on it a while. That is all there is to this. If they want to have the election any time, I will be glad to let it go at that.

DELEGATE HOOK. Judge, I would like you to read how this is going to be stated if this amendment is adopted. I believe you have an inconsistency here, and I want to point it out.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. I would state this, I have not been drawing amendments. This is the only amendment, and I thought they should restate the whole paragraph, but they thought not. Maybe there is something that has not been caught here. Please state it.

DELEGATE HOOK. Judge, I want you to read your language. Take line 18. I think you have a mistake here, and I think you ought to correct it before you present it to this body.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. At more than one election, during the five-year period—

DELEGATE HOOK. The way you have this stated, "The question shall not be placed upon the ballot in a judicial district initially before the expiration of five years following the adoption of this article, and thereafter shall not be placed upon the ballot at more than one election or in any five-year period."

I say that this is inconsistent with what you want to do, Judge.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. I would—

DELEGATE HOOK. Not before 1974. This is what you are doing if this Constitution is adopted.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. If you are satisfied that it is the will of the Convention—I mean, to have the right to have this appealed, this referendum, at any time—that satisfies me. You can vote down the amendment. I thought I was proposing something that would reconcile, perhaps.

DELEGATE HOOK. I am trying to help you, Judge, because I do not think you have it the way you want it to be stated. I want you to understand that.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Will you state it the way you think it ought to be?

DELEGATE HOOK. Judge, I disagree with you. I am against your amendment, because I agree with Senator Casey that the people in this delegation have already gone on record to show that they want the people at home to vote on this and have it on the ballot as soon as possible and not put that five-year restriction in there.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. If that is the view of the Convention, that we have the right to vote on this question, and at any time, and that is what you want, I can withdraw this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Chairman Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. In view of the fact that the Judiciary Committee has voted on this pretty carefully and Judge Braham is not pushing on this, and those who have spoken are against it, I suggest we come to a vote promptly.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. I think the wisdom of Judge Braham's amendment is quite obvious and apparent on its face, and I find a lot of justification for it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Very well.

DELEGATE STROUP. When our Judiciary Committee and their advisors went to all the stress and efforts to bring forth the qualifications of justices of the peace and set up the system under which it could be improved by learning the law, at least to qualify, that should be given an opportunity to function. It is not denying anything to the people of the Commonwealth to immediately try to put the Commonwealth's thoughts in, but I believe once you have tried to improve the justice of the peace system, this amendment is valid because you should have an opportunity to work. I support the amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. President, I believe somebody, either one of the chairmen of the committee or Judge Braham, indicated that Philadelphia would not be affected by this amendment. I submit, Mr. President, this is not so.

Philadelphia now has the same opportunity to vote the community courts into effect under Section 7 (b), and Judge Braham's amendment would postpone that opportunity for at least five years.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Clinger.

DELEGATE CLINGER. Mr. President, I would just like to point out to the Convention that those who favor community courts, I think, should support this amendment, because if the referendum is put to the people within a year after the adoption of this Constitution, I submit to you that a very strong and persuasive argument could be made against the adoption of a community court on the basis that the reform justice of the peace system had not been given an opportunity to work properly. I suggest to those who favor the community courts, if they truly believe the justice of the peace system cannot be reformed, that they should support this amendment, because, otherwise, I think they would find that the community court referendum would be defeated on the basis that the reform system cannot be permitted to work.

REQUEST TO WITHDRAW AMENDMENT

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Might I withdraw this amendment, or lay it on the table, until we can go over the drafting part of it?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Apparently there is some objection, but we will see.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Very well.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Did you want to withdraw your amendment now?

DELEGATE BRAHAM. I am willing to follow the will of the Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Banes.

DELEGATE BANES. Mr. President, I believe it has been amply shown that this would defer any local referendum for a five-year period. I think the question is clear. I think that there is enough discussion.

MOTION

DELEGATE BANES. I move the debate be closed and call for the question, Mr. President.

DELEGATE CURRAN. I second the motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved and seconded by Delegate Curran that the debate on this question be closed and that the vote on the pending question be taken.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
The motion was agreed to.

The question recurs,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Braham?

The roll was recorded as follows:

STUDENTS FROM DERRY TOWNSHIP SCHOOL WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, the Chair would like at this moment to recognize that we have a group of 60 students from the Derry Township School in Hershey.

They are the guests of Delegates Swope, Hocker and Woodside. If you are still there, would you just stand up so we can give you a cordial warm greeting.

STUDENTS FROM WAYNESBORO WEST JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I also understand that we have 150 students of the ninth grade from Waynesboro West Junior High School, and their teachers Mrs. Broyles and Mr. Conover. They are the guests of Delegates Keller, Barron and Gouger. Let us give them a warm welcome.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. This is a very happy moment for 163 delegates. We have no more amendments.

MEETING OF COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING

DELEGATE PELLETIER. May I make an announcement, Mr. President?

The Committee on Style and Drafting will be meeting during luncheon, and may I request permission to meet this afternoon during the session of the Convention?

ANNOUNCEMENT BY PRESIDENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, we are going to take up this afternoon Proposal No. 4, Printer's No. 17, and Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 18, and I want to announce right now that these are on second consideration. If anybody has an amendment, they should get it in right here and now so that we can be ready to dispose of those quickly this afternoon.

MOTHER OF DELEGATE RUTH WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, the Chair will recognize Delegate Ruth.

DELEGATE RUTH. During the course of the introductions I would like to announce the fact that I have the privilege of having my mother here.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If she would rise, we would be very happy to welcome her.

WIFE AND FRIENDS OF DELEGATE BALDRIGE WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. While we are at it, may the Chair please state that I understand that we have the wife of Delegate Baldrige and her companions Mrs. Ward and Mrs. Rudick. They are the guests of Delegates Filson and Leach as well as Delegate Baldrige. Would they please stand so we can give them our warm, cordial greeting.

STUDENTS FROM THE SEVENTH GRADE OF THE MATERNITY OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY OF PHILADELPHIA WELCOMED ALONG WITH WIFE AND SON OF DELEGATE DEVLIN

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair is advised that we have with us a group of students from the seventh grade of the Maternity of the Blessed Virgin Mary School in Philadelphia.

They, I understand, very willingly gave up their seats so that the other group we just introduced in the balcony could sit. Among them—I hope she is still here—was the very lovely wife of Delegate Devlin. Is she back there? I understand that Delegate Devlin's son was also in the group; so in that connection we will give them a warm welcome and hope they come back.

SISTERS AND FRIEND OF DELEGATE TOMASCIK WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, we recognize Delegate Tomascik.

DELEGATE TOMASCIK. Mr. President, I should like to introduce some people from Wilkes-Barre who are visiting the Convention, among whom are my three sisters, and a young college student, Elliott Catuna.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think if they will stand up we will give them our cordial greetings and tell them how happy we are to have them here.

WIFE AND SON OF DELEGATE ROY MILLER WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, the Chair recognizes Delegate Miller.

DELEGATE R. W. MILLER. Mr. President, so we do not slight anyone, I would like to ask my wife and son David, who are with us today to stand up.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, indeed.

We would be glad to recognize Mrs. Miller and her son David.

HUSBAND OF DELEGATE FAWCETT WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fawcett.

DELEGATE FAWCETT. Mr. President, I would like to introduce my husband who is here today checking on me, I think.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will tell him you are doing a wonderful job, and where is he? Please stand up and we will give him a cordial welcome.

GUEST OF DELEGATE MANDERINO WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, we recognize Delegate Manderino.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. Mr. President, may I introduce a guest of a former Pennsylvanian now the State Director of Planning for the Department of Mental Health in the State of Delaware, Mr. Nicholas Fisfis.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If he will stand we will be happy to give him a round of applause.

WIFE AND FAMILY OF DELEGATE ROVNER WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, the Chair recognizes Delegate Rovner.

DELEGATE ROVNER. Mr. President, I'd like to introduce my wife and my thirteen year old son, Howard, and also along with them is another relative, Mr. Leonard Rovner, who I believe is the youngest principal in a school in the City of Philadelphia.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I would like very much if they would stand and we will give them a round of applause.

JUDGE DIXON R HERMAN WELCOMED

DELEGATE SWOPE. It is my privilege, Mr. President, to introduce my good friend, a judge in the local Common Pleas Court, whom Judge Woodside tried to introduce but wasn't successful because of the commotion, Judge Dixon R. Herman, who is a Democrat but who I was glad to vote for under the Republican and Democratic ticket.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If Judge Herman would please rise, we will give him our cordial welcome.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Powell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE POWELL. I rise for a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE POWELL. I would like to introduce myself and request that I be marked present.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are glad to have you with us, Delegate Powell.

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. In view of the meetings scheduled, we will recess now until 2 p.m. The Chair is willing to hear objections to that if there are any.

The Chair hears none, and the Convention is now in recess until 2 p.m.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time of recess having expired, the Convention will come to order.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN CUMMINGS WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Before we get into the business of the session this afternoon, I want to introduce several distinguished guests. We are very fortunate, Fellow Delegates, to have with us today the oldest member of the Pennsylvania Correspondents Association, a veteran member of the press, a man whom I think knows the political situation on both sides, up and down, in and out, throughout the State of Pennsylvania. I am very happy to present to you John Cummings, who is sitting up here in the press section where he always deserves to be.

I might add, with John is his ever-loving spouse who accompanies him every place, Mrs. Cummings. Would you please stand?

MRS. HETRICK WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Along with Mr. and Mrs. John Cummings is another guest Mrs. Hetrick, who is a member of the Pennsylvania Historical Commission and I am happy to present her and welcome her at this Convention.

STUDENTS OF SEVENTH AND EIGHTH GRADES FROM MATERNITY BLESSED VIRGIN MARY SCHOOL IN PHILADELPHIA AND MRS. DEVLIN AND SON BILL WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want to say we are happy to have back with us again, the 47 students of the seventh and eighth grade from Maternity Blessed Virgin Mary School in Philadelphia and among them is Mrs. Devlin, the wife of Delegate Devlin and their son Bill.

I am going to ask them to stand up. First, I want Mrs. Devlin to stand so we can give her our cordial greeting and welcome.

I am going to ask young Bill to stand up. Give him a hand.

I would like to introduce Sister Mary Cletus and Sister Mary Teresina of the Sisters of Mercy. Let us all stand and give them a big hand.

WIFE AND MOTHER OF DELEGATE SCALES WELCOMED

A DELEGATE. Mr. President, I think it should be called to the attention of the Chair, we have a country mother and a country wife with us. The mother of John Scales and his wife Joan.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think we should give them a big hand.

DELEGATE SCALES. Mr. President, I would like to announce that one of those two lovely ladies is a Democrat and one is a Republican, but by the way in which they vote, I cannot tell which one.

GRIFFITH FAMILY WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think we have Delegate Griffith's husband and children here today. Let us give them a big hand. Where is the Griffith family? I want you to know that Delegate Griffith is doing a wonderful job and we are very happy to have you with us.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Richter.

DELEGATE RICHTER. Mr. President, it is most fitting and proper on this holiday honoring George Washington, a cherry tree, and truth, that this resolution I am about to offer be given your deep consideration and above all your approval.

I wish to call your attention to the fact that the resolution contains 89 signatures, 88 signatures of non-lawyers to this Convention, the only four non-lawyers missing are those of absent members. There is one thing I also must point out on this signature enumeration, there is one attorney wishing to tip the scales of justice and surreptitiously slipped in his signature.

Now, for the resolution:

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE RICHTER requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 22, 1968.

WHEREAS, Exposure to the debates over the many fine legal and constitutional issues raised during the hearings and meetings of this Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1967-1968, especially during the many long and erudite debates concerning the proposed Judiciary Article to the Constitution, constitutes as adequate preparation for the practice of law in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania as three or even four years in law school.

WHEREAS, The non-lawyer delegates to this convention are to be congratulated for their perseverance in attending these hearings and meetings and their intelligent grasp of the many different points of view espoused by their lawyer colleagues. Simple congratulations, however, for such diligent service are not sufficient reward for their exemplary service; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That all non-lawyer delegates to this Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1967-1968 are hereby granted the title "attorney-at-law," and are hereby authorized to practice law before all courts of this Commonwealth.

WIFE AND FAMILY OF DELEGATE RICHTER WELCOMED

DELEGATE RICHTER. Mr. President, while I am still warm and in microphonic mood, I would like to have the pleasure of introducing to the folks here my wife, Betty, my daughter, Penny, my son, Gary, and I am sorry to regret that our daughter, Patty, cannot attend.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If they will please stand we would like to give them a warm cordial greeting.

RESOLUTION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Tomascik.

DELEGATE TOMASCIK. Mr. President, for a period of almost three months this historic conclave has been visited by many knowledgeable and discerning persons from all sections of this great Commonwealth. Their favorable impression of this Convention specifically, and the workings of democracy generically, have been influenced in no small measure by the tactful assistance and courteous treatment accorded them by the official Convention Hostess in the Gallery, Mrs. Ruth Worley.

Mrs. Worley's natural graciousness has enabled her to serve admirably in the capacity of Convention Hostess and has abundantly earned for her the commendation of not only the Delegates, but the citizenry at large.

Therefore, Mr. President, in behalf of Delegate Michener and for myself, I read in place and present to the Chair the following resolution for which I respectfully ask unanimous consent of the delegates for its immediate consideration and adoption.

DELEGATE TOMASCIK requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 22, 1968.

Mrs. Ruth Tudor Worley has performed an excellent job as hostess for the Constitutional Convention. Her gracious handling of the visitors viewing the convention from the gallery has distinguished her as a woman of finesse and ability.

Mrs. Worley is a graduate of Shippensburg State College, and later attended the University of Virginia. She taught in the schools of Pennsylvania for eight years.

Mrs. Worley is married to the Honorable Francis Worley, a member of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, and is the mother of two sons, who are pre-medical students; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Constitutional Convention of Pennsylvania expresses its gratitude to Mrs. Ruth Tudor Worley for her excellent public service to this Convention and to the people of this Commonwealth; and be it further RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to Mrs. Ruth Tudor Worley, R. D. 1, York Springs, Pennsylvania 17372.

MOTION TO RECONSIDER

DELEGATE BURKHOLDER. Mr. President, I have made many mistakes in my life, both within and without this Convention, and I made one this morning when I voted for the Braham amendment, Amendment No. 11. Accordingly, I move that we reconsider that Amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. How did the gentleman vote?

DELEGATE BURKHOLDER. I voted with the majority.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Clinger.

DELEGATE CLINGER. Also, Mr. President, I voted in favor of the Braham amendment. I had spoken in favor of it. I now reconsider and feel that I was wrong in both speaking for it and voting for it. While I still feel it is a matter of strategy, it may be wise for proponents of community courts to defer pushing for a referendum for a year or two. I do not feel that it should be the job of this Convention to forestall any area from moving to have a referendum to decide the matter of the community court for themselves.

I would second the motion to reconsider the Braham amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Burkholder, seconded by Delegate Clinger, that we reconsider the vote by which the Braham amendment was adopted.

On the motion the Chair now recognizes Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. Chairman, before I proceed to the melancholy task before me, I would like to make a comment or two on this matter of the lawyers. I think that the license given ought to be a license to practice law before any constitutional convention.

I want to call your attention to the one fact that just came to me as I sat here, the performance of lawyers in the original Constitutional Convention was not as brilliant as you might think. Probably the two most distinguished lawyers who were delegates to the great Constitutional Convention in 1787 were Luther Martin, one of the greatest of the advocates who jousted with Daniel Webster and all those great men, and the other was Jared Ingersol from Philadelphia—I think it was Jared Ingersol. Luther Martin was distinguished by reason of making the longest speeches of anybody and drinking more brandy, and he came to an inglorious end thereby.

Jared Ingersol was notable in that he never spoke once during the Convention on any matter of business before the Convention.

Now before I proceed to what I term my melancholy task, I am going to quote a little saying of the great editor of the Saturday Evening Post of years gone by, George Horace Lorimer, in a little book we read when I was a boy, called "The Letter of a Self-Made Merchant to His Son."

In it he said, "If you find a bad egg, the time to remove it from circulation is when you find it. The longer you leave it in circulation, the worse impression it makes when it comes out on the breakfast table."

I have made an egregious error, my friends, and I am sorry. When I presented my amendment this morning, in the haste of closing everything, I was under the impression that we had by vote of this body removed the right to have a referendum on whether the community courts would be established. In that opinion I was in error, because it was the right to remove it that was established by our vote.

Accordingly—now this shows what a guileful character I am—when I undertook to establish this right to have a community court on the ruins of the justice of the peace courts, I thought I would sweeten it up a little bit. I did sweeten it up, and I said what was true, that it would be from that point of view an advantageous thing to have it wait five years till we knew how the thing had settled.

However, immediately after the session I was told that there were many people who felt so strongly about this matter of the justices of the peace and the community courts that they had plans already laid, and that I was wrong. I must tell you, when I seemed confused this morning, I was confused, only I did not know how badly confused I was.

Some of the many brilliant young men I have heard speak in this Convention—one may have been Delegate Hook—called my attention to it, and I was convinced and said I would withdraw it. Then some other well-meaning friend said, "No, it will not matter. Let it go." I thought, well, maybe whatever is wrong is a slight thing that can be corrected.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have before the Convention a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Braham amendment was adopted. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gray.

AMENDMENT TO MOTION TO RECONSIDER

DELEGATE GRAY. Mr. President, I would like to ask the maker of the motion if he would permit me to add an appendix or amendment to it to suggest that in making this motion we also express our appreciation to our honored delegate. I move the question.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment to the motion to reconsider?

It was agreed to.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE AND VOTE ON QUESTION

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the motion?

It was agreed to.

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the motion to reconsider?

AMENDMENT WITHDRAWN

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Does the sponsor of that amendment wish to withdraw the amendment instead of having to vote on it?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now calls on Delegate Braham and the question is, do you wish to withdraw your amendment?

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. President, I would appreciate the privilege of withdrawing the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is there any objection?

The Chair hears no objection.

FAMILY OF DELEGATE DESMOND WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, I, at this time, want to take one second out of the busy business and state that we have with us the daughter of Delegate Desmond, Mrs. Judy Carey, and with her is Agnes Jean Donato, who, I understand, will soon be a daughter-in-law of Delegate Desmond. Would they stand so we can give them our warm cordial greeting?

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON SECOND CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to the second consideration of Committee Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 18, entitled:

A Proposal amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania further regulating exemptions from taxation and providing for the taxation of real property of public utilities.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, we are going to move on from Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 20, to Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 18, and the question is, will the Convention agree to advance Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 18, to third consideration?

DELEGATE BANES. I second the motion to advance that.

And said proposal having been read a second time, considered and agreed to,

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON SECOND CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to the second consideration of Committee Proposal No. 4, Printer's No. 17, entitled:

A Proposal amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania specifying audit control of public moneys and establishing and regulating a balanced State budget for the next fiscal year and financial plans for the succeeding five years.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shettig.

DELEGATE SHETTIG. I have a motion to reconsider one of the amendments to Proposal No. 4, Printer's No. 12.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Before you proceed with your motion, would you please identify the amendment and give us an opportunity to get it out.

We will also have to get the voting record out.

MOTION TO RECONSIDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Please tell the Convention which amendment you refer to.

DELEGATE SHETTIG. It is the amendment known as the Fohl Amendment amending Section 1, page 2, by inserting between lines 1 and 2 "the same Commonwealth officer or department shall not have responsibility for both the pre-audit and post audit function."

I believe it was amendment No. 4 on the voting, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes. What day was that?

DELEGATE SHETTIG. It was the 13th, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will you just give us a few moments to retrieve the amendment and get the voting record?

I might ask that the Chairmen of the Committee on Taxation—and, if they wish, their co-chairmen—please come forward for discussion in this connection.

Now the Chair again recognizes Delegate Shettig.

We now have before us the amendment and I ask you how you voted on that amendment?

DELEGATE SHETTIG. I voted with the majority, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You voted with the prevailing side?

DELEGATE SHETTIG. The prevailing side.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want to call the attention of the delegates to the fact that this amendment appears on page 2, lines 1 and 3, in Printer's No. 17 of this proposal.

DELEGATE MILLER. Mr. President, I second the motion. I voted with the majority.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Miller seconds the motion to reconsider.

He states he voted with the prevailing side. The record shows that he did.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fohl. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE FOHL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me state the motion first and then I will take your point of inquiry.

The motion is that we reconsider the vote by which the Fohl amendment was adopted.

Now, I will recognize Delegate Fohl.

DELEGATE FOHL. Mr. President, I would refer the President and the Parliamentarian to Rule 21, which appears on page 22, regarding reconsideration, wherein it reads: "No motion for the reconsideration of any vote shall be in order unless made on the same day as the vote was taken or within the next five days of actual session of the Convention."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair is looking at that rule and I might add we looked at it a few moments before you called it to the attention of the Chair. The Chair feels that that rule should not be applied in this situation, because we have never called up for consideration the Proposal No. 4, Printer's No. 17, and I do think that as far the Chair is concerned the motion is timely and does not violate that rule.

APPEAL

DELEGATE FOHL. Mr. Chairman, I would appeal to your ruling.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Point of parliamentary procedure.

Mr. President, if I recall correctly, I believe the journal will show Delegate Popil was guaranteed by the Chair on this day that this item would be held open for reconsideration.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I believe you are correct, Delegate Murray, but you have a right to appeal the Chair's ruling. I just say that is another added reason why the Chair at this time rules that this rule should not apply, because I think I now recall—and the Parliamentarian reminds me—is that correct, Delegate Popil?

DELEGATE POPIL. Yes.

DELEGATE FOHL. I would remind the Chair that Delegate Popil did not vote with the prevailing side.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I do not think it is a question of how he voted. We have the motion here before us.

I can say this, naturally, you have the right to take your appeal. The Chair, in connection with your appeal, Delegate Fohl, has stated his reasons. Frankly, to reiterate them, this is the first time we have taken up under consideration Proposal No. 4, Printer's No. 17, and the additional reason was the assurance given to one of the delegates that this would be done, so I now say if you wish your appeal, the question is, shall the decision of this Chair stand as the judgment of the Convention?

Under the rules, it will require, as it says in case of an appeal, a majority of 82 of the delegates to be necessary to override a decision of the Chair.

APPEAL WITHDRAWN

DELEGATE FOHL. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the appeal at this time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you.

The appeal stands withdrawn.

The question, then, is on the motion to reconsider the vote by which the Fohl amendment was adopted. Does anyone wish to be heard either pro or con?

Then we are ready for the question? Did you wish to be heard or are we ready for the question?

DELEGATE SHETTIG. Ready for the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are ready for the question.

Yes, the Chair now recognizes Delegate Wilcox.

DELEGATE WILCOX. Mr. President, just briefly on the question of reconsideration. I speak on behalf of myself and a considerable number of the Taxation and Finance Committtee. This, we think, is a valid principle which was established by this Convention. The principle was debated at great length in the sub-committee and adopted in substance. It was debated at great length in committee and adopted in substance. It was debated at great length in the Convention and by a vote of 88 to 47 was adopted by this Convention.

We think it is a very valuable principle. We think the decision that this Convention has made should be allowed to stand and we ask that you vote "no" on the reconsideration.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Mr. President, I would like to speak on behalf of reconsideration. There were a lot of things that were not clear to a lot of delegates, for instance, the partial destruction of the fiscal code.

We set a precedent where we decided by a large vote in this Convention that the State Treasurer should not be a fiscal officer of the State who should sign a warrant to issue the check himself, we then turned around and nullified the fact of the two fiscal officers, the one fiscal officer remaining could not do both functions thereby either creating a third agency of government, creating outside auditing, which deals with outside auditing contracts, or giving the Legislature or the Governor the right to create a new agency of government to check themselves.

Now, I do not think the delegates realized the depth of this item. I think an awful lot of delegates, when it was discussed—after this quick vote—found there was a lot behind it that did not appear on the surface.

I ask you to vote for reconsideration so we can go into this a little deeper and explain all the facts.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Swope.

DELEGATE SWOPE. I would like to echo the words of Delegate Murray.

This amendment, if permitted to remain in the proposal and become part of the Constitution, will do a number of things. First, it may be that the legislature will completely ignore it. I would like to speak upon the question after we have voted to reconsider, which I truly hope we will. I have tried to bring out before that the treasurer does make a pre-audit. I think this has not sunk into the minds of my fellow delegates officially.

The Treasurer of Pennsylvania does make a pre-audit before he writes a check, and the Auditor General also associates himself with the Treasurer in making a pre-audit in order to sign a warrant for the Treasurer to sign the check.

We have heard a great deal here, one of our lady delegates, Miss Himes, talked about economy in government. If the Legislature takes the bit in its teeth and decides that under the provisions of this amendment, if it remains in the proposal, it will be necessary to create a new office that will get a whole new bureaucracy started here in Pennsylvania when we do not need it and there has been no crying need for it. Nobody has said that anything wrong has been done throughout two generations, and I do hope that my fellow delegates will permit us to discuss this at greater length than it was discussed before.

I hope you will vote for reconsideration, or, rather, I hope you will vote to sustain the ruling of the Chair.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fohl.

DELEGATE FOHL. Delegate Murray in his brief comments referred to the possibility of contracting for outside auditing help with regard to this provision. The section specifically reads, "The same Commonwealth officer or department."

I do not know how in any way that could be construed to mean that we would be contracting with outside auditors. It does not say the treasurer may not continue to do the pre-audit. It just says to the legislature there shall be a post audit and a pre-audit, and by implication it says as the Legislature shall determine.

This is a sound fiscal management proposal, as is the rest of Committee Proposal No. 4, and I urge rejection of this reconsideration motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Clark.

DELEGATE CLARK. Mr. President, I am delighted that the haze has lifted and the smoke has cleared away, so an ordinary businessman can again stand here with some confidence.

I wish to speak against reconsideration of this proposition. This is a matter of great concern, I think, to anyone who is concerned with the business approach to the management of our State affairs.

This is a business of $2 billion and, in my opinion, that amount of money requires the greatest care that we are able to give to it in auditing, either pre-auditing or post auditing.

This amendment, or this part of the proposal, does not make any officer. It simply says it makes a point that we in business accept, and have accepted, for years, that one individual does not audit his own accounts.

We provide for honesty in our operations and, in my opinion and in my philosophy, buisness and the State are equally responsible for setting up standards that will make it impossible or impractical for people to be dishonest and, if the business or if the State does not set up that kind of safeguard, they are equally responsible with the dishonest person.

Mr. President, I urge you not to reconsider this matter.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair again recognizes Delegate Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Mr. President, in reply to Delegate Fohl's remarks, I would like to know, since he came back at me with this "the same Commonwealth officer." Since there are only two fiscal officers in the Commonwealth, the Auditor General and the State Treasurer, and correct me if I am wrong, there has been a vote by this entire Convention which rejected the principle of the State Treasurer doing the pre-audit.

If that is the consensus of this Convention that the state treasurer should not do the pre-audit, which is the permission for herself or himself to issue the check, and this function has to be done by two other fiscal officers or two other fiscal departments, and we only have one other fiscal department, who in God's name is going to do the other function, the Secretary of Agriculture?

DELEGATE FOHL. I would reply to Delegate Murray, this is not a Legislative body, that decision will be made by a Legislative body in the future.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Swope.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Mr. President, I, too, have an understanding of the audit function in a business institution, but let me remind my friends that a business institution and its accounting are very, very different from the accounting of a governmental body.

In this State the Treasurer of Pennsylvania has no relationship to the State government, to the administrative side of the government. He is under no orders to the administrative side of the government, he cannot be told to do one thing or another by the administrative side of the government, and he has the same responsibility to the people of Pennsylvania as an independently elected officer. When he signs a check, he does not have anything from the administrative side of the government where the obligations are made.

Do not forget these are not the obligations of the auditor general, they are not the obligations of the state treasurer. They are the obligations of the State government which come through that route for final payment, auditing, and so forth.

The Treasurer is responsible to the people directly, and he cannot discharge that responsibility unless he has the power to make the pre-audit, which he does, too.

The Auditor General again is responsible directly to the people and not to the State administration. Therefore, the Auditor General makes the post audit, and I maintain that we have here a pre-audit by the Treasurer, and a post audit by the Auditor General, and, therefore, the requirements of regular accounting procedures in a private institution are already carried out in the State Government.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Goldman.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Mr. President, I speak in favor of the Convention turning down this request for reconsideration.

It seems strange to me that Delegate Swope would say on one hand that for 200 years this State has had the procedure of post and pre-audit, that for 200 years this State has had no loss of moneys or misdirection of funds, and then at the same time argues that we should not have a safeguard for this. These two arguments are just in conflict.

I think it is perfectly legitimate to expect the moneys of the State, the moneys that the State is collecting from its citizens, to be audited before they are spent, and then again to be audited after they are spent to be certain that they are being spent in the proper manner, in the manner in which the Legislature has decided they should be spent, and in the manner which is consistent with the best interests of the people of the State who have provided those funds. I see nothing wrong with it. We debated it very fully at the time we originally adopted this amendment. Contrary to what Delegate Murray says, that it was a quick vote, it was not a quick vote. We had a great deal of discussion about it. I do not understand what they are trying to hide by preventing this type of post and pre-audit.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Leonard.

DELEGATE LEONARD. Mr. President, yesterday morning I sat here and listened to Secretary Michener give us an excellent lecture on the integrity of this Convention. I agreed with him wholeheartedly yesterday on that. He was discussing the integrity of the Convention when it dealt with a reconsideration which was on a vote with even a smaller margin than what we have.

This came out of our committee with better than a 22 to 2 vote, with a better than 20 vote, which means we had our majority. It passed this body by an 88 to 47 vote. How we can stand here today and think that we have integrity when we try to bring up and reconsider something that was so thoroughly considered and so thoroughly won as that amendment in this Convention?

MOTION

DELEGATE LEONARD. I move the question, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Chairman Leonard, seconded by Delegate Keller, that we close the debate and vote on the pending question.

All those in favor of that please say aye. Anybody opposed say no.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
The motion was agreed to.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion to reconsider?

MISSING RECORD

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, the Clerk of the Convention brought a distressing fact to my attention. The stenographic record for February 16th, which was last Friday and which was on my desk because I corrected a word in it, has disappeared from the Convention. We suppose it was taken out of my office by someone who wanted to edit in more detail. At any rate, we do not have it and that puts us at a grave disadvantage. If anybody has the stenographic record of February 16th, we would like to have it back. I hope you will not take other records from the office, because they are awfully hard to replace.

WIFE AND FAMILY OF DELEGATE ORBAN WELCOMED

DELEGATE ORBAN. I would like to make an introduction, but, before doing so, I would like to preface it with the remark that one of the parties is not here present, and that is my son Frank III. He is a senior at the University of Pennsylvania Law School and is engaged in a project in which he is getting firsthand information on the magisterial system in Philadelphia.

I would like to present to the Delegates, Mr. President, my good wife, my daughter Mary Michel who is visiting from Wellesley, Massachusetts where she is attending the Dana Hall School, and my daughter Susan Ann who is playing hookey from school.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If Mrs. Orban and the two girls would please stand, the Convention would be very happy to give you a most cordial greeting and tell you how happy we are you are with us.

I want you to know, you can be very proud of the good work being done by Delegate Orban and we are very happy to have you with us.

GUESTS OF DELEGATE PASQUERILLA WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair is happy to recognize Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, would the Chair recognize the very distinguished visitors with us today, the President of the Board of Trustees of the University of Pittsburgh and his lovely wife, Mr. and Mrs. Rea.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If Mr. and Mrs. Rea will please stand, we want you to know we are very happy to have you with us.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING

REPORT ON COMMITTEE PROPOSALS ONE AND TWO

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are happy to recognize the Co-Chairman of the Committee on Style and Drafting, Chairman Johnson.

I ask, is the report ready?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Yes, Mr. President. May I respectfully request, Mr. President, that the delegation withhold their applause until I have completed my very brief remark?

COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING

519 North Office Building

February 22, 1968

To the Honorable,
The Delegates Assembled,
1967-68 Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention

Mesdames and Sirs:

On behalf of the Committee we are pleased to submit our Report on Committee Proposals One and Two relating to legislative reapportionment.

I. GENERAL

Inasmuch as this is the first formal report of the Committee's deliberations pursuant to Rule 22, it is appropriate that we review the function of the Committee. The Convention has instructed the Committee to do four things:

First. To examine and edit proposals to avoid inaccuracy, repetition, inconsistency or poor drafting, and to consider and make recommendations on any differences, conflicts or unresolved matters of substance.

Second. To rephrase or regroup language or sections of the proposals so long as, and this was the polester governing the Committtee's function, "the sense or purpose of any proposal referred" was not changed.

Third. To recommend referral of proposal to the originating, substantive committee.

Fourth. To resolve any inconsistency or conflict in conference with the originating substantive committee, and, failing so to do, to notify the Convention and await its instructions.

The Committee adopted further procedures preliminary to reporting to the Convention proposals on third consideration. For example, proposals referred to this Committee were distributed for preliminary analysis and comment to the Co-Directors of the Convention's Research Staff, the Director of the Convention Drafting Bureau, this Committee's counsel, and an eminent outside consultant, Frank P. Grad, Director of State Constitutional Drafting Studies at Columbia University. The Committee's counsel then prepared revisions of the proposals referred to the Committee from the floor after second consideration as necessary to accomplish the function of the Committee. The end goal has always been the same: to critically consider each proposal referred to the Committee to insure that the report finally submitted by it to this Convention was clear, concise, unambiguous, and harmonious in style and manner of expression within the substantive committee's proposal as amended on second consideration, with other pending substantive proposals, and with the remainder of the Constitution of 1874.

Preliminary to discussing with you the Committee's report, we wish further to note that this Committee, at the specific request of the President of the Convention, delayed rendering reports of Style and Drafting to permit the Convention to complete second consideration of the various proposals then before it. We also wish to acknowledge the efforts of counsel to the substantive Committee on Legislative Apportionment who worked diligently with this Committee's counsel on multiple revisions and drafts in an effort to present a polished and articulate proposal on legislative reapportionment. Of necessity, the arbiter in making a final judgment with respect to the Committee's report and recommendations was the Committee.

The Report of the Committee on Style and Drafting consists of four parts: (a) the complete, edited text of the substantive Committee's Proposal in "clean" copy; (b) a new print of the substantive Committee's Proposal, as approved by the Convention on second consideration, with the drafting changes effected by this Committee shown in the usual legislative form; (c) a resume of this Committee's recommendations for Convention action on significant unresolved matters of substance; and (d) the full text of the Committee's narrative in explanation of its action. We understand that you will receive on the next Convention day the new print of Committee Proposals Nos. 1 and 2 and, at the same time, a zerox copy of the Committee's narrative and the full text of the sections on legislative reapportionment in "clean" copy.

For your convenience, the Committee on Style and Drafting has arranged this narrative in two sections. The first reports on the Committee's concern with respect to, and recommendations on, unresolved matters of substance pursuant to Rule 22; the second comments upon the significant changes in drafting effected by the Committee.

II. SUBSTANTIVE RECOMMENDATIONS

A. Numbering districts. The Committee on Legislative Apportionment considered and rejected the issue of numbering senatorial and representative districts. We call the Convention's attention to the fact that all legislative districts were once numbered in a normal and logical pattern. At present, as a map of senatorial districts will disclose, this mathematical and geographic pattern is not followed. The arbitrary numbering of legislative districts may permit a sophisticated type of gerrymandering.

The Committee believes this omission is a substantive matter of significance which should be resolved and respectfully suggests the following language for the Convention's consideration:

> SENATORIAL DISTRICTS SHALL BE NUMBERED IN SEQUENCE COMMENCING AT ONE GEOGRAPHICAL POINT IN THE COMMONWEALTH. REPRESENTATIVE DISTRICTS SHALL BE NUMBERED IN SEQUENCE COMMENCING AT ONE GEOGRAPHICAL POINT IN THE COMMONWEALTH.

B. Continuation of incumbents. The Committee has been advised by representatives of the substantive Committee on Legislative Apportionment that it intended, upon reapportionment pursuant to action by the Legislative Reapportionment Commission, all Senators to stand for reelection. The Committee notes that this creates the possibility that some Senators would be faced with the prospect of standing for election three times within a six year period. The Committee appreciates that changes in the terms of Senators are outside the call of the Convention. See Act No. 2 of 1967, Section 7, and Counsel Opinions 22 and 23.

The Committee observes, however, that the failure of the substantive committee to consider alternative procedures causes, by omission, the same result, i.e. the terms of half of the Senators are effectively reduced to two years in violation of the present Constitution, Article II, Section 3. The Committee regards this as an unresolved matter of substance and respectfully suggests the following language for the Convention's consideration:

> TO THE EXTENT POSSIBLE, ANY REAPPORTIONMENT PLAN SHALL PROVIDE FOR THE CONTINUATION IN OFFICE OF ANY SENATOR WHOSE TERM WOULD NOT OTHERWISE EXPIRE IN THE YEAR OF THE GENERAL ELECTION NEXT FOLLOWING THE REAPPORTIONMENT TO REPRESENT A SENATORIAL DISTRICT SUBSTANTIALLY THE SAME AS THAT FROM WHICH HE WAS ELECTED.

C. Effective date. Section 17 provides that a reapportionment plan becomes final in one of three ways. As the substantive committee rightly notes, the time schedule set forth in Section 17 is designed to accomplish the reapportionment, including all judicial proceedings as necessary prior to the primary elections in the first even numbered year after the Federal decennial census has been officially reported.

The Committee believes that one further contingency ought to be considered. A possibility, however, remote, exists that the final reapportionment plan would not be available—whether a result of delays in the reporting of the census or, more likely, because all remedies available to aggrieved persons under Section 17 have not been exhausted—until after the primary election but prior to the general election. The significant problem would then be: Is a special primary election held in the new districts? Or does the nominee from an old district run in the new district? The Committee, therefore, respectfully suggests the following language for the Convention's consideration:

(e) WHEN THE SUPREME COURT HAS FINALLY DECIDED AN APPEAL OR WHEN THE LAST DAY FOR TAKING AN APPEAL HAS PASSED WITH NO APPEAL TAKEN, THE REAPPORTIONMENT PLAN SHALL HAVE THE FORCE OF LAW AND THE DISTRICTS THEREIN PROVIDED SHALL BE USED IN THE NEXT PRIMARY ELECTION IN AN EVEN-NUMBERED YEAR OCCURRING SIXTY (60) DAYS OR MORE AFTER SUCH EFFECTIVE DATE, AND IN THE ELECTIONS TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY THEREAFTER UNTIL THE NEXT REAPPORTIONMENT AS REQUIRED UNDER THIS SECTION 17.

III. SIGNIFICANT CHANGES IN STYLE

A. Committee Proposal No. 1, Printer's No. 1.

1. Sections 16 and 17 were combined into a new Section 16 to avoid unnecessary repetition and redundancy.

2. The adjective "incorporated" has been added as a descriptor of "town" (p. 1, line 16; p. 2, line 18) to avoid confusion with unincorporated villages which would not need to be considered by the Commission in establishing district boundaries.

3. The Committee acquiesces in the substantive committee's insistence upon the inclusion of the adverb "absolutely" (p. 1, line 15; p. 2, line 18). The Committee is of the opinion that such usage imparts nothing of significance to the clause.

4. Considering that this proposal establishes single-member districts of a definite number and that these districts are, by definition, to be compact, contiguous and nearly equal in population, the Committee, with the agreement of the Co-Chairmen and Counsel of the substantive committee, deleted the statements respecting senatorial and representative ratios (p. 2, lines 1-2, 19-20).

B. Committee Proposal No. 2, Printer's No. 10.

1. Inasmuch as Sections 18 through and including 22 relate to the same subject, the Committee has consolidated these sections into one new Section 17 with sub-paragraphs arranged on a subject basis in chronological order as the subject with which each is concerned becomes operative.

2. The time schedule affecting the implementation of the Commission's report and/or action by the judiciary has been refined to make each stage of the reapportionment proceedings more precise.

3. With respect to the certification of members of the Commission, it was agreed that the responsibility for so doing should be made clear. The Committee on Style and Drafting and the Committee on Legislative Apportionment concur in the view that the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives are the proper officers to make the required certification.

4. The Committee has deleted the reference to the Secretary of the Commonwealth (p. 2, line 1-2, 10) inasmuch as that constitutional office was removed by constitutional amendment adopted May 16, 1967 (Art. IV, Section 1). The substantive committee concurs in the language "the elections officer of the Commonwealth who under law shall have supervision over elections." Thus, if the authority of the Secretary of the Commonwealth is later changed by statute, this statement of the officer to whom certification is made need not be affected.

5. In order to make clear the substantive committee's intention, the Committee has added a sentence requiring that "The Commission shall act by a majority of its entire membership."

6. The proposal as referred to this Committee (p. 2, line 22) recites that the Commission shall file its report, as one alternative, "after the Federal decennial census has been certified." The Federal law, U. S. Code tit. 13, Section 141 (1967 Supp.) requires "the tabulation of total population by states . . . (to be) reported by the Secretary (of Commerce) to the President . . ." The Secretary of Commerce, in turn, certifies these figures to individual states upon request. The language has been changed to indicate that the reference point for the Commission to come into existence is the official report to the President, but that the preliminary plan need not be filed by the Commission until at least ninety (90) days after the appropriate census figures are made available to the Commission.

7. The requirement for publication of the reapportionment plans has been retained in the body of the proposal and combined into one sub-section. This Committee is given to understand that some delegates urge that the publication requirement be considered a schedule item. We strongly recommend against so doing inasmuch as it treats of a matter of substance and, as such, is deserving of separate treatment in the body of the proposal.

Respectfully submitted:

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA

1968 SESSION

PROPOSAL NO.

A PROPOSAL

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania providing for apportionment of legislative districts.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Sections sixteen and seventeen of article two of the Constitution of Pennsylvania are amended to read:

Section 16. Legislative Districts.—The Commonwealth shall be divided into fifty senatorial and two hundred three representative districts, which shall be composed of compact and contiguous territory as nearly equal in population as practicable. Each senatorial district shall elect one Senator, and each representative district one Representative. Unless absolutely necessary no county, city, incorporated town, borough, township or ward shall be divided in forming either a senatorial or representative district.

SCHEDULE

The foregoing amendment to Article II of the Constitution of Pennsylvania if approved by the electorate voting on April 23, 1968, shall become effective the year following that in which the next Federal decennial census is officially reported as required by Federal law.

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL NO. 1

A PROPOSAL

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania providing for apportionment of legislative districts.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Sections sixteen and seventeen of article two of the Constitution of Pennsylvania are amended to read:

Section 16. LEGISLATIVE Districts—The [State] COMMONWEALTH shall be divided into fifty senatorial AND TWO HUNDRED THREE REPRESENTATIVE districts, WHICH SHALL BE COMPOSED of compact and contiguous territory as nearly equal in population as [may be] practicable. [and each] EACH SENATORIAL district shall [be entitled to] elect one Senator, AND EACH REPRESENTATIVE DISTRICT ONE REPSENTATIVE. [Each county containing one or more ratios of population shall be entitled to one Senator for each ratio, and to an additional Senator for a surplus of population exceeding three-fifths of a ratio, but no county shall form a separate district unless it shall contain four-fifths of a ratio, except where the adjoining counties are each entitled to one or more Senators, when such county may be assigned a Senator on less than four-fifths and exceeding one-half of a ratio; and no county shall be divided unless entitled to two or more Senators. No city or county shall be entitled to separate representation exceeding one-sixth of the whole number of Senators. No] Unless absolutely necessary no county, city, INCORPORATED town, [ward] borough, [or] township OR WARD shall be divided in [the formation of a] FORMING EITHER A SENATORIAL OR REPRESENTATIVE district. [The senatorial ratio shall be ascertained by dividing the whole population of the State by the number fifty.]

[Section 17. The members of the House of Representatives shall be apportioned among the several counties, on a ratio obtained by dividing the population of the State as ascertained by the most recent United States census by two hundred. Every county containing less than five ratios shall have one representative for every full ratio, and an additional representative when the surplus exceeds half a ratio; but each county shall have at least one representative. Every county containing five ratios or more shall have one representative for every full ratio. Every city containing a population equal to a ratio shall elect separately its proportion of the representatives alloted to the county in which it is located. Every city entitled to more than four representatives, and every county having over one hundred thousand inhabitants shall be divided into districts of compact and contiguous territory, each district to elect its proportion of representatives according to its population, but no district shall elect more than four representatives.]

SCHEDULE

THE FOREGOING AMENDMENT TO ARTICLE II OF THE CONSTITUTION OF PENNSYLVANIA IF APPROVED BY THE ELECTORATE VOTING ON APRIL 23, 1968, SHALL BECOME EFFECTIVE THE YEAR FOLLOWING THAT IN WHICH THE NEXT FEDERAL DECENNIAL CENSUS IS OFFICIALLY REPORTED AS REQUIRED BY FEDERAL LAW.

PROPOSAL NO.

A PROPOSAL

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania providing for apportionment of legislative districts.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Section eighteen of article two of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended to read:

Section 17. Legislative Reapportionment Commission.—(a) In each year following that in which the Federal decennial census is officially reported as required by Federal law, a Legislative Reapportionment Commission shall be constituted for the purpose of reapportioning the Commonwealth. The commission shall act by a majority of its entire membership.

(b) The commission shall consist of five members: four of whom shall be the majority and minority leaders of both the Senate and the House of Representatives, or deputies appointed by each of them, and a chairman selected as hereinafter provided. No later than the fourth Monday in January of the year following the year in which the Federal decennial census is officially reported as required by Federal law, the four members shall be certified by the President Pro Tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives to the elections officer of the Commonwealth who under law shall have supervision over elections. The four members within forty-five days after their certification shall select the fifth member, who shall serve as chairman of the commission, and shall immediately certify his name to such elections officer. The chairman shall be a citizen of the Commonwealth other than a local, State or Federal official holding an office to which compensation is attached. If the four members fail to select the fifth member within the time prescribed, a majority of the entire membership of the Supreme Court within thirty days thereafter shall appoint the chairman as aforesaid and certify his appointment to such elections officer. Any vacancy in the commission shall be filled within fifteen days in the same manner in which such position was originally filled.

(c) No later than ninety days after either the commission has been duly certified or the population data for the Commonwealth as determined by the Federal decennial census are available, whichever is later in time, the commission shall file a preliminary reapportionment plan with such elections officer. The commission shall have thirty days after filing the preliminary plan to make corrections in the plan. Any person aggrieved by the preliminary plan shall have the same thirty-day period to file exceptions with the commission in which case the commission shall have thirty days after the date the exceptions were filed to prepare and file with such elections officer a revised reapportionment plan. If no exceptions are filed within thirty days, or if filed and acted upon, the commission's plan shall be final and have the force of law.

(d) Any aggrieved person may file an appeal from the final plan directly to the Supreme Court within thirty days after the filing thereof. If the appellant establishes that the final plan is contrary to law, the Supreme Court shall issue an order remanding the plan to the commission and directing the commission to reapportion the Commonwealth in a manner not inconsistent with such order.

(e) When the Supreme Court has finally decided an appeal or when the last day for filing an appeal has passed with no appeal taken, the reapportionment plan shall have the force of law and the districts therein provided shall be used thereafter in elections to the General Assembly until the next reapportionment as required under this section 17.

(f) The General Assembly shall appropriate sufficient funds for the compensation and expenses of members and staff appointed by the commission, and other necessary expenses. The members of the commission shall be entitled to such compensation for their services as the General Assembly from time to time shall determine, but no part thereof shall be paid until a preliminary plan is filed. If a preliminary plan is filed but the commission fails to file a revised or final plan within the time prescribed, the commission members shall forfeit all right to compensation not paid.

(g) If a preliminary, revised or final reapportionment plan is not filed by the commission within the time prescribed by this section, unless the time be extended by the Supreme Court for cause shown, the Supreme Court shall immediately proceed on its own motion to reapportion the Commonwealth.

(h) Any reapportionment plan filed by the commission, or ordered or prepared by the Supreme Court upon the failure of the commission to act, shall be published by the elections officer once in at least one newspaper of general circulation in each senatorial and representative district. The publication shall contain a map of the Commonwealth showing the complete reapportionment of the General Assembly by districts, and a map showing the reapportioned districts in the area normally served by the newspaper in which the publication is made. The publication shall also state the population of the senatorial and representative districts having the smallest and largest population and the percentage variation of such districts from the average population for senatorial and representative districts.

SCHEDULE

The foregoing amendment to Article II of the Constitution of Pennsylvania if approved by the electorate voting on April 23, 1968, shall become effective the year following that in which the next Federal decennial census is officially reported as required by Federal law.

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL NO. 2

A PROPOSAL

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania making changes relating to legislative apportionment.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Section eighteen of article two of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended to read:

Section [18]. 17. [The General Assembly at its first session after the adoption of this Constitution, and immediately after each United States decennial census, shall apportion the State into senatorial and representative districts agreeably to the provisions of the two next preceding sections.] Legislative Reapportionment Commission. (A) IN EACH YEAR FOLLOWING THAT IN WHICH THE FEDERAL DECENNIAL CENSUS IS OFFICIALLY REPORTED AS REQUIRED BY FEDERAL LAW, A LEGISLATIVE Reapportionment Commission shall be CONSTITUTED FOR THE PURPOSE OF REAPPORTIONING THE COMMONWEALTH. THE COMMISSION SHALL ACT BY A MAJORITY OF ITS ENTIRE MEMBERSHIP.

(B) THE COMMISSION SHALL CONSIST OF FIVE MEMBERS: FOUR OF WHOM SHALL BE THE majority and minority leaders of BOTH the Senate and the House of Representatives, or deputies appointed by EACH of them, AND A CHAIRMAN SELECTED AS HEREINAFTER PROVIDED. NO LATER THAN THE FOURTH MONDAY IN JANUARY OF THE YEAR FOLLOWING THE YEAR IN WHICH THE FEDERAL DECENNIAL CENSUS IS OFFICIALLY REPORTED AS REQUIRED BY FEDERAL LAW, THE four members shall be certified BY THE PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE OF THE SENATE AND THE SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES to the ELECTIONS OFFICER OF THE COMMONWEALTH WHO UNDER LAW SHALL HAVE SUPERVISION OVER ELECTIONS.

The four members within forty-five days after their certification shall select THE fifth member, WHO SHALL serve as CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMISSION, AND SHALL IMMEDIATELY CERTIFY HIS NAME TO SUCH ELECTIONS OFFICER. THE CHAIRMAN shall be a citizen of the Commonwealth other than a local, State or Federal official HOLDING an office to which compensation is attached.

IF the four members fail to select the fifth member within the time prescribed, a majority of the entire membership of the Supreme Court within thirty days thereafter SHALL appoint THE chairman AS AFORESAID AND CERTIFY HIS APPOINTMENT TO SUCH ELECTIONS OFFICER.

Any vacancy in the COMMISSION shall be filled within fifteen days in the same manner in which such position was originally filled.

(C) No later than ninety days after EITHER the COMMISSION has been duly certified or the POPULATION DATA FOR THE COMMONWEALTH AS DETERMINED BY THE Federal decennial census ARE AVAILABLE, whichever is later in time, the COMMISSION shall file a PRELIMINARY REAPPORTIONMENT PLAN with SUCH ELECTIONS OFFICER.

The COMMISSION shall have thirty days after filing THE PRELIMINARY PLAN to make corrections in THE PLAN.

Any PERSON aggrieved by the PRELIMINARY PLAN shall have the same THIRTY-DAY period to file exceptions with the COMMISSION in which case the COMMISSION shall have thirty days after the date THE EXCEPTIONS WERE FILED to prepare and file WITH SUCH ELECTIONS OFFICER a revised REAPPORTIONMENT plan. IF NO EXCEPTIONS ARE FILED WITHIN THIRTY DAYS, OR IF FILED AND ACTED UPON, THE COMMISSION'S PLAN SHALL BE FINAL AND HAVE THE FORCE OF LAW.

(D) Any aggrieved PERSON MAY file an appeal from the final plan directly to the Supreme Court WITHIN THIRTY DAYS AFTER THE FILING THEREOF. If, the appellant establishes that THE FINAL plan is contrary to law, the Supreme Court shall ISSUE AN ORDER REMANDING THE plan to the COMMISSION AND directing the COMMISSION to REAPPORTION the Commonwealth in A manner not inconsistent with such order.

(E) WHEN THE SUPREME COURT HAS FINALLY DECIDED AN APPEAL OR WHEN THE LAST DAY FOR FILING AN APPEAL HAS PASSED WITH NO APPEAL TAKEN, THE REAPPORTIONMENT plan shall have the force of law and the districts therein provided shall be used thereafter in elections to the General Assembly until the next reapportionment AS REQUIRED UNDER THIS SECTION 17.

(F) THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY SHALL APPROPRIATE SUFFICIENT FUNDS FOR THE COMPENSATION AND EXPENSES OF MEMBERS AND STAFF APPOINTED BY THE COMMISSION, AND OTHER NECESSARY EXPENSES. THE MEMBERS OF THE COMMISSION SHALL BE ENTITLED TO SUCH COMPENSATION FOR THEIR SERVICES AS THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY FROM TIME TO TIME SHALL DETERMINE, BUT NO PART THEREOF SHALL BE PAID UNTIL A PRELIMINARY PLAN IS FILED. IF A PRELIMINARY PLAN IS FILED BUT THE COMMISSION FAILS TO FILE A REVISED OR FINAL PLAN WITHIN THE TIME PRESCRIBED, THE COMMISSION MEMBERS SHALL FORFEIT ALL RIGHT TO COMPENSATION NOT PAID.

(G) IF A PRELIMINARY, REVISED OR FINAL REAPPORTIONMENT PLAN IS NOT FILED BY THE COMMISSION WITHIN THE TIME PRESCRIBED BY THIS SECTION, UNLESS THE TIME BE EXTENDED BY THE SUPREME COURT FOR CAUSE SHOWN, THE SUPREME COURT SHALL IMMEDIATELY PROCEED ON ITS OWN MOTION TO REAPPORTION THE COMMONWEALTH.

(H) ANY REAPPORTIONMENT PLAN FILED BY THE COMMISSION, OR ORDERED OR PREPARED BY THE SUPREME COURT UPON THE FAILURE OF THE COMMISSION TO ACT, SHALL BE PUBLISHED BY THE ELECTIONS OFFICER ONCE IN AT LEAST ONE NEWSPA-

PER OF GENERAL CIRCULATION IN EACH SENATORIAL AND REPRESENTATIVE DISTRICT. THE PUBLICATION SHALL CONTAIN A MAP OF THE COMMONWEALTH SHOWING THE COMPLETE REAPPORTIONMENT OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY BY DISTRICTS, AND A MAP SHOWING THE REAPPORTIONED DISTRICTS IN THE AREA NORMALLY SERVED BY THE NEWSPAPER IN WHICH THE PUBLICATION IS MADE. THE PUBLICATION SHALL ALSO STATE THE POPULATION OF THE SENATORIAL AND REPRESENTATIVE DISTRICTS HAVING THE SMALLEST AND LARGEST POPULATION AND THE PERCENTAGE VARIATION OF SUCH DISTRICTS FROM THE AVERAGE POPULATION FOR SENATORIAL AND REPRESENTATIVE DISTRICTS.

SCHEDULE

THE FOREGOING AMENDMENT TO ARTICLE II OF THE CONSTITUTION OF PENNSYLVANIA IF APPROVED BY THE ELECTORATE VOTING ON APRIL 23, 1968, SHALL BECOME EFFECTIVE THE YEAR FOLLOWING THAT IN WHICH THE NEXT FEDERAL DECENNIAL CENSUS IS OFFICIALLY REPORTED AS REQUIRED BY FEDERAL LAW.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. This report will be printed tonight and it will be on the calendar tomorrow on third consideration.

SCHEDULE AND PROCEDURE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair would like to make a suggestion that I hope all the Delegates will agree with and that will be unusual, but the suggestion is, I am advised that we can have the report ready on Proposal No. 6 which is the Local Government Proposal.

We have to call in the outfield again. May I please see Chairman Pelletier and Chairman Johnson? Apparently, my first information did not come through the right channel.

Fellow Delegates, I have just had a conference with the Chairman of Style and Drafting and they are going to try to report later today on Proposal No. 3 or Proposal No. 6, or, if we are very lucky, both of them. They are going to meet now.

My suggestion is, since we are going to have to be here tomorrow to vote on the final consideration of Proposals Nos. 1 and 2 and, also, the second consideration of the Judiciary, I would like very much, with your cooperation, if we could come back here for a short session at about 5:30 this evening before dinner, with the hopes that we will have an additional report from Style and Drafting.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, in the interest of saving time, as I understand Chairman Scranton, he said before that there were no other amendments that the committee knew of on Committee Proposal No. 7. If that is the case, why could we not suspend the rules and pass the committee proposal from second consideration to third consideration.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The body can do anything, of course, but I just want to say that I think the delegates should look at that proposal after it has been printed.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. It had come to my attention that this motion might be made, sir, and I discussed it with Mr. Amsterdam and both of us are opposed to it.

We feel very strongly that the people who have made so many changes in the Judiciary Article should have an opportunity to look at it. Nobody has brought to my attention any effort to make any major change. There is one thing going on which is extremely important and that is that both the staff and the counsel for the Judiciary are looking it over very thoroughly to see if there are any inconsistencies, so we do not have to have 82 votes on third reading to make minor changes. I would appreciate if you would hold it over, because it is not going to hold up Style and Drafting. They are not ready for it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think you have an excellent suggestion.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I did not make that a motion, I only made that a suggestion. I did not know the attitude of the two chairmen. Unfortunately, tomorrow is the funeral of Guy Davis and I understand there are going to be at least 10 or 12 members of this delegation that will not be here tomorrow because they are attending that funeral in due respect to a very fine gentleman employed by the Commonwealth. Therefore, it would be unfair to those men to have this important measure come up tomorrow on second reading with the privilege of amending the same. I expect to be here tomorrow and so do others, and that is the reason why I have done that.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want to say to Delegate Jirolanio, I know the basis for his reasoning and it certainly touches a sympathetic cord. By the same token, I want you to know the Chair is very much worried that we finish our job and finish it on time. We have on the calendar tomorrow for third and final consideration Proposals Nos. 1 and 2 for second consideration, the Judiciary, and we may have with good luck from Style and Drafting these other maybe one or two other proposals and, if we get those out of the way tomorrow, that would mean we would not have to have a Saturday session and we can come in here on Monday and Tuesday to get our work done.

I want to remind you these proposals still have to go into Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People, and it would not be fair to them to throw something in there on Wednesday. That is the only thing I am personally concerned with, is that we get our job done.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, in order to allow the Style and Drafting Committee to get to work forthwith, I would be very pleased if you would accept a motion to now recess this Convention until 5:30 o'clock today to receive the report on the proposals so that they can get back out of their committee by that hour.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Did you put that in the form of a motion?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I did.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Mr. President, I will second the motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Shoemaker, seconded by Delegate Rappaport, that we adjourn until 5:30 to come back and accept the proposals, if they are ready.

DELEGATE IRVIS. The reason I am standing at the microphone is because I am one of the people who will not be here tomorrow, because I do intend to pay my respects to Guy Davis. I have heard rumors there will be motions to reconsider the vote by which certain amendments will be put into Section No. 7. If there are such motions and if you know them, I would appreciate the Chair inform me, because I want to know if I am going to miss something of very great importance.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May the Chair answer you?

DELEGATE IRVIS. Yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I can only tell you the Chair, and counsel and Parliamentarian know of no such motions, but this does not rule them out.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE IRVIS. I rise for a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE IRVIS. I understand and I want to place upon the record the reason why I shall not be present tomorrow when the final vote is taken on, I think, Proposal No. 1 and Proposal No. 2. I will not be recorded. I do not want anyone to think I am not recorded because I do not wish to vote on those proposals. I must be away from my seat tomorrow.

SCHEDULE AND PLANNING

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would it inconvenience the delegates to give the committee more time than 5:30? What is a good time? We want to do it today. Now is the time to give them the opportunity to do their work.

DELEGATE IRVIS. I was under the impression by a couple people on the committee that 5:30 would give them over two hours.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Johnson, what do you think of 5:30?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. There is a mechanical problem. We are in agreement to having this put on computers in the form that we gave you of Proposals Nos. 1 and 2. If you will take them in some other form, we might have them ready.

Might I take this opportunity to announce that all of the members of the Committee on Style and Drafting are urgently requested to meet immediately after this session in our meeting room.

DELEGATE BARRON. Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, I understand from our Parliamentarian—and I want to answer you Delegate Johnson—that if you have your report we can take care of the mechanical part afterwards, providing, of course, it remains as is.

DELEGATE BARRON. Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Barron?

DELEGATE BARRON. Considering the concern that all of us have in connection with the problem of the funeral services, and so forth, tomorrow and considering that it is being well hinted that this body is about to recess for the day, perhaps, to reconvene today, I would, if it is in order, propose the following motion, that amendments to Proposal No. 7 be filed with the President or the Parliamentarian by 5:00 o'clock this afternoon and that no further amendments, other than drafting and styling errors, be permitted thereafter.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let us dispose of the motion we have on the floor. Let me say to Delegate Barron, your proposal raised many problems here. One of the principal problems is that many people have not had an opportunity to read this.

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have a motion on the floor to recess until 5:30. We will unlock the voting machine. The motion is: Shall we now recess until 5:30 this afternoon?

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

The roll was recorded as follows:

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING FOR PROPOSAL No. 3

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The purpose of this session, as you know, is to receive the report from style and drafting. The Chair now recognizes Chairman Pelletier of style and drafting.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, I rise in place to submit the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting for Proposal No. 3.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will accept that report and see that it is printed and will appear on the calendar.

COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING

519 North Office Building
Harrisburg, Pennsylvania 17106

February 22, 1968

To the Honorable,
The Delegates Assembled,
1967-1968 Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention

RE: Report on State Indebtedness

Mesdames and Sirs:

We are pleased to submit our Report on Committee Proposal Three relating to Commonwealth indebtedness and two auxiliary matters.

Preliminarily, the Committee wishes to acknowledge the personal assistance and cooperation of the Co-Chairmen of the substantive Committee on Taxation and State Finance as the text of this Proposal was examined and edited pursuant to Rule 22.

I. GENERAL

As previously, the Committee on Style and Drafting considered Proposal Three in the manner agreed upon by the Committee and approved by the Convention. In addition to preliminary conferences with the Co-Chairmen and counsel of the substantive Committee, copies of Style and Drafting's edited text were selectively distributed to members of the substantive Committee for comment. The advice of the Co-Directors of the Convention's Research Staff, the Director of the Convention Drafting Bureau, and of the Director of State Constitutional Drafting Studies at Columbia University was solicited and considered prior to approval by the full Committee of the edited text.

We reiterate our goal: to critically consider each proposal referred to this Committee to insure that the proposals finally submitted to the Convention for third consideration are clear, concise, unambiguous, and harmonious in style and manner of expression within the substantive Committee's proposal as amended on second consideration, with other pending substantive proposals, and with the remainder of the Constitution of 1874. To insure constancy in word usage and description in the revised article on taxation and finance, the Committee on Style and Drafting delayed rendering its report on Commonwealth indebtedness until Proposals Four and Five had been referred for consideration.

II. SECTION NUMBERING

Attached as an Exhibit to this narrative is a table showing the manner in which present existing sections in the taxation and finance article of the Constitution of 1874 would be affected by the repealer provisions contained in Proposals Three, Four, and Five of the Committee on Taxation and State Finance and in Proposal Six of the Committee on Local Government, assuming final passage of these proposals by the Convention and approval by the electorate. The Committee's intention, as the column on the right of the Exhibit indicates, is to organize the sections of this article to insure numerical sequence. The Convention should determine either to accept the Committee's recommendation with respect to proposed numbering as shown in the Exhibit and in each of the proposals being reported with respect to the Taxation and State Finance Article or, alternatively, to strike all section numbers in Proposals Three, Four and Five so as to permit the Governor by proclamation to specify the section numbers pursuant to Act No. 180 of August 17, 1965. If the Convention accepts the proposed numbering, the Committee strongly recommends that present existing sections 2 and 3 of Article IX be renumbered sections 5 and 6 respectively, and that present existing section 3 be amended by deleting the word "State" and substituting therefore the word "Commonwealth."

III. SIGNIFICANT CHANGES IN STYLE

1. In consultation with the substantive Committee, this Committee has inserted the descriptor "man-made or natural" and stricken the phrase "or other catastrophe", page one, line 15. This change was necessary to preserve the sense and purpose of the clause.

The Committee is not insensitive to the rationale of the Convention at the time this clause was amended on second consideration by deleting "riot or civil disorder" and inserting the phrase "or other catastrophe." However, this change would have effectively precluded the Commonwealth from incurring indebtedness to rehabilitate any area which might have had the misfortune to endure mob violence which, we understand, was not your intention.

The lexicographers consider disaster and catastrophe to be synonymous, although the latter is deemed to be of a greater order, viz. a "notable disaster." See Webster's International 3d ed., and 6 Words and Phrases. Two recent Pennsylvania appellate court cases likewise treat the words as being synonymous, differing solely in degree or magnitude, but both involving an "unusual, extraordinary, sudden" or "an unexpected manifestation of the forces of nature." Goldberg v. R. G. Miller, 408 Pa. 7, 8 (1962); Rohr v. Logan, 206 Pa. Super. 232 (1965).

Thus, to accomplish that goal which the Convention obviously seeks, we recommend acceptance of the descriptive phrase "man-made or natural disaster."

2. On page two, line one, the word "State" has been added to the title of Treasurer to conform to present usage as in Article IV, section 1, "The Executive Department."

3. In subsection (2), the two operative clauses have been combined to avoid unnecessary duplication.

4. So that it is quite clear that all three of the officers named in subsection (2) must together undertake to either issue tax anticipation notes or refund debt, the Committee recommends the phrase "acting jointly". (Page 2, line 1).

5. The definition of tax anticipation notes has been further refined to accord with contemporary understanding of that term of art. This refinement is agreeable to both the substantive Committee and the Commonwealth's Counsel General.

6. At the suggestion of the substantive Committee's representatives subsection (3), (lines 8-11, page 2), was moved verbatim to precede what is now subsection (4) to establish a more logical sequence in presentation.

7. In subsection (4) certain changes in style were effected to more precisely state the intention of the Convention and, at lines 22-27, the calculation of debt outstanding was restated to avoid unseemly repetition.

8. The Committee calls the Convention's attention to the insertion of the description "fiscal" at line sixteen, page two. As originally drawn it was unclear whether reference was being made to five calendar or five fiscal years. The Committee has been advised the substantive Committee intended reference to fiscal periods certified by the Auditor General.

9. In subsection (B) (page 3, lines 1-5), this Committee suggested, and the substantive Committee concurred in a change in language to insure that the maturity of debt incurred for capital projects bears a direct relation to the estimated useful life of the projects and that the General Assembly's determination of this period of useful life, made in the law authorizing the projects, is a final determination. The Committee is of the view that the operation of the financial market place establishes adequate parametres to insure against the possibility, however remote, of an abuse of discretion in the determination of this judgment.

10. The second sentence of subsection (B) (page 3, lines 5-9), required further definition to achieve the sense and purpose of the Convention. The Convention and the substantive Committee obviously did not intend that the Commonwealth should be confined to serial bond issues. Yet the operative language "payable in . . . installments" seemed to limit issues solely to those serial in nature. Thus, so as not to preclude issuance of term obligations with a sinking fund, the operative words "amortized . . . amounts" are recommended.

Secondly, the Convention and substantive Committee desired that certain sums be paid either against the serial issue or into the sinking fund without precluding the Commonwealth, as the market would permit, from having a major final payment or "balloon" at the end of the financing period. Yet the language on second consideration, while requiring periodic payment, would have permitted the incongruity of an initial nominal payment. The Committee, therefore, recommends the language "substantial and regular" to describe the manner in which long-term debt is to be amortized.

To promote exact definition of the term within which the first amortized amount is to be paid against a serial issue or deposited to the sinking fund of a term issue, the Committee has rephrased the description phrase to insure that such payment is made or deposit effected any time after the obligation is assumed but prior to the expiration of a period of time equal to one-tenth the term of the debt. Thus on a 40-year bond, a payment must be made or deposit effected within four years from the date the obligation was issued.

11. The changes in language in subsection (C) were made to more clearly and precisely delimit the three exceptions from the definition of debt in this Proposal.

12. The change effected in subsection (D) is intended to remove unnecessary verbiage.

13. In sections 6 (page 3, line 29) and 9 (page 4, lines 3, 7 and 9), the word "Commonwealth" has been substituted for "state" to conform to common usage in other pending proposals. We again recommend the amendment of existing section 3 to delete "state" and insert "Commonwealth."

14. The nouns (line 2, page 4) were rearranged as a matter of style to conform to their prior use in the same subsection.

15. The description of type "municipalities" in section A (page 4, lines 3-9) were added to identify units of local government now in existence and to protect the Commonwealth from being obliged to assume the debt of any unit of local government which may hereafter be created. The descriptive phrase "any similar general purpose unit of government" as well as the listing of existing units of local government conforms to the usage in Proposal 6 of the Committee on Local Government.

Finally, in this same section 9, the limited number of situations in which the Commonwealth may assume municipal debt has been phrased to conform to those situations in which section 7 of this Committee Proposal 3 permits the Commonwealth to incur debt without limit. The Committee notes, however, that the provision for rehabilitation of areas affected by man-made or natural disaster has been deliberately omitted.

Respectfully submitted,

Committee on Style and Drafting

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL NO. 3

A PROPOSAL

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania further providing for Commonwealth indebtedness.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Section four of article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended to read:

[Section 4. No debt shall be created by or on behalf of the State, except to supply casual deficiencies of revenue, repel invasions, suppress insurrection, defend the State in war, or to pay existing debt; and the debt created to supply deficiencies in revenue shall never exceed, in the aggregate at any one time, one million dollars: Provided, however, That the General Assembly, irrespective of any debt, may authorize the State to issue bonds, to the amount of one hundred millions of dollars, for the purpose of improving and rebuilding the highways of the Commonwealth.]

SECTION 7. Commonwealth Indebtedness.—(a) No debt shall be incurred by or on behalf of the Commonwealth except by law and in accordance with the provisions of this section.

(1) Debt may be incurred without limit to suppress insurrection, rehabilitate areas affected by MAN-MADE OR NATURAL disaster, or to implement unissued authority approved by the electors prior to the adoption of this article.

(2). The Governor, STATE Treasurer and Auditor General, ACTING jointly, may (I) issue tax anticipation notes having a maturity within the fiscal year OF ISSUE and payable EXCLUSIVELY from revenues received IN the same fiscal year,

AND (II) incur debt for the purpose of refunding other debt, IF such refunding debt matures within the term of the original debt.

(3) DEBT MAY BE INCURRED WITHOUT LIMIT FOR PURPOSES SPECIFICALLY ITEMIZED IN THE LAW AUTHORIZING SUCH DEBT IF THE QUESTION WHETHER THE DEBT SHALL BE INCURRED HAS BEEN SUBMITTED TO THE ELECTORS AND APPROVED BY A MAJORITY OF THOSE VOTING ON THE QUESTION.

(4) Debt may be incurred without the approval of the electors for capital PROJECTS SPECIFICALLY ITEMIZED in a capital budget, IF SUCH debt WILL not cause the amount of all net debt outstanding to exceed one and three-quarters times the average OF THE annual tax REVENUES deposited IN the previous five FISCAL years as certified by the Auditor General. FOR THE PURPOSES OF THIS SUBSECTION, DEBT OUTSTANDING SHALL NOT INCLUDE DEBT INCURRED UNDER SUBSECTIONS (1) AND (2)(I), OR DEBT INCURRED UNDER SUBSECTION (2)(II) IF THE ORIGINAL DEBT WOULD NOT BE SO CONSIDERED, OR DEBT INCURRED UNDER SUBSECTION (3) UNLESS THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY SHALL SO PROVIDE IN THE LAW AUTHORIZING SUCH DEBT.

(B) All debt incurred for capital PROJECTS shall mature within a period not to exceed the AVERAGE estimated useful life of the PROJECTS AS stated in the AUTHORIZING law, AND

WHEN SO STATED SHALL BE CONCLUSIVE. All DEBT, except INDEBTEDNESS PERMITTED BY SUBSECTION (2), (I), shall be AMORTIZED in SUBSTANTIAL AND REGULAR AMOUNTS, THE FIRST OF WHICH SHALL BE DUE PRIOR TO THE EXPIRATION OF A PERIOD EQUAL TO ONE-TENTH THE TERM OF THE DEBT.

(C) As used in this section, debt shall mean the issued and outstanding obligations of the Commonwealth and shall include obligations of its agencies or authorities TO THE EXTENT THEY are to be repaid from rentals or other charges payable directly or indirectly from revenues of the Commonwealth. Debt, shall not include EITHER (1) THAT PORTION OF OBLIGATIONS to be repaid from charges made to the public for the use of the CAPITAL PROJECTS FINANCED, AS determined by the Auditor General, or (2) OBLIGATIONS TO BE REPAID from lease rentals or other charges payable by a school district or OTHER local taxing authority or OBLIGATIONS TO BE REPAID by agencies or authorities created for the joint benefit of THE Commonwealth and one or more other State governments.

(D) If sufficient funds ARE NOT APPROPRIATED for the timely payment of the interest upon and installments of principal of all debt, the State Treasurer shall set apart from the first revenues thereafter received applicable to the appropriate fund a sum sufficient to pay such interest and installments of principal, and shall so apply the money so set apart. The State Treasurer may be required to set aside and apply such revenues at the suit of any holder of Commonwealth obligations.

Section 2. Sections six and nine of the article are amended to read:

Section [6] 8. COMMONWEALTH Credit not to be Pledged.—The credit of the Commonwealth shall not be pledged or loaned to any individual, company, corporation or association nor shall the Commonwealth become a joint owner or stockholder in any company, CORPORATION OR association. [or corporation]

Section 9. Municipal Debt not to be Assumed by COMMONWEALTH. — The Commonwealth shall not assume the debt, or any part thereof, of any COUNTY, city, [county] borough, INCORPORATED TOWN or township OR ANY SIMILAR GENERAL PURPOSE UNIT OF GOVERNMENT unless such debt shall have been [contracted] INCURRED to enable the [State to repel invasion,] COMMONWEALTH TO suppress [domestic] insurrection [, defend itself in time of war,] or to assist the [State] COMMONWEALTH in the discharge of any portion of its present indebtedness.

Section 3. The existing sections four, five, eleven, twelve, thirteen, sixteen, sixteen, seventeen, twenty-one, twenty-two and twenty-three of article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania are hereby repealed.

Section 4. Effective when the last bonds have been issued under their authority, sections twenty-four and twenty-five of article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania are hereby repealed.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA

1968 SESSION

PROPOSAL NO.

A PROPOSAL

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania further providing for Commonwealth indebtedness.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Section four of article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended to read:

Section 7. Commonwealth Indebtedness.—(a) No debt shall be incurred by or on behalf of the Commonwealth except by law and in accordance with the provisions of this section.

(1) Debt may be incurred without limit to suppress insurrection, rehabilitate areas affected by man-made or natural disaster or to implement unissued authority approved by the electors prior to the adoption of this article.

(2) The Governor, State Treasurer and Auditor General, acting jointly, may (i) issue tax anticipation notes having a maturity within the fiscal year of issue and payable exclusively from revenues received in the same fiscal year, and (ii) incur debt for the purpose of refunding other debt, if such refunding debt matures within the term of the original debt.

(3) Debt may be incurred without limit for purposes specifically itemized in the law authorizing such debt, if the question whether the debt shall be incurred has been submitted to the electors and and approved by a majority of those voting on the question.

(4) Debt may be incurred without the approval of the electors for capital projects specifically itemized in a capital budget, if such debt will not cause the amount of all net debt outstanding to exceed one and three-quarters times the average of the annual tax revenues deposited in the previous five fiscal years as certified by the Auditor General. For the purposes of this subsection, debt outstanding shall not include debt incurred under subsections (1) and (2) (i), or debt incurred under subsection (2) (ii) if the original debt would not be so considered, or debt incurred under subsection (3) unless the General Assembly shall so provide in the law authorizing such debt.

(b) All debt incurred for capital projects shall mature within a period not to exceed the average estimated useful life of the projects as stated in the authorizing law and when so stated shall be conclusive. All debt, except indebtedness permitted by subsection (2) (i), shall be amortized in substantial and regular amounts, the first of which shall be due prior to the expiration of a period equal to one-tenth the term of the debt.

(c) As used in this section, debt shall mean the issued and outstanding obligations of the Commonwealth and shall include obligations of its agencies or authorities to the extent they are to be repaid from lease rentals or other charges payable directly or indirectly from revenues of the Commonwealth. Debt shall not include either (1) that portion of obligations to be repaid from charges made to the public for the use of the capital projects financed, as determined by the Auditor General, or (2) obligations to be repaid from lease rentals or other charges payable by a school district or other local taxing authority or obligations to be repaid by agencies or authorities created for the joint benefit of the Commonwealth and one or more other State governments.

(d) If sufficient funds are not appropriated for the timely payment of the interest upon and installments of principal of all debt, the State Treasurer shall set apart from the first revenues thereafter received applicable to the appropriate fund a sum sufficient to pay such interest and installments of principal, and shall so apply the money so set apart. The State Treasurer may be required to set aside and apply such revenues at the suit of any holder of Commonwealth obligations.

Section 2. Sections six and nine of the article are amended to read:

Section 8. Commonwealth Credit not to be Pledged.—The credit of the Commonwealth shall not be pledged or loaned to any individual, company, corporation or association nor shall the Commonwealth become a joint owner or stockholder in any company, corporation or association.

Section 9. Municipal Debt not to be Assumed by Commonwealth.—The Commonwealth shall not assume the debt, or any part thereof, of any county, city, borough, incorporated town or township or any similar general purpose unit of government unless such debt shall have been incurred to enable the Commonwealth to suppress insurrection or to assist the Commonwealth in the discharge of any portion of its present indebtedness.

PLANNING AND SCHEDULING

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want to point out that we now have received from the Committee on Style and Drafting today Nos. 1, 2 and 3, is that correct?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. That is right.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. And they will be on the calendar tomorrow. They will be on the calendar, I might add, for third consideration and final passage tomorrow.

Now, also on the calendar tomorrow we will have the Judiciary Article which is Proposal No. 7, and we hope that we will be able to move that into Style and Drafting.

I want to say right at this point that I am personally glad that I am not on the Style and Drafting Committee, because you are going to have a busy weekend with the No. 7 Proposal; and you also have 4, 5 and 6.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, as I also indicated to you, if you would like us to make the effort and would like to call this body back at 9:00 o'clock, we will attempt to have Proposal No. 6 ready for you at that time. I do not guarantee we can do it, but we shall try.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me just say this, as far as the Chair is concerned, unless we hear a real objection, I know I will be here and be happy to receive the report. All those delegates who can be here, I urge you to come so that we can accept this report, if it is ready on No. 6, which would be Local Government.

That would give us on the calendar for tomorrow, then, 1, 2, 3 and 6.

So you may have some idea of how we will run, therefore, on Monday we would have up for final passage—well, we would receive 7 on Monday, hopefully, from Style and Drafting, and we could receive 4 and 5 tomorrow from Style and Drafting, hopefully.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. 4, certainly, and hopefully, 5.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. This would put probably a few more on the calendar for final passage.

Tuesday we would be ready, if Style and Drafting can finish it over the weekend, for the Judiciary. We would be ready to receive that report on Monday and we would vote finally on it on Tuesday.

So that would give us, then, Wednesday to receive the report from Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People and vote on it Thursday, the 29th, the last day.

Now, I recognize Delegate Kline.

DELEGATE KLINE. Mr. President, I gathered from what you said that you hoped to take a final vote on Proposals Nos. 1, 2 and 3 tomorrow.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is right.

DELEGATE KLINE. I would like to ask you to check with your Parliamentarian and see if there are any amendments to those proposals tomorrow, whether we could pass them finally tomorrow.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. First of all, we have not received any amendments to Proposals Nos. 1, 2 and 3.

No. 2, if they are, they will be on our calendar under third consideration and final passage and amendments can only be accepted with the consent of the majority of those present. We have no amendments and, therefore, if we have no amendments, no debate, we could finally pass 1, 2, and 3.

I do think it is very important that we keep up with the schedule so that we can get passage of 1, 2 and 3 tomorrow, because, please remember we have not given Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People very much time. Even under this stepped-up schedule they will have to come in with a report next Wednesday that we will have to amend, accept and adopt on Thursday.

DELEGATE KLINE. Mr. President, I appreciate your concern and enthusiasm, but you have not answered my question. I will restate it. You can check with the Parliamentarian if you like:

In the event there happens to be amendments to 1, 2 and 3 tomorrow, can we pass them tomorrow after the amendments.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No, it will have to lay over until Monday.

DELEGATE KLINE. Thank you, Mr. President.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE STROUP. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE STROUP. On third consideration what is the vote that is required in order to have an amendment adopted?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. On third consideration, moving it over to final passage only requires a simple majority, but for final passage you are going to require 82 votes. Now, did I answer your question?

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, then I am slightly confused, I must admit that. I was under the impression that on third consideration for an amendment to be adopted it requires 82.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I thought you asked what the vote was to move it from third consideration to final passage. What is your question again?

DELEGATE STROUP. My question is with relation to an amendment on third consideration. I thought you stated, and this is what puzzles me, that a majority of those present could pass an amendment on third consideration.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me state it again. On third consideration, before this body can consider an amendment, it requires the consent of a majority of the delegates here to receive the amendment.

Now, if the majority of the delegates vote to consider the amendment and receive it, receive and consider it, then in order to pass that amendment a majority again is necessary. There will be two votes.

DELEGATE STROUP. If I understand this, tomorrow on amendments on third consideration, if we have 120 present, it will take only 61 to adopt the amendment. Am I right?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The majority of those present, first for a consent to receive the amendment and the same majority of those present to pass the amendment.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, this changes my thinking on amendments on third consideration considerably. I was under the impression that it would require a majority of the entire delegation to get an amendment on third consideration passed.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will be happy to read that section of the Rules. Would you give me the Rules, please? The only thing we need is the Rule Book.

First of all, may I call Delegate Stroup's attention to the Rules on page 43. It says: "The Proposal as reported by the Committee on Style and Drafting may be amended upon consent of a majority of the delegates present."

That is on page 43, number 11, of the Rules.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, I direct your attention to page 45 under Rule 27, sub-Section 2, regarding amendments. How do you justify that decision when it clearly states that no amendment may be offered on first consideration or final passage?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will be glad to answer that for you.

Third consideration and final passage are different. We first take up third consideration and then agree to move it from third consideration to final passage, and when is moved over to final passage there can be no amend ment.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Then we need another day?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We do not need anothe day because, according to the Parliamentarian, we ca accomplish both on the same day, unless it is amended. it is amended, it goes back to Style and Drafting an comes back again.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. I know now, Mr. President, yo have conferred with our Parliamentarian and I shall abid by the decision made by the Chair, which changes m thinking process with relation to amendment on third co sideration. I shall restate it, as I understand it, for th benefit of the delegates and also for myself.

If any of us in this hall tomorrow would offer an amend ment on third consideration, it requires only a majorit of those in their seats and voting at that time to carr that amendment, am I correct?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is right, and it als requires the consent of the majority to offer the amend ment to introduce it. We are going to have two votes.

DELEGATE STROUP. I understand that, but tha makes it much easier to amend on third consideration, a many of us here have believed before.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. They are the rules we hav been working under and have adopted.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Mr. President, may I call you attention for the moment to page 44 which is the sourc of my confusion. In the second paragraph of Item 14 Rule 26 where it says that no amendment to the Con stitution shall be deemed passed—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Just a moment. Where ar you?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. On page 44, second paragrap of Item 14 of Rule 26. In the third line it says no amend ment to the Constitution unless a majority of 82. It doe not say final passage.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Parliamentarian say that is what it means, we need a vote of 82 for final pas age.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. This is the source of the con fusion. It does not say "final passage."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I can only say that every body must have been confused except the Parliamentar ian.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Del gate Desmond. For what purpose does the gentleman rise DELEGATE DESMOND. I rise for a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state i

DELEGATE DESMOND. I have a doubt whether or n we have a quorum. Will you please call the roll and d termine that?

A DELEGATE. May I ask a question of follow-up o the senator's interpretation of the rules?

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, I do not mind stan ing here and yielding until all the learned gentlemen as questions about parliamentary procedure, but I would sug gest to the Chair that, inasmuch as I am standing he with a separate question, the Chair rule on the quorum call and then that I be recognized so I might ask a separate question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am advised by the Parliamentarian that it requires 12 people to request a call of the roll. I just want to say, for what purpose are we worried about a roll call now?

DELEGATE IRVIS. I do not know. I did not suggest that, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want the body to know that we are ready for a motion to recess until 9:00 o'clock to accept another report, and we have no further business to conduct now.

As far as we are concerned, on these parliamentary questions, I want you to know I do not mind trying to answer them, but here is the Parliamentarian, here is the Rule Book, and he will be glad to stay here and answer them.

Now, I recognize Delegate Hocker.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE IRVIS. I rise for a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE IRVIS. I simply want to get one point clear for the delegates here. Is there any intention on the part of the Chair of conducting any other business at 9:00 o'clock tonight other than the acceptance of the report of Style and Drafting?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No, the Chair has no intention to accept any other business at 9:00 o'clock tonight except the report from Style and Drafting. The session was called the same as this session, to get a report in to expedite it so we can get these things on the final passage calendar tomorrow.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, so that we may all understand what the procedures are going to be now that we are getting into third consideration, can we follow up on the Senator's question? Assuming that we have 120 delegates here, it will take 61 votes to consider an amendment, is that correct?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is right.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. It will take 61 votes to pass the amendment, is that correct?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is right.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. But it will take 82 votes to finally pass what?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. To finally pass the proposal.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. It takes 82. Now, if there are 120 people here, it will take 82 votes to pass Proposal No. 1, am I correct?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Absolutely.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I just want everybody to understand that. Thank you.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. And also Proposals Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8. It takes 82 votes for final passage.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate McGeary. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE McGEARY. I rise for a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE McGEARY. I have been a little bit concerned since Representative Irvis' inquiry this morning. Maybe I misunderstood it. But I had the impression he was more or less asking that nothing important happen tomorrow. Now, I would like to be perfectly understood on this, that I have no plans to reconsider anything. I hope everything stays closed. But I do not think that this body can get in the position of telling anybody that we will not do something tomorrow. I think we should be open to do anything that the group feels it has to do.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I would just like to say, when you say we are not going to do anything important tomorrow, I think tomorrow we are going to do some of the most important work we have ever done, and that is, pass Proposals Nos. 1, 2—3, and maybe 8. To me that is important.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, I may have confused more than one delegate by my statement, and that would not be the first time I succeeded in doing that, I am sure. But it was not my intention to ask any cessation of important activity by the delegate body tomorrow. It was simply my purpose to ascertain, if at all possible, what the plans were for tomorrow so that I might draw my own personal plans and make my own personal decisions. That was the only reason.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Irvis, that is the only reason that I took this opportunity to go over the calendar as I think it may be for tomorrow, and the calendar for Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, to give you an idea of what we are faced with.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I am assuming that a proposal would be up for the final vote, and, as I understand it, it would then be necessary to have 82 votes. What would happen if that proposal—I hope it does not happen—would only get 81 votes?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You have just put your finger on the saddest thing that could happen to this Convention.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I agree with you. That is why I want an answer. What would happen then?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The proposal would fail to pass, and then we have flunked.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. What would we do in that case when we have four areas to report back to the people?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I do not think we are going to have to cross that bridge today. When we do, I am going to make sure the Parliamentarian has the right answer.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Could we reconsider it to have another vote on it?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I would say we certainly can reconsider it. I think we should be able to reconsider it and have another vote.

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. On the motion to recess until 9:30 p.m. the chair is willing to hear objections if there are any.

The Chair hears none, and the Convention is now in recess until 9:30 p.m.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time of recess having expired, the Convention will come to order.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I rise for a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I have a point of order regarding Rule 22.

One of the Philadelphia newspapers last Sunday carried a story to the effect that the Committee on Style and Drafting is attempting to make substantive changes in one or more of the committee proposals.

As a member of the Committee on Style and Drafting, but of my own volition and without the consent of that committee or its chairmen, I tried to check out the truth of this charge that Style and Drafting and its counsel were straying too far beyond their jurisdiction and attempting to substitute their own hackneyed ideas for the substance of the committee proposals.

My investigation has included conversations in depth with members and at least one of the co-chairman of each of the substantive committees, except that on the Judiciary Article.

Mr. Chairman, I have uncovered what I believe to be an outrageous plot to wreck this convention. It appears that each of the substantive committees has given meticulous attention to grammatical construction, has assiduously avoided inaccuracies, repetition, inconsistency and poor drafting and has produced proposals completely free of any differences, conflicts or unresolved matters of substance, thus leaving to the Committee on Style and Drafting nothing on which it might make recommendations.

Mr. Chairman, it appears to me that the substantive committees have completely usurped the function of the Committee on Style and Drafting, a most serious violation of Rule 22.

REPORT FROM COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING ON PROPOSAL No. 6

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes the Chairman of the Committee on Style and Drafting, Chairman Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. I stand in place and present Proposal No. 6. Lord help us, we hurried.

COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING

519 North Office Building

February 22, 1968

To the Honorable,
The Delegates Assembled,
1967-68 Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention

Re: Local Government

Mesdames and Sirs:

On behalf of the Committee we are pleased to submit our report on Committee Proposal No. Six relating to Local Government.

This Committee has worked closely with the Co-Chairmen and Counsel of the substantive Committee on Local Government, and we are pleased to report that all the changes in Proposal Six as reported herewith were made with the concurrence of those gentlemen.

The proposed new Article Nine deals comprehensively with the subject of local government, including not only those subjects covered by repealed sections in Articles Eight, Thirteen, Fourteen and Fifteen, but adding new provisions covering home rule charters, residual powers, optional forms of government, intergovernmental cooperation, area government, and initiative and referendum.

We have attempted to adhere closely to the substantive Committee's objectives of providing flexible and forward-looking guidelines for responsible local government in concise, general terms, avoiding the overly specific, unduly restrictive treatment frequently found in other state constitutions.

Following is a summary of the significant changes in drafting effected by this Committee:

I. SIGNIFICANT CHANGES IN STYLE

1. Two steps were taken to clarify Section 2. The four year provision delaying the self-executing home rule charter rights of a municipality was removed from the section and placed in the schedule, in view of the anticipated long term life of the Article. The sentence on self-executing home rule was re-drafted to clarify the fact that the voters of a municipality or its governing body may place the question of adoption of a home rule charter directly on the ballot or may place a proposed procedure for the framing, adoption, amendment or repeal of a charter on the ballot.

2. Section 7 was clarified to allow for the granting of powers directly to area government, in accordance with what was understood to be the intention of the Committee.

3. The provision as to Local Reapportionment was changed to conform to the style and usage in Proposals Nos. One and Two relating to reapportionment of the Commonwealth. This was done with the approval of the Co-Chairmen of the substantive committee and of its sub-committee.

4. Section 13 has been placed into the draft rather than merely referred to. This is an identical copy of existing Article 14, Section 8 which relates exclusively to Philadelphia. Two changes were made in cross references. These changes were cleared in advance with Special Counsel for the City of Philadelphia.

5. The definition section was changed in two respects. To clarify the Committee's intent, the phrase "any similar form of government" in the definition of "municipality" was changed to "general purpose unit of government." It was felt that this language better expressed the Committee's intention since the characteristic of municipalities which is common to all is the fact that they are "general purpose." In order to clarify the intention of paragraph 5, the definition of the word "initiative" has been changed to allow for the initiative to take place within an area affected as well as municipality affected. Language stating that no enabling legislation shall be required for initiative was also added at the suggestion of the substantive Committee.

6. The language of the schedule was simplified by sorting out and restating the effective dates of the various provisions. The self-executing home rule was made effective four years after adoption if the General Assembly fails to act within that time.

7. The provisions in Section 4 relating to Optional Form of County Government do not in the opinion of the Committee constitute a total "form of government," and the language of Section 4 has been changed to be in accord with this thought.

8. Minor changes were made in Sections 5, 7 and 8 so as more clearly to state the intention of the substantive Committee.

9. In a number of instances the phrase "as provided by the General Assembly" was changed to read "as provided by law," for the sake of consistency. Additional minor changes in punctuation and wording were made with the concurrence, or at the suggestion, of the representatives from the substantive Committee.

II. PROBLEM AREAS

1. Definition of Procedural Matter. An attempt was made to define the words "procedural matters." After extensive debate and discussion, the suggestion of the Local Government Committee Co-Chairmen, that the word be left for later definition by the courts, was accepted. The argument made was that since the instructions are to the General Assembly which has broad powers in any event, the greatest danger lay in overly restricting the definition. It was felt that the General Assembly could be relied on to act in the best interest of the Commonwealth.

2. The last sentence of the schedule was reviewed and, after discussion with Counsel for the Convention, amended. While the Style and Drafting Committee felt that the sentence should be excluded, they were informed that it had been included on the basis of discussion by the Local Government Committee and Counsel for the Convention; they therefore included the sentence as amended.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

1967-1968

February 29, 1968.

The Honorable,
The Delegates Assembled,
Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention

Mesdames and Sirs:

The Committee on Style and Drafting is pleased to submit this abbreviated report. As the Delegates are aware, the Committee returned Committee Proposal No. 7 relating to the Judiciary late last evening. The purpose of this report following that submission pursuant to Rule 22 is to insure that the Convention's record properly indicates that the Committee discharged its responsibilities.

At the outset, the Committee wishes to acknowledge the assistance of Frank Garber, Esquire and Alice Drayer, both of the Legislative Reference Bureau. Without their unstinting cooperation all day yesterday and for half the night last night, the marked copy of Proposal No. 7 would not have been available. We also wish to note on the record that the many young ladies of the Legislative Reference Bureau who typed and proofed copy throughout the night, though nameless, deserve our deepest appreciation. In this same regard, our Counsel and the Committee acknowledge the long hours of discussion and writing spent by Counsel to the substantive committee, Carter Buller, and Arthur Frankston, that committee's research director.

Due to the pressure of time with respect to the Convention's desire that this proposal be returned on third consideration as soon as possible, we wish to advise that the most concentrated efforts were devoted to the body of the proposed article; this Committee's consideration of the schedule was deliberately limited to serious matters of grammatical expression and rearrangement of sections to insure more logical presentation. This explanation is offered not as excuse, but solely to insure that the Delegates are aware that this Committee does not concur in the necessity for detailed schedules which are "legislative" in character. The circumstances of the moment as well as the practicalities of life required that we acquiesce in the substantive committee's judgment on this point.

As the Committee has reported previously, we consider hereafter the significant matters of drafting.

1. In every instance a conscious attempt was made to reenforce, in the matter of expression throughout the article and schedule, the concept of a "unified judicial system". Thus, at Section 1, the listing of courts precedes the statement of the justice of the peace. Having established that identification, the Committee thereafter referred to courts and justices of the peace in the unified judicial system.

2. The arrangement of the sections within the article was also considered and some sections rearranged. For example, following the several sections relating to the jurisdiction of the several courts in the unified judicial system, the Committee inserted the sections relating to the definition of judicial districts and to the concept of judicial administration.

3. The sections relating to election or appointment of judicial officers were rearranged and detailed section references inserted. While the Committee would agree that extensive cross-references in a constitutional document is not the best stylistic approach, the sense of the Committee was that these sections were so detailed that clearly identified cross-references within the section and to other sections were mandatory.

4. We would note our preference that the section relative to the referendum on the question of a qualifications commission be included in the schedule. However, after consideration by the Committee and consultation with the Co-Chairmen of the substantive committee, it was agreed that doing so would unnecessarily delay returning this Proposal to the Convention on third consideration calendar.

5. Undoubtedly some question will be raised respecting the Committee's decision to acquiesce in the inclusion of a detailed description of the organization and functions of a Judicial Inquiry and Review Board. The Committee concurs in the judgment of the substantive committee. This greater concern for detail is necessitated by the fact that the concept here contained is new to the Commonwealth. As a result, it is necessary that the wishes of the Convention be explicit. Once the concept has found acceptance and has functioned for a period of time, the detailed explanation can be amended out of the Constitution.

6. As the Committee has recommended in previous reports, we note with appreciation the promptness with which the Judiciary Committee met to act upon certain ambiguities and unresolved issues. Thus it was possible that this Committee could continue its deliberations in conjunction with sub-committees to the substantive committee, reviewing proposed language at the same time the standing committee was making a determination on the substantive matters involved.

7. Finally the Committee, in the brief time available for consideration and working from marked copy, sought to insure uniformity in expression, clarity by the judicious use of punctuation, and brevity of expression. We regret the necessity of so many correctional amendments this morning, but the Committee's recommendations were submitted on marked copy and time would not permit the usual repeated review sessions necessary to insure that the human errors in marking and transcription had been deleted.

Respectfully submitted,

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you.

The Chair accepts the report from Style and Drafting in connection with Proposal No. 6. It will be placed on the record, printed and be on the calendar, we hope, tomorrow. I think the fellow delegates will join me in thanking the Committee on Style and Drafting for working so hard to get in this report.

While we are thanking them, I think we should also remind them that we are expecting them to work this weekend so they will also produce a report on the judiciary, we hope, on Monday.

ADJOURNMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Leach.

DELEGATE LEACH. Mr. President, I move that this Convention do now adjourn until Friday, February 23, 1968 at 9 a.m., e.s.t.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Leach and seconded by Delegate Harding that this Convention do now adjourn until Friday, February 23, 1968 at 9 a.m., e.s.t.

The motion was agreed to, and (at 10:10 p.m., e.s.t.) the Convention was adjourned.

PENNSYLVANIA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION 1967-1968

JOURNAL

Volume 1 Friday, February 23, 1968 Number 50

The Convention was called to order at 9 a.m., e.s.t.

THE PRESIDENT (Raymond J. Broderick) IN THE CHAIR

PRAYER

THE REVEREND HENRY J. SHARP, pastor of the Episcopal Church in Oaks, Pennsylvania, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray: O Lord, our heavenly Father, look with Thy favor upon our land and people. Though we may not always be deserving, Thou hast made us great among the nations of this earth. Let us not forget that this place and this power have come to Thee, and that we have them as a trust to use in Thy service. Save us from pride and arrogance; help us to see and respond to the needs of others.

Guide, we pray Thee, those to whom has been committed the leadership of this nation and this Commonwealth; grant to them gifts of wisdom and understanding, of counsel and of strength, that they may uphold what is right and follow what is true.

And to those, O Father, gathered here in behalf of the people of this Commonwealth, grant integrity of purpose and devotion to their cause, that they may be worthy of their high calling to serve their fellow men; all of which is asked through Jesus Christ. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE TO THE FLAG

The Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag was recited by the Convention, led by Delegate Redick.

APPROVAL OF JOURNALS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. There are no Journals to be approved this morning.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes the Secretary, Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, I want to submit the following requests for leaves of absence:

The delegate from the 9th District, DELEGATE HEYBURN for a funeral;

The delegate ex officio, DELEGATE IRVIS for a funeral;

The delegate from the 37th District, DELEGATE REDICK because of registration;

The delegate ex officio, SENATOR KLINE, on account of business.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you, Secretary Michener.

Is there any objection to the leaves of absence?

The Chair hears none, and the leaves are granted.

QUORUM CALL

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will now call the roll for the purpose of determining a quorum. The delegates will please record their presence by voting "aye."

The roll was recorded as follows:

CALENDAR

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON THIRD CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to the third consideration of Committee Proposal No. 1, Printer's No. 21, entitled:

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania providing for apportionment of legislative districts.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question is, will the Convention agree to advance Proposal No. 1 to final passage?

The Chair wishes the members to know that when a matter is on for third consideration and is called up, that this is the last opportunity to amend the proposal. Before an amendment may be received, however, the delegate who wishes to offer an amendment must obtain the consent of a majority of the delegates present.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Hook.

MOTION FOR PERMISSION TO RECEIVE HOOK AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 1

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, I would like to offer the following amendment to Proposal No. 1.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would the delegate please state briefly what his amendment is in order that the body may vote as to whether they wish to receive your amendment.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, the amendment I am asking to present to this body is the amendment that I presented on the first day of our discussion on legislative apportionment and this amendment itself was never voted upon by this body. It particularly has to do with the matter of striking out the numbers "50" and "203" and allowing this to be determined by the reapportionment commission under Section 17 and approved by the General Assembly. This is a matter that I am vitally concerned with and I feel that a constitution should be stated without numbers being used.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question before the Convention is whether the Convention will receive this amendment now, not whether they will accept the amendment, or not, only whether they will receive it from you.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, the purpose for bringing this forth at this time is the fact that I felt at the time I originally introduced this amendment that it was amended and the effect of that amendment was to put a requirement of two-thirds of the approval of the General Assembly. I felt myself that I had to bring this back to the Convention and let it be voted upon as is, and striking out the numbers that are shown. The reason for this is, I feel to freeze into the Constitution the figures 50 and 203 is a grave mistake. In this day and age, we do not know what the requirements of the General Assembly are going to be. We know there are various movements in process to reduce the size of the Legislature. We also know that in the Federal situation in Washington, where they have used the figure of 435, this is not actually in the Constitution of the United States. No numbers at all are mentioned. This is almost identical language as used in the Federal Constitution. I feel this gives to the State a much broader method of apportionment. I, therefore, would request that the delegate body here allow me to introduce this and approve not this particular amendment at this time but allow me to bring it upon the floor so we can discuss it and complete it. Win, lose or draw, I will accept the verdict of the delegates here, but I would like to have the opportunity of other delegates expressing an opinion on this to me and to have them speak on this matter.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, I, unfortunately, take the position that to allow this proposed amendment to be discussed at this time will just be a re-hash of everything that we did for practically four days. We are now getting towards the end of the Convention. Of course, if you want to continue to get the Convention in a state of confusion, in a state where nothing is going to be accomplished, this is one of the things that will lead into that.

This body spent practically four complete days on the matter that we have now before us on third reading. To re-hash it would be unfair to the people who took part, it would be unfair to the men who are not here today, and certainly it would not be in the best interest to say that some men would like to discuss this again. This is only repeating what was repeated for four days. If a vote is given in the affirmative, that will only mean we will continue wasting time in re-hashing things.

Therefore, I definitely oppose this proposed right to have the consideration of this particular amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Michael.

DELEGATE MICHAEL. Mr. President, I think Delegate Jirolanio has brought up the issue that we should consider today. He has said that this matter was re-hashed over the four days and I think this is the point we need to make: This particular proposal was not discussed. If you remember, Governor Scranton mentioned that in the Federal Constitution there are no numbers listed for the House of Representatives. He felt that this would be something for us to consider. We did not consider that issue. We haggled over an amendment and we never got to the discussion of the issue. I think, for us to go home feeling satisfied that we have given full and fair consideration to the whole issue of apportionment, we must discuss the idea of having no numbers stated in the Constitution for the House of Representatives. I think, in all fairness to us and to our constituents back home, we should discuss this issue and I think, along with Delegate Hook, that the rest of us would certainly agree, if it has been debated fairly and voted upon fairly, then we can go home feeling satisfied that we have done the will of the Convention on apportionment.

I, too, would urge that we at least consider the amendment that Delegate Hook has presented this morning.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, I believe that after Delegate Hook has spoken in favor of his present proposal, the question would be in order.

DELEGATE ROBERTS. I second that.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You are making a motion. I want you to restate it. It was seconded by Delegate Roberts. What is your motion?

DELEGATE SOLOMON. My motion is that we consider the question after Delegate Hook has spoken and close the debate.

DELEGATE BALDRIGE. Mr. President. It was stated that we never voted on the number of representatives. I respectfully call the Chair's attention to an amendment which was voted down by a vote of 117 to 32 on what I believe was the second day of discussion of this. It was the Orbin amendment in which they were striking out the number 203 and leaving the representative districts no number.

DELEGATE HOOK. That is not correct, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want to say to Delegate Baldrige that when the Hook amendment came to the desk for duplication, I had the Parliamentarian and the clerk check the amendments to see if this was one that had been voted on. Now, we will recheck that.

Apparently we did not vote on it

DELEGATE HOOK. I would like to make a clarification.

The Orbin Amendment said "not more than 203."

DELEGATE BALDRIGE. No, Mr. President, I think I have it right here in front of me.

It says "not more than." It struck out the 203.

DELEGATE HOOK. I believe I would like to interrogate Delegate Orbin on that.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would the assembly be at ease so that we can see whether we voted before on this?

We have checked the amendments. We find no amendment having been voted upon.

I have a motion before the Convention, and the motion is that the debate on this question be closed and that we vote on the pending question after we hear from Delegate Hook. I am going to unlock the voting machine on that motion, and all those in favor of closing the debate and voting on the pending question, after we hear from Delegate Hook, will vote "yea," those against the motion will vote "nay."

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to receive the amendment?

The roll was recorded as follows:

A DELEGATE. I second it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Therefore, the question before the House is will the Convention agree to receive the amendment to Proposal No. 1, Printer's No. 21, which Delegate Hook wishes to offer.

We will now unlock the voting machine and proceed to vote on that question alone, whether we wish to receive the amendment for the purpose of consideration.

Did we ring the bell for those on the outside, if there may be some out there to come in?

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Hook?

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Michener. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE MICHENER. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE MICHENER. May I ask the clerk if a vote was recorded for Delegate Brennan?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will check.

Delegate Brennan is recorded as having voted.

DELEGATE MICHENER. I don't see Delegate Brennan here.

DELEGATE BROWN. He is not here, but he asked me to vote for him.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Brown, in accordance with the rules, unfortunately, one delegate cannot vote for another delegate, except pursuant to the rules.

APPEAL FROM RULING OF THE CHAIR

DELEGATE BROWN. I will take an appeal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. This is in the rules.

The Chair is now going to order the vote of Delegate Brennan stricken.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. As I understand it, the vote was already announced by the Chair. If I understand parliamentary proceedings, you have to challenge the question of the vote before the vote is announced by the Chair. You announced the vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I did announce the vote. Just one second and we will rule on that.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. All right.

APPEAL WITHDRAWN

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Brown.

DELEGATE BROWN. I will take a lady's prerogative and now change my mind. The only reason I did it is because it has been done before. I think so strongly about this I was hoping that, perhaps, we could win this thing.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me say that this one vote would not in any way change the result, but please be at ease until I get a ruling from the Parliamentarian.

I take it, Delegate Jirolanio, since the appeal was withdrawn, your question to the Chair is now withdrawn, and we may proceed.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Yes, Mr. President.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. According to the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting, which is on our desk this morning concerning Proposals Nos. 1 and 2, there are several of what they list as substantive recommendations contained therein, some of which may well have considerable merit.

My question is this:

Is there any way that this body can consider those recommendations and, perhaps, adopt the same without throwing the proposal itself back to second consideration?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The method for adopting any changes of substance in connection with a proposal that is on third consideration is by the use of the amendment process and, in order to get an amendment, you have to go through the same procedure that we just went through with Delegate Hook's request that this body accept an amendment.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. And if such an amendment was then accepted, it would put the proposal back to second consideration?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No. The proposal would then go back into Style and Drafting.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. And it would come out on third consideration. Am I correct?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is right. It would be in the same position it is in now.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Does not the rule state that if there is a substantive change Style and Drafting will submit a report to the Convention, and then what does the Convention do with it? There is a special provision in the rules that talks about it, is that right?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, indeed.

The delegates can read the report, and the delegates can then make their determination as to whether they wish to amend the proposal. That is the process that we are in right now.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Devlin.

DELEGATE DEVLIN. Mr. President, I would like to speak on Proposals 1 and 2 that are before you.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Only Proposal No. 1 is in front of us.

DELEGATE DEVLIN. I want to reflect on Proposal No. 2 as we go over some of the problems we have on Style and Drafting.

As you know, it was around or about the 8th of February that we passed over Proposals Nos. 1 and 2 to Style and Drafting. Their counsel met with our counsel and we discussed, perhaps, some language changes, grammatical changes, moving a few commas around and taking some extraneous matter out of the original draft. During this time the Committee on Style and Drafting felt that there were some areas that we should have included in Proposals Nos. 1 and 2.

The recommendations or the report that is before you reflects the thinking of our own committee dealing with the numbering of the Senatorial districts. It is the intention of the committee to come out with a report that would have a number in it, 50 Senators, or in this case 203 House Members. We feel that it is quite explicit that there are 50 Senatorial districts and that they shall be numbered.

We also feel, and we have the advice of counsel of this Convention on this, that the schedule of 1873 pertaining to the odd numbered Senatorial districts running in the presidential year and an even number running in the gubernatorial year is still in force and it is binding upon the amendment, Sections 16 and 17. Therefore, we feel that there is no need to put to this Constitution the technique or the method of numbering the districts.

What was proposed here was brought out on this floor in other proposals, and we feel that this particular method that they wish to use in a sequential numbering of districts, will do two things:

First, it will limit the committee or the men who will do the reapportionment to a particular way of numbered districts.

Secondly, because of the geographic boundary lines not being one under the other, or one beside the other, the word "sequence" has little or no meaning.

In the second part of their report in which they deal with the proposition that a Senator's term shall not expire if his district has been changed very little or not at all, it conflicts with their first proposition that the Senatorial district should be numbered sequentially.

This would mean that a senator whose term would come up on an even numbered year, could not be numbered in a sequence order, but would have to have an even number in that Senatorial district, so this is contradictory and again it would be very difficult for the commission to follow this pattern.

They felt, No. 3, in which the commission would be telling the Supreme Court how to make a finding and when it should come up with its findings and, in effect, write the law that they are asking the Supreme Court to judge upon, is out of the purview of the commission and, although these recommendations were thought out very well, argued very well by counsel for Style and Drafting, our counsel advised us of these particular problems we are now faced with.

The Committee on Reapportionment is perfectly satisfied with the end product that the Committee on Style and Drafting has come up with and placed on your desk for your approval. It is our hope and desire we can move along in this Convention and pass this over for final vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gerber.

DELEGATE GERBER. I would like to interrogate a member of the Style and Drafting Committee, if I might, to inquire as to the substance?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will Delegate Gerber yield one second?

DELEGATE GERBER. Yes, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Johnson of Style and Drafting.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. I think it would be helpful at this point to go over in some detail the report that each delegate has been given from the Committee on Style and Drafting. The delegates have not had an opportunity to read this and it gives the rationale of our approach. It states the limitations of the committee and defines our position. If you will turn to that report, we will consider it in some detail.

All we do, you will note, is pursuant to Rule 22, and rather than read that rule, let us just note that we are given the power first to examine and edit proposals to avoid inaccuracy, repetition and inconsistency or poor drafting, and to consider and make recommendations on any differences, conflicts or unresolved matters of substance.

In addition, in the second place, we have the power to rephrase or regroup language or sections of the proposal as long as the sense, and this is a quotation, "the sense or purpose of any proposal referred is not changed."

The third place to recommend referral of proposal to the originating substantive committee and let us hope this does not happen because of the time limitation.

Four, to resolve any inconsistency or conflict in conference with the originating substantive committee, and failing so to do, to notify the Convention and await its instructions. That Mr. Gerber is what you have reference to in unresolved matters of substance.

We adopted further procedures that are detailed here and, first of all, we distributed for preliminary analysis and comment to the co-directors of the Convention Research Bureau, Mr. John Ferguson, Mr. Harold Alderson, and to the Director of the Convention Drafting Bureau, Frank Garber, and to the counsel of this Committee, and we are indeed fortunate to have two young very able attorneys, Andrew Farley and William Hackney, who have worked far beyond the call of duty in this regard. We called from New York a very eminent consultant, Frank P. Grad, Director of State Constitutional Drafting Studies at Columbia University, who has advised six State Conventions similar to the one which we are now sitting.

The Committee's counsel prepared revision proposals referred to the committee after the second consideration. Our end goal as you know here has always been to critically consider each proposal referred to the committee to be sure that the report finally submitted to this Convention is clear, concise, unambiguous and harmonious in style and manner of expressions within the substantive committee's proposal as amended on second consideration.

I am very grateful to the co-chairmen of this committee, Delegate Fagan and Delegate Devlin, who have worked with us at this juncture and it is my understanding that they are approving our report.

We also have to consider how this fits in with the remainder of the Constitution of 1874. We call attention to the concluding sentence of the middle paragraph:

"Of necessity, the arbiter in making a final judgment with respect to the Committee's report has to be the Committee itself."

Now you have before you, our report in four parts. One is the complete edited text of the Substantive Committee proposal in a clean copy. You will find at the end of the printed report the clean copy in each instance of Committee Proposals 1 and 2. We then have a new print of the proposal of the Substantive Committee as approved by the Convention on second consideration. Here you will find the drafting changes.

We have a resume of the committee's proposals for unresolved matters of substantive and let me make it clear that here we are making no recommendations, we are simply calling attention to these unresolved matters already referred to by Chairman Devlin. No member of the committee has a motion to introduce at this point, but we do suggest how such proposals might be worded if delegates care to take them up.

Then we have here, of course—this is the document you are now examining—the full text of our narrative in explaining this action.

Now, if I may turn for a moment to the substantive recommendations. We simply call attention to the fact that these districts were once numbered in a normal logical pattern and maps are available to indicate this numbering, starting with some common geographical point. We feel that this is a substantive matter, its omission is serious, but we are not as a committee recommending any action but merely giving the wording of a proposal which we feel will take care of it.

As Delegate Devlin has commented, there is a problem of the continuation of incumbents. We feel that there is a possibility that some Senators would be faced with the prospect of standing for election three times within a six-year period. We do appreciate the changes in the terms of Senators are outside of the call of this Convention. We believe the failure of the Substantive Committee to consider alternative procedures caused by omission, the same result, that is, the term of the Senators are effectively reduced to two years in violation of the present Constitution, Article II, Section 3. We suggest a way out of this dilemma and the wording of that you will find at the top of page 5. Now, as to the effective date, notice that Section 17 provides that a reapportionment plan becomes final in one of three ways. As the Substantive Committee rightly notes, the time schedule set forth in Section 17 is designated to accomplish the reapportionment, including all judicial proceedings as necessary prior to the primary election in the first even numbered years and after the Federal decennial consensus has been officially reported.

But we believe that there is a contingency that ought to be considered. It may be remote, but it does exist. Perhaps, the final apportionment plan would not be available. Whether it is a result of delays in reporting the census or, more likely, because all remedies available to the degree of persons under Section 17 have not been exhausted until after the primary election, but prior to the general election.

The significant problem would then be, is a special primary election held in the new district, or does a nominee from the old district run in the new district? The committee respectfully suggests the following language for the Convention's consideration. You have heard Delegate Delvin's comment, he feels that we are dictating to the Supreme Court if that action is taken.

Let me emphasize again, Mr. President, we are merely calling attention to these matters and the committee has no recommendations.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gerber for a question.

DELEGATE GERBER. Thank you very much for your very helpful report.

It seems to me that your first recommendation, which appears on page 4, pursuant to the number of Senatorial districts, appears to be an effort to avoid future litigation arising from the present number existing. Was this the thought of some of the members of the Committee?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Yes. Some of the members of the committee did express that thought, yes.

DELEGATE GERBER. It seems to me, also, that this attempt to obviate the apparent inequities in the numbering of the districts, being on an inconsistent basis, it is a hodge-podge all over the Commonwealth, is that correct, too?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. The committee also considered that, yes.

DELEGATE GERBER. It seems to me, also, that the odd numbered seats which run in a presidential year can tend to favor candidates for a certain party and the even numbered seats, which run in the gubernatorial year, tend to favor candidates of the opposition party. The present numbering system permits numerical gerrymandering, does it not?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. I believe the gentleman is correct, yes.

DELEGATE GERBER. It would also seem to me that, in view of the fact that I know of a proposal that was presented here on the floor at the early part of this Convention and sent to the Committee—a proposal which I introduced—addressed itself to this very problem. Is it this committee's feeling that if this substantive change is not made that the, shall we say, Convention proposal will be pregnant with litigation?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. That could happen, yes.

DELEGATE GERBER. I have no further questions on No. 1.

Now I am addressing myself to No. 2 on page 5.

Mr. President, it seems to me that this gets to the very heart of the most difficult problem of reapportionment. It seems to me that is the most serious problem here. I have three questions and I want to know how these can be answered without this paragraph.

One, what happens when as a result of reapportionment a district is created where there is more than one incumbent and they are not up that year, or one of them is not up that year, depending on the odd and even numbered seats. How do we approach that problem?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. That problem is not resolved in the present Proposals 1 and 2.

DELEGATE GERBER. Secondly, Mr. President, what happens in the situation where an incumbent who is of a district and so much of it is taken away because his district is too small to run from and he is put into another district? How is that resolved?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. That, also, is not resolved.

DELEGATE GERBER. It would appear, then, that the only question that is resolved is when a new district is created and there are no incumbents, then anybody can file, is that right?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. That is true.

DELEGATE GERBER. I thank the gentleman and his committee very much for highlighting these two critical questions, which it seems to me neither Proposal No. 1 nor 2 meet head on.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Mr. President, our committee is further prepared to go over somewhat in detail, pointing out the changes that were made in preparing what we call the clean copy at the end. Is it your desire or would the delegates want to go over proposals with the help of the committee to see just what changes have been made?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Well, Chairman Johnson, this is a decision that I would think would rest in the hands of your committee. Whether or not you think these delegates would be vitally interested in the changes you made, or whether they are self-evident to them by reading the clean copy and looking at the other copy, would be your committee's decision. I do not want to cut it off if you think it should be done. By the same token, we do not want to just use up time.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. I am quite willing to defer to the will of the delegates. You will find the rationale of the committee approach on pages 6 and 7. If you wish to examine these without the co-chairmen going over them with you, that is quite all right with me.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I have an inquiry which I would like to direct to Delegate Delvin, if he will stand for interrogation.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will ask Delegate Devlin whether he will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. President, Delegate Devlin referred to a schedule in the 1874 Constitution as still being in force and effect with respect to the numbering of districts. I wonder if he has a copy of that and could read us the provision from the 1873 schedule.

DELEGATE DEVLIN. I do not know, Delegate Shapiro, but I am sure you do.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I do not. I am wondering whether it can be provided, whether the Delegates could be given that information. Also, a statement from counsel as to whether or not that schedule provision does remain in force at the present time.

DELEGATE DEVLIN. Mr. President, let me comment on this matter. I think it is Article I of the schedule of 1874 and it simply says that the even numbered districts would run I believe, in 1876. The odd numbered districts would run in 1875. This continued on until 1966.

In 1966 the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania reapportioned the Senatorial Districts of the State and, by their action, they sustained the method of numbering the districts pursuant to the schedule of 1874. So not only is the schedule in force, but the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has also ruled on it, so we will have a continuation of having 25 senators run in what I call a presidential year and have 25 run in a gubernatorial year. This will continue. This is what Mr. Comisky has advised me. My own counsel, Mr. Davis, also. I am sorry I do not have a copy with me.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I would like to suggest that if this matter is as important as I think it is and is as important as Delegate Devlin apparently thinks it is, that before any decision is made on it, the delegates be furnished with a copy of that provision of the schedule and an opinion from counsel for the Convention as to whether or not that is still in effect. This is with all due respect to the legal opinion just rendered by Delegate Devlin. I think we ought to have that information and the benefit of our counsel's opinion on it before we take any action on the committee's report.

DELEGATE DEVLIN. That is a very good point. I think we should do that. Maybe Mr. Davis has a copy of the Constitution.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Shapiro, I am advised by the attorney for that committee that a copy will be provided.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. The other part of my request is that we be furnished with the opinion of counsel for the Convention as to whether or not that schedule is still in effect.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We can get an opinion, but I do not know how quickly. We will certainly try to get an opinion.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gerber. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE GERBER. I rise for a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, pursuant to a schedule from the former Constitution being in effect, how do we know what will affect from the former Constitution other than this schedule which I know I was not aware of? Are we supposed to consider modification and changes of former schedules we are presently not aware of? This is something completely new to me since I have been here.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I take it your question is directed to the chairman of that committee. They did not answer those questions.

DELEGATE GERBER. I do not know who can answer the question, but the question I have is simply this, I am not presented, as would be a member of a different Committee, with certain schedules. I am not aware of what the schedules in that area deals with. I am not aware of whether those schedules are currently in effect.

Some completely new and some different ones have been presented to me here on the floor this morning. This may be a matter of ignorance on my part. If it is, I apologize very sincerely to the Chair. But I never heard of this schedule being carefully applicable at this time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is there an inquiry similar to the inquiry of Delegates Shapiro when he was asking an opinion as to the applicability of that schedule?

DELEGATE GERBER. Yes. Also the applicability of any other schedule we do not know about right now.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Barron.

DELEGATE BARRON. In view of what is an obvious conflict, or problem, at least, and considering the difficulty I had in thrashing through with interim appointments yesterday, it seems to me quite evident that some effort should be made to either plainly schedule this matter in our new articles or, if need be, embrace it within the language of our new article.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does this not depend on what we receive from counsel as an opinion in connection with the question that has been raised?

DELEGATE BARRON. In all deference to learned counsel—and I have great deference to learned counsel, Mr. President,—I suggest that this is an excellent opportunity to make this manifestly plain and clear by saying precisely what we have in mind.

If I may raise another issue, Mr. President, I believe we have a general repealer in this area. How much of the schedule of the Constitution of 1874 falls by implication with the repealer of the Sections here touched?

There is an applied repealer, certainly if we reworked these sections, be it 16 and 17 or if it is integrated into 16 alone.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I realize that what you are raising are important questions of law that have to be decided by counsel first and then by the delegates.

Now I recognize Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. I wish to express my opinion that any appeal to the former convention, the former schedules, would only be made by the courts in the case of absolute necessity. We are drafting a new Constitution and the common sense of the thing would indicate that we are not providing that our people must look through our Constitution schedule and then look through prior ones to see whether there is anything inconsistent. Ours is the only Constitution.

Now, this is not to say that the Supreme Court, if they found another vacuum, might not be driven to the point of considering prior procedures but we ought not to tolerate the idea that people have to examine this and the prior Constitutions before they decide the question of the Constitutional law of this State.

Furthermore, while there is nothing particular before us, I would like to express my opinion that we ought to receive this opinion, the report of the Committee on Style, with the utmost respect. You see there is not any faction against any other faction, or anything of the sort. When we receive this report of the Committee on Style, it is an appeal from "Philip Sober" to "Philip Drunk." This Committee on Style ought to be our opinion after careful reflection and, therefore, we ought to treat it with the utmost respect. As far as I am concerned, I would be willing to consent to consider any of them because I think they are so important.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Fohl.

DELEGATE FOHL. Mr. President, may I interrogate Delegate Johnson, please?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE FOHL. With respect to the recommendation on page 4 regarding the numbering of districts, how do other state constitutions handle this?

For example, I do not believe that the most recent constitution, the one in Maryland, establishes as constitutional stature the mechanism for numbering districts. Could you give us a rundown on the other states in the Union?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. I cannot do that in detail, but as you have indicated, there is a varied pattern. Some states do and others do not, but I have not the details on it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Aberman.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Mr. President, as a member of the Style and Drafting Committee, I think that we are discussing a problem that has been considered and met by the committee. The intention of the committee was to incorporate the decision of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, which attached to that decision two maps, one numbering the senatorial districts and the other numbering the representative districts, and it was our intention until such time as the commission met those maps would serve to govern the numbering of this Commonwealth. I think that if the point is to be made, the only point is that when this is printed, this will adopt these maps.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Devlin.

DELEGATE DEVLIN. Mr. President, I have this information, and I would like to comment on it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes. You may proceed. This is one of the most important discussions we have had in this Convention. We are now up to the question which is, will the Convention agree to advance this proposal for final passage, and I think it deserves careful attention.

DELEGATE DEVLIN. Our committee was charged with revising Sections 16, 17 and 18 of our Constitution. This deals with senatorial district ratios, representative districts and legislative apportionment.

What we are now dealing with is Section 3 of Article II, "Terms of Members." It simply says with regard to senators, "Senators shall be elected for a term of four years and Representatives for a term of two years." You then have to turn to the schedule on page 105 of your blue manual in which these 50 senatorial districts were divided into two groups, and in Section 3—and I will not bore you with the details of this, unless the Chair wants me to—it states that a general election in the years of 1874 and 1875, that 25 senators will run in one of those years and 25 will run in the other, giving you this split senatorial election that we have every four years. I raised the question with Mr. Davis, and he, in turn, spoke to Mr. Comisky. This was what information, what documents, what law, do we use as a commission to keep the divided senate, and he says, "It is a good question."

He said you would have to depend upon the scheduling that refers to Section 2, Terms of Senators and Representatives, which you have little or nothing to do with under the call of this Convention. That, therefore, enforced the schedule and Schedule 3, I believe it is. Terms of Senators, we did not touch that part of the schedule, and that particular section is the force of the law today. What we deal with was strictly 16, 17 and 18. Sixteen deals with reapportionment of the legislative, 17 deals with the senatorial, and 18 is who will do it, and this seemed to me to be a very concise, succinct and a very obvious answer that we are now dealing with things that were not within the call, and it has no bearing at all upon our committee's work.

Therefore, we concluded that we should not touch it under those directions from our counsel.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Gerber.

DELEGATE GERBER. May I please interrogate Delegate Devlin?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, pursuant to the advice received from learned counsel, how do they and the delegate explain the fact that the schedule in the 1873 Constitution was not followed in 1966?

DELEGATE DEVLIN. Mr. President, when you ask a layman like me a question like that, I always go to my counsel. I am sorry, sir, but I cannot answer that question.

DELEGATE GERBER. I cannot interrogate counsel.

DELEGATE DEVLIN. However, I will say this that in 1966, and this is a layman's view, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania followed the schedule of 1873 in numbering the senatorial districts, and in their court order stated what particular districts will run for two years, and what particular districts will run for four years, therefore, recreating the balance that we have now; 25 run in the even years and 25 run in the odd years.

It seems to me, that this is a direct and simple answer to the question, which is in the affirmative.

DELEGATE GERBER. Is it the committee's position, then, after the reapportionment of 1971, the 1970 census and the election of 1972, that all 50 state senators would run again, half for two years and half for four years?

DELEGATE DEVLIN. I cannot precipitate the thinking of the commission, nor should I, and this is one of the objections I have of putting this material in the schedule or in the Constitution.

The commission is empowered to redistrict the senatorial and legislative districts. I believe everybody will submit to that argument and, in so doing, there "may be," not "shall be," some conflict in which two senators are thrown in the same district, creating a problem of who shall run and for how many years. There may be a situation where there will be a vacancy in a senatorial district, and there may be another problem, if we would take the Committee's report. We would start in one corner of the State and start numbering and, suppose that we start in Erie County, and in that senatorial district up in that section and that is an even number, and that district has not been changed because Erie's population grew to such a degree that you did not have to change it, amend the ratio of one vote one man principal, and it is an even number, and you change it to an odd number.

This, in turn, would create another problem, that is why we say that the commission that we are forming is empowered not only to redistrict the senatorial and representative districts, but they are also empowered to solve the problems that you have brought up.

If the people are not satisfied with the commission's work when it is finished, this Proposal No. 2 allows appeals to be made to the commission, deal with all the problems that you all talked about today and, if you are not satisfied with those decisions, then you could go to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. It is our feeling that in situations such as you have referred to, where you have two men in the same district, the Supreme Court will eventually solve that problem, and should.

DELEGATE GERBER. The delegate still did not answer my question with his speech. My question was:

In 1972 when you have the problems that you clearly state your committee did not address itself to, are 50 State Senators going to have to run again and, evidently the delegate does not know the answer.

DELEGATE DEVLIN. Mr. President, I said at the very outset I cannot precipitate the thinking of the commission, what lines it will draw, etc.

DELEGATE GERBER. Was the Commission bound by the schedule of 1873 and, if it is bound by the schedule of 1873 and, if it follows the precedent set in 1966, then in 1972 we are going to have 50 Senators up for election?

I am not trying to precipitate. I am trying to follow precedent.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hocker. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE HOCKER. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE HOCKER. I have seen this type of thing happen on the floor of this House many times.

It is the ruling of this delegation that when a man is interrogating he addresses the Chair, and then the delegates, and they do not start hollering at each other.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You are absolutely correct Delegate Hocker. That is the proper procedure.

DELEGATE HOCKER. I wish that would be the way it would happen.

It is "Mr. President." It is "Mr. This," or "Mr. That."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. All questions should be directed to the Chair.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Leach.

DELEGATE LEACH. There is no amendment before the Convention, as I understand it, sir. We are discussing Proposal No. 1, Printer's No. 21, is that correct?

This is what has been presented to us by the Style and Drafting Committee. It appears to me that the co-chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee said a little bit ago that they had met with the committee and they had resolved this.

I, therefore, now move that we consider the adoption of Committee Proposal No. 1, Printer's No. 21, only.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question before the body right now is, will the Convention agree to advance Proposal No. 1 to final passage? I just wish to explain that this is the time and this is the last opportunity to accept amendments. Once it goes over to final passage, we then vote on whether it should be passed finally. Now, are you, in effect, making a motion that we close debate now and vote on the question?

DELEGATE LEACH. Correct, sir.

DELEGATE DESMOND. I second the motion.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. Chairman, I have made a request for inquiry for legal opinion—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me state the motion that is before the Convention, and I will recognize you.

The motion has been made by Delegate Leach, seconded by Delegate Desmond, that debate on the question be closed and we vote on the pending question. We have that motion now.

I recognize Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I asked for a legal opinion as to whether or not the schedule that was referred to by Delegate Devlin remains in effect and whether it controls the question. In other words, the committee has made a recommendation that something additional in the way of substance be considered, and Delegate Devlin has replied that they have considered this matter, but they feel themselves controlled by provisions of the 1873 constitution schedule.

I should like to know for myself, at least, before I vote on any proposal, or any motion to advance Proposal No. 1, whether or not we are controlled by the Schedule of 1873 and, if so, what it says. I do not see how we can vote intelligently without that information before us.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Shapiro, your request for an opinion of counsel was relayed by the Chair to counsel and, like all other lawyers, they cannot give instant opinions. They are working on it. This is a matter that does go to the motion and, I want to, however, point out that I will have to confer with the Parliamentarian and counsel on this, but I do think the two recommendations in the committee report pertain and apply to Proposal No. 2 specifically and not to Proposal No. 1. The Chair is making that as a suggestion, and is right now going to ask the Parliamentarian and counsel if that is not correct before we vote on the motion.

I am advised by the counsel that both of the recommendations in the committee report would apply to Proposal No. 2. Now, this does not mean that you cannot receive your opinion, of course.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. President, it would appear to me that Proposal No. 1 deals with districts and the composition of districts, and what we are talking about is the numbering of districts. Proposal No. 2 deals with the composition and procedures of a Commission.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I can only tell you what the counsel has said and what the ruling of counsel to that effect is.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Aberman.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I would like to reiterate what I said a few moments ago, because we seem to be ignoring it. If we will address ourselves to the schedule attached to Proposal No. 1, it says, "The foregoing . . . amendment shall become effective the year following that in which the next Federal decennial census is officially recorded."

The clear intention of the Committee on Style and Drafting was that this proposal would become effective after the data from the census was available to the commission until such time the cases of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, which construed the Constitution of 1873 was to be the law, and under that law in 1966, they attached two schedules to their decision which numbered the districts in accordance with the doctrine of Baker v. Carr and it is that law that this Commonwealth will be governed by until such time as this constitutional amendment is adopted by the people, and the Federal Census Bureau gives the data to the President of the United States, from which you get the results.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. There is a motion on the floor and the motion is by Delegate Leach, seconded by Delegate Desmond, I believe, that the debate on this question be closed and we vote on the pending question. Now, we will take a vote on that motion, and we will unlock the voting machines.

All those who are in favor that we close the debate and we vote on the pending question will vote "yea," those opposed to the motion will vote "nay."

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Feather. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE FEATHER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE FEATHER. If we vote to pass this on final passage, are we adopting Committee Proposal No. 1 as changed by the Style and Drafting Committee as far as wording is concerned.

In other words, are we adopting the clean copy version?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Feather, what we are doing right now is voting to advance Proposal No. 1, Printer's No. 21, which is before you. I might add that you have been given a clean copy of this proposal, so you will see how it reads, and the proposal on the first and second pages shows the changes that have been made. In other words, they are both the same.

DELEGATE FEATHER. Then we are adopting the clean copy of Proposal No. 1, in effect?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am advised that you are not technically adopting the clean copy. You are adopting Proposal No. 1, and Proposal No. 1, the official version, appears on page 1, and page 2 and page 3. The clean copy is for the information of the delegates so that it will make easy reading. They should both be the same.

DELEGATE FEATHER. I do not know if the Style and Drafting Committee intended that. Would it take an amendment by Style and Drafting to put it into the language which they preferred, not substantive changes, but just language changes. Would it take a formal amendment, which may be too late.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Frankly, Delegate Feather, I do not quite understand your question.

PROPOSAL No. 1, Printer's No. 21, that was distributed, does include the changes in language that were made by Style and Drafting.

I am going to ask Chairman Johnson or Chairman Pelletier to verify that.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. The answer is "yes," Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The answer is, yes, and the answer is that the clean copy and the other copy are the same language, when you adopt it.

DELEGATE LEACH. Mr. President, may we proceed to vote. Again, I move the question.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

The roll was recorded as follows:

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Woodring. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE WOODRING. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE WOODRING. Mr. President. May I inquire how Delegate Brennan voted?

DELEGATE BROWN. May I represent Delegate Brennan for a moment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. In an unofficial capacity, yes.

DELEGATE BROWN. If Delegate Brennan were here, I am sure he would vote "yes!"

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. In other words, there has been no vote cast for Delegate Brennan, is that correct?

DELEGATE BROWN. Yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is in accordance with the rules. Thank you.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to advance Proposal No. 1, Printer's No. 21 to final passage?

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to Proposal No. 1 on third consideration?

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Michener. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE MICHENER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE MICHENER. What is the next item to come before this Convention? We are a little confused in my corner.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are now about to finally adopt, I hope, Proposal No. 1.

The question is, will the Convention finally pass this proposal and under the rules, it is required to receive 82 votes. I now unlock the voting machine. All those voting "yea" will vote to pass the proposal finally.

We are ready for the next question.

I want to point out, this Proposal No. 1 has been considered on three different days according to the rules, and it has been agreed to and we are now ready for the question. Will the Convention finally pass this proposal and the Chair wishes to point out for final adoption it requires 82 votes. Are we ready for the question?

DELEGATE SULLIVAN. Mr. President, I move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Sullivan wishes to close debate of Proposal No. 1.

DELEGATE SULLIVAN. Mr. President, I wish to remind the Convention that we have a man on first base, so let us move him along.

And said proposal having been read at length the third time, considered and agreed to,

On the question,
Shall the proposal be adopted?

REFERRAL TO COMMITTEE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It will, according to the rules, be referred to the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People for their action, and they will go to work again.

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON THIRD CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,
The Convention proceeded to the third consideration of Committee Proposal No. 2, Printer's No. 22, entitled:

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania making changes relating to legislative apportionment.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Again, I say this is the last opportunity to amend this proposal and again I point out before an amendment may be received for consideration, the delegates must obtain the consent of the majority of the delegates present.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. It seems to me we now have before this body proposals, two of them, and we have a report from the Committee on Style and Drafting concerning these very same proposals. I am not aware that the report from Style and Drafting has actually been officially received or approved or even accepted by this body. To the best of my knowledge, the report has simply physically reached the desks of the delegates.

Would it not be in order at this point to move that the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting on Committee Proposals 1 and 2 be accepted by this Convention?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am advised by the Parliamentarian, and the Chair rules, that we do not have to accept the report or vote on the acceptance of the report. What is before the body this morning are the specific proposals and, of course, the report is presented for the information of the delegates. There are proposals in the report, and if any Delegate wishes to offer an amendment to carry into effect any of the suggestions made, then that delegate must go through the same procedure that Delegate Hook went through earlier.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I take it the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting is merely advisory and has no official status whatever in this body.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is the ruling of the Chair. It is an advisory report.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. If I understand the Chair's ruling regarding the two substantive matters concerned in the report of the Committee of Style and Drafting, it is that the Convention counsel was not yet able to resolve a fairly intricate legal question, is that correct, in the short time involved?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are you referring to the inquiry of Delegate Shapiro?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Yes, sir. Does not the inquiry of Delegate Shapiro have to be answered before an intelligent vote on this subject can be made?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. This is something that the Chair cannot answer, but I will accept that as a question to the delegates. In other words, they have to determine in their own minds whether they need counsel's report before they can intelligently vote. I want to point out as we did before, when this body moves the question, that is the will of the body.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I note the Committee on Style and Drafting has for example at the tail end, suggestions by way of a possible amendment on page 4. Is it necessary this amendment actually go through the drafting service and be prepared in usual form?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is so. Our rules require that all amendments be prepared by the Convention Drafting Bureau and there be no exception here, and I think that would be certainly an advantage because at this stage, it is more important than ever that amendments be prepared correctly.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. In view of the novelty of this procedure, at least to me, I would ask leave to prepare an amendment as detailed on page 4 in the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting. I do not know that that would take very much time, but I would ask that this body remain at ease until an opportunity to do that can be done.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. What Delegate O'Donnell is saying, as I determine it, is that he wishes to offer an amendment to Proposal No. 2, Printer's No. 22, and before this body determines whether it will receive such an amendment, of course, they should have a copy of the amendment in front of them. If the Delegate will come down, we have the staff present here to prepare the requested amendment.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, I move the question on Proposal No. 2.

SEVERAL DELEGATES. Seconded.

DELEGATE MICHENER. There has been no second acknowledged yet. They have been made, but not acknowledged.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will agree and recognize that you had the microphone and you may proceed, Delegate Michener. I have had a motion that will be seconded as soon as you finish.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, the three recommendations for caution made by the Style and Drafting Committee are quite substantive and they might help us to avoid error. I think it would be intolerable for them to be dismissed without discussion. I would propose the move of this body may even be that they may clearly not be accepted, but not to discuss them would be folly. No part of our deliberation yet has brought us more disfavor with the press than the way the size of the Legislature has been handled.

It would, therefore, be very prudent for us not to railroad something through at this moment, and I am sure that Delegate Solomon would not want to cut off debate on substantive matters and I, therefore, recommend that if his motion does receive a second we ought to, in prudence, not accept it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I now again refer to the motion of Delegate Solomon and the motion is that debate on this question be closed and we vote on the pending question. Is there a second?

DELEGATE DESMOND. Second.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. There is a second by Delegate Desmond. We, therefore, have a question before the House on the motion, and the motion is that debate be closed and that we vote on the pending question.

Now we are going to vote on that motion. We unlock the voting machine. All those in favor of closing debate will vote "yea," all those in favor of not closing debate will vote "nay."

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SOLOMON. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, my motion was not intended to close off debate, my motion certainly was intended to close off discouragement of this body by those who have neither the solutions nor the answers for the problem which we are now presently faced with. This goes for counsel as well. We do not have any answers. Are we to sit here until March 5th? We have to get going and I do hope that the debate is enlightening, but when legal counsel is sought, then it will be given. If there are no answers which might impede this proposal, let us have a vote and move on.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair just wishes the body to know that it is my understanding that there is an amendment being prepared. The amendment is being prepared?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Yes, sir. It would be impractical to incorporate all three subjects in one amendment. They are actually preparing three amendments so this body can pick or choose those which they may favor.

REMARKS BY DELEGATE SHAPIRO

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. Chairman, although we have not been furnished with an opinion, we have been furnished—or, at least, I have been furnished—with a copy of the pertinent provisions of the schedule to which Delegate Devlin referred of the 1873 Constitution.

Let me preface my remarks by focusing on one specific recommendation of the Committee on Style and Drafting. That Committee recommended that there was an unresolved matter of substance dealing with the numbering of Legislative districts and suggests the following language for the Convention's consideration:

"Senatorial districts shall be numbered in sequence commencing at one geographical point in the Commonwealth. Representative districts shall be numbered in sequence commencing at one geographical point in the Commonwealth."

I call your attention specifically to the fact that this does not say that we shall start the numbering in Erie, or in any corner of the State. It does not say where in the State we start, but it simply says that we start at one point and number sequentially, so that the commission could, if this amendment were adopted, start by numbering at any present uneven numbered district in the Commonwealth. I submit that in the light of that recommendation, the provisions referred to by Delegate Devlin of the 1873 schedule have absolutely no pertinence. I will read them. Section 3 of that schedule, "Election of Senators.

"At the general election in the years 1874 and 1875, Senators shall be elected in all districts where there shall be vacancies."

I think that the direction as to what shall be done in the years 1874 and 1875 would not remain in force and effect in 1968, 1969, 1970, 1971, and so on.

It goes on:

"Those elected in the year 1874 shall serve two years and those elected in the year 1875 shall serve for one year."

Again, I do not think it takes an opinion of counsel to let us know that this has no pertinence to the present Constitution that we are writing.

It then said:

"Senators now elected and those whose terms are unexpired shall represent the districts in which they reside until the end of the terms for which they were elected."

I submit that those terms that are referred to in that sentence have long since expired.

Section 4 reads:

"Election of Senators (Continued). "At the general election in the year 1876, Senators shall be elected from even numbered districts to serve for two years and from odd numbered districts to serve for four years."

That, again, refers to the general election of 1876 and I submit has no pertinence to what we are doing now or what will be done by the Legislative Reapportionment Commission provided for in Committee Proposal No. 2 in the years 1970, 1971, and thereafter.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Aberman. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERCK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. It is my understanding as a member of Style and Drafting that when we presented substantive recommendations A, B and C these recommendations were to be presented to the body. I would like to inquire of the Parliamentarian whether or not the language which represents the proposed draft of these three recommendations from Style and Drafting could be acted on in the form of a motion directly from this report or would it require a separately prepared amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair has stated, Delegate Aberman, several times this morning, that the process is that they must be offered as an amendment and the amendment procedure under consideration is the same procedure that we used when Delegate Hook offered his amendment. In other words, you have to have consent to receive the amendment.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. We have to have it printed up separately?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes. That, in effect, was the question asked by Delegate O'Donnell, and I believe by someone else.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I was assuming their question was with a different amendment. My question was about the precise language presented by the report, which is in the report and is printed and is on everyone's desk at the present time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The precise language in the report is advisory to the Delegates. If anyone wishes to offer an amendment in that precise language, or wishes to offer an amendment in different language, we have the same question presented.

REMARKS BY DELEGATE DEVLIN

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Devlin.

DELEGATE DEVLIN. In response to Delegate Shapiro, we are not at odds as to the intent of the commission to set up Senatorial districts. I think we are splitting hairs on saying that we are. The commission is empowered to draw 50 senatorial districts as of right now. They shall number them. If there are 50, they shall be numbered.

The questions that are arising are not so much whether or not we are going to have 50 senators, but, are 25 of them going to serve four years and are 25 going to serve two years and then be up for re-election, or will it be some other type of a combination?

Our committee feels that the commission is empowered to solve all these problems and resolve those that have been presented to us by Delegate Johnson in a very able and very clear fashion. If they are not resolved, those who wish to file a complaint have the constitutional right under this article to do so. Any aggrieved person may do it. If it is not to their satisfaction, then the Supreme Court shall take immediate jurisdiction and resolve the problems.

There is no way that I can see that we cannot solve and resolve all the problems that have been presented by the Style and Drafting Committee on the commission when it is duly constituted.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. As I understand it, then, no one wishes to be heard until we receive the amendments. Perhaps, it would be a welcome suggestion if we were to be at ease for about 15 minutes. Is that agreeable to the body? We will be at ease for 15 minutes in the hope that we can have these amendments prepared.

SENATOR JOHNSON WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Before we proceed I thought it would be nice to introduce a former guest, and at this particular time I would like to call attention to the fact that back in my right-hand corner, which is right field, we have with us today former Senator Bob Johnson. Bob, would you just raise your hand so we can give you our welcome.

BARBARA AND ROLAND WRIGHT WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Back there with Bob we have Barbara and Roland Wright. Roland is the editor of the Main Line Times, and a personal friend of mine, and I would like them to stand, and we will give them a cordial greeting. I might add that they are the guests of Delegate Kauffman, Delegate Whittum, and Delegate Gerber.

JOURNALISM STUDENTS WELCOMED

Also some place in the room we have Sue Wolf and Mike Stover from Cedar Cliff High School, Camp Hill. They are journalism students. I want to tell you that Miss Wolf is the daughter of our Convention Historian, Dr. Wolf.

SENIORS OF WAYNESBORO HIGH SCHOOL WELCOMED

In addition, I understand that up there in the balcony we have seniors from the Waynesboro High School. We will give them a big hand, too. I want you to know we are very happy to have you with us. I might add that they are the guests of Delegate Keller.

WIFE & FAMILY OF DELEGATE CLINGER WELCOMED

DELEGATE BRAHAM. There are some guests with us whom I would like to introduce. They are the family of Delegate William Clinger, his wife, Julia Wittler Clinger, who is my niece, their children, Eleanor Clinger, William III and James Clinger.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Where are they? There they are back there. Give them a big hand.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Their family home is in Warren, Pennsylvania.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are happy to have with us Mrs. Clinger and your wonderful family, and I want you to know that your husband has been doing a great job. We are glad he is with us.

MOTION ON PERMISSION TO SUBMIT O'DONNELL AMENDMENT Nos. 1, 2 and 3

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. This amendment is going to be distributed and I suggest to you that you withhold your remarks until the pages have had an opportunity to distribute what I will refer to as the O'Donnell Amendment No. 1.

I want you to know what the question is before the Convention. The question is, will the Convention agree to receive an amendment to Proposal No. 2, the amendment now being offered by Delegate O'Donnell, and, of course, we have to vote on whether this body will receive an amendment, and it requires the consent of the majority of the delegates present.

Before I recognize Delegate O'Donnell, I will ask him to make his remarks as brief as he can, consistent with a thorough explanation of the purpose of his amendment.

Now, you may proceed, Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I offer here three amendments.

I will address myself to the first, all three may be in keeping with what the commentary of the Philadelphia Inquirer this morning referred to as the "clean hands" amendment.

I am not sure whether I can deliver 42 votes in support of them, or not. I have not asked. In any event, these are the three proposals—

MOTION ON PERMISSION TO SUBMIT O'DONNELL AMENDMENT No. 1

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate O'Donnell, would you yield for one second?

It would be in keeping with our procedure if you would first take up No. 1. We will vote on No. 1 and then take up No. 2. We only have distributed No. 1, so if you will confine your remarks to No. 1, we will then vote on it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. This is an amendment which is suggested by the Committee on Style and Drafting. It was first brought to the attention of the Committee on Style and Drafting by Professor Graham, the gentleman who was brought in here as an expert consultant to that committee. It is very, very simple. All it does is say that after the reapportionment plan is adopted and after all of the legal machinery, and court appeals, and everything else, are concluded, the election concerned will be the next general election which may conveniently be held after the plan is filed and is final.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Butera. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BUTERA. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BUTERA. I apologize to the gentleman for interrupting him, but is the gentleman discussing the amendment which he is about to offer, or whether he may offer the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me just say this, it is my understanding, and we have previously allowed the proposer of an amendment at this stage to explain what the amendment is so that the body can intelligently vote on whether they wish to give their consent to receive the amendment.

So, therefore, you may proceed Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I will try to steer between the rocks and Scylla and Charybdis, Mr. President. I do not quite know how to ask this body to consider an amendment without telling them what is in it.

The thrust of the amendment very simply, as I pointed out before, contemplates the possibility that the Reapportionment Committee may have filed its report in good time, but it further contemplates the distinct possibility that an aggrieved party may have filed an appeal to the Supreme Court, and that the Supreme Court may hand out a final opinion at sometime, perhaps, during the middle of the year. If it handed down its final opinion and final order in the middle of the year, it would require bringing into play cumbersome special election machinery.

All this does is say that when you get finished reapportioning, whatever is the final reapportionment plan, if that plan is filed 60 days before the primary election preceding a general election, then we will go right through the usual ordinary garden variety election process to elect the senators and the representatives.

It further says that if it is not so filed, we will wait until the next reasonable opportunity to hold an election. It has been suggested that this tells the Supreme Court what to do. I must say I just cannot even follow the argument. All this does is say at what election this machinery will go into effect, and it says that after the plan is filed the election will be the next convenient election. It says nothing more, nothing less. There are no hooks, tricks, or anything else involved with it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question before the Convention is, will the Convention agree to receive this amendment being offered at this time to Proposal No. 2 by Delegate O'Donnell, and if we are ready for that question, we will unlock the voting machine and we will proceed to vote. All those voting "yea" will agree that the amendment may be introduced, and those voting "nay" will express their opinion that the amendment should not be introduced.

On the motion,

Will the Convention agree to receive the first amendment offered by Delegate O'Donnell?

MOTION ON COMMENT TO OFFER O'DONNELL AMENDMENT No. 2

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I now recognize Delegate O'Donnell, and the question before us is, will the Convention agree to receive this amendment, which I will refer to as O'Donnell Amendment No. 2.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I request the consent of this body to offer the amendment which has been distributed. It is an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 2, Printer's No. 22. I think it pretty well speaks for itself. Again, this is part of the recommendation of the Committee on Style and Drafting and, again, it is a matter which was suggested by committee counsel and by its official consultant.

I would first like to thank the body for their kind consideration of that last problem.

This amendment goes to one thing, and one thing alone. We found in 1963 when the Supreme Court was required to apportion the State after about 40 years that it put almost all the offices in the State into one great big grabbag and everybody had to run again for every kind of office. The reason for it, of course, was the fact that the State Senate had not been effectively reapportioned for more than 40 years. It is not contemplated that the population changes in Pennsylvania will be significant. The population change between 1950 and 1960 was trifling. The population change projected between 1960 and today is trifling.

If we do, in fact, as we intend to do, apportion this State every 10 years, there is no reason to suspect that more than a few seats in the Senate will be affected. The difficulty with Committee Proposal No. 2 as it now exists is that it would require every Senator in the entire Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to run for reelection, even if his district has not been affected at all.

It would seem to me to be an absurd situation to require every Senator to stand for reelection, particularly in view of the provision presently in the Constitution of Pennsylvania that a man elected to office shall serve during good behavior and until impeached.

Why should we abridge and cut down that man's term of office to a point where he may have to run every two years for three successive general elections for a four-year term, even though his district has not been affected in any substantial degree.

I think it is just too simple really to contemplate further argument, and I ask the consent of this body to offer this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Aberman.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Mr. President, as a member of the Style and Drafting Committee, I think that the second and third amendments to be proposed by Delegate O'Donnell are very critical amendments and should not be dismissed perhaps as lightly as the first one.

We must see to the particular problem addressed to this amendment, because of the fact that I feel it is our duty as the Constitutional Convention, to see to a problem which, in the heat of the battle, may be avoided at all costs. I find it impososible to add anything to Delegate O'Donnell's very excellent resume of the situation and I, therefore, call the question on the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question before the Convention is, will the Convention agree to receive this amendment which we have designated the O'Donnell Amendment No. 2 to Proposal No. 2? Therefore, we will unlock the voting machine. All those voting "yea" will vote their consent to receive the amendment, those voting "nay" will vote that they do not consent to receive the amendment.

It requires the consent of the majority of the delegates present in order to present the amendment for consideration.

On the motion,

Will the Convention agree to receive the second O'Donnell Amendment?

MOTION ON CONSENT TO OFFER O'DONNELL AMENDMENT No. 3

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I trust and have taken heed to be brief on the theory that faint heart never won fair lady. I will offer the third amendment here as recommended by the Committee on Style and Drafting. This amendment simply requires that the Senatorial districts in the Commonwealth be numbered in sequence beginning at a single geographical point. The purpose is, of course, this: Should the State be reapportioned in such a fashion that the State must then decide that half of its Senators will run for two-year terms and the other half for four-year terms to provide for the staggering, that we have always felt desirable in Pennsylvania, and which is presently required, in the Constitution? The sole method for doing that effectively is to state that those Senators in even numbered districts shall stand for office in two years and those in odd numbered districts shall stand for office in four years. Unfortunately, unless the State is required constitutionally to be numbered sequentially, it permits whatever party, Democratic, Republican, Socialist, or whatever party might happen to be in power at the moment, to fix the numbers in such a way that its members stand in four years and the other parties' members in the main stand for election in two. It is a form of gerrymandering or, perhaps, more properly put, political piracy, or however you would like.

The fact of the matter is, this amendment keeps everybody honest. We call it perhaps more properly the truth in Packaging Bill, and I ask the consent of this convention to offer the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. Chairman, I think a request I made earlier has been misunderstood.

The Committee on Style and Drafting made a recommendation on this matter that there be included in the reapportionment bill or in Proposals Nos. 1 or 2, language as offered in the amendment by Delegate O'Donnell.

Delegate Devlin then announced one reason the Legislative Reapportionment Committee had not included such language was because this matter was covered by the schedule of the 1873 Constitution, and that he had had an opinion of counsel to the Legislative Reapportionment Committee to that effect.

I then requested the delegates be furnished with a copy of the language to which he referred and an opinion of counsel. What I wanted, as an opinion of counsel, was whether, in fact, anything in the 1873 schedule did cover the matter of numbering of districts. What we have gotten instead, and perhaps it is my fault in not stating my question more clearly, is an opinion from counsel for the Legislative Reapportionment Committee which deals with the question of election of Senators from odd numbered districts in odd numbered years and even numbered districts in even numbered years.

The Committee on Style and Drafting, and that amendment that is offered to you now, does not address itself directly to that question. It simply addresses itself to the question of whether or not the Reapportionment Commission, which is going to do the reapportioning, should be given any direction by the Constitution as to the sequence in which the numbering of districts should be accomplished.

I submit, that the language which I read to you earlier, the language to which Delegate Devlin referred to in the 1873 Constitution schedule does not address itself to this problem and Delegate Devlin did not receive an opinion of legislative reapportionment counsel, or any other counsel, that that problem is covered by the schedule for the 1873 Convention.

If we do not adopt this amendment, there is no guidance in the Constitution that we now will have after the adoption of our present proposals by the electorate. The Reapportionment Commission will be free to number any way they choose. They can put No. 1 in Erie County, No. 2 in Philadelphia, No. 3 in Scranton and No. 4 in Pittsburgh, and jump all over the State in that fashion. Now, there is nothing to stop them from doing this.

The amendment offered is intended to make them start at some point in the State and continuously number in sequence.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Aberman.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Mr. President, in order of importance, this third amendment is the most important. The procedure that was just described by Delegate Shapiro is, in fact, very critical. We are not clear at this moment whether, in fact, we have met the problem of deciding how the districts shall be numbered. It was the intention of Style and Drafting to adopt the numbering plan which was put into the Supreme Court order of 1966.

If the opinion of our counsel is that this is the binding numerical districting for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, that should be the opinion which will be issued by the counsel for the Chair.

However, I would like to address myself not to the Style and Drafting question, but to the question presented by this amendment. I am sure all of us realize we were elected from Senatorial districts and we are probably more than passingly, familiar with the Senatorial districting map which is attached to the small pamphlet handed out at the beginning of the session which indicates the membership and from whence they came.

If you examine that, you will see rather than being in an interesting, and consecutive and sequential order, the City of Philadelphia is blessed with the following numbers: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 36. That delightful little bit of what is called in the report "gerrymandering" is the topic to which this amendment is addressed.

Once upon a time, the numbers went, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. The effect of 1 through 9 meant that in the odd years, Nos. 1, 3, 5, 7 and 9 ran with the President. If we put together the facts there is a Democratic President and Democratic Administration, in Philadelphia that meant that those five gentlemen had a fairer than better average of being elected.

If you take the even numbers and run them in the even numbered years, you will find out this might be vice-versa. Now, what has happened? They have changed the proposal of five odd and four even to five even and four odd. We think in Style and Drafting Committee this issue should have been met and further, I think, that this amendment is a proper amendment to be considered and one that should be issued as guidance to any Commission that needs to deal with this problem and in the event an aggrieved party takes an appeal to the Supreme Court, this issue should be mandatory and binding upon the Supreme Court, so that the next order that comes out will not have such a delightful sequence of numbers. I, therefore, ask you to permit this amendment to come to the floor.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Mr. President, much of what I was about to say was covered by Delegate Aberman. In looking over the little wallet index that they gave us, I also very uniquely see Allegheny County numbered 37 and 38, and there is a number missing, number 40. There is a number missing 42, 43, 44, and 45. It looks like a bingo card. The numbers are scattered every which way over the little map.

I think the entire issue boils down to one basic concept and one basic idea. We all say we are against gerrymandering. We believe this is a good, honest approach in government. Here is the test right here and right now.

If you honestly and truly are against gerrymandering, you are going to vote for Delegate O'Donnell's amendment. It is as simple as that.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, I heartily agree with what has been said, that the question of gerrymandering can very easily occur.

However, I rise in oppostion to this for the simple reason that if you read the language, if that language would stop gerrymandering, I would then say to each one of us in here that we should vote for it. But it does not do so.

All the amendment does is this, members of the Convention. It says to number in sequence and to start at a geographical point. Let us take a geographical point. You can start anywhere you want. Let us assume you would start in Mifflin County—Delegate Barron comes from that distinguished county—and then you would go south. Then you would go west. Then you could go north. Then you could go down south again. You could do everything that the gerrymanderer would want you to do.

This does not solve the problem. I believe in what learned counsel, Delegate O'Donnell, said. I would heartily agree with him that if this language would save us from what he believed we could be in danger of, we should vote for it. But, as the language is now drawn, unfortunately—and, of course, all lawyers disagree, and it is pretty hard to disagree with learned counsel O'Donnell, but I must disagree with him, so I ask you to turn this down.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gouger.

DELEGATE GOUGER. Mr. President, you are insistent on my doing this and I shall do so. That is facetious. In an equally facetious manner, I discovered this morning why all Philadelphia lawyers wear vests. I somehow relate this to the vest pocket vote of 1942 that was so eloquently referred to in a morning paper.

Seriously, Mr. President, I rise in support of this amendment and, in supporting this amendment, I should like to make one thing abundantly clear: I am quite sure, in our inexperience in presenting the first amendment to this proposal, that we brought about misunderstanding about what those of us who advocated this amendment were trying to do. We were honestly trying to bring something meaningful out of our Committee. I felt, with considerable feeling, that our committee had not functioned to its fullest capabilities. I felt that it had not functioned as this delegation, as this Convention, intended that it should function. I felt, when we were denied adequate research and denied the opportunity to have people familiar with the subject appear before us, that we were being denied the ingredients upon which we could make an intelligent decision.

I had no more notion about apportionment, no more fixed ideas about what the size of the Legislature should be, when I walked into that Committee as I did 10 years ago when I knew absolutely nothing about it.

I came to learn; I came to listen to evidence; I came to debate; I came to try to arrive at fruitful decisions, and decisions in the best interests of all the people of Pennsylvania and not on behalf of any establishment, any group, any party, or any other special interest.

When our meetings became so infrequent that I was moved to try to inquire as to what were our intentions, when our debate was so inadequate that we were not able to inform ourselves fully on the subjects; when attendance became so poor that we found ourselves in the unhappy position of passing resolutions of a committee on the basis of a five to four vote and other votes actually illegal. We did not raise the question in time in the hopes that something fruitful could, sooner or later, be worked out.

Now this is the situation in which those of us earnestly and sincerely are trying to present to the people of Pennsylvania something meaningful. This was our objective. I had no fixed notions about numbers—and it got off into a numbers game by those clever enough to maneuver it into that position. I did feel, and I feel now, that we have committed more crimes in the name of "the people" here than can be enumerated, I sadly suspect, but I did feel they needed this word that is now getting a good working over—"flexibility." I felt the Legislature, itself, needed flexibility.

Here is one constructive thing, unfortunately, arising not out of the Committee—because while this was discussed as a result of Delegate Gerber's making a recommendation to the committee that numbering be consecutively, it was discussed, but, to the best of my knowledge, was never voted on, and I attended every meeting of both my committee and the standing committee, at least those that I knew anything about.

Here is a constructive move. As it stands right now, what are we going to offer the people on this ballot? We will offer them 203 or 203. This gives them really a great breadth of selection, a great exercise in intellect as to what to vote for or against.

True, we have an apportionment commission and I think it speaks well for the intent of the committee and their regard for the people of Pennsylvania to gratuitously, if you please, submit to us at least one thing that could be highly constructive and could come out of these discussions.

Mr. President, I stand in firm approval of this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Gerber.

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, I think it is rather evident that the O'Donnell amendment is a necessity and it is evident because even the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, when it had the responsibility of apportioning the General Assembly vested in it, saw fit not to number the senatorial districts in a manner free of any political consideration.

This certainly, therefore, seems to me that those of us who have voted to create a reapportionment commission have an obligation to those people who will serve on that commission to set guidelines for the manner in which they should draw the lines of the Senate of Pennsylvania consistent with the United States Supreme Court decision of Baker versus Carr.

It seems to me that there is no less invidious gerrymandering when you play the numbers game of odds and evens than there is when you have one Senator representing 50 to 100,000 more people than another Senator because you are not giving the people of that district, when you play the numbers game, a fair chance. You are not doing it because history has shown here in our Commonwealth that in the gubernatorial years there is a Republican bias. When I say bias, I do not mean that in an unkind way. It leads that way if you look and see that since the Civil War we have only elected a Democratic Governor five times: Patterson twice before the turn of the century and Governors Earle, Leader and Lawrence since.

Secondly, I think it is clearly obvious that in a presidential year there is a Republican lead but it does not lead nearly as much as in a gubernatorial year. When you play the numbers game, you are choosing your state Senate and which party will control.

I think if we were elected here to this Convention not to permit this kind of game to continue to be played—and, Mr. President, I submit to you that the Pennsylvania Supreme Court won varsity letters to play in this game the last time out; all of them—and if we permit this to happen again, we are going to permit the numbering of the districts to determine which party is going to control.

This can happen just as easily for the party to which I belong as to the party to which I do not belong. It seems to me the only way you can be fair is to number them in a consecutive, geographically contiguous manner, and with all due respect to my learned and honored colleague, Senator Jirolanio, I can see the problem he presents and it is a real one. But, on the other hand, though it presents a problem, it seems to me that it helps solve others, and it is not a matter of whether or not there is a problem, it is how few problems there are.

I do think the O'Donnell amendment would help solve many problems. It may leave others unsolved but the ones that it leaves unsolved are still unsolved, but it gets to others. Therefore, Mr. President, I respectfully urge you to support the O'Donnell amendment and let us reduce the opportunity for those people in future years to play the numbers game.

I do not stand here in criticism of the committee, I do not stand here in criticism of any member on it, I stand here in respect of every one of them. I merely suggest that they give this thought another chance and I am sure that if they do they will see the wisdom in the O'Donnell amendment, which is really the product of the Style and Drafting Committee, chaired by Delegates Pelletier and Johnson.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes someone that will speak for the other side. The Chair recognizes Chairman Fagan.

DELEGATE FAGAN. Mr. President, I rise at this time to defend the integrity of the Legislative Apportionment Committee.

By innuendos by previous speakers, it has been attempted to be pointed out here that many of our meetings were not conducted properly. I would like to take opposition to that viewpoint. I feel, at all times, that the Legislative Apportionment Committee conducted its business in a very sincere and honest manner. I would like to state that the time has arrived, in my opinion, to appeal to the consciences of this delegate body because it seems that we have some very unsportsmanlike conduct that is prevailing at the present time.

I sat through these deliberations since the beginning of the Convention and voted for and against many proposals, but when the time arrived, when it was the opinion of the majority of this delegation that my judgment was not to prevail, I so went along with it.

I feel that even though this is a very historical group and body that is gathered here for the purpose of changing the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, I feel that it can be compared with any athletic event that takes place or any of us have ever participated in.

I feel the time for good sportsmanship is here and I think we ought to get on with the business of this Convention, notwithstanding the fact that the number 203 or 50 has been disagreeable to many of the committee members or any of the delegates in this particular Convention. I feel that the majority opinion must prevail. I feel that the sub-committees have carried out their work along with the Committee on Legislative Apportionment.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fagan.

DELEGATE FAGAN. I feel that we had enough debate on the subject and I move you on this question, Mr. Chairman.

DELEGATE HATTER. I second that.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Fagan, seconded by Delegate Hatter, that the debate of this question be closed and that we vote on the pending question.

I just want to say that we have had one or two people that have been up at the microphone and I do not know whether you want to include them in your motion so they can speak or not, or exclude them.

DELEGATE KING. If you please, Mr. President—and the body—I simply want to make an inquiry. I am concerned about the exercise of my vote in an intelligent manner and I wanted to direct a question to Delegate O'Donnell.

I am not speaking for or against the amendment. I am not speaking personally, as some of the remarks have taken on, except to say this to Delegate Gouger, that all Philadelphia lawyers do not wear vests. I am very concerned, unless I missed it in your explanation, with how you feel that the potential problem of gerrymandering will be solved by saying that senatorial districts shall be numbered in sequence commencing at one geographical point. I think perhaps my question might be tied in with Delegate Jirolanio's question to you about who is to say goes east, west, north or south. I noticed that Delegate Gerber said something about sequential and contiguous numbering. Why do you feel that saying simply numbered in sequence commencing from one geographic point will cure the problem of potential gerrymandering, without respect to whether one point is—I am not concerned about any of that at this point. I just want an explanation so I can vote intelligently. Would you please explain?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. The point, Delegate King, is the Committee does not feel that the problem of gerrymandering is entirely solved by this language. We were unable to arrive at language which entirely solved the problem, because certainly the notion of numbering in sequence from a geographical point, includes and connotes the notion of contiguous numbering. The problem, however, is that we felt that this was an approach which would make gerrymandering 10 times more difficult; let us put it that way. If we have not solved the problem in its entirety, we have at least addressed ourselves to it and made it a great deal more difficult.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have a question on the floor, and there is a motion by Delegate Fagan and it was seconded by Delegate Hatter that we close debate, and vote on the pending question.

We are not voting on the amendment right now. We are only voting on the question as to whether the Convention would agree to receive the amendment, and I can answer your question after we vote.

The question now is, should this debate now be closed and we will vote on the pending question, and the voting machine is unlocked on the motion to close debate, and we will vote on the pending question. All those who wish to close debate will vote "yea," those who wish to keep debate open will vote "nay."

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. If the motion is adopted and if the amendment is adopted, does this amendment, or does the proposal as amended, go back to the Committee on Style and Drafting for further opportunity to correct the language?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, it does.

DELEGATE MICHENER. No, sir.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would you yield until we announce the vote?

DELEGATE MICHENER. I do not want the vote announced, Mr. President. I want to know how Delegate Butera voted on that. I do not see him in his seat. Was he registered as voting?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. He just walked back inside the room.

DELEGATE BUTERA. I am here. I think I signaled to the delegate next to me to vote for me.

DELEGATE MICHENER. It was called to my attention that he was not in his seat.

DELEGATE BUTERA. When that last vote was called, I was answering a question on a radio interview, and I came into the room and asked Delegate Baldwin to vote for me. I do not see anything wrong with that.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me just say, Delegate Butera, it is not in accordance with our rules.

DELEGATE BUTERA. Then, Mr. President, I suggest you strike the vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would the Delegate take his seat and we will now vote over on the same question? I just want to say that our rules are clear that every delegate must cast his own vote.

DELEGATE CAMARDELLA. Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I recognize Delegate Camardella.

DELEGATE CAMARDELLA. I am a little bit disturbed, Mr. President. First of all, I do not see why we should be harrassed here to vote again. He should lose his vote, as far as I am concerned. I do not see why we have to go over a vote again. The votes have been final, and that is it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The vote was not final.

DELEGATE BUTERA. Mr. President, that is perfectly all right with me. It is only a vote to—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. To advance the proposal for final passage.

DELEGATE BUTERA. I am perfectly willing to lose my vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Rappaport.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Mr. President, I really feel compelled at this time, and it is the first time I publicly disagreed with Delegate Michener, and I have frequently disagreed on many issues of substance with Delegate Butera.

DELEGATE BUTERA. Mr. President, since I am the subject of this debate, I move that we close the debate, and get on to more important business. I appreciate the gentleman's consideration, but we are just taking up the time of the Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand now that the body is ready to accept the vote, and that the Butera vote will be stricken. I understand that is the feeling of the body?

The question recurs,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, I move the question.

DELEGATE CAIN. I second it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Solomon has moved that the debate on the question be closed and we vote on the question, and that was seconded by Delegate Cain.

Now, I will open up the machine and we will vote on whether we will close the debate and vote on the question. All those voting "yea" will vote to support the motion that we close debate and proceed to vote. Those voting "nay" will vote to keep the matter open.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

REFERRAL TO COMMITTEE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The proposal has passed and will be referred to the Committee on Arrangements, Submissions, and Address to the People.

MOTION TO COMBINE PROPOSALS ON BALLOT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Baldrige.

DELEGATE BALDRIGE. Mr. President, I hope that I have a motion which will be non-controversial.

I understand we have very few places on the ballot, nine in total, and the Judiciary Committee and local government needs most of them for State taxation and finance.

Therefore, I move you that when this is submitted to Arrangement and Address to the People, Proposals Nos. 1 and 2 may be combined into one ballot question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If this is in the nature of a recommendation, it will be received, but this is the work of the Committee on Arrangements and Address to the People, as I do not think such a motion would be in order.

That question will come up when we adopt the report.

DELEGATE BALDRIGE. According to the Act this is the only question that this Convention is dealing with, which mandates that it shall be one question on the ballot, sir.

MOTION WITHDRAWN

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Do I understand, in this circumstance, you withdraw your motion?

DELEGATE BALDRIGE. Yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Because this would be usurping the power of the committee and, when the report of the committee reaches this floor, anyone, naturally, if that does not agree with the manner in which they have set up the question, this will be then open for discussion and acceptance or rejection.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise for a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, would the speaker in opposition to my proposed amendment, Delegate Fagan, consent to be interrogated?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. He has indicated that he will.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I wonder if Delegate Fagan in his comment concerning unsportsmanlike conduct intended that any of it should apply to me and, if so, in what way?

DELEGATE FAGAN. Mr. President, during the remarks that I made there was no reference made to Delegate O'Donnell because, if I would have had any reference to make about him, I would have mentioned him by name. It is a name that we are all familiar with here in the Convention. To go a little bit further, I address my remarks to the conduct of the Committee on Legislative Apportionment, and there were no references made about him as an individual, as a delegate, or to the amendments which he was proposing.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I thank the gentleman.

PERMISSION GRANTED COMMITTEE TO MEET DURING SESSION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes the Chairman of the Committee on Style and Drafting, Chairman Pelletier, who wishes to make a request.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, I would like to request that the Convention now move to the consideration of Proposal No. 7 on second consideration and that the Committee on Style and Drafting be allowed to leave and meet in the room on this floor so we will be available for votes, but with leave to approve the two reports which we have to make on Proposals Nos. 3 and 6. This is not to approve the proposals, but the written report.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Unless the Chair hears objections, this will be permitted. In other words, we will go over to Proposal No. 7, which is on second consideration, with the understanding that the bell will be rung if there is any additional consideration to be given to Proposal No. 7, so you will be notified to go back in.

MEETING OF COMMITTEE ON ADMINISTRATION AND FINANCE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Bloom.

DELEGATE BLOOM. Before many of the delegates start leaving, and I see there is quite a bit of scurrying around, I thought I had better make an important announcement with reference to the Committee on Administration and Finance. This is a very important meeting which we intend to hold on Monday at 12:00 o'clock noon. We expect all the members to be there. We are going to serve sandwiches and each of them are going to pay for their sandwiches and refreshments. I want to make that announcement in advance.

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON SECOND CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to the second consideration of Committee Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 23, entitled:

A Proposal repealing article five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania relating to the Judiciary and adding a new Judiciary article.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal?

SCRANTON-AMSTERDAM AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATES SCRANTON and AMSTERDAM offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 9, by inserting between lines 25 and 26: (e) Should any two or more justices or judges of the same court assume office at the same time, they shall cast lots for priority of commission forthwith, and certify the results to the Governor who shall issue their commissions accordingly.

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegates Scranton and Amsterdam?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Woodside.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, this is a provision which is in the substantial form that was in the present Constitution and was overlooked. It should be provided for in this Constitution.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. In accordance with an amendment put in by Judge Woodside, we provided in courts of 7 or less that the judges shall be the President Judges or Chief Justice as the case may be for longest and continuous service. Because of this situation, we have to provide as the old Constitution did, in the event there are two or more justices or judges who assume offices at the same time, they shall cast lots for priority of commission and that is all this does.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anybody wish to be heard either pro or con in connection with this matter? If not, we will proceed to vote.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

The roll was recorded as follows:

STOUT AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Stout.

DELEGATE STOUT. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE STOUT offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 6, line 11, by removing the period after "Senate" and inserting: ; provided, however, that such appointment shall not require the advice and consent of the Senate in the event the Governor appoints a person from a list of persons qualified for the office submitted to him by a State Judicial Qualifications Commission composed of four non-lawyer electors appointed by the Governor and three non-judge members of the bar of the Supreme Court, two to be appointed by the Supreme Court and one to be appointed by the Superior Court. The members of the commission shall serve for terms of seven years, staggered so that one member shall be selected each year, and no more than four of the members of the commission shall be members of the same political party. The commission shall consider all names submitted to it and recommend to the Governor not less than ten nor more than twenty of those qualified for each vacancy to be filled. During the term for which he has been appointed, no member of the commission shall hold any office in a political party or political organization nor shall he hold any public office or appointment for which he receives any compensation. Vacancies in the Judicial Qualifications Commission shall be filled for the balance of the term by the appointing authority.

Amend Schedule (Sec. 21), page 34, line 24, by striking out "the three" and inserting: two

Amend Schedule (Sec. 21), page 34, line 26, by striking out ", four years"

Amend Schedule (Sec. 21), page 34, line 26, by striking out "two" where it appears the second time and inserting: one

Amend Schedule (Sec. 21), page 34, line 27, by striking out "members" and inserting: a member

Amend Schedule (Sec. 21), page 34, line 27, by removing the period after "party" and inserting: and the Superior Court shall appoint the remaining non-judge member of the bar of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania for a term of four years.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, this matter has been considered and it has been reconsidered, and under our Rule No. 21, appearing on pages 22 and 23 of the Rules, it is out of order.

The question has been considered and reconsidered and the rule expressly provides that when a motion for reconsideration is decided, that decision shall not be reconsidered, and no question—and I repeat—no question shall be twice reconsidered.

The question that was voted on and was considered and then was reconsidered was whether we are going to have selection of statewide judges by a panel or whether we are going to have judges appointed by the Governor with two-thirds consent of the Senate. This matter has been before this body not only once but twice.

Therefore, under our rules, this amendment is out of order.

RULING BY THE CHAIR

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will rule on this, if you will be at ease. We are going to state the reason.

The Chair with the aid of counsel and the Parliamentarian has come to the conclusion that this amendment—referred to as the Stout amendment—in the form that it is submitted at this time was never previously considered by this body.

There is at least one technical change in it and that is in connection with members of the commission. I note that it says two will come from the Supreme Court and one from the Superior Court, as far as the lawyer members are concerned.

It is the ruling of the Chair that this amendment can be presented without a motion to reconsider.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, just to make sure that the record is clear, the rules do not speak in terms of amendments. The rules speak in terms of a question. The question was considered and was reconsidered.

I think it is very, very, very clear that this question has been before this body. I do not think there is a person in the Convention who in good faith would stand up and say that this question has not been before this body and reconsidered by this body.

The rules say "question." Mr. President, I respectfully submit that if you are going to let a little technicality like this—

DELEGATE WELSH. Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. One delegate at a time, please. I recognized Delegate Kauffman.

DELEGATE WELSH. I suggest he is out of order.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, I suggest Delegate Welsh is out of order.

Mr. President, I am speaking to the ruling of the Chair and I think I have the right to be heard, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You have a right to be heard if you wish to appeal. The Chair has ruled that this amendment has not been considered by this House in this form.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. May I ask the Chair a question?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. If this is voted down and another one comes in and says that we will have eight members on the nominating commission instead of seven, will that be another amendment? Then if amendments come in with nine, ten and eleven, we will never finish this Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The result may be as you have stated, but I do not think it will be. But I can tell you this, that the Chair has consistently, in ruling on whether we needed a motion to reconsider, made the determination on the basis of whether the question—which is the amendment being offered—was in effect similar or substantially the same.

I say that we have always ruled that where there was a difference in the language, a substantial difference—and there is in this amendment—the amendment could be considered. I can only tell you that this has been the consistent basis of the Chair's ruling. We have ruled in some instances that we needed a motion to reconsider. But in this particular instance the Chair has ruled that we do not need a motion to reconsider because we have never considered this language, and it has a different thrust as far as the Chair's interpretation.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Is it the Chair's interpretation that the only—and I repeat—the only difference in this proposal is that, instead of having three members of the panel appointed by the Supreme Court, you are going to have two appointed by the Supreme Court and one appointed by the Superior Court?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me just say the Chair does not say just "only." The Chair says that is one. Now, it takes a lot of time for the Chair to read and reread.

I have pointed out to you one difference. There may be more. But we only need one substantial difference to rule and, as far as the Chair is concerned at this point, the Chair has ruled that this amendment can be accepted without a motion to reconsider.

Now, as I say, Delegate Kauffman, you can take an appeal from the Chair's ruling.

MOTION TO LAY ON TABLE

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, I would like to move at this time to lay this matter on the table until Monday, for the reason that yesterday afternoon it was asked on several occasions whether there were going to be any further amendments to the Judiciary Article. Those who introduced this amendment knew very well that they were going to do so. They knew also very well that many of the members today were not going to be here on Friday afternoon.

In addition, Mr. President, we just amended the article, so that it has to lay over until Monday to advance, anyhow. Therefore, I move to lay this matter on the table.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Kauffman, seconded by Delegate Keller, that this amendment being offered by Delegate Stout be laid on the table until Monday.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegat O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. What would be the effect on the timing of events here, considering that we must adjourn by next Thursday, if this were laid on the table until Monday and passed on Monday? Then, Committee Proposal No. 7 would not then reach third consideration until Thursday?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Wednesday?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. On Wednesday.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. In other words, if it is amended on Monday, it has to appear on the calendar on Tuesday. We then move it over to Style and Drafting on Wednesday.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. It would then be susceptible of amendment on Tuesday, as well, sir?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Certainly.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. In other words, it would continue on second consideration—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think the answer to your question is that when you do this you are delaying one session day.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Butera. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BUTERA. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BUTERA. In an effort to resolve this, is it not possible for the parties who are opposing each other on this particular amendment to agree as gentlemen that we move the measure to third reading today and that we then discuss the amendment on third reading on Monday? We will not lose a day that way.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Butera, if that is a point of inquiry—and I take it to be, and not debate on this—we have already amended this matter once. It has to appear on the calendar on Monday.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRIES

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Casey. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE CASEY. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE CASEY. If the motion to lay on the table is carried, how many votes will be required on Monday to remove it from the table?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It will take a majority of votes to put it on the table and it takes a majority of votes to remove it from the table.

DELEGATE CASEY. A second point of parliamentary inquiry. Does not the proponent of the amendment have the option to now withdraw the amendment and offer it on Monday as a matter of right, without the consent of a majority of the delegates present at that time?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, indeed. The Convention has not as yet voted on the motion to table, and there is no question that the proposer of the amendment has a right until that time to withdraw his amendment. At least, that has been our procedure and shall continue to be unless we are overruled.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BARRON. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BARRON. I would ask that I be permitted to rise and challenge Delegate Kauffman and to observe that to the best of my knowledge there has never been an issue vesting in the Governor an option of which form the Governor wishes to use in selecting.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I introduced such an amendment the other day, Delegate Barron.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That matter has been decided. No appeal was taken. And of course now we have a motion.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I rise for a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Is it not true that because the article already has been amended today it has to lay over until Monday, anyhow?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is right.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. And this would not delay it at all?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, if you amend it again on Monday it will delay. If you do not amend on Monday, it will not delay. It is that simple.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scranton. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. When Delegate Amsterdam and I put in this amendment, which we had to for a technicality that the lawyers found, I was under the impression that we could then move to suspend the rules and move on to third reading. Is that correct or incorrect?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You can always move to suspend the rules and, if you suspend the rules, it is going to require a vote of 109 to suspend the rules.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I understand.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now we have a motion before us offered by Delegate Stout.

DELEGATE STOUT. Mr. President, I rise to introduce an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Just at this time that is out of order. The reason I recognized you was because—I think it was Delegate Casey who had an inquiry as to withdrawing—and I see the amendment is not withdrawn, so we will vote on the motion to table.

We will now unlock the voting machine and the question before the House is whether to table the amendment offered by Delegate Stout. The motion is whether it be tabled. All those voting "yea" will vote to table, those voting "nay" will vote not to table.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

MOTION TO SUSPEND RULES

DELEGATE BUTERA. Is it in order to move to suspend the rules to move Committee Proposal No. 7 to third reading at this time so as to possibly save a day next week?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, it is in order to suspend the rules.

DELEGATE BUTERA. Mr. President, I so move.

DELEGATE BANES. Second.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will you go back to the microphone again, Delegate Butera?

Now, Delegate Butera, as I understand, your motion is that we suspend Rule 26, sub-Section 6, which says "a proposal which has been amended shall remain on second consideration calendar for action after the proposal is reprinted showing the amendment agreed to," and what you want to do right now is suspend that rule?

DELEGATE BUTERA. Yes, Mr. President. I move to suspend the rule so that Committee Proposal No. 7 can be placed on the third consideration calendar.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. And your motion has been seconded by Delegate Banes.

DELEGATE BUTERA. If I may speak upon the motion?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, indeed, you may proceed.

DELEGATE BUTERA. The amendment which was inserted today by the committee co-chairman was one of form. I do not feel as though the delegates in voting to suspend the rules are really doing something which they are not quite sure of, because the committee proposal is intact except for a very, very minor amendment inserted today. I would urge that everyone vote in favor of the motion, in case next week the committee proposal is amended. We will save a day by doing it this way.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, what does this now do to the motion that has been laid on the table? It is kind of hard for me to think of a matter on third consideration while a motion is on the table. How many votes will be needed now to lift it from the table so that it can be acted upon on Monday?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The majority present can remove it from the table. I am advised by the Parliamentarian that this amendment has been offered. It is on the table. As we have heretofore stated, it will require a majority vote of those present to remove it from the table, and then, if it is removed from the table, it can be voted upon because it has already been offered and it will not require consent, which would be, in effect, the same thing, because you are getting the majority vote required to remove it from the table. A majority vote is necessary for consent and then the amendment would be presented.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Do I understand, then, sir, the effect of placing this on third consideration would have no effect whatever on the position of the Stout amendment as of Monday?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. None that the Chair can see now. It has an effect on the proposal if it is accepted, then it goes over again.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Yes, sir, that is understood.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, may I speak to the Butera motion?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, you may.

DELEGATE CASEY. I rise to speak in opposition to the Butera motion for the following reasons.

We have before us now one of the most far-reaching articles of this Convention, a subject in which 11,000,000 people are vitally interested. The Commonwealth—all of its people—and the news media are watching what we do with this proposal, and with good reason.

I would suggest to the Convention that this proposal in its present form, which was just delivered into our hands this morning and which differs substantially, in my judgment, from the proposal as it left the Judiciary Committee, is entitled to the mature reasoning and dispassionate judgment of every member of this Convention.

I would suggest, Mr. President, that we found yesterday, many of us, because of the fatigue and extreme pressure under which all of us have been working, that we were perhaps confused with respect to the reach of some of the amendments that have been made.

There is a serious question in my mind whether the original thesis of the Judiciary Committee, the unified court system, the tremendous new power, unprecedented power, which we are giving to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania under this proposal, the judicial members, I would suggest and remind this Convention, who are now being selected under this proposal, as amended by an appointive system rather than the system which the Judiciary Committee initially recommended, raising a serious question of whether these Supreme Court justices, who will now be given this tremendous power and who will be selected during the decades that lie before us, not by merit selection as the Judiciary Committee originally recommended, but by the appointive system, which has been characterized, and I think properly so, by Governor Scranton as an outrageous political system, whether or not moving to suspend the rules on this question—

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I do not believe that the learned delegate, Mr. Casey, former Senator, is talking on the motion.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, I am talking directly to the motion and I am suggesting that the effect of this motion will be to push this matter along without the mature and deliberate consideration to which it is entitled. I think we have the right to know the effect of this motion and we have a right to know the far-reaching importance of what we are considering here. I resent very much any effort to ram this thing through this Convention.

It has already been amended. It will lay over until Monday, anyway. I think these delegates have the right to consider whether or not they want to do this. I think it would be a very bad mistake. There are many people in this Commonwealth who are very concerned about this problem, and I see no benefit in moving it into third consideration.

If, as Governor Scranton suggested, this motion were made Tuesday, that is an entirely different matter than from making the motion today.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Did you complete your statement?

DELEGATE CASEY. No, I have not, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed.

DELEGATE CASEY. We have a basic question to decide with this proposal and that question is:

Does this proposal accomplish judicial reform in Pennsylvania?

How can we decide this question when over a hundred amendments have been offered and when this very complex proposal has just been delivered to our desks this morning? There may be delegates here who will want to discuss this matter and will want to offer amendments, who will want to interrogate the co-chairmen of the Committee with respect to the reach of this proposal, who will want further elaboration, for example, on the reason why the magisterial system in Philadelphia survives this Article, why traffic court judges, for example, should not be learned in the law in the face of recommendations made by the Committee of 70 and other interested groups in this Commonwealth.

These are questions which can only be answered, I suggest, by moving this proposal along in an orderly fashion, giving the delegates an opportunity to review it over the weekend and decide whether or not this proposal is in proper form to submit to the 11 million people of this Commonwealth.

I have serious doubts in my own mind that this is the case and I would remind Delegate Jirolanio and everyone in this room that we are going to be expected and asked to sell this product to the people of this Commonwealth. I want to know what is in the product. I want to know whether it is judicial reform or not before I am called upon to do this. I think we need more study than this body has given this proposal to decide this question.

Therefore, I oppose the motion.

MOTION WITHDRAWN

DELEGATE BUTERA. The motion was not intended in any way to do the things which Delegate Casey alleges.

I am perfectly willing to withdraw the motion. I just thought that perhaps we could save time next week so that we are not rushed at the end of the session with the most important proposal before us.

I will withdraw the motion because it is not that important to me. I just wanted to make certain that everyone in this Hall realizes that we are getting down to the wire and I thought, in no way, would this motion affect the deliberate debate on Proposal No. 7. I will withdraw the motion.

If someone else wants to make it, let them get on the "hot seat."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand Delegate Butera has now withdrawn his motion.

Is that agreeable to Delegate Banes, who seconded it?

DELEGATE BANES. It is.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Therefore, the motion has been withdrawn.

MOTION TO HAVE SATURDAY SESSION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. President, I wish to speak to make a revolutionary proposal.

I will put it in this form:

I move that this Convention be in session tomorrow, Saturday, February 24th, in view of the remarks of Senator Casey, with which I agree, as to the amount and importance of the matter still remaining before us.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Braham, are you putting that in the form of an adjournment motion now? I want to point out that we are still waiting for Style and Drafting in connection with Proposals Nos. 3 and 6.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. I did not intend it as a motion to adjourn, but I will make it at that time, when the appropriate time comes, yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Braham has just declared his intention to make such a motion of adjournment when we reach the conclusion of our business today.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Johnson. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. I rise for a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Mr. President, I just wanted to inquire what is the status of the Convention and how long it will be in session.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want to say that we have been considering Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 23, and, unless there is further business in connection with that proposal, unless I hear to the contrary, I will assume that we have completed discussion of it and we will go over again on second consideration.

Are there any further Amendments? Anything further in connection with Proposal No. 7?

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scranton. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I rise for a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. In view of the fact that we now will be on second reading again on Monday, or perhaps on Saturday, what does this do to Style and Drafting?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. What it does to Style and Drafting is, frankly, we were counting on Style and Drafting working this weekend perhaps on the Judiciary article, if we could have moved it on, but apparently we have not been able to do that because it is still on second consideration on Monday. If we move it from second consideration into Style and Drafting on Monday, they can probably get a report back to us on Tuesday.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. May I make a suggestion, then?

I suggest that in view of the fact that, as far as I know, this is the only amendment left for the Judiciary Committee, of course, if it stays on second reading others can come, could we not send it as it is—not formally but informally—to Style and Drafting and let them look at it and work on it, since this only refers to one section?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. There is no problem there. The work is always available to Style and Drafting, and I might add that Style and Drafting has been considering all our proposals as we have been advancing them. That is a question of their own internal procedures.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I have the floor and I want to yield the floor to the Chairman.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You asked me where we are. It appears we have completed our consideration today of Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 23, and that proposal will go over until Monday on second consideration.

Therefore, we are now ready to consider either Proposal No. 3 or Proposal No. 6. Have I answered your question?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. You have, and yet we are not ready to present those proposals at the present time. We have a commentary on them that we are preparing that must be shown to our committee members.

How long does the Convention plan to be in session?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The answer to that question is best obtained by my saying to the chairman, how long is it going to take you to prepare your report on Proposals Nos. 3 and 6?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Delegate Aberman, a member of the committee, has the answer to that.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Mr. President, on the question of the committee report for No. 6, it is my understanding that the Chair would accept Proposal No. 6 without the report for the moment.

Proposal No. 6 is printed. The report is in the process of being printed. If the Chair would accept Proposal No. 6, it could come forward within the next 10 or 15 minutes.

No. 3, as I understand it, is also in the same situation. The report is being prepared. The proposal is prepared.

I do not know what the Chair wishes to do, but it seems rather an insignificant amount of time, if we can get two proposals prepared for third reading, to ask the delegation to stay and eat lunch, possibly, and we will be ready to move two more into final reading.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think that is in line with the Chair's inquiry as to how long it is going to take to prepare the reports on Proposals Nos. 3 and 6. How much time do you need?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. How long do the delegates wish to eat lunch, would be the answer.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me put it quite clearly to you. Is it going to be a question of 10 minutes or is it a question of an hour?

WIFE AND FAMILY OF DELEGATE ABERMAN WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will recognize Delegate Gerber.

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, I would like to rise for a point of personal privilege to introduce the wife and two sons of Delegate Aberman, who is doing such a wonderful job, his lovely wife Meryl, and his two sons, John and Lawrence Aberman.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are going to ask them to stand, and we will give them a warm greeting.

REQUEST BY DELEGATE PASQUERILLA

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, I would like to earnestly call to the attention of these delegates, if they would please bear with us, I think it is extremely important that we make a real effort to finally pass Proposals Nos. 3 and 6 today, with the problem of the Judiciary, and Style and Drafting, and with the problems that we have I understand we also have Proposals Nos. 4 and 5. Time is becoming a real problem, so I would urge that each and every one of us stay here and come back here at 2:30 so that we can complete these two proposals.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I join in the request, Delegate Pasquerilla, that we do complete consideration of these proposals.

MEETING OF COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING

DELEGATE JOHNSON. The Committee on Style and Drafting will meet immediately following this recess in Room 500 for luncheon and business.

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair has a motion to recess until 2:30. The Chair is willing to hear objections to that if there are any.

The Chair hears none, and the Convention is now in recess until 2:30 p.m.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time of recess having expired the Convention will come to order.

WIFE AND GUEST OF DELEGATE WARMAN WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Fellow Delegates, while we are waiting for the report, we are not going to go into formal session, so I think it would be a good opportunity to introduce Mrs. Warman, the wife of Delegate Warman. She is here with a friend, Mrs. Marcia Bartlett. They are back there and I think we should give them our warm cordial greeting.

WIFE OF DELEGATE SWOPE WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will recognize Delegate Swope.

DELEGATE SWOPE. There was a time some 30 years ago when I was usually introduced by the naming of my name and one of the titles that I might have had, but in recent years I am usually introduced as Judge Swope's father or Helen Swope's husband. Helen being here, I wish the delegates to meet her.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Please stand and we will give you a cordial welcome.

GUEST OF DELEGATE SHOEMAKER WELCOMED

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, while we are still informally here, I would like to introduce a member of the Fourth Estate from the Patriot News who serves as Editor of York County, Mr. Harry McLaughlin.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are very happy to have Mr. McLaughlin with us.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY CHAIR

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Fellow Delegates, I have been getting reports periodically from Style and Drafting, and so you will know at least as much as I know and maybe some of you know a lot more about the status, as to No. 6, they are still working on their report, and as to No. 3, they have completed their report and it is in the process of being duplicated. I understand it is going to take about 15 more minutes to complete the duplication and distribution.

Unless something comes along to change it, as soon as we get the report on Proposal No. 3, distributed, we will take up Proposal No. 3. When Dr. Pelletier and Dr. Johnson were in a few minutes ago—I see they are still here—it was a question of having the report on Proposal No. 6 ready at that time in approximately an hour. I think by the time we finish our consideration of No. 3, we will be ready to consider Proposal No. 6.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Markley. For what purpose does the lady rise?

DELEGATE MARKLEY. I rise for a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The lady will state it.

DELEGATE MARKLEY. Mr. President, I was delayed attending the funeral of Mr. Guy Davis, and I am now on record as being present, but, if I had been present, I would have voted in the affirmative on Proposals Nos. 1 and 2. I would like it recorded.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will have the remarks of Delegate Markley placed upon the record and we are happy to have her with us.

MR. AND MRS. E. R. BELLOWS WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. While they are still present, I want to call to the attention of my fellow delegates the fact that Mrs. E. R. Bellows and her husband are here. Mrs. Bellows is the First Vice President of the League of Women Voters from Pittsburgh and, if she and her husband will stand, we will be very happy to give them our cordial greeting.

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE WARMAN requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 23, 1968.

On February 8, 1968, I, Delegate Edwin G. Warman was called upon in my capacity as Consultant to the United States Department of State to travel to Jamaica, West Indies.

While in St. James, Delegate Warman was invited to the parlour of His Worship, the Mayor of St. James, Montego Bay, Jamaica. His Worship expressed an avid interest in the activities and deliberations of the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1967-1968; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Constiutional Convention of Pennsylvania express its thanks to His Worship, the Mayor of St. James, Montego Bay, Jamaica, West Indies, for his interest in our deliberations; and be it further RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to His Worship, the Mayor of St. James, Montego Bay, Jamaica, West Indies.

CALENDAR

COMMITTEE PROPOSALS ON THIRD CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to third consideration of Committee Proposal No. 3, Printer's No. 24, entitled:

A proposal amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania further providing for Commonwealth indebtedness.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are on Proposal No. 3, Printer's No. 24, on today's calendar which is on there for third consideration and the question before the House is, will the Convention agree to advance Proposal No. 3 to final passage.

The Chair now recognizes the Chairman of the Committe on Style and Drafting, Chairman Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, you have certainly been extremely tolerant and long-suffering and this is one case were Xerox failed us. We were sure that these reports would be ready by 2:30, or shortly thereafter, and the schedule has not been met.

Before I give the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting relative to Committee's Proposal No. 3, I would like to request you make two changes in your copy of the committee proposal. These are typographical errors and should be deleted.

The first is on page 3 in line 2. "Average" should not be there. It presently reads, "to exceed the average estimated useful life." "Average" should be deleted.

Then, moving down to line 18 on the same page, the "2" that is just prior to, "Obligation to be repaid" should obviously be "3," so that that "2" on line 18 just before "obligations to be repaid" should quite obviously be "3" and we will make that change and then I think the copy is as it should be.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does the Chair hear any objection to correcting these typographical errors?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. The first error is on line 2 of page 3 where the line presently reads, "a period not to exceed the average estimated useful life." "Average" should be deleted. "Average" should be deleted from that line.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want to add that I see a few of the delegates are looking at the report of the Committee's—

DELEGATE PELLETIER. I am sorry, Committee Proposal 3, Printer's No. 24, and on that page 3, line 2, the word "average" should be deleted. Again, on line 18 the enumeration of "2" should be changed to "3."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May the Chair just ask the question whether your clean copy also contains the same error?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. I believe it does, yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May I suggest we also correct the clean copy. I understand this was a typographical error. Where would that be, Chairman Pelletier? I am advised by the Parliamentarian that the word "average" is on line 11 on page 2 of the clean copy, and the other one is not there, I understand.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. It would be on page 2 of the clean copy, line 11 and on line 22.

COMMITTEE REPORT

COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING RELATIVE TO PROPOSAL No. 3

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, I stand in place and offer the following report.

COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING

519 North Office Building
Harrisburg, Pennsylvania 17106

February 22, 1968

To the Honorable,
The Delegates Assembled,
1967-1968 Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention

RE: Report on State Indebtedness

Mesdames and Sirs:

We are pleased to submit our Report on Committee Proposal Three relating to Commonwealth indebtedness and two auxiliary matters.

Preliminarily, the Committee wishes to acknowledge the personal assistance and cooperation of the Co-Chairmen of the substantive Committee on Taxation and State Finance as the text of this Proposal was examined and edited pursuant to Rule 22.

I. GENERAL

As previously, the Committee on Style and Drafting considered Proposal Three in the manner agreed upon by the Committee and approved by the Convention. In addition to preliminary conferences with the Co-Chairmen and counsel of the substantive Committee, copies of Style and Drafting's edited text were selectively distributed to members of the substantive Committee for comment. The advice of the Co-Directors of the Convention's Research Staff, the Director of the Convention Drafting Bureau, and of the Director of State Constitutional Drafting Studies at Columbia University was solicited and considered prior to approval by the full Committee of the edited text.

We reiterate our goal: to critically consider each proposal referred to this Committee to insure that the proposals finally submitted to the Convention for third consideration are clear, concise, unambiguous, and harmonious in style and manner of expression within the substantive Committee's proposal as amended on second consideration, with other pending substantive proposals, and with the remainder of the Constitution of 1874. To insure constancy in word usage and description in the revised article on taxation and finance, the Committee on Style and Drafting delayed rendering its report on Commonwealth indebtedness until Proposals Four and Five had been referred for consideration.

II. SECTION NUMBERING

Attached as an Exhibit to this narrative is a table showing the manner in which present existing sections in the taxation and finance article of the Constitution of 1874 would be affected by the repealer provisions contained in Proposals Three, Four, and Five of the Committee on Taxation and State Finance and in Proposal Six of the Committee on Local Government, assuming final passage of these proposals by the Convention and approval by the electorate. The Committee's intention, as the column on the right of the Exhibit indicates, is to organize the sections of this article to insure numerical sequence. The Convention should determine either to accept the Committee's recommendation with respect to proposed numbering as shown in the Exhibit and in each of the proposals being reported with respect to the Taxation and State Finance Article or, alternatively, to strike all section numbers in Proposals Three, Four and Five so as to permit the Governor by proclamation to specify the section numbers pursuant to Act No. 180 of August 17, 1965. If the Convention accepts the proposed numbering, the Committee strongly recommends that present existing sections 2 and 3 of Article IX be renumbered sections 5 and 6 respectively, and that present existing section 3 be amended by deleting the word "State" and substituting therefore the word "Commonwealth."

III. SIGNIFICANT CHANGES IN STYLE

1. In consultation with the substantive Committee, this Committee has inserted the descriptor "man-made or natural" and stricken the phrase "or other catastrophe", page one, line 15. This change was necessary to preserve the sense and purpose of the clause.

The Committee is not insensitive to the rationale of the Convention at the time this clause was amended on second consideration by deleting "riot or civil disorder" and inserting the phrase "or other catastrophe." However, this change would have effectively precluded the Commonwealth from incurring indebtedness to rehabilitate any area which might have had the misfortune to endure mob violence which, we understand, was not your intention.

The lexicographers consider disaster and catastrophe to be synonymous, although the latter is deemed to be of a greater order, viz. a "notable disaster." See Webster's International, 3d ed., and 6 Words and Phrases. Two recent Pennsylvania appellate court cases likewise treat the words as being synonymous, differing solely in degree or magnitude, but both involving an "unusual, extraordinary, sudden" or "an unexpected manifestation of the forces of nature." Goldberg v. R. G. Miller, 408 Pa. 7, 8 (1962); Rohr v. Logan, 206 Pa. Super. 232 (1965).

Thus, to accomplish that goal which the Convention obviously seeks, we recommend acceptance of the descriptive phrase "man-made or natural disaster."

2. On page two, line one, the word "State" has been added to the title of Treasurer to conform to present usage as in Article IV, section 1, "The Executive Department."

3. In subsection (2), the two operative clauses have been combined to avoid unnecessary duplication.

4. So that it is quite clear that all three of the officers named in subsection (2) must together undertake to either issue tax anticipation notes or refund debt, the Committee recommends the phrase "acting jointly." (Page 2, line 1).

5. The definition of tax anticipation notes has been further refined to accord with contemporary understanding of that term of art. This refinement is agreeable to both the substantive Committee and the Commonwealth's Counsel General.

6. At the suggestion of the substantive Committee's representatives subsection (3), (lines 8-11, page 2), was moved verbatim to precede what is now subsection (4) to establish a more logical sequence in presentation.

7. In subsection (4) certain changes in style were effected to more precisely state the intention of the Convention and, at lines 22-27, the calculation of debt outstanding was restated to avoid unseemly repetition.

8. The Committee calls the Convention's attention to the insertion of the description "fiscal" at line sixteen, page two. As originally drawn it was unclear whether reference was being made to five calendar or five fiscal years. The Committee has been advised the substantive Committee intended reference to fiscal periods certified by the Auditor General.

9. In subsection (B) (page 3, lines 1-5), this Committee suggested, and the substantive Committee concurred in, a change in language to insure that the maturity of debt incurred for capital projects bears a direct relation to the estimated useful life of the projects and that the General Assembly's determination of this period of useful life, made in the law authorizing the projects, is a final determination. The Committee is of the view that the operation of the financial market place establishes adequate parametres to insure against the possibility, however remote, of an abuse of discretion in the determination of this judgment.

10. The second sentence of subsection (B) (page 3, lines 5-9), required further definition to achieve the sense and purpose of the Convention. The Convention and the substantive Committee obviously did not intend that the Commonwealth should be confined to serial bond issues. Yet the operative language "payable in . . . installments" seemed to limit issues solely to those serial in nature. Thus, so as not to preclude issuance of term obligations with a sinking fund, the operative words "amortized . . . amounts" are recommended.

Secondly, the Convention and substantive Committee desired that certain sums be paid either against the serial issue or into the sinking fund without precluding the Commonwealth, as the market would permit, from having a major final payment or "balloon" at the end of the financing period. Yet the language on second consideration, while requiring periodic payment, would have permitted the incongruity of an initial nominal payment. The Committee, therefore, recommends the language "substantial and regular" to describe the manner in which long-term debt is to be amortized.

To promote exact definition of the term within which the first amortized amount is to be paid against a serial issue or deposited to the sinking fund of a term issue, the Committee has rephrased the description phrase to insure that such payment is made or deposit effected any time after the obligation is assumed but prior to the expiration of a period of time equal to one-tenth the term of the debt. Thus on a 40-year bond, a payment must be made or deposit effected within four years from the date the obligation was issued.

11. The changes in language in subsection (C) were made to more clearly and precisely delimit the three exceptions from the definition of debt in this Proposal.

12. The change effected in subsection (D) is intended to remove unnecessary verbiage.

13. In sections 6 (page 3, line 29) and 9 (page 4, lines 3, 7 and 9), the word "Commonwealth" has been substituted for "state" to conform to common usage in other pending proposals. We again recommend the amendment of existing section 3 to delete "state" and insert "Commonwealth."

14. The nouns (line 2, page 4) were rearranged as a matter of style to conform to their prior use in the same subsection.

15. The description of type "municipalities" in section A (page 4, lines 3-9) were added to identify units of local government now in existence and to protect the Commonwealth from being obliged to assume the debt of any unit of local government which may hereafter be created. The descriptive phrase "any similar general purpose unit of government" as well as the listing of existing units of local government conforms to the usage in Proposal 6 of the Committee on Local Government.

Finally, in this same section 9, the limited number of situations in which the Commonwealth may assume municipal debt has been phrased to conform to those situations in which section 7 of this Committee Proposal 3 permits the Commonwealth to incur debt without limit. The Committee notes, however, that the provision for rehabilitation of areas affected by man-made or natural disaster has been deliberately omitted.

Respectfully submitted,

Committee on Style and Drafting

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair on behalf of all of the delegates thanks the Committee on Style and Drafting for an excellent report.

The question still before the Convention is will the Convention agree to advance Proposal No. 3 to final passage? I want to point out that this is the opportunity to amend, and are we ready for the question?

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

The roll was recorded as follows:

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON THIRD CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to the third consideration of Committee Proposal No. 6, Printer's No. 25, entitled:

A proposal amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania providing for local government in Pennsylvania.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee, Chairman Pelletier.

CHAIRMAN PELLETIER. Mr. President, we have a number of typographical changes that we would like to read, if we may, and we would like to ask that they be put in the proposal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would you like the delegates to have in front of them Proposal No. 6, Printer's No. 25?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. If they will look at that on page 1, line 16, would you delete the comma which would come after amendment;

On page 2, line 3, insert "electors" for "voters;"

The same thing on line 5;

On page 2, line 12, delete "by law."

Page 2, line 13, "electors" again inserted for "voters;"

On page 2, line 21, delete "the general assembly" and insert "by law;"

Delete "determined" and insert: "provided" in line 21;

Page 2, line 25, "provided" for "prescribed;"

Page 2, line 25, delete "general;"

Page 2, line 27, delete "state treasury" and add the "Commonwealth;"

Page 2, line 28, again "provided" for "prescribed."

Page 2 again, line 30, the very beginning of the line, "these officers" instead of "said officers;"

On page 3, line 1, "receiving" instead of "having;"

Again on page 3, line 5, substitute "law" for "the general assembly," that is at the end of the line, it should be "provided by law" rather than "provided by the general assembly;"

Page 3, line 8, delete the comma after municipality;

Page 3, line 9, delete the first comma in the line after "body;"

Page 3, line 25, again for uniformity's sake, "electors" instead of "voters;"

Page 4, line 14, delete "on" at the end of the line so it would be imposed by this section, and then on the next line delete "it" in line 15;

Page 4, line 15, delete "by general law" so that it reads "the general assembly shall prescribe the debt limits;"

Page 4, on line 19, we would like to change it so it would read "the debt limit to be prescribed in every such case," that is, transposing "in every such case" to come after "to be prescribed;"

Page 4, lines 22 and 23, delete "majority vote at a public election" and insert "referendum;"

Line 23, page 4, again, "provided" for "prescribed;"

On line 26 on page 4, delete the second and third commas, the comma after "shall" between "shall" and "have," and the comma between "doing" and "adopt," those commas should be deleted;

On page 5, line 6, insert a comma after "reapportioned before by its governing body;"

Delete the comma after "body" on line 7;

Again on page 7, line 14, "electors" for "voters."

I am sorry, but these changes seem to produce a better conformity of language.

DELEGATE HOOK. On line 15 on page 4, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, Delegate Hook.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, I want to ask one question, and this has to do with page 4, line 15, where the section says "the general assembly shall provide or prescribe"—you want to leave in the word "prescribe"?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Yes; that is intentional.

DELEGATE HOOK. That is what I thought.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Yes.

COMMITTEE REPORT

COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING RELATIVE TO PROPOSAL No. 6

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, I stand in place and read the following report:

COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING

519 North Office Building

February 22, 1968

To the Honorable,
The Delegates Assembled,
1967-68 Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention

Re: Local Government

Mesdames and Sirs:

On behalf of the Committee we are pleased to submit our report on Committee Proposal No. Six relating to Local Government.

This Committee has worked closely with the Co-Chairmen and Counsel of the substantive Committee on Local Government, and we are pleased to report that all the changes in Proposal Six as reported herewith were made with the concurrence of those gentlemen.

The proposed new Article Nine deals comprehensively with the subject of local government, including not only those subjects covered by repealed sections in Articles Eight, Thirteen, Fourteen and Fifteen, but adding new provisions covering home rule charters, residual powers, optional forms of government, intergovernmental cooperation, area government, and initiative and referendum.

We have attempted to adhere closely to the substantive Committee's objectives of providing flexible and forward-looking guidelines for responsible local government in concise, general terms, avoiding the overly specific, unduly restrictive treatment frequently found in other state constitutions.

Following is a summary of the significant changes in drafting effected by this Committee:

I. SIGNIFICANT CHANGES IN STYLE

1. Two steps were taken to clarify Section 2.

The four year provision delaying the self-executing home rule charter rights of a municipality was removed from the section and placed in the schedule, in view of the anticipated long term life of the Article. The sentence on self-executing home rule was re-drafted to clarify the fact that the voters of a municipality or its governing body may place the question of adoption of a home rule charter directly on the ballot or may place a proposed procedure for the framing, adoption, amendment or repeal of a charter on the ballot.

2. Section 7 was clarified to allow for the granting of powers directly to area government, in accordance with what was understood to be the intention of the Committee.

3. The provision as to Local Reapportionment was changed to conform to the style and usage in Proposals Nos. One and Two relating to reapportionment of the Commonwealth. This was done with the approval of the Co-Chairmen of the substantive Committee and of its sub-committee.

4. Section 13 has been placed into the draft rather than merely referred to. This is an identical copy of existing Article 14, Section 8 which relates exclusively to Philadelphia. Two changes were made in cross references. These changes were cleared in advance with Special Counsel for the City of Philadelphia.

5. The definition section was changed in two respects. To clarify the Committee's intent, the phrase "any similar form of government" in the definition of "municipality" was changed to "general purpose unit of government." It was felt that this language better expressed the Committee's intention since the characteristic of municipalities which is common to all is the fact that they are "general purpose." In order to clarify the intention of paragraph 5, the definition of the word "initiative" has been changed to allow for the initiative to take place within an area affected as well as municipality affected. Language stating that no enabling legislation shall be required for initiative was also added at the suggestion of the substantive Committee.

6. The language of the schedule was simplified by sorting out and restating the effective dates of the various provisions. The self-executing home rule was made effective four years after adoption if the General Assembly fails to act within that time.

7. The provisions in Section 4 relating to Optional Form of County Government do not in the opinion of the Committee constitute a total "form of government," and the language of Section 4 has been changed to be in accord with this thought.

8. Minor changes were made in Sections 5, 7 and 8 so as more clearly to state the intention of the substantive Committee.

9. In a number of instances the phrase "as provided by the General Assembly" was changed to read "as provided by law," for the sake of consistency. Additional minor changes in punctuation and wording were made with the concurrence, or at the suggestion, of the representatives from the substantive Committee.

II. PROBLEM AREAS

1. Definition of Procedural Matter. An attempt was made to define the words "procedural matters." After extensive debate and discussion, the suggestion of the Local Government Committee Co-Chairmen, that the word be left for later definition by the courts, was accepted. The argument made was that since the instructions are to the General Assembly which has broad powers in any event, the greatest danger lay in overly restricting the definition. It was felt that the General Assembly could be relied on to act in the best interest of the Commonwealth.

2. The last sentence of the schedule was reviewed and, after discussion with Counsel for the Convention, amended. While the Style and Drafting Committee felt that the sentence should be excluded, they were informed that it had been included on the basis of discussion by the Local Government Committee and Counsel for the Convention; they therefore included the sentence as amended.

Respectfully submitted:

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL
NO. 6

A PROPOSAL

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania, providing for local government in Pennsylvania.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. The Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended by adding a new article to read:

ARTICLE IX
LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Section 1. Local Government.—The General Assembly shall provide by general law for local government within the Commonwealth. Such general law shall be uniform as to all classes of local government regarding procedural matters.

Section 2. Home Rule.—Municipalities shall have the right and power to frame and adopt home rule charters. Adoption, amendment, or repeal of a home rule charter shall be by referendum. THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY SHALL PROVIDE THE PROCEDURE BY WHICH A HOME RULE CHARTER MAY BE FRAMED AND ITS ADOPTION, AMENDMENT OR REPEAL PRESENTED TO THE VOTERS. IF THE GENERAL ASSEM-BLY DOES NOT SO PROVIDE, A HOME RULE CHARTER OR A PROCEDURE FOR FRAMING AND PRESENTING A HOME RULE CHARTER MAY BE PRESENTED TO THE VOTERS BY INITIATIVE OR BY THE GOVERNING BODY OF THE MUNICIPALITY. A municipality WHICH HAS a home rule charter may exercise any power or perform any function not denied by this Constitution, by its home rule charter or by the General Assembly at any time.

Section 3. Optional Plans.—Municipalities shall have the right and power to adopt optional forms of government as provided by LAW. The General Assembly shall provide by law optional forms of government for all municipalities. An optional form of government shall be presented to the voters by initiative, BY the governing body of the municipality, or by the General Assembly. Adoption or repeal of an optional form of government shall be by referendum.

Section 4. County Government.—County officers shall consist of commissioners, controllers or auditors, district attorneys, public defenders, treasurers, sheriffs, registers of wills, RECORDERS of deeds, prothonotaries, clerks of the courts, and such others as may from time to time be PROVIDED by law.

County officers except for public defenders who shall be appointed as shall be determined by the General Assembly, shall be elected at the municipal elections and shall hold their offices for the term of four years, beginning on the first Monday of January next after their election, and until their successors shall be duly qualified; all vacancies shall be filled in such a manner as may be provided by law.

County officers shall be paid only by salary as prescribed by general law for services performed for the county or any other governmental unit. Fees incidental to the conduct of any county office shall be payable directly to the county or State Treasury, or OTHERWISE prescribed by law.

Three county commissioners shall be elected in each county. In the election of said officers each qualified elector shall vote for no more than two persons, and the three persons having the highest number of votes shall be elected.

PROVISIONS FOR county government IN THIS SECTION shall APPLY TO EVERY county EXCEPT A COUNTY which has adopted a home rule charter or an optional form of government. ONE OF THE optional FORMS of county government PROVIDED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY shall INCLUDE THE PROVISIONS OF THIS SECTION.

Section 5. Intergovernmental Cooperation.—A municipality, by act of its governing body, may, or upon being required by initiative and referendum in the area affected shall, cooperate or agree in the exercise of any function, power or responsibility WITH, OR delegated to transfer any function, power, or responsibility to, one or more other governmental units including other municipalities or districts, the Federal government, any other state or its governmental units, or any newly created governmental unit.

Section 6. Area Government.—The General Assembly shall provide for the establishment and dissolution of government of areas involving two or more municipalities or parts thereof.

Section 7. Area-wide Powers.—The General Assembly may grant powers to AREA GOVERNMENTS OR TO municipalities within a given geographical area in which there exists intergovernmental cooperation or area government and designate the classes of municipalities subject to said legislation.

Section 8. Consolidation, Merger or Boundary Change.—Uniform Legislation. The General Assembly shall, within two years following the adoption of this article, enact uniform legislation establishing the procedure for consolidation, merger or change of the boundaries of municipalities.

Initiative. THE VOTERS OF ANY MUNICIPALITY SHALL HAVE THE RIGHT, BY initiative and referendum, to consolidate, merge and change boundaries BY a majority vote of those voting thereon in each municipality, without the approval of ANY governing BODY.

Study. The General Assembly shall designate an agency of the Commonwealth to study consolidation, merger and boundary changes, advise municipalities on all problems which might be connected therewith, and initiate local referendum.

Legislative Power. Nothing herein shall prohibit or prevent the General Assembly from providing additional methods for consolidation, merger OR CHANGE OF BOUNDARIES.

Section 9. Appropriation for Public Purposes.—The General Assembly shall not authorize any municipality or incorporated district to become a stockholder in any company, association or corporation, or to obtain or appropriate money for, or to loan its credit to, any corporation, association, institution or individual. The General Assembly may provide standards by which municipalities or school districts may give financial assistance or lease property to public service, industrial or commercial enterprises if it shall find that such assistance or leasing is necessary to the health, safety or welfare of the Commonwealth or any municipality or school district. Existing authority or any municipality or incorporated district to obtain or appropriate money for, or to loan its credit to, any corporation, association, institution or individual, is preserved.

Section 10. Local Government Debt.—Subject only to the restrictions imposed on it by this section, the General Assembly shall by general law prescribe the debt limits of all units of local government including municipalities and school districts. For such purposes, the debt limit base shall be a percentage of the total revenue, as defined by the General Assembly, of the unit of local government computed over a specific period immediately preceding the year of borrowing. The debt limit in every such case to be prescribed shall exclude all indebtedness (1) for any project to the extent that it is self-liquidating or self-supporting or which has heretofore been defined as self-liquidating or self-supporting, or (2) which has been approved by majority vote at a public election held in such manner as shall be prescribed by law. The provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to the City or County of Philadelphia.

Any unit of local government, including municipalities and school districts, incurring any indebtedness, shall, at or before the time of so doing, adopt a covenant, which shall be binding upon it so long as any such indebtedness shall remain unpaid, to make payments out of its sinking fund or any other of its revenues or funds at such time and in such annual amounts specified in such covenant as shall be sufficient for the payment of the interest thereon and the principal thereof when due.

Section 11. Local REAPPORTIONMENT.—Within the year following THAT IN WHICH THE Federal decennial census IS OFFICIALLY REPORTED AS REQUIRED BY FEDERAL LAW, and at such other times as the governing body of any municipality shall deem necessary, each MUNICIPALITY HAVING A governing body NOT ENTIRELY ELECTED AT LARGE shall BE REAPPORTIONED BY ITS GOVERNING BODY, OR as shall otherwise be provided by uniform law, into districts WHICH shall be COMPOSED OF compact AND contiguous, TERRITORY AS NEARLY equal in population AS PRACTICABLE, FOR THE PURPOSE OF DESCRIBING THE DISTRICTS FOR THOSE NOT ELECTED AT LARGE.

Section 12. Philadelphia Debt.—The debt of the City of Philadelphia may be increased in such amount that the total debt of said city shall not exceed thirteen and one-half per cent of the average of the annual assessed valuations of the taxable realty therein, during the ten years immediately preceding the year in which such increase is made, but said city shall not increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding three per cent upon such average assessed valuation of realty, without the consent of the electors thereof at a public election held in such manner as shall be provided by law.

In ascertaining the debt-incurring capacity of the City of Philadelphia at any time, there shall be deducted from the debt of said city so much of such debt as shall have been incurred, or is about to be incurred, and the proceeds thereof expended, or about to be expended, upon any public improvement, or in construction, purchase or condemnation of any public utility, or part thereof, or facility therefor, if such public improvement or public utility, or part thereof, or facility therefor, whether separately, or in connection with any other public improvement or public utility, or part thereof, or facility therefor, may reasonably be expected to yield revenue in excess of operating expenses sufficient to pay the interest and sinking fund charges thereon. The method of determining such amount, so to be deducted, shall be as now prescribed, or which may hereafter be prescribed by LAW.

In incurring indebtedness for any purpose the City of Philadelphia may issue its obligations maturing not later than fifty years from the date thereof, with provision for a sinking fund to be in equal or graded annual or other periodical installments. Where any indebtedness shall be or shall have been incurred by said City of Philadelphia for the purpose of the construction or improvement of public works or utilities of any character, from which income or revenue is to be derived by said city, or for the reclamation of land to be used in the construction of wharves or docks owned or to be owned by said city, such obligations may be in an amount sufficient to provide for, and may include the amount of the interest and sinking fund charges accruing and which may accrue thereon throughout the period of construction, and until the expiration of one year after the completion of the work for which said indebtedness shall have been incurred.

No debt shall be incurred by, or on behalf of, the County of Philadelphia.

Section 13. ABOLITION OF COUNTY OFFICES IN PHILADELPHIA.—(1) IN PHILADELPHIA ALL COUNTY OFFICES ARE HEREBY ABOLISHED, AND THE CITY SHALL HENCEFORTH PERFORM ALL FUNCTIONS OF COUNTY GOVERNMENT WITHIN ITS AREA THROUGH OFFICERS SELECTED IN SUCH MANNER AS MAY BE PROVIDED BY LAW.

(2) LOCAL AND SPECIAL LAWS, REGULATING THE AFFAIRS OF THE CITY OF PHILADELPHIA AND CREATING OFFICES OR PRESCRIBING THE POWERS AND DUTIES OF OFFICERS OF THE CITY OF PHILADELPHIA, SHALL BE VALID NOTWITHSTANDING THE PROVISIONS OF SECTION THIRTY-TWO OF ARTICLE III OF THIS CONSTITUTION.

(3) ALL LAWS APPLICABLE TO THE COUNTY OF PHILADELPHIA SHALL APPLY TO THE CITY OF PHILADELPHIA.

(4) THE CITY OF PHILADELPHIA SHALL HAVE, ASSUME AND TAKE OVER ALL POWERS, PROPERTY, OBLIGATIONS AND INDEBTEDNESS OF THE COUNTY OF PHILADELPHIA.

(5) THE PROVISIONS OF SECTION TWO OF THIS ARTICLE SHALL APPLY WITH FULL FORCE AND EFFECT TO THE FUNCTIONS OF THE COUNTY GOVERNMENT HEREAFTER TO BE PERFORMED BY THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

(6) UPON ADOPTION OF THIS AMENDMENT ALL COUNTY OFFICERS SHALL BECOME OFFICERS OF THE CITY OF PHILADELPHIA, AND UNTIL THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY SHALL OTHERWISE PROVIDE, SHALL CONTINUE TO PERFORM THEIR DUTIES AND BE ELECTED, APPOINTED, COMPENSATED AND ORGANIZED IN SUCH MANNER AS MAY BE PROVIDED BY THE PROVISIONS OF THE CONSTITUTION AND THE LAWS OF THE COMMONWEALTH IN EFFECT AT THE TIME THIS AMENDMENT BECOMES EFFECTIVE, BUT SUCH OFFICERS SERVING WHEN THIS AMENDMENT BECOMES EFFECTIVE SHALL BE PERMITTED TO COMPLETE THEIR TERMS.

Section 14. Definitions.—As used in this article, the following words shall have the following meanings:

"Municipality" means a county, city, borough, incorporated town or township or any similar GENERAL PURPOSE UNIT of government which shall hereafter be created by the General Assembly.

"Initiative" means the filing with the applicable election officials at least ninety days prior to the next primary or general election of a petition containing a proposal for referendum signed by electors comprising five per cent of the number of voters voting for the office of Governor in the last gubernatorial general election in each municipality OR AREA affected. The applicable election offical shall place the proposal on the ballot in a manner fairly representing the content of the petition for decision by referendum at said election. Initiative on a similar question shall not be submitted more often than once in five years. NO ENABLING LAW SHALL BE REQUIRED FOR INITIATIVE.

"Referendum" means approval of a question placed on the ballot, by initiative or otherwise, by a majority vote of the electors voting thereon.

Section 2. Sections seven, eight, ten, fifteen and nineteen of article eight; section one of article thirteen; sections one, two, three, four, five, six, seven AND EIGHT of article fourteen and sections one, two, three, four, and five OF article fifteen are repealed.

Section 3. THIS NEW ARTICLE AND THE REPEAL OF EXISTING SECTIONS SHALL TAKE EFFECT ON THE DATE OF APPROVAL BY THE ELECTORATE, EXCEPT THAT THE FOLLOWING SECTIONS SHALL TAKE EFFECT ON THE EFFECTIVE DATE OF LEGISLATION ADOPTED PURSUANT TO THE SECTIONS OR THE DATE INDICATED BELOW, WHICHEVER SHALL FIRST OCCUR.

THE FIRST, THIRD AND FOURTH PARAGRAPHS OF SECTION EIGHT SHALL TAKE EFFECT TWO YEARS AFTER THE EFFECTIVE DATE. THE SECOND SENTENCE OF SECTION ONE, THE FOURTH SENTENCE OF SECTION TWO, ALL OF SECTION THREE, THE THIRD PARAGRAPH OF SECTION FOUR, AND THE FIRST PARAGRAPH OF SECTION TEN SHALL TAKE EFFECT FOUR YEARS AFTER THE EFFECTIVE DATE. The second sentence of section one and the first paragraph of section eight on Uniform Legislation shall be construed SO AS TO BE CONSISTENT WITH the jurisdiction of this Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think I express the feeling of the fellow delegates when I say we thank the Committee on Style and Drafting for coming through with their report.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

MOTION FOR CONSENT TO OFFER AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 6

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Croop.

DELEGATE CROOP. Mr. President, I hate at this late hour to take up your time, but I have had an amendment which has been prepared and been in our possession for some hours waiting for this report to come in. This is not a long or, I believe, a controversial proposal. The reason I take your time to explain it is because I realize I need a majority vote here for you to consider it.

This proposal merely specifies the manner in which public defenders will be selected in counties under 100,000 population and differs from the mandated public defenders in that area.

As it is now written, these county officers are mandated in every county in the Commonwealth, and so this is the proposal that I want to present to make it optional in counties having a population of 100,000 or less.

I ask your permission to present my amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The body understands that the delegate must obtain the consent of a majority of the delegates present.

On the motion,

Will the Convention agree to the motion?

CROOP AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 6

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Croop.

DELEGATE CROOP. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 6.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE CROOP offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 4), page 2, line 19, by inserting after "law.": In counties having a population of one hundred thousand or less, the need for the office of public defender shall be determined by majority vote of the county commissioners and judges.

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 4), page 2, line 20, by inserting after "defenders": in counties having a population of greater than one hundred thousand

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 4), page 2, line 21, by inserting after "Assembly,": and except for public defenders in counties having a population of one hundred thousand or less, who shall be elected by majority vote of the county commissioners and judges,

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

DELEGATE CROOP. Mr. President, I want to thank the delegate body for giving me this consideration, because I believe this to be a very important matter so far as the people are concerned and those we look to for the ratification of what we do here in the past 90 days.

My amendment to the constitutional article as now before the House provides as follows:

In counties having a population of 100,000, or less, the need for the office of public defender shall be determined by a majority vote of the county commissioners and judges.

Now, my explanation for that is that there are a number of counties that have even less than three attorneys in them.

Some of them have two and some have one. That respective attorney is the district attorney, and there is no one even to fill this office. So there certainly would be no mandated need there.

If the need should ever occur in the future, I feel that this language provides the means where on a local level the county commissioners, in conjunction with and acting as a unit board, could decide this problem and handle it very well.

This is the main stress of my amendment, so that it is not a constitutional mandated county office. As a matter of fact, I was rather surprised when this office of public defender became a constitutional mandated office. I feel that it has had not only much too much glory added to it, but much too much expense added to the taxpayers. Certainly, in our little rural counties and those under this population, I feel the amendment has a just place and should be considered favorably.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes a Chairman of the Local Government Committee, Chairman Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, this particular amendment still constitutes the office of public defender, but only merely defines it further as to who is to have it and under what conditions. So, therefore, we still have the office of public defender in the Constitution.

I would like to remind the delegates that this particular office of public defender was not a committee recommendation, but it was an amendment presented to this floor by a delegate. It was defeated as an elective office. It was reinserted as a further amendment to be as prescribed by the General Assembly.

Now, it seems to me if we are going to have public defenders—and this body voted to have them—I would much rather have them in the broader sense as provided by law, because the General Assembly could then lay down various types of laws as to how much time a public defender could serve, what his salary should be by counties, and we should not have the mish-mash that we would have in here by determining whether the county commissioners should determine it or the General Assembly.

It would seem to me that the broad interpretation which was originally passed by this Convention, as provided by law, would suit it better in the Constitution than this particular amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Chairman Manderino.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. Mr. President, may I make a statement on this? I should like to ask the delegates to reject this amendment. The purpose of the amendment, again, I think is one that is a good objective, but I should like to point out several things.

One, throughout the entire local government article we have tried to inject a philosophy that a Constitution guarantees rights to people equally and, if you have a problem of a given right, then it exists in every square foot of the Commonwealth.

As my co-chairman mentioned, the public defender was not originally a committee recommendation, but the body did adopt the public defender on the philosophy enunciated that in every place in the Commonwealth at some point someone in poverty or destitute might have need of a public defender.

In some counties this is true, it might be just once a year. This does not mandate, as with other County offices, that it should be a full-time office. The General Assembly might designate a system where a man is paid $200 to be a public defender in a given county. The General Assembly might also mandate or pass by law that the appointment of the public defender would be by local officials.

When this amendment was first proposed, that discussion took place with the proposers and it was left open and broad deliberately by the Convention and determined by the Convention for that purpose.

We feel that we would be saying in the Constitution that in certain areas there is a basic right certain people have for a public defender, but in other places they do not. This does not mean that small counties have to have a full-time public defender. It does not mean that a defender who is available. If there are no cases in a given It simply says that there shall be provided a public defender who is available. If there are no cases in a given county, then there is nothing for the public defender to do.

I should like to reiterate that if there is a basic right given in the Constitution because people need it—in some places it may be needed 24 hours a day and other places just one day every month—it is still a basic right and I would like to suggest that if it is needed and is a basic right of the indigent who are accused of crime all over the Commonwealth, it should be every place in the Commonwealth.

It is flexible enough that we think that the General Assembly can take care of your extremely rural areas by the way the amendment was drafted. We had many proposals in committee—whether it was home rule, or optional forms, or what it was—to put population limitations. We did not wish to discriminate anywhere with population because we thought that that gets into a legislative matter rather than a constitutional matter, and anything that goes into a Constitution should be a kind of right that should not be limited as to population.

Therefore, we should like to ask that the amendment not be accepted, even though I have no disagreement with the purpose of it. The objective can be achieved very easily through the General Assembly. I am sure that that body will certainly take into consideration the various differing needs of the government throughout other parts of the Commonwealth.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will now recognize Delegate Orbin.

DELEGATE ORBIN. Mr. President, I would like to direct an interrogation to Delegate Croop.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, I am sure he will stand for interrogation. Proceed with your question.

DELEGATE ORBIN. Delegate Croop, you provide for a majority vote of the county commissioners and judges. What happens in the counties where you have one judge or where you have three judges and the number is equal and there is a tie?

DELEGATE CROOP. This would be a matter that they would have to dispose of. I am merely creating a fictitious board comprised of either—probably the more correct English should have been "judge, or judges," but I think when we use the broad term we are looking into the future. The county that might now have one judge could have two in the future, and then it would be this board of county commissioners and judge, or judges. Whichever way, if they had a tie vote, they would have to decide.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, if I were to interpret the modification in Section 4 of this language, "And such others as may from time to time be provided by law," as to also modify sheriffs, bailiffs and county commissioners, then I must come to the conclusion—and I hope Delegate Pasquerilla is listening to me—that the Legislature has the right to set up these offices, or not.

But I do not think at all that his interpretation is correct in modification. I believe that the General Assembly, insofar as this particular section is concerned, has no right to designate these offices unless there are such others as may be provided by law.

If my interpretation of this linguistic situation is correct, then, certainly, we are mandating public defenders as constitutional offices willy-nilly, and I need some clarification as to this problem.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Chairman Pasquerilla, go ahead.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, this body by a vote already mandated public defenders as a constitutional office as prescribed by law. The question before us now is to take it out in certain areas but still have it as a constitutional office in counties having a population greater than 100,000. We have just discriminated against counties.

As to your answer, Senator, the body here voted once before, not a committee report, but by an amendment process and we already created the office of public defender to be provided by law. Delegate Croop's amendment does not eliminate the office of public defender.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. The question which I directed was as to the modification as was explained to the delegates. I believe I am correct as far as the modification of that language in that section is concerned. I feel quite sure that such other offices as provided by law is a modification of such other offices and not the public defenders in that section.

If that is true—and I believe I am correct with my knowledge of English construction—I would go to the next paragraph, which says something else. It says, "county officers except for public defenders who shall be appointed as shall be determined by the General Assembly, . . . as may be provided by law."

Then we have an inconsistency, in one place we set up a constitutional office; in the next place we say the General Assembly shall provide for it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Manderino.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. I think the first paragraph of that section mandates the offices and it mandates, according to the amendment passed, a public defender.

Then, the second paragraph mandates election of all the mandated offices except for one. In that mandated office, the public defender, the amendment that was passed provided that that mandated office would be appointive, as provided by law. The interpretation that I would have would be that it is now mandated, a public defender throughout the Commonwealth, and it is not an elective office, but an appointed office, and the General Assembly shall determine how that appointment is to be made.

It could be made as of this amendment now by commissioners or judges, depending upon what the General Assembly determined, as to the appointment.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, in response to Delegate Manderino, he has stated my interpretation for modification. I think that is correct so far as that section is concerned.

Then we go into the next paragraph. Mr. President, I direct this interrogation to the gentleman. In the next paragraph we would not have public defenders in any other counties, as I understand this, unless the General Assembly sets it up for that particular county. Am I now correct?

DELEGATE MANDERINO. As I would read that, there is a public defender mandated, but it is left to the General Assembly as to how that officer is to be appointed. The General Assembly determines how the public defender is to be appointed.

In other words, they might pass a law saying that a county shall appoint a public defender by vote of the commissioners, as this amendment says, or it could be appointed by some other system.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, I am slightly confused, I must admit. I have my first point clarified. Now, I am satisfied in the language there. But in the second, I now must come to a conclusion, I believe, from the response of Delegate Manderino that we do have a public defender in all our counties mandated as a constitutional office.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. Yes.

DELEGATE STROUP. Then I must conclude, going so far as to provide for public defenders, the Legislature must pass laws in order to make that possible, is that correct?

DELEGATE MANDERINO. Yes. There is enabling legislation necessary in order to determine the method of appointment. That is correct.

DELEGATE STROUP. One more question, what is the schedule which imposes upon the General Assembly the time element when this must be done?

DELEGATE MANDERINO. There is no time element.

DELEGATE STROUP. I have clarified the situation, at least, in my own mind. I thank the gentleman.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Thomson.

DELEGATE THOMSON. Mr. President, I happen to be a member of the committee that formulated this whole program. I know the care that was put into it, the time that was put into it, and the amendment that was proposed for the public defender.

The amendment was put in, of course, to provide for uniformity. Originally, the public defender was on a uniform basis. This amendment is going to destroy completely the policy of uniformity in this particular constitutional office. I think that that is a basic mistake in policy for us to even consider.

The second point I want to make is that this is purely a legislative matter when you get into percentages and figures as to who shall and who shall not have these powers. It is purely legislative, and, to my knowledge, always has been.

I want to just call attention to another matter, that is the matter of expediting the program of this Convention. I believe this would certainly delay this very important article for at least a day. I urge a "no" vote on this particular amendment.

I am not against public defenders, not in the least, but I think the implementation of the constitutional article, as developed in the discussion between the Chairmen, shows that this is a legislative matter and that this particular amendment should be defeated.

AMENDMENT WITHDRAWN

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Croop, I want to point out to you that you can speak twice on an amendment, and I do not want you to lose your closing. Of course, if they ask you a question, you may answer it.

DELEGATE CROOP. I may save your time. I wish to withdraw my amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will consider the amendment withdrawn.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gerber. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE GERBER. I rise for a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE GERBER. On Page 7, line 16, I note two words, "or area" has been inserted by Style and Drafting.

Will you please clear up, in my mind, at any rate, what effect you think these two words have on the meaning as the committee originally presented the proposal? I understood it then, and right now it seems to me rather ambiguous.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. I think the answer to that, Style and Drafting did insert those words because throughout the proposal where we speak of referendum, we referred to the vote in the municipality but there was one place where we referred to the area affected, I believe, in Section 5, if I am not mistaken, where it speaks of—maybe I have the wrong section, wait until I check this a moment—yes, at the end of the second line in Section 5 we speak "in the area affected." Therefore, they felt there would be confusion on referendum if it did not state in each municipality or the area affected, so that if it is a matter that concerns the whole municipality the referendum would be there, but if it were a situation involving an area, then it would come under the "or" clause.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BARRON. I rise for a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BARRON. One brief question to either the Committee on Local Government or the Committee on Style and Drafting.

Page 4, line 15, the words "by general law" were deleted.

As I am sure we are all by this time well aware, the concept of the general law has a precise meaning in Pennsylvania history. Do I understand from the Committee on Style and Drafting that you feel that the words all units of local government and including municipalities and school districts makes it, by general law, unnecessary, so that there would be a blanket coverage by a general law of the proposition of debt limits?

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. No, we did not take that out.

DELEGATE BARRON. Style and Drafting took that out?

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. He is talking about Section 10, line 17 and line 18.

DELEGATE BARRON. Line 15. Local government left it in.

Knowing the dean of the law school was on it, I have great respect for his learning and ability.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. In line 15 it was taken out. Style and Drafting, not only in this article, but in other articles feels—and I agree with them—that "by law" has no different meaning than "by general law," and even if you do not mention that the General Assembly shall prescribe, it means law and it is governed by other sections of the Constitution.

No substantive change was intended. That is Style and Drafting's approach throughout all the articles.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

REFERRAL TO COMMITTEE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. This proposal is passed and is referred to Committee on Arrangment, Submission and Address To The People.

I, frankly, would like to thank all the delegates for having stayed to accomplish a very noble purpose and the Chair recognizes Chairman Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, I was going to say the same thing. The Committee on Style and Drafting thanks the delegates for their patience this afternoon and may I ask the Committee members to meet with us down here when we adjourn.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I rise for a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, I rise to a point of personal privilege.

We of the Convention have often recognized guests and visitors in our midst. It has not been customary to mention those who have served with us as staff, for we have, perhaps, assumed their jobs were well compensated. It is not in all cases true. Some of our loyal staff have risen far above and beyond the mere requirements of their responsibilities. It is my intention at this time to formally express upon the record the sincere appreciation of not only myself, but that of the Local Government Committee for one who has provided such service. It has been our happy experience to have as counsel to our committee Abe Fromkin. He has spared none of his great capabilities in time and talents to aid us in our tasks.

My own meager vocabulary is surely inadequate to fully detail the superlative quality and quantity of his work, nor can I find sufficient words to express the warm comradeship he has established with our membership.

Therefore, at this time I wish to sincerely and simply express before this body and on the record of this Convention my own, and on behalf of the membership of the Local Government Committee:

Thank you, Abe, for a job well done.

RECOGNITION OF PAGES

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Henderson.

DELEGATE HENDERSON. Let us not forget the young ladies and young men who have served as pages during this hectic week.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am happy you called it to my attention and, before we vote on the adjournment resolution, the Chair has been very fortunate to have with it each week a group of students serving as honest pages. They are outstanding young men and young women in their respective schools and have been selected by their principals.

I would like to introduce them to you and ask them to rise as I call their names. When I have introduced all of them, let us show our appreciation by giving them a fine round of applause. We appreciate very much their contribution.

The students are:

Joseph Seibert,

Sheila Stover, from Columbia High School, Columbia,

Joseph Eckert,

John Fedora, from Stevens Trade School, Lancaster,

Dave Kent, from Shippensburg Sr. High School, Shippensburg,

Gerald Stoner and Louise Hopper, from Bermudian Springs High School at York Springs,

Tom Stucky, from Newport High School, Newport,

Robert Shiffer, from Millersburg High School, Millersburg,

Richard Bitting, from Halifax High School, Halifax,

Donna Lerew and Tom Corse, from Susquehannock High School at Glen Rock, Lester Abel and Gail Buzby, from Hershey High School, Hershey, and Roger Kelly, from Carlisle High School, Carlisle.

ADJOURNMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. President, I move that this Convention do now adjourn until Monday, February 26, 1968, at 1:30 p.m., e.s.t.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Braham, seconded by Delegate Henderson, that this Convention do now adjourn until Monday, February 26, 1968, at 1:30 p.m., e.s.t.

The motion was agreed to and (at 5:35 p.m., e.s.t.) the Convention was adjourned.

PENNSYLVANIA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION 1967-1968

JOURNAL

Volume 1 Monday, February 26, 1968 Number 51

The Convention was called to order at 1:30 p.m., e.s.t.

THE PRESIDENT (Raymond J. Broderick) IN THE CHAIR

PRAYER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Our session today will be opened with prayer, and today we have with us as Chaplain, the Rev. John Hanks of the Salem Evangelical Lutheran Church, Belmont, Pennsylvania.

Please rise.

REV. HANKS. Let us pray.

Eternal and Ever Blessed Lord, Creator and Ruler of man and his destiny: We bow in recognition of the Power that hath made us, and surrounded us with the potentials of the age in which we live. We say with the Psalmist of old, "If I ascend on the wings of the dove, Thou are there, if I make my bed in Sheol, behold Thou art there."

Truly we recognize Thy presence in our midst for without Thee we lack wisdom, we falter in our judgments, and fail in our best efforts. We invoke Thy guidance upon us this day. Unto us has been committed weighty tasks, proper choices, fields of leadership, as we seek for our blessed Commonwealth, the principles of sound reason and worthwhile purpose. Make us ever cognizant of the task before us, and may our choices be in accord with the principles of honesty, integrity, and truth. In Thy Great Name we ask it. Amen.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Please remain standing for the Pledge of Allegiance.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE TO THE FLAG

The Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag was recited by the Convention, led by Delegate Redick.

APPROVAL OF JOURNALS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. There are no Journals to be approved this morning.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes the Secretary, Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, I want to submit the following requests for leaves of absence:

The delegate from the 44th District, HENRY P. OTTO, for February 26, 1968;

The delegate from the 42nd District, THOMAS L. FAGAN, for February 26, 1968;

The delegate from the 32nd District, LOUIS L. MANDERINO, for February 26, 1968.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you, Secretary Michener.

Is there any objection to the leaves of absence?

The Chair hears none, and the leaves are granted.

TWENTIETH DISTRICT VISITORS WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Wilmarth.

DELEGATE WILMARTH. Mr. President, it is with a great deal of pleasure that I would like to introduce three guests from the 20th Senatorial District. These three women are extremely active in community affairs and it is with a great deal of pleasure that I introduce Mrs. Jack Masters, Mrs. Arlan Brown and Mrs. Shirlee Granger.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If we can please have our guests stand, we will give them our usual cordial greeting.

WIFE AND GUEST OF DELEGATE BRAHAM WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. While we are making introductions, I have been advised that we have with us today, the wife of one of our delegates, Delegate Walter Braham. His wife is here with a guest, Mrs. George S. Call of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and I would like them to stand so we can give them our greeting.

We are very happy to have you with us.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER OF DELEGATE BENEDICT WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Also, I have been advised that another delegate has her guests here today, both her mother and her daughter and I am speaking of Delegate Benedict and Mrs. Elsie Graham Praul, her mother, and Mrs. James Monteith, her daughter. Would they like to stand so we can recognize them?

QUORUM CALL

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will now call the roll for the purpose of determining a quorum. The delegates will please record their presence by voting "aye."

The roll was recorded as follows:

CALENDAR

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON SECOND CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to the second consideration of Committee Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 26, entitled:

A Proposal repealing article five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania relating to the Judiciary and adding a new Judiciary article.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are going to continue our discussion in connection with Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 26.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, I am sure I do not have to remind my fellow delegates that virtually all of us have made tremendous sacrifices over the last three months here at this Convention. I do not believe that there is a single one of us who would like to see what this Convention recommends defeated at the polls. We have all worked hard and I believe we have produced proposals of which we can all be very proud, particularly in my opinion, with regard to the Judiciary Article.

Unfortunately, a great many of the advantages and innovations in reforms have been ignored by a lot of people, particularly the press, and they have been focusing attention on one of the things we have not done which in their opinion should have been done and the opinion of many of us should not have been done.

However, we now have on the table of this Convention a motion for an amendment which is virtually identical to an amendment which I offered to this Convention last Wednesday. This amendment in my opinion is not the best that I would like to see, but certainly it is better than what existed before and certainly it is far better than having what product this Convention proposes to the people defeated at the polls.

I want to assure and insure everyone that in proposing the original amendment and in working with the people who helped to pass it, I, personally, and none of those who are working with me to my knowledge, had any political ambitions at all, nor were we given any promises of anything, nor have I been given any promises to say what I am about to say here by anyone. This is something which I decided over the weekend after a long and serious period of soul searching. It is something which I in my own conscience feel must be done, because I do not want to see this Convention a failure.

I think we have in our power to make today a dramatic demonstration to the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania what we need, and want, and perhaps even more important, that we deserve their support. In the Judiciary Article, we have put in a unified Judicial System. We have put in reforms for justices of the peace. We have put in merit retention and we put in the option to adopt a Community Court throughout the Commonwealth.

We have done a great many good and important things that we cannot, we must not risk and as much as I would not like, if I had the choice in a vacuum, to compromise the position which I have been advocating with regard to selection of statewide judges, I am willing to make that compromise in order to insure that the product of this Convention will receive the overwhelming support of all of the people of this Commonwealth.

I hope and I trust that this is the last principle important issue to come before this Convention. I hope and I trust this will be the last amendment offered to the Judiciary Article, and that if we take this amendment off the table and if we pass it and if we make this dramatic demonstration to the people that we are motivated primarilly, principally, solely not for our own personal self interest but for the best interest of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, that our message will be received, that the people will know that the delegates here have been working hard for all of the people and not for themselves, and the press I believe will know that we seriously intend to produce the very best for all of the people.

STOUT AMENDMENT TAKEN FROM THE TABLE

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, I move that the Stout amendment be taken from the table.

On the motion,

Will the Convention agree to the motion?

STOUT AMENDMENT

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the Stout amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes the proposer of the amendment, Delegate Stout.

DELEGATE STOUT. Mr. President, due to a serious physical occurrence over the weekend I would like to ask to be excused from actively participating in the discussion and turn the matter, for the moment, over to Governor Scranton.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I did not know Delegate Stout was going to ask me to say anything. I think everyone knows precisely how I feel about this. I feel very strongly, from the standpoint of the Convention as a whole, that it would be very important to do this. It gives an alternative arrangement on the part of the Governor. It is, in my opinion, a step forward for Pennsylvania.

I think in view of the thinking on the part of the media, particularly in the State, it would end the Convention on a note which would mean their support in putting across all the many fine things that we have done in this Convention, instead of the accentuation of the things that have, in their opinion, not been good.

We had some splendid items as a result of this Convention. The Local Government provision is, as we all know, not only excellent, it is extraordinarily good.

We have done some fine things in the set up of the arrangement for Apportionment, particularly with the Commission.

We have made much progress for Pennsylvania in the taxation field, in the unified judicial system and in the complete reform of the magistrate and justice of the peace system.

I think, if this will give us—which, apparently, it will—the support of a great many of the media to put this Convention's efforts across to the people, it is very well worthwhile from that standpoint.

Furthermore, from the standpoint of operation of the selection of statewide judges, it makes it possible for the Governor to have an alternative arrangement, which would make it the burden of him, which, in essence, it is, any time that a Governor makes an appointment of a statewide judge, the criticism or, indeed, any kind of commendation—which they rarely get—comes to him. It is, therefore, important for him to realize that whichever method he uses, that he select good judges. If either method works out so that he does not, he will be condemned for so doing. Perhaps this is the proper way to have it be. The Governor is responsible for the appointments and he is either lauded or criticized for what he does.

Therefore, in the alternative, he has two methods.

If one method turns out to have the results that he has made unfortunate choices, then that other method can be used.

I say to you that I think this would be not only a step forward for the state but a step forward in method but, likewise, a tremendous benefit to putting across in the State as a whole the many fine things that the various committees and the Convention, as a whole, has done here in the last three months.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Scott.

DELEGATE SCOTT. Mr. President, I have taken very little of your time on this Convention floor but I wish to say a few words about this amendment for two or three minutes.

I am not a lawyer. I am not a member of the Judiciary Committee. I am not an expert on the subject of judicial selection. I am a politician and the mayor of one of our Pennsylvania cities, and I am proud of being both, but I know in my heart that judges should not be politicians or be subject to political pressures.

The method of selection for our statewide courts now in Proposal No. 7 can subject the judges of our highest courts to such pressures, and even if such pressure would not be exerted, it could appear to be there. We owe it to the people of Pennsylvania to remove, as far as possible, even the appearance of political pressures.

Delegate Stout's proposal is not perfect but it is a step in the right direction. It will give the Governor of Pennsylvania an opportunity to adopt what many States have found to be as nearly a non-political method of selection as possible. I am supporting this amendment because I believe that good government is good politics and this amendment is in the interest of good government.

I urge all my fellow delegates to support it. Be not wary in well-doing, ladies and gentlemen.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Barry.

DELEGATE BARRY. Mr. President, I would like to interrogate Governor Scranton or one of the proponents of the proposal, please.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Scranton, it has been requested that you stand for interrogation in connection with this proposal by Delegate Barry.

Will the gentleman permit himself to be interrogated?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I shall, Mr. President.

DELEGATE BARRY. Mr. President, this proposal calls for standard terms of seven years each to members of this Commission. Does that mean that the terms would carry over into the succeeding Governor's term?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Well, it would, unless the Governor succeeds himself. As you know, under the amendment which we passed last spring, a Governor—not Governor Shafer—but anybody who follows him can run for a second term.

DELEGATE BARRY. Mr. President, in the event he does not succeed himself or at least during his second term, and for that Governor who does not succeed himself, he would come on with the same six members of this Commission already appointed?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. That is right.

DELEGATE BARRY. Mr. President, he would have no control over it?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. That is correct.

DELEGATE BARRY. Do you not think that is a serious disadvantage to this type of Commission as proposed?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. No. Because, as you know, the experience that they had with them in the other states have clearly indicated in most cases that as this type of Commission gets going, it becomes more and more nonpolitical. I feel very strongly that this would be the case in Pennsylvania, too, and I may say this is one of the reasons why I advocated it.

DELEGATE BARRY. But the Governor would arrive at the same decision without the method of the selection of at least six of the people.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. That is correct.

I do not think governors should have complete control of the Commission. In fact, I do not think that is what they are intended for. They are to be independent people to decide for themselves as to the caliber of the persons that might be selected and then to present a list to the Governor.

In his true mind, and nobody denies this, under the system that we have established, there would be a list of ten to twenty names, and if the governor chooses this method of selection it would be a list of ten to twenty names from which he would select, and it is highly likely that if there is a person of very high caliber in which he would be interested in appointing him, he might easily select one of them in the ten to twenty names. I do not deny that. This happened before.

DELEGATE BARRY. The other question I want to ask concerned the statement, I think both by Delegate Scranton and Delegate Kauffman, that there are a lot of groups that this proposal would tend to get up in an election year for a Judicial Article, and for the other articles before the Convention. What groups is the delegate referring to?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I did not mention any groups, Mr. President.

Let me be perfectly blunt about this: I think that everybody who has read the newspapers or listened to the radio or television across the State, generally—this is not true of every newspaper or every radio station or every television station, but they have been criticizing the Convention primarily on two things.

One is on the set number of members of the Legislature which we have agreed to, 50 and 203.

The other is on the lack of the Convention's agreement concerning the merit selection of judges on any basis.

Now, you know as well as I do that we turned this down as an option locally, so that all local judges will be elected. The only question which has been tremendously debated here is on the statewide basis. I feel very strongly that we would get their support. I think they have been slightly unfair about this—if you want an honest answer—to select two of the things to particularly condemn that which the Convention has or has not done. Nevertheless, they have done this very, very strongly, and in my opinion, giving an alternative arrangement to the Governor for statewide judges only is comparatively little to obtain in particular, and I feel it is a good alternative to get the support of the media, which are very important to us in putting over a great many things. Yes, there are other groups, but I never worry about any kind of special interests. All I am interested in is getting the whole effort of the Convention across to the people.

DELEGATE BARRY. Mr. President, are there any particular groups that the gentleman thinks should be placated by this amendment?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. No. I am not interested in placating anyone, Mr. President.

I do not think that if we are opposed to something, if we should stand for it just to placate a group, this never has appealed to me any more than it would anybody else, but I think we have a reasonable arrangement here. Let me answer you this way, too: You know that there are a great many people in this Convention who feel that judges on a local level should be elected. When you get the Statewide basis, we would generally break it down into three parts. We had some who thought they ought to be elected. We had some who thought they ought to be chosen by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate. We had some that thought the selection by a panel basis was the right way to do it.

Now, we will have, it seems to me, heavy support of the Convention as a whole, if we have this alternative; because they are going to be elected locally, which is of paramount importance to those who want election of judges on a statewide basis. If this is approved, we would have two other alternatives, and therefore, we would be leaving the Convention, I think, with a very fine feeling that the three major groups in it all had a part in this particular field.

DELEGATE BARRY. Frankly, though, Mr. President, I cannot see why the adoption of this proposal will suddenly give overwhelming support within certain groups to the Convention that was not there before.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I do not think that I or anybody else, at least I did not ever say that we should be concerned about certain groups, Mr. President. I am not worried about certain groups. I do feel that we have within the Convention a three-part type feeling about this. All of them will now be involved in one way or another, which is important, so we have very strong unanimity of opinion within the Convention itself. Secondly, Mr. President, I think it would help us a great deal with media, particularly in the State to get support for a great many things that have been done right by this Convention that at the present moment they are not even talking about.

DELEGATE BARRY. You know, of course, Mr. President, that the Pittsburgh Press has come out against the so-called merit plan very wholeheartedly.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Yes, sir, I do, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Strickler.

DELEGATE STRICKLER. Mr. President, I rise in hearty support of this amendment.

I think that this Convention has done well through its Judicial Committee so far to give us a very good Judicial Article. In my opinion, it is not good enough now, and I think that if we pass this amendment, and complete this article, we will have a very good Judicial Article. I have been quite concerned since the provision of the Article, as it now stands, provides for the appointment of statewide judges by the Governor with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate.

I have been in State Government in many ways, and I just cannot see how in the world a very successful appointment of judges—we are going to have a lot to appoint—are going to occur on time and with fairness to the individuals concerned and also, without having an unusual amount of political maneuvering in connection with it. I think that this Commonwealth is ready for some kind of reform in the matter of selection of statewide judges, and I think this panel system in the alternative will get very fine support throughout the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. I have not heard a great deal from the citizens of Pennsylvania about support for this Judicial Article in connection with statewide judges, on the appointment, as it now stands, and therefore, I think we would make a great mistake if we do not go now and complete this, and as I said, make a very fine Judicial Article.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Jirolanio.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, I rise to speak against this amendment. We have been here for almost three months. During that period of time all I have heard is, "let's keep politics out of the Convention." Members of the Convention, I just want you to take stock of your minds and your own souls and ask yourself this question. Did politics creep into the minds and into the bodies and into the souls of the members of this Convention since we recessed last Friday?

It is all right for particular groups who look at it one way and think that they are the God-saving people to express their opinions, but it is absolutely no good to have someone not agree with their opinion. In my humble opinion, as an individual, it is just as bad to have pressure put on you as the exercise of politics by a particular party, and I know and I repeat, I know, that pressure has been exerted upon some members of this Convention to have them vote a particular way. I know that some members have been called long distance and asked to come here and vote for this particular amendment, and gentlemen when that takes place in the Convention then it loses the bipartisan support that it is entitled to. What do you have in this amendment? You are just fooling the people. You are telling the people that the Governor has two particular ways of doing a particular thing. Let us be practical. Let us talk practicability.

If he has a Senate in his favor, two-thirds, he can do either one or either one, which ever one you want to say or do.

Naturally, the first governor who is going to have the opportunity of making this selection is going to be coy and he is going to say, "Well, I will take the Commission's recommendation just to be nice," and from then on you will find that the governors will be afraid to take it away from the Commission. We have a government in Pennsylvania of checks and balance. Are we afraid of our checks and balance system? Absolutely not. We have it in our Constitution. We have had it in our Constitution of the United States, and you have it in most all the states of the Union, and under this particular thing, you will be taking away the rights and you might say, the Governor does not have to do it that way, as the bill now is the appointment would have to be made by the governor with the consent and advice of two-thirds of the Senate of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. No. Certain groups do not want this. This is politics. Why? Because it does not agree with their particular theory, and everything that you say against the so-called plan and everything that you say against a particular group that is interested in their own way of thinking is not constructive, that you are out to destroy the Constitutional Convention.

I said this before and I will repeat it now. I am not here to destroy the Constitutional Convention. I am here to uphold it, but I am here for one thing, I am here representing the people of my district, the 18th Senatorial District, and the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and I assure you that when I have their support, when I have their ideas, then I will not be bought or sold or swayed or pampered or hit over the head in any way, shape or matter or form to take away from me the will of my mind and the will to express my vote. This is exactly what you are doing. You have played the cards right. You have waited to the end of the game and you threw that fast ball hoping and praying we could not see it as it came across the plate and struck us out. We the people, who are interested in free democracy, and we want to give the electorate, the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania their right to select who they want, now are being taken a little step further and being fed a little graft, or as they say in Court, a little dust so that the jury cannot see the true issues of the case; and this is what they are doing now. They are asking us to go along with this amendment. We do not like—and I say "we" I mean respectively certain groups in Pennsylvania, one group in particular who I pay dues to, and another group who I have in my own city, they are the dictators of this Convention, not the common people of Pennsylvania, and I think it is about time we rise and show ourselves as true Americans, as true Pennsylvanians, and let us say to this group, "You are politicking more and worse than any other group in the State of Pennsylvania," and let the Legislature do it with the advice and consent of the Senate, be it as it is now, because it is the method of government that we have in checks and balance, and I ask each and everyone of you to vote down this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Sharp.

DELEGATE SHARP. Mr. President, I recognize that in the light of this Convention this is just a few moments before midnight and we are, in a manner of speaking, in the final hours of our deliberations here. I know that there are undoubtedly delegates here who feel that these discussions we are embracing have been covered before; that this field has been previously plowed. As a matter of fact, there are probably those who feel that the field has not only been plowed, but it is now being harrowed as well. To those persons who might feel this way I say to you that if this is so, then it is good; for if by double plowing and double harrowing we can insure a true and honest crop from the seed that we plant here, then the time that we have devoted in these final moments will not have been in vain and will have been worthwhile. I am wholeheartedly in favor of this amendment. I am in favor of this amendment not to open an old wound, not like a campaigner who has lost a previous battle and wishes to fight it over, but because I believe that somber reflection on this principle before us will recognize and will make us recognize the fact that we perhaps have exercised judgment in too much haste in our previous actions. How can we be sure that the appropriate means of appointing appellate judges for the next century in Pennsylvania is by the Governor with the advice and consent of the Senate, and that this is the highest and best means available to this Commonwealth for time to come? For those of you who can be sure, I am envious of you. I cannot be so sure. The reason I cannot be sure, Mr. President, is because I spent time with my constituents this weekend discussing exactly this problem, and I found that among my constituents, persons I talked to, that although they had some reservations concerning legislative apportionment, they have no strong feelings with regard to a unified judicial system primarily because they probably do not completely understand it. They were not aghast nor were they shocked at the Local Government Article with its changes because of the built-in referendum features. But I found that person after person expressed displeasure at the appointment of judges on the appellate level by a pure political mechanism. After talking to these persons, I might say, Mr. President, I was troubled in my mind and I was troubled in spirit, and I was not certain that if those who shared my misgivings might not believe that this body had indeed erred in its previous conclusion. For that reason I should like to reconsider this amendment. Might I say, Mr. President and fellow delegates, that the passage of this amendment is no sacrifice to honor nor is it any sacrifice to principle, for the amendment changes not what we have previously done, it supplements what we have done. It does not violate a single principle of our previous action. It does change the ability of the Governor to make the appointment with the advice and consent of the Senate, if he so chooses, but it does provide an additional vehicle which, if needed, if to be used, is there available for the use of the Governor.

It would seem to me, fellow delegates and Mr. President, that by the adoption of this we are not applying alternatives in a gray or in a black area, but we are providing a method available to the Governor to use in his sound discretion. I would say this, Mr. President, that we are not by this amendment fooling the people. If I thought that for one moment I would be urging the members of this delegation to in any way violate the oath we took on the first day, I would rather this amendment go down in ignominious defeat than to a sacrifice of principle. I take issue with Delegate Jirolanio that this is not political. I stand here speaking before you out of no political motive, out of no political gain, out of no political persuasion. I speak to you here out of inmost and deep conviction. I do not see, fellow delegates, how we can err in passing this amendment. I do feel that if we do not pass this amendment we will have erred; and for that reason, if err we must, I would rather that we err on the side of the angels by providing the extra method for the selection of judges which is consonant with democratic principles and is consonant with the integrity that we owe to ourselves and those who have sent us here. I thank you.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Goldman.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Mr. President, may I interrogate one of the proponents of the present amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Certainly. Is Delegate Stout here? He apparently does not wish to be interrogated. How about Delegate Scranton?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Mr. President, may I ask the gentleman if I am not correct in the statement that the true test of the effectiveness of any appellate court is its decisions?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Certainly, Mr. President.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. The true test, then, is the weight and validity of the decisions which it hands down?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Yes, Mr. President.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Am I also correct in assuming, Mr. President,—and this again I am drawing from my own legal background—that, along with several other states throughout this entire country, Pennsylvania cases from its appellate courts are cited with substantial authority in other jurisdictions, in other states?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Yes, sir; that is true, Mr. President.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. So that historically Pennsylvania has been noted as a fairly good state for appellate court decisions?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Yes, sir.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. I have no further questions, Mr. President. I would like to make a couple comments, if I may, please.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Mr. President, coming in this afternoon I was a little bit concerned, as I believe everyone here is, about the issue that is presented before us. We now have proposed to put into the Constitution a manner of selecting our appellate court judges which, without any question in my mind, is going to be very, very political. Any time that you need two-thirds concurrence of the Senate, this has to be extremely political. I also recognize, however, that this particular amendment is not going to necessarily cure that politics. I recognize, at least in my own mind, that within a panel system we are going to remove politics perhaps from the mainstream of public knowledge but we will in fact not be eliminating politics at all. We are simply going to be transferring it to another group.

Mr. President, I noted also or recalled also on the way in that we had initially a very, very close vote on the manner of the selection of our appellate court judges. I interrogated Delegate Scranton for the purpose of proving, if I may, that Pennsylvania has always been one of the leading states for its appellate court decisions, recognized throughout all of this country as being a leading state in this field, and yet, in the past we have always elected our judges. But this does not mean that these elections have necessarily given us bad decisions. As a matter of fact, it has just been repeated that these decisions have been good, have been leading decisions throughout the country.

Mr. President, I am going to ask am I in order to offer an amendment to this amendment? The nature of it would be that we will continue to elect our judges as we have in the past and allow the people by referendum to decide themselves whether or not they want a panel system.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It is in order to offer an amendment to an amendment if it is properly prepared and, of course, the amendment must be prepared by the Drafting Bureau. The only thing that I would ask at this time, is that you would promptly have the amendment prepared.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. I recognize that, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, if it meets with the approval of the delegates, we can proceed to discuss this matter while the amendment to the amendment is being prepared.

I now will recognize Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, I desire to speak on only one small point, but that is a most important one. Before I came to this Convention, the one idea which had been hammered into my mind with hardest force was that a panel was no good in a changing society because the members of the panel would all be White Anglo-Saxon Protestants, the WASPs, and they would never appoint a Catholic or a Negro or a Jew or a Puerto Rican or anyone else. For reasons which I will divulge at the end of this, this line of reasoning was very strong with me.

I heard two delegates who I have come to think of as my closest friends in this Convention sit in my apartment and tell me of the miserable treatment they had received in coal fields in their youth, when the coal companies determined who would be judges and anybody who was not a White Anglo-Saxon Protestant was in a murderous situation, and they swore to me that never would they vote for a panel, and I doubt whether anything I would say would change their minds now, but there are other delegates who have had this suspicion who are not so strong in that belief as the two that I referred to, and, whose opinions I respect so much, and I address myself to those delegates in particular.

Does a panel as it operates today, provide for the bench only White Anglo-Saxon Protestants? Forty years ago it did. This state would not have afforded such a panel because we had not then the educating influence of World War II where men of all groups worked together. We did not have the educating influence of recent years when we have seen great negroes appointed to positions of importance in this nation, when one of them today through something of a panel method, is sitting on our Supreme Court, when they have reached the highest ranks that our society can give.

We had not had the experience then, in which I participated so deeply in electing for the first time, a Roman Catholic to be the Supreme Magistrate of this society. The ideas that prevailed 40 years ago do not prevail today in Pennsylvania, that I know. Let us suppose that someone from the back of this room is one day elected Governor of this Commonwealth. Do you not think that that man is going to appoint to his judicial panel men and women just like the 163 of us here? He would be idiotic if he did not. He would want the best he can get. He would want men of wide experience. He would want men of all religions, all persuasions, all colors and I would expect his panel to look pretty much the way you and I look.

Have you heard any animosity in this Convention against people from a minority group? Have you heard any voting against those people? Have you had any lack of fellowship among the delegation on that score? Has this been a WASP convention? It has not.

Pennsylvania is no longer that kind of State. Pennsylvania is a State where men like the one I had dinner with the other day who had been the head of a great industry said, "We are looking for the bright young men of the other groups. We are looking for these men to whom we can appoint to positions of importance." I would suppose that the panel system working in Pennsylvania, in the future, not the past, would provide for the judges of this Commonwealth, precisely a cross-section of the lawyers who are now sitting amongst us and they are not all of one group, believe me. I speak to this point with a certain force for reasons which are not known to this body. If you have read my books, you know I always bear testimony to this fundamental idea, that there is a brotherhood that is growing in this country. I do not write about White Anglo-Saxon Protestants alone, because I know there is a broader horizon in this State today.

I do not shy away from the hard problems of an arising group in the Hawaiian Islands simply because it was not popular to write about. I do not shy away from writing about the great problems it concerns because I know something about it, and I do not stand here today in the closing hours of this Convention and speak to you as what I appear to be, a White Anglo-Saxon Protestant from a very good college, living in a fine part of the State. I am not that man.

Within recent years, I have undergone the experience of wanting to buy a house in a fine part of this nation and being told that I could not buy it. I have wanted to join certain clubs in Hawaii and found that the five top clubs on the island were closed to me, and I fought that like a tiger because I do not actually believe in those things.

For a curious reason, which none of you know about, I am sure, in recent years I have had to be very careful about where I die because in seven States of this Federal Union, I was not legally married and if my death put my estate in the hands of those States, anybody could come in and overthrow it because I was not a legal citizen.

Believe it or not, I have had at some time, to be careful where I travelled because any boob seeing me go through could have arrested me and put me in jail for breaking the stupid laws of that State. As you know, the Supreme Court outlawed all this nonsense a few months ago; only a few months ago. We live in the kind of nation where that nonsense is being outlawed. No Governor of this State would dare appoint a panel that believed in those ideas. He would appoint a panel of all of us and believe me, if he got me on it, he would have a tiger by the tail because I would be looking for the good young men of the rising groups. I would be looking for a broad stature of judges over this State and so would almost everyone of you if you are in the future elected to such a panel.

We would be looking for only three things; lawyers who have demonstrated their ability, lawyers who had given evidence of a sense of judicial mind, and above all, men of integrity.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want to remind you that you have two minutes to go. You have two minutes in which to conclude.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, there is no word better in the English language than to close with the one I just did which concerns this great State so much. We are looking for, as our judges, men of integrity.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, I do not stand here today in an attempt to help teach our learned secretary something of the history of this State. I do not wish to contravert him. At the same time, I do say to the Convention that much that was said in the committee has not been said from the floor. We are sensible and sensitive to the fact that we have had a bad press and this Convention, in some respects, has had some bad motherhood. We still do not know who the fathers are.

I would ask the delegates again to look at this amendment. Since Delegate Stout is physically not in good shape today, and I do not mean to pick on him, but this amendment last week was known as the Clinger Amendment. It was known as several other amendments. I sat through six days of heavy debate on the judiciary article. We are faced with it today.

Delegate Kauffman sees fit to say that it is not any different than the amendment he proposed. Well, that is for Delegate Kauffman to say. But there was one essential thing that was raised, personified in the person of Governor Scranton, that would help this amendment and make it so that the people of Pennsylvania can have it given to them without an after taste lasting for the next 40 years.

When Governor Scranton, in that memorable period in Philadelphia, appointed a panel to select five new judges, he reserved to himself the right of additional panels of names submitted to him if he felt they were not to his choosing. This is the history in some of the other states. In New York, just three weeks ago—and this is in the record. I refer to Delegate Curran. You read it into the record—they had to move beyond a selective type panel and take a man whom the panel had determined was unfit, and lifted him up and made him a judge.

Now I say to you—and I am asking Governor Scranton—and I know the Governor is not the author of this amendment, but we should, if we go along with it, allow the future governors of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania the same thing that Governor Scranton wanted when he was governor of Pennsylvania. He secured the finest five judges in the history of Philadelphia. He was so good, the performance was never repeated.

This is what I say: I am not going to offer the amendment—I am afraid that with bringing this back on the floor again does nothing. The governor appoints a new judge. He does it with his left hand, two-thirds of the Senate, and the right hand with his selection panel. I am not asking anybody to vote against it. I am asking some member with a stronger stomach than I have here today—because if you think politics did not operate over the weekend, you do not know anything about Pennsylvania politics. Special interests, people with no responsibility, not even minority groups, I am not speaking about the Pennsylvania Bar Association, I am speaking about some of the female affiliates.

I am not here to turn this thing over. I want one of you thought-scarred lawyers to give the next governors of Pennsylvania the same right that Governor Scranton asked for himself; what will cure the panel thing?

Believe it, WASP is not the answer, Delegate Michener. The history of Pennsylvania will tell you. The Law Journals—the Yale, the Harvard Law Journals—let me quote here—do you want to hear it? Are there any Yale or Harvard boys in the hall? I mean on our side.

If the executive can make his judicial choice only from a limited roster supplied to him by a commission composed of the successful and conservative members of the community, then it is obvious that no one who deviates from the professional norm—labor lawyers for example—may apply. This is out of the Harvard Law Review quoting a Yale Law Review. We are making it simple. This, basically, was it. I would be in favor of an amendment if Delegate Clinger, Delegate Rea, Delegate Thornburgh and a few others would get up and have the decency to use the Pennsylvania experience, if you please, and not the experience of the State of Missouri.

I am for the best judges that Pennsylvania can have. I was not opposed—in fact, I stood, I think, earliest, for the appointment of the appellate court judges—but in the heat of this last rhubarb—and that is what it has been. We have not even taken time out to look at the amendment, and note that the governor must take this panel. The Rockefeller System evolved from a situation where those who were on the panel were not of his political party and had no interest in anyone who was not of the right party; that was in the New York Times; it is in the records of this Convention.

Very recently, the City of St. Louis—they have a member of the trade school out there who tells the man what judges he will appoint; that was in the Wall Street Journal just nine days ago.

Let us make it healthy. Let us do the best we can. We have been slowed up now. Let us take a few more minutes. I appeal to you men who say that you stand for the best thing that can come out of this Convention. Give the governor the right to ask for additional panels if he is not satisfied with the choice. I am sure those delegates who, in this hall and in the judiciary committee, sought for the best will have given you the best. As far as these pressure groups, TV stations, newspapers who have a story to tell, let them tell their story, but when you people of the Pennsylvania Bar realize we have locked in every trial court justice in the Commonwealth with a "yea" and "nay" vote after he served only 10 years; that we have given you gubernatorial appointments for most of the statewide appellate judges; that we have given you a discipline and removal tool that we never had in the history of the state; we not only have reformed our judiciary system but it will be the finest of the 50 states in the United States.

I say try to listen today and do the best you can. God save the Commonwealth and this Article and this Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Rappaport.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Mr. President, I would first like to speak, if I may, for about 30 seconds to a point of personal privilege.

On the editorial page of the Philadelphia Inquirer this morning, a newspaper reporter who was here only one day since December 1st stated that I was approached by a reformer. I do not know what a reformer is. I have never seen one. I know that a lot of people say that they are in favor of reform. They bring forth plans that are reform. But I really do not know what a "reformer" is. It further says that I was approached in the interest of wiping out the magistrates courts in the City of Philadelphia and substituting a system where a judge was required to demonstrate sufficient knowledge of the law to qualify as lawyers.

"He is said to have replied . . ."

Which shows the weakness of hearsay evidence,

". . . that he . . ."

That is me,

". . . he was elected a delegate by the Democratic organization and sent to Harrisburg to do the bidding of the power behind that machine."

Well, gentlemen, I would like to remind the Convention that of the three of us who were elected to the First Senatorial District, the man with the highest votes was my good friend, Americo Cortese, who is a Republican, and that the Republicans carried my district and that if Republicans had not split their tickets and voted for me —and I say that in the presence of the Republican County Chairman—I would not be here.

I voted for local option in Philadelphia for the magistrates because I believe in home rule. I have the honor to be co-chairman of that subcommittee. I voted to require magistrates in the City of Philadelphia who were not learned in the law to take the special courses and I voted in favor of abolishing the traffic court in Philadelphia and putting in the community court. Thus, every statement in this little column is a patent untruth. I might say that there have been some reporters here, including those working for the same newspaper, who have been here every day since the Convention started. While I have not always agreed with their stories, their stories have been fair and have been honest and I commend them for it. What I dislike intensely are what we used to call, in the Army, the 90-day wonders—although, I suppose we are 90-day wonders—but these are the people who come here one day, go home and write articles.

We are engaged here in a discussion of how we should choose our judges. The basic requirement of an orderly society is to have judges who are respected by the people. I was struck by this the Saturday before last, when we read the story of Jethro, which is in the 18th Chapter of Exodus. Jethro was the father-in-law of Moses and after the children of Israel had come out from Egypt and were in the desert—I might say, parenthetically, living off their welfare checks, although then they called it manna—Jethro visited his son-in-law and found that Moses was spending most of his time settling the disputes of the people. We are told that when his father-in-law saw all that he was doing for the people, he queried, "What sort of thing is this you are doing for the people? Why do you sit alone while all the people have to stand about you from morning to evening?" They had a trial backlog then, too. The answer of Moses to his father-in-law was: "The people come to me to consult God. Whenever they have disagreements, they come to me to have me settle the matter between them and make known to them God's decisions and regulations."

Jethro later remonstrated with Moses and said it is too much work and advised him to choose men of the people to judge the people, set up an appellate court system, and he said that one of the qualifications of the judge is that he be a man of valor, a man of strong intestinal fortitude and of personal moral courage. I think this is what we are talking about here. I think we all agree on that. Our problem is to discuss how we can choose such men.

Governor Scranton has made a very cogent, convincing argument for non-partisanship. He believes that if we can take the political process out of it, then we will have better judges. I submit this is our basic disagreement in this Convention. Let us discuss that point. What is non-partisanship that the panel is supposed to bring about? How does it work? What is its result?

I would like to quote from a study of the Reform Movement in America wherein Lorin Peterson quotes from a speech given by the eminent American historian Charles Beard at the 1916 meeting of the National Municipal League and this is what Charles Beard had to say: "Non-partisanship has not worked, does not work and will not work in any major city in the United States." This was in 1916.

"The causes of parties lay deeper than election laws. The causes of parties being social and economic, we must expect the continued existence of party organizations in our municipal affairs. The task of the reformer is not the enactment of non-partisan laws but the development of legislation and public opinion that will make parties responsible for the conduct of municipal government. Men who want wise and just government in cities are likely to do as much good by cooperating with the parties and insisting upon the establishment of sound party principles and genuine party responsibilities as they are by running to the legislature for a few non-partisan election laws." Mr. Peterson goes on to say, "Reformers' love of governmental gadgetry extended to voting," and this is discussing limited voting, cumulative voting, etc.

I would submit that a panel system is governmental gadgetry.

I got in party politics five years ago because I believed along with Charles Beard that this is the way for better government in the United States.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Rappaport, you have two minutes.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Thank you, sir.

What is the effect of the non-partisan election practices?

I am reading from the study made by the American Academy of Political and Social Sciences. After discussing the problems of the past and nobody knowing who the candidates are, they go on to say, "Non-partisan election practices were effective, also, to increase the influence of the mass media on voters; because they are dependent on the mass media for their information. Without the familiar device of party levels to aid in selecting candidates, voters may find it difficult to select from among the sometime substantial list of names on the ballot."

This has been the experience in California where, because of cross-filing, party organizations, were torn down, and they have a movie actor for Governor and a movie actor as a United States Senator. I say to you, and I have said to many of my friends here, I would rather have our friend, William Devlin, selecting our judges in Philadelphia than chancellor of the Bar Association. Because, with neither man will I have a chance of becoming a judge, but I know that the man who will be selected by Delegate Devlin will be a man who has the intestinal fortitude to stand in an election and to go out and talk to the people, and would not be fearful when a group of mothers comes storming down to City Hall and calls on that judge to change his mind on a sentence, which happened to one of the judges which were selected by a panel appointed by Governor Scranton.

I want judges who have guts.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Sorry, your time is up, Delegate Rappaport.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Huggins.

DELEGATE HUGGINS. Mr. President, I think that since the birth of this Convention, not long ago, we have been suffering from a number of pains. It probably all started about with our favorite analogy that we use for arguing to prove a point, which was press pain. These pains came about because we were afraid of what the press would say about us, what they have said about us. I think that this has been an interesting pain. We have suffered from another pain during this Convention that I would like to term gas pains, from hot air excessively overdone, and we did not know where to put them.

Now, we are suffering in the last couple of weeks with another pain called the "panel pain." It aches us. It causes greater verbosity to come forth from the shallow mouth of meek man. I think this is an interesting pain, but as one delegate, a non-lawyer delegate who waded through the issues presented in this particular amendment, waded through the issues that were presented to the delegates here on the floor, I do not think I want to leave this place with a chain pain around the neck of a governor, which is exactly what we have without this amendment.

It is for this reason, Mr. President, that I can honestly say to you and to this distinguished body, forget the other pains, but the future pain is the one we need to concern ourselves about, and this is the one we need to vote for, not the pain but the solution.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Banes.

DELEGATE BANES. Mr. President, under the guise of reform on the judiciary comes a Trojan horse for the people designed to subvert their will, in the shape of the proposed panel selection candidates for the office of judge in this Commonwealth. The human cry which is responsible for calling this Convention I am sure did not involve the merit selection of our judges by panel in the eyes of the electorate. I am certain that not one man in a thousand knows and understands this issue, and as a result of this type of selection, he will lose his right to vote for a judge, or those who will be responsible for passing on the qualifications of the judges to be appointed.

This supposed reform of the judiciary is a phony issue designed to force upon the people a royal commission for the selection of judicial candidates to take away from our people a fundamental right, and I want to call to your attention, if you will begin reading on page 86 of your manual, where they begin telling us about the history of selection of our judges, you will find for example, that the contribution of the United States to the judicial systems of the World is a popular election of judges.

I also want to remind you that in the 1838 Convention of the Pennsylvania Convention, there was, at that time, a battle and struggle waged to take away from the governor the right to appoint judges and give it to the people. The manual tells us that the political groups joined together and denied this right to the people.

You will also read that in 1850, finally, the people did get an amendment passed which gave to them the right to elect their judges.

Mr. President, this proposal before us here, in part, will take away that sacred right for which our forefathers not only in this country, but also in the nations on the continents of Europe, the struggle for which they all fought to gain the freedoms, one of which, of course, was the popular election of judges. I, therefore, intrigue you to defeat this proposal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Filson.

DELEGATE FILSON. Mr. President, by and large the Judiciary Article which has been formulated at this Convention is good. I would not be presumptuous enough to say that everybody in this hall certainly must be in favor of good judges. We came here to give the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania the best Constitution that we could possibly formulate. The issue is how do we arrive at a process whereby we get the best judges for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

We have argued this in the sub-Committees. We have argued in the Committee and we have argued it to no end on the floor.

The one thing which I want to place before you particularly is this, and I suspect that everybody in this delegation understands what unprecedently and unparalleled powers have been formulating into this Judicial Article. If we go home from this Convention and we have not come up with the process whereby we can get the best judges on our appellate courts, we certainly have fallen flat on our face, because I submit to you that in the unified court system we must necessarily, in order to make it work, have the best judges that the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania has ever had. This is the most powerful unified court system ever, of which I have knowledge. I must say that a corrupt Supreme Court could corrupt the judicial system of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in very short order. They have the power to hear the incompatible activity by which charges or from which charges may be brought against them. It is as has been said on the floor, it is like correcting their own examination paper. This, unless you get the best judges for the Supreme Court, has the seed of its own corruption sown in this Judicial Article.

This amendment which we have on the floor does not hurt in any manner, but has been originally offered hereby the selection of judges of the Supreme Court, and the other appellate courts with the advice and consent of the Senate, it gives the governor an alternate plan, and I submit to you with these two plans, it would be most incumbent upon any governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to search his conscience and to search the Commonwealth far and wide to come up with the best judges that he can possibly secure to man the Supreme Court.

Do you realize that it is within the power of the Supreme Court as to whether or not it subscribes or prescribes canons of ethics for the minor judiciary, the justices of the peace? Do you realize that under the Article wherein judges against who complaints have been brought, will finally be charged or tried in hearings before the Supreme Court? Do you realize that if we had improper judicial officers on this Supreme Court, what a white-wash we could have, what a political white-wash we could have for the whole system?

I submit to you, open your mind and reflect in your own conscience what you are going to do about the selection of judges, because I submit to you that this is probably—and I subtract the word "probably" from what I just said—I submit to you, that the selection of judges for the appellate courts in Pennsylvania is the most important element which we have come to in this Convention to consider. Let us not let the citizens of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania down.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Shoemaker.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I have a short suggestion regarding this, Mr. President. I notice that the amendment as presented to us—and I think I have the correct one—indicates that the first part applies to Section 11. I notice that the amendment schedule relates to Section 21—and I am taking this from Printer's No. 23, and I believe the current Printer's No. 12 does the same thing—Section 21 according to its terms applies to Section 12(a) of the main portion of the committee proposal, and I merely wanted to point out that this probably should be corrected, unless I am confused, before it is finally adopted, so that there be no later confusion and necessity for a subsequent amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you, Delegate Shoemaker.

And now the Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, I have been promising myself and several interested delegates, ever since I came here, that I would go through at least two days without speaking to this Convention. I do not think I have yet succeeded. I am deeply troubled by the position in which I find myself, and I want to make my position clear in front of this delegate body.

I do not think there are any venal men or women on the floor of this Convention. I do think we come from vastly different backgrounds, that we differ in our viewpoint of history and we differ as to what we think will work and will not work. I stand here to reiterate my original position, which I took the first time I took this microphone, and that position is a very simple one. I believe that the further we remove the process of government from the people, the greater the risk to democracy. I am not in favor of the present amendment nor do I favor what we have written particularly into the Constitution so far, the appointment of appellate judges with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate.

I spoke to a member of the Pennsylvania Bar Association, whom I regard very highly, at 11:00 o'clock last night and told him quite honestly I had not made up my mind as to the Stout Amendment. I have since made it up. I think there are a number of delegates here who, because of their lack of contact with the practical aspects of politics—and I think that there are a number of observers in the room who are not delegates who, because of their lack of contact with the practical aspects of politics—have fallen in a trap of generalization. We Americans tend to stylize things, to generalize, and set up stereotypes. One of the stereotypes is that the newspaper reporter is a hard-drinking, woman-chasing rascal—which some of them are—perhaps. Another is that the policeman is basically dishonest and bribable, which is an interesting thing, I mean, that we put them in their positions but we tend to believe that they are all corrupt. All policemen are corrupt except our fathers and our brothers and our uncles who may happen to be policemen.

I have noted on the floor of this delegate body, in diminishing volume, thank goodness, the stereotype that legislators are ipso facto questionable as far as their morality is concerned. I note with a great deal of disturbance the stereotype moving now through this hall that politics is by definition dirty. Everyone who has stepped up here to the microphone has said in effect, without even arguing the point, we must take politics out of this. The question is, why? Well, not everyone, you are right, sir. You did not.

This is an interesting stereotype in the American mind. We are all political animals. Every single solitary one of us seated here today is a political animal, and every single solitary member of the Pennsylvania Bar Association is a political animal. And there is politics played with no more fanaticism any place than in universities across this land. Every single one of us is, to one degree or another, a politician. I say this to you and I say it in all sincerity. I was a school teacher. I became an attorney and I became a politician. I have had wide associations among attorneys, school teachers, and politicians. I have yet to find that I could turn my back on a politician when he gave his word.

I say to you, if you think that by creating a panel or a commission you are eliminating politics, disabuse yourself of that thought. You have seen the American Bar Association and other groups use the tools of politics over this weekend. The very people who have said to you and to me, "We decry politics as far as the selection of our judges is concerned," have used the tools of pressure and persuasion over this weekend to bring about a result which they quite sincerely and honestly believe is best for the people. I do not say that they are wrong in doing this. I say that they have a perfect right to do it. But the same pressures that were brought to bear on you can, I submit to you, conceivably be brought to bear on any commission which has to submit ten or twenty names to a governor. How do you think those names are going to get before the commission? How do you think the commission's list of names are going to get before the governor? Do you think for one minute that the Pennsylvania Bar Association is going to sit silently by and let any governor appoint any four people whom he wishes or any one person whom he wishes with no comment? You cannot be that foolish. They are not evil in their intent. They believe sincerely that they know what is best, that what they are doing is best for the people. I contend that only the people know what is best for the people. I say this to you again—and I hope not to have to say it again and again—I do not stand here believing that newspaper editorial writers and TV Commentators and members of the Pennsylvania Bar Association or members of the legal profession or any other group know what is best for the general populace of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. I defy anyone of you, no matter how learned, no matter how high in status, to prove to me that any place in history has it been shown that a government long survives when it is removed from the will of the governed, and that is precisely what we are about to do here. I regret very much that we have come to this position, for we are now running scared. Even the best of us are running scared. The newspapers have threatened us. The League of Women Voters has threatened us. The members of the Bar Association have threatened us. You remember when it was thought that legislators were threatening. We rose in our indignation against this threat. But we are now being threatened by saying: If you do not do as we think is best, we will oppose your offering. I say to these people who would oppose, go ahead; that is your American right to do so; but it is equally my right to stand here and propose what I believe is best. I think we are going in the wrong direction with this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Caron.

DELEGATE CARON. May I yield to Senator Casey, sir?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, I rise not as an editorial writer, not as a reporter, not as a television commentator, not as a member of the League of Women Voters, not as a spokesman for the Pennsylvania Bar Association, not as an Eleventh hour convert to the principles embodied in this amendment, but as one who on this floor and in the votes that have been taken has consistently supported this principle, because I happen to believe it is right. Yes, I called some people over the weekend and asked them to vote for this amendment because I think it is right; because I think it is time that the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania adopt a system in the selection of judges that blinds itself to their partisan labels, that considers only their qualifications, their ability as practitioners, and their ability to serve the people of this State.

If I believed for one minute that this amendment would result in the exclusion of minority groups from the appellate courts of Pennsylvania, I would fight it with every bit of strength I have got in my body, because I happen to be a member of one of those minority groups. I do not question for a minute that, as an active member of a political party in Pennsylvania, I personally would probably have a much better chance of getting on the appellate bench in Pennsylvania under the elective system or under the appointive system, subject to two-thirds ratification by the Senate; but that is not the issue. The issue is not how best can we get on the Bench in Pennsylvania; the issue is, what is the best system for the administration of justice in Pennsylvania? What system will restore to the people full confidence in the workings of the appellate system in Pennsylvania? Will it be politics under the amendment? I do not think anyone in his right mind can say that politics will ever be completely eliminated but at least it will give us for the first time in this State a thorough, systematic ongoing search for the best judicial talent that is available to serve on the Appellate Bench in Pennsylvania.

Now, I have heard a lot of talk about we cannot take it away from the people. Do you not realize that the present proposal has already crossed that bridge? Do you not realize that the present proposal right now in its present form, apart from the Stout Amendment, says the governor shall select these judges subject to two-thirds ratification by the Senate of Pennsylvania? This is a system that Governor Scranton—and I agree with him—has said is outrageously political.

Now there has been a lot of talk about reformers and about those who wear the white hats in this Convention. I have had just about enough of it, because, my fellow delegates, the eleven million people in this State that are watching us are reformers. They wear white hats. The organizations and the press media that make this Convention possible wear white hats. They are reformers, too. We have got to give them a product they can be proud of. I think this amendment goes a long way towards achieving that goal.

I stand here to ask you to support this Stout Amendment because I believe it is best for the judicial system in Pennsylvania and best for all of the people of Pennsylvania.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Caron.

DELEGATE CARON. Mr. President, I would like to make two brief statements. I am one of the delegates who came here uncommitted to anything other than my conscience and I would like to add that nobody has threatened me. I would like to vote my conscience and therefore I move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. As I understand Delegate Caron has made a motion that we close debate and vote on the question, but I want to point out that we have an amendment to the amendment which we have to vote on first and he has every right under our procedure to present that amendment, and therefore I would have to rule at this time that the motion was out of order and I thought it was understood that we were hearing the pros and cons of the original proposal until you were ready, Delegate Goldman.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. If it is agreeable with the body, this of course is up to them, I can tell you generally what I intend to encompass within this amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Goldman, in accordance with our procedure, I understand the amendments will be ready in just a few minutes and I think the delegates would feel better if they have your amendment in front of them.

May I recognize Delegate O'Donnell who has been standing for quite a while.

DELEGATE CARON. I will withdraw the request subject to the time the amendment comes back out.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I have risen solely for the purpose of making a motion similar to Delegate Caron with the exception of those who are standing up I felt would be permitted to address this Convention and then close. I understand that would not be in order at this time either.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No. We have to, as you understand, accept the amendment being offered by Delegate Goldman.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Hook.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, I appear before you on behalf of Delegate William B. Stout who announced earlier he would be unable to make any statement to this body.

I want to tell you a little bit about Delegate Stout before I start.

I met Delegate Stout formally on August 4, 1967, when we ran as delegates to the Convention before our committee people. At that time, William Stout had no conception of the judiciary. Even though I was with him for a period of 3 months now continuously, William Stout and I have very seldom talked about the subject matter and he had served very faithfully on the Construction and Reorganization Committee under Judge Woodside and I would like to read into the record Delegate Stout's statement as to his reason for introducing the proposal.

"Mr. Chairman, Fellow Delegates:

After a weekend of serious reflection, I have come to some conclusions concerning that extremely vital subject which has engaged our attention the past two weeks, the proposed Judiciary Article. It is my understanding that many other delegates have devoted equally serious reflection to this subject over the weekend, and therefore, I rise to test my conclusions against theirs. I do this with the hope that we may find quite a number of us, each operating independently within our own individual homes and minds, have arrived at the same conclusions.

The first conclusion I would ask you to consider, and this I think cannot be disputed, is that on the method of selection of statewide judges, we have not observed in this body anything approaching unanimity of opinion. Whatever votes have been taken have been extremely close, and the decisions that we have committed ourselves to at this date have passed by a very slim majority. And that majority was, as a matter of fact, of those voting, not of this entire body of 163 delegates. I would like you to consider some of those votes.

Delegate Kauffman's original amendment which would have filled vacancies in statewide judgeships by gubernatorial appointment with two-thirds consent of the Senate was defeated, 67 for, 79 against.

Delegate Woodside's amendment to the original Kauffman amendment, which would have substituted majority consent of the Senate for the two-thirds consent, was defeated, 60 for, 81 against.

Immediately after these two votes, Delegate Kauffman proposed an amendment which would have made the governor's choice from the list of names given to him by a judicial qualifications commission discretionary rather than mandatory; and if the governor decided not to choose from that list he would have the alternative of appointing someone other than a person among the 10 to 20 persons on that list, and in this case such an appointment would have required the two-thirds consent of the Senate. This amendment was also defeated, 61 for, 75 against.

All three of these votes occurred last Tuesday afternoon, February 20. The following day, Wednesday, February 21, a motion to reconsider Delegate Kauffman's original amendment, that is, appointment by the governor with two-thirds consent of the Senate, passed 84 for, 64 against. The vote on the amendment itself followed, and this carried, 78 for, 65 against. Thus, at this moment, we now have our statewide judgeships filled by gubernatorial appointment with two-thirds consent of the Senate.

Last Friday, February 23, I, Delegate Stout, presented another amendment which was tabled at that time. My fellow delegates, we have now arrived at the crucial moment. This is our last opportunity to pass upon the method of selection for statewide judgeships.

I have reviewed the previous votes on this subject in detail because I thought it important to determine whether my conclusions match up with yours. My conclusion is that, as the debates and votes clearly show, we found this issue to be the "hottest," most controversial issue of this Convention. My next conclusion is that we have found an honest difference of opinion on this issue—a difference that is so close that on one day one side prevailed by a slim margin, and on the very next day the other side prevailed by a slim margin.

I submit that this difference is not totally irreconcilable. I submit further, my fellow delegates, that this Convention is not primarily an occasion to win victories or absorb defeats. As sloppily sentimental as this may sound, we are gathered here to do what is best for Pennsylvania. Without attempting to be dramatic, it is a fact that in a very real sense we have the future of Pennsylvania in our hands.

Let us remember that on this issue we have expended a great deal of effort, thought, devotion, and emotion, both in the committee and on the floor of this House. Overnight the majority of one day became the minority of the next day. Overnight the minority of one day became the majority of the next day. The side which prevails at this moment certainly cannot claim omniscience. Any fair statement of delegates on the prevailing side cannot reasonably claim the other side absolutely wrong."

I have proposed an amendment whereby it is possible to adopt the best of both contending viewpoints. If we had a clear-cut majority on the Kauffman amendment, let alone real unanimity of opinion, I would consider myself out of order in speaking on behalf of the Stout amendment at this late date.

But we do not have a clear-cut majority. We have a sizeable number of sincere delegates who are genuinely dissatisfied with the proposal as it now stands. Delegate Stout's amendment would serve to acknowledge their viewpoint in this proposal, at the same time that it does not take away the vitals of that viewpoint which has prevailed to this date.

In effect, the Stout amendment gives the governor the latitude and flexibility to effectuate either viewpoint or both viewpoints. Who are we to say that in some future time one governor may not be, at different moments during his term, in real need of both viewpoints in order to produce the best possible results. Surely, any honest appraisal of the two methods would have us conclude that there is merit in both. Are we really bound to choosing one or the other?

If you will recall the third vote I discussed a few minutes ago, that is Delegate Kauffman's second amendment on Tuesday, February 20, it is almost exactly what Delegate Stout is now proposing, namely to give the governor the choice of exercising either of two alternatives in the selection of statewide judgeships.

When Delegate Kauffman's original amendment fell on a close vote, Delegate Kauffman himself presented this as his second choice. Of course, he could not know then that his original amendment would carry the day a mere 24 hours later. In all fairness, I hope it is not going too far to suggest that Delegate Kauffman himself might reasonably support the Stout amendment, and I say this sincerely and without any intention whatever of directing his vote. All that I am asking is that Delegate Kauffman and others who voted in support of his amendments consider very carefully the Stout amendment. And perhaps they will conclude, as I have, that it is an honest attempt to bring together the best of both worlds.

In the years to come, perhaps others will happily recall that in a strange, circuitous, perhaps fumbling but always striving and honest way, the delegates to the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1967 and 1968 finally arrived at the best of both worlds.

Mr. President, I have for myself something to say and I do not know how much time I have left. I would like to quote from Judge Samuel I. Rosenman who was President of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York and Co-Chairman of the Mayor's Committee on the Judiciary. "I was co-chairman of this committee from its beginning and until my election as President of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York. Even with its shortcomings, I firmly believe it has affirmatively improved the caliber of the judges appointed in this city. And, negatively, it has helped by the discouragement which it has given to political district leaders who used to recommend obviously unqualified followers of the Mayor, but who are now deterred by the realization that before their candidates can be considered by the Mayor, they must pass the scrutiny of this nominating committee.

Therefore, I support Delegate Stout's Amendment and I ask the governing body to vote in favor of it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gerber.

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, like all of you, I have sat here and listened to the honest dedicated debate of both sides of this most critical issue. I have heard every speaker rise to state that he or she stands for a system of selection of judges on the appellate level which will bring good judges. I pose a question to you. How many have stood and said we do not have a good appellate court now? How many have stood and said that our present Supreme Court and the seven men that sit on it should be subject to reform? How many have stood here and said that our present Superior Court and the men that sit on it should be the subject of reform?

As I understood it when I came to this Convention as a delegate, when I pledged myself to reforming the judiciary of Pennsylvania, I was not speaking about individuals, because from my knowledge as a lawyer, as a member of the Montgomery Bar, the Pennsylvania Bar and the American Bar, our judges were a splendid representation of the American Judiciary. I thought we were here to help improve our system by creating a unified judicial system and a unified administration of justice and we did that. What is happening to us today? It is not a question of reform, but we are here quaking in the fear of the unregistered lobbyist.

I look at you who had the courage to run, who had the courage to put your name on the ballot, who had the courage to have your name put in the newspapers and on the public media, vote them down because if we do not vote them down, they will try to run this State. The next thing they will do is tell the governor who to pick for a judge. I trust the Senate and I trust this Legislature and I trust our judges because they have had the courage to come out and stand up for something. They had the courage to put their names in public lights. They had the courage to put their name on the lines. But these groups have not. They did not even have the honesty to register as a lobbyist. If you are voting in favor of the Stout Amendment, you are giving in to the League of Women Voters, everyone of them. I say to you here today that this Convention cannot stand up at all and stand up as a proud group if they are run by people who do not have the courage to get into public life.

I heard Senator Casey's eloquent speech for reform. But the panel is not the answer because I ask this question, who is going to watch the panel? We have all sorts of systems to watch our judges. We have systems now to watch our Legislature. We have a system to watch our governor. Who will watch the panel? Who will determine whether or not the panel is standing up to its responsibility? Who will know how they select the people whose names they send to the governor? As Representative Irvis stated, it is going to happen through the same telegram and phone calls and with the governor having the right to seek re-election, is that governor going to quake the way some delegates have quaked under the pressure of these telegrams and phone calls?

Mr. President, I submit to you that if you have the courage to stand up and run for public office, if you have the courage to stand up to a microphone and speak for what you believe in, if you have the courage to put your name on the line as a lobbyist, such as other lobbyists have done here, and if you have the courage to believe in the right for the people of Pennsylvania to select their branches of office—and I submit this is one way of selection, indirectly, through your elected State Senator, and we all ran from Senatorial districts and we purportedly represented the people because they elected us and they elected the Senators—then I submit to you that the original Kauffman Amendment was a good amendment and the original Kauffman Amendment was a manner of giving the people an opportunity to have the judiciary and appellate level that was representative of all of Pennsylvania. To permit us to bend, to come in with a hyper-panel—what will we come up with here? If the first governor that has to select a vacancy in an appellate court, if he has this same group of sneaker-wearing people who will come right over there to the reception room and say, "You have to do it our way because, if you don't, we will accuse you of being political," you are then putting a real pressure on the man. If you want a system the way Delegate Solomon said, where the governor can send it back, O.K., but that is not this amendment. I submit to you, Mr. President, this is just a back door way of attempting to come in here and jam a panel selection—a panel, I submit to you, that you do not know who they are or what they will be like, you do not know where they will come from, they are not allowed to be elected officials, they are not allowed to hold political office—who will pick them? Where will they come from, the League of Women Voters?

Vote this amendment down, please, and save Pennsylvania from the hidden pressure, the real hidden pressure that was after this Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Gray.

DELEGATE GRAY. Mr. President, although I came in late, I heard so much about politics and so forth that I am reminded of a story. I feel you need this story here.

It seems as though there was a gentleman out west running for Congress. Excuse me, Congressman. The issue involved in his Congressional area was the matter of the building of a dam. When he was down below the area where the dam was to be built, where the people wanted the dam to irrigate their crops, he proclaimed himself for the dam. Then, when he was up above the area where the dam was to be built and where the people's land would be taken away because of water because of the forthcoming anticipated dam, there he would say he was against the dam. It got around that we was saying down below the dam, he was for the dam, and up above the dam, he was against the dam.

On the 4th of July, they had a big picnic and they invited him. When he got up to speak, he saw people from below the dam and he saw people from above the dam. They had him at the site of the dam. He said, "I see where I am. When I was below the dam, I was for the dam. When I was above the dam, I was against the dam. Now that you have me at the dam, I don't give a damn."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Welsh.

DELEGATE WELSH. Mr. President, fellow delegates, I suppose that we set this all down with regard to Proposal No. 7 and the Stout Amendment, and as I view it, it comes to whether we advocate freedom and liberty. Ever since Patrick Henry stood in the Virginia House of Delegates, almost 200 years ago and gave his famous speech saying, "Give me liberty or give me death," this country has gone through a series of liberties.

There was the Emancipation Proclamation, World War I and II, Korea, the Vietnam, Virginia vs. Browne, and even the various acts of the Legislative body, not only in this State but in the Federal Congress, such as the Civil Rights Act. Even in this Constitution, I think we have recognized freedoms for the various municipalities for home rule, freedom from piecemeal annexation and various other freedoms which we have already granted in this Constitution. I maintain that unless we adopt this amendment, we are not granting freedom to this present governor or any other governor in the State of Pennsylvania because, as I see it, I doubt seriously whether there will ever be another Constitutional Convention in this State. I believe that we have a right, a duty and an obligation to grant freedom to this governor and every other governor in Pennsylvania history from now on, because unless we do, this selection of statewide judges will not be in accordance with the way we view things. The minority rules, we do not believe in them. The present Proposal No. 7 provides minority rule, and if you do not believe it, just look at it. Two-thirds of the Senate. The majority of the Senate would not govern here. It would be the minority. I am against minority rule. I am in favor of majority rule. That is why I am in favor of this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, just a comment of some levity which might be appropriate to the intensity of our proceedings. Some years ago, there appeared before a political rally of some five or six thousand people a candidate for a rather high office who spoke in stentorian tones and with all the passion that he could command for a reform. He called for land reform. He called for municipal reform. He called for State government reform. He called for tax reform. He called for all kinds of reform for a half hour or more. Then, a bewhiskered and begrizzled old gentleman from the rear of the audience stood up and, in a very loud voice, cried out, "Sir, what we need here tonight is chloroform."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Fay.

DELEGATE FAY. Mr. President, I have been sitting here and listening about taking the judges out of politics and I would like to ask one question.

I heard Delegate Gerber explain why it should remain as it is, but I have not heard from the people who have proposed this amendment and who are for it what is so wrong with the present system. I have not heard anyone yet get on this floor and say why they should be elected by the people. I am very curious to know why they have not made an issue of why the people should not elect the judges. Over the weekend, I received a telephone call asking me to vote for this amendment. I said, "What is in this amendment?" Well, do you know they were unable to tell me what the amendment was about? I said, "Now, why are you so interested in this amendment?" They said, "Because the Pennsylvania Bar Association is for it." I said, "Well, that does not convince me. That does not tell me anything, either. What makes you think they are so right?"

It was the same with the League of Women Voters. I have no quarrel with them. Up in our area they represent the country club set. They do not represent the little people. In fact, they do not represent anybody in our area. Why I say that is because I am a politician and I will admit that, but I never see them at the polls. I would like to know how many delegates we have here, and lawyers, on a very dull Primary, which it will be, how many will be out there trying to get voters to the polls? I always said that a Primary is like Tag Day in Scotland. Nobody is out. That is why I like to measure the League of Women Voters or any organization by what they do to get to the people and get them to the polls. If I am for something, I work at the polls.

I would like to get back to my first question. I have not heard what was so bad about the selection of our judges by the people and I would certainly like to hear from some of the delegates why it is bad. In my opinion, to sum it up, I think it is only a matter of who is going to pick them.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Michael.

DELEGATE MICHAEL. I am almost speechless. Since I have come to the Convention I have been called naive, I have been called an idealist. I have been called a Democrat, and I even begin to feel rather predatory when Delegate Irvis says that we are attacking him.

I want to speak in two respects today. First as an individual member of this body, and secondly as a member of the League of Women Voters, and I want to explain that: you say there are no politics, and nobody who is running for office, in the League of Women Voters. There are two of us on the floor. There are others who ran for delegates to the Convention. We ran on party tickets. We had party workers helping us. We had members of the League of Women Voters who are party members who helped us and worked for us, but now let us, before I go any further, explain the relationship of the League of Women Voters to individual members, and then I want to explain the relationship of the League of Women Voters to the community and to this Constitutional Convention as far as issues are concerned. As members of the League we do belong to a political party, and we are urged and encouraged by the League of Women Voters to work for the party of our choice. The only time when we may not is if you are board members, because the policy of the League of Women Voters is non-partisan.

Let me explain that. I resigned from the board of the League of Women Voters of Greater York when I chose to run for this Convention, and I did that because we do not have party labels attached to our policies. The League studies issues. It studies issues like water pollution, problems of taxation in the locality, election laws. These are a few of the issues it studies. It studies them for two or three years before the group comes to a stand, and that stand is the stand of the League of Women Voters.

We do not support any particular politician. We support the issues. If a man stands for those issues, then probably our members will vote for him, or they will encourage voters to consider the issues and then decide for which candidate they will vote, and this is a very important feature of the League. We have had to operate this way because women's suffrage did not come until 1920, and the League was formed at that time and has been working to educate voters and to educate women voters ever since that time to be intelligent, active, participating citizens in the politics of this country. The purpose of the League is to "promote political responsibility through informed and active participation in government."

I think that this is something that is very important that we understand. You say we are not practical politicians. I know a number of committee women who are members of our own local League. One of our members was Prothonotary in York County, so I do know our people are actively engaged in politics and are not quite as naive as you paint us. You call us the country club set. Yet our membership is open to any woman citizen over 21. I will give you a most recent instance which took place in York County. Members of the League worked in the economically-impoverished sections for the Office of Economic Opportunity, with approval of both political parties. Our members worked getting those people out to register. They worked getting those people out to vote, making them realize that their vote counts and what it counts for. I do not think you could find any group in the country that works harder at voter education than the League of Women Voters. When you say that we are not interested, that we do not know the voter, I think you need to look at the facts. The League publishes election law information for the voter. They publish and distribute the Voters Guide, which many local newspapers print as a public service. The League of Women Voters is the only group that sets up such a sheet giving biographical information on every candidate who chooses to answer a questionnaire, who answers questions on political issues. They include both parties, or three parties, if you have a Constitutional Party running. These guides are distributed through schools, through organizations, public squares, shopping centers, everywhere, to get non-partisan information out to the voters so that we can make intelligent judgments.

I give you this background because I feel you raised the question of the League of Women Voters as a lobby. There is no financial gain that we could get out of anything that we advocate. The League is a non-profit organization. The important thing is that we want educated voters in the country and in this State of Pennsylvania. This is why the League is interested in the Constitutional Convention. The League has studied these issues for 14 years in the State of Pennsylvania. This is why the League feels it can take a stand on items like the Judiciary and Local Government, for example. You have to study those articles before coming to a conclusion. The delegates and the citizens in the State of Pennsylvania have to read the material and really weigh both sides before they finally come to a judgment. This is, I think, as I said, one of the most important things that we, as citizens, that we as Constitutional Convention delegates do when we are looking at any public issue to weigh the facts of both sides, and to come to what we consider the most informed judgment that we can.

Now, the last speaker asked for what reasons do those who are for this amendment, who would like to see the selection of judges, support that proposal. I say that the League has worked with women voters and worked with men voters, and has worked with voters period. I think they would come up with the same conclusion that Delegate Clinger came up with the other day when he said he interviewed a random number of people as to how many of them knew who they voted for in the last statewide election for judges, and his percentage was mighty small, as I think you would find this in any area that you checked the voters in, and that most of them would not remember who they had voted for for a statewide judge. We feel that the voters really do not exercise the choice here if they do not know the judge that they are voting for, they vote for the presidential candidate or they are voting for the governor, and the judge goes in with the party that wins, rather than going on his individual qualifications.

Let us discuss the panel selection. The man has applied to run. This amendment states that applicants are to be considered by the Commission, and then this Commission makes out a list of 10 or 20 judges, so that the governor does have a choice here, and then with the merit retention system, the voters can look at the judge without any party label.

Delegate Fay asked this question, and I will go back to the Luzerne County judge who objected to political pressures, who objected to giving a party contribution for every campaign whether he was involved or not, who objected to having any commitment to a party that might interfere with his judgment as a judge. Now, we have had a good bench in Pennsylvania. I will agree with the other speakers, but here we offer an alternative for a better bench. We do not have as good a bench as we might have, because there are men who will not run under the present system. If they have to contribute to the campaign, they will not run. If they have to be committed to a party, they will not run. If they feel there are favors involved, they will not run; there are many men who will not run on that basis. In that respect we limit our choice, and the final, the last reason is, as Governor Scranton and I both mentioned before, the judiciary is not necessarily the place where you reflect the will of the majority.

As Governor Scranton said, the Bill of Rights would be in bad shape if we had to depend on the will of the majority, and so I think you have here three reasons, three positive reasons, for choosing the selection of judges rather than election of judges. This particular proposal, the Stout Amendment, gives us two alternatives. It gives us the selection panel, and if this does not work, then the governor may choose the judges with two-thirds advice and consent of the Senate. I think we have good positive reasons for adopting the Stout Amendment.

EASTER SEAL BOY WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I wonder if my fellow delegates would permit me to interrupt at this time to introduce a young boy who has been waiting for some time to be introduced.

He is five-year-old David Castellani, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Castellani of Peckville, and he is the guest today of Delegate Scranton. I might add he is the Easter Seal boy of 1968, and he has been waiting back there, and if you will please bring him in, I think we will show him our joy and pleasure in having him with us today.

Do you think we could ask David to come down front? He is accompanied by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Castellani.

I want you to know that we are very happy and proud to have you with us today, David. As you all know, David represents all the handicapped children and adults in Pennsylvania as our Pennsylvania Easter Seal child of 1968. We are very, very proud of him and the good work that he is now doing, and will do for the handicapped in Pennsylvania.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. David, I want you to know that we are sorry that we kept you waiting out there so long, but even a presiding officer did not think this debate would go this long.

DAVID CASTELLANI. That is all right.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. He said, "That is all right."

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE RUTH requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 26, 1968.

Five year old David Castellani has been chosen to represent all the handicapped children and adults of Pennsylvania as the 1968 Pennsylvania Easter Seal Child.

David, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Castellani, 108 Ontario Street, Peckville, was born with cerebral palsy. When he was fifteen months old he began receiving physical and speech therapy at the clinic of the Northeastern Pennsylvania Society for Crippled Children and Adults in Scranton. At the age of two and a half years, his speech had improved to the point where it was considered normal and he was discharged from this service. More therapy lay ahead, however, in the form of physical therapy to improve his leg muscles and to teach him to walk. David was fitted with short leg braces and crutches, which he continues to use.

David, with his parents, made an appearance on television this morning with Governor Raymond P. Shafer and Secretary of Highways and 1968 Pennsylvania Easter Seal Campaign Chairman, Robert G. Bartlett, to launch the 1968 Easter Seal Campaign.

His visit to this Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1967-1968 is evidence of his courage and determination, and is an example to us all; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That this Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1967-1968 congratulate David Castellani for being selected as the 1968 Pennsylvania Easter Seal Child, and express its appreciation for his visit to this body; and be it further

RESOLVED, That this Convention designate David as "Honorary Page" to this Convention; and be it further

RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to David Castellani, 108 Ontario Street, Peckville, Pennsylvania.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, I would just like to amend the record to show that not only Governor Scranton but Delegate Casey and Delegate Popil, who are also here representing 234,000 people in Lackawanna County, are very proud, indeed, of this courageous young gentleman and his very gracious mother and dad for being with us today.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Very good. I am certainly glad that he has bi-partisan support, because that is what your campaign is going to have. I thank you very much for being with us, and thank you Mr. and Mrs. Castellani for bringing David in.

WIFE OF DELEGATE CAMARDELLA WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. While we are recognizing visitors I want to say that I am very proud to introduce the wife of one of our delegates who is about to take the microphone, Delegate Camardella, and I understand Mrs. Camardella is here. Is that right? Would you stand up, Mrs. Camardella, so we can give you our warm cordial greeting. There she is.

GUESTS OF DELEGATE BROWN WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand we also have present Mrs. William Ritts of Butler and she is a guest of Delegate Brown of Butler.

Now, where are you, Mrs. Ritts? Will you stand? There she is.

WIFE OF DELEGATE CUNNINGHAM WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. And we have another wife of one of our delegates, Delegate Fred Cunningham. His wife is here today. Would you please stand so we can tell you how pleased we are that you are with us? There she is.

WIFE OF DELEGATE McGLYNN WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. And not only that, by golly, we have the wife of Delegate McGlynn here today from Philadelphia. Mrs. Bridgit McGlynn, where are you, so that we can give you our cordial welcome?

I understand that she is up in the gallery. Is that right, Delegate McGlynn? There she is, his wife. It is good to see you.

BOB ROVNER WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. And I also understand we have the son of Delegate Rovner here today. Robert, I understand, is in his last year of high school. Where is Bob Rovner? He is out. Well, that is understandable.

You tell him we are very happy he was at least in here for a short time. That is probably all he could take.

AL BANES AND FRIEND WELCOMED

DELEGATE BANES. Mr. President, may I also rise to a point of personal privilege?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may, Delegate Banes.

DELEGATE BANES. I would like to introduce my dear son, Al Banes, and his fraternity brother, Jack Donaldson, from Lehigh. They are here spending the afternoon with us this afternoon.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you, and if they will stand up we will show them how happy we are that they are here.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will recognize Delegate Bunting who has been holding onto the microphone for a long time.

DELEGATE BUNTING. Mr. President, I want to comment very pointedly on the suggestion that we had not criticized the existing appellate court judges. I say to you folks that we are not here today to criticize the past and condemn the past. We are here to build for the future and we must not look over our shoulders. We must be willing to look ahead, look forward. I say this is where we need the real courage.

However, I do not suggest that anybody who does not want to look at what I consider in a forward direction lacks courage, because this is not the way we measure valor, courage, and things of that nature. But I do say we are here to build for the future and not to defend the past. Now, as far as the League of Women Voters is concerned I do not believe they need to be defended. But I want it to appear on the record that I do not join in the ridicule of their efforts. Mr. President, I join in Senator Casey's statement that all of the groups that have indicated their desires for Constitutional revision and reform exercise a beneficial effort, and at least they make us think on a broader scope as to the problems before us. I do think this weekend's activity, though, is significant for another reason. I direct this to Delegate Irvis, if he is still here; and that is that we would certainly not want any individual judge who is deciding a case of state significance to be subject to the telephone calls, the political influence, if you will, that has been raised over this weekend. That is what we mean when we say let us keep the judges as removed as possible from the political scene. Not that the judge does not have fortitude, courage, and is able to withstand this effort, but why should he be subjected to it? It was said a few days ago that Justitia, the Goddess of Justice, wears a blindfold. I still think our objective should be to keep that blindfold in place.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Thomson.

DELEGATE THOMSON. Mr. President, I will be very brief. During the proceedings of this Convention I very, very seldom agreed with Delegate Gerber but I want to take this occasion to personally congratulate him upon his very enlightening remarks to this Convention relative to a certain organization of lobbyists or non-lobbyists, I am not quite sure which. But to say the least they have been consistent, I have for years observed their activities. I will say that they have been consistent. I have said many times that they are a bunch of very fine ladies who can be wrong more consistently than any single group I have ever seen in my life.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Camardella.

DELEGATE CAMARDELLA. Mr. President, I rise at this point with a heavy heart and in disgust. I was sent here by my constituents. I was elected by the Democratic Party. I did not feel at that time I was obligated to the Democrats or Republicans by the mere fact that I was endorsed by them. I had the feeling that my constituents sent me here to do an honest job, a non-partisan job. I was very, very happy on December 1st when this whole membership, this delegation, committed themselves as non-political.

As I sit here today and hear what has taken place over the weekend, I also am subject to some of the phone calls and telegrams. I do not think this has any bearing on it. I find here today name calling that is degrading this Convention, that is putting this Convention in deep, deep trouble. I am only hoping and praying that we can get on the right footing and stop this name-calling, political or whatever you want to call it. Let us get down to the more moral issue. Let our conscience be our guide and vote as we should with a moral obligation to ourselves and to our people, rather than stay here and call names—vultures and what not. I urge this Convention at this point, let us get on with the business, with the serious business, and forget this political movement with the words and what not. I think at this moment, Mr. President, we must stand up and be counted. Let our conscience be our guide and vote on this issue.

I move right now to vote on the Stout Amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Camardella, what we are frankly waiting for now is the preparation of the Goldman Amendment. We have and it has been our procedure to accept an amendment to an amendment.

DELEGATE CAMARDELLA. Mr. President, may I suggest a 15-minute recess? The longer we stay here the more we degrade this Convention.

AFTER RECESS

GOLDMAN AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment being offered by Delegate Stout to Committee Proposal No. 7?

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 12), page 7, line 13 by inserting after "Each": justice,

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 12), page 7, line 18 by striking out "(d)" and inserting: (c)

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 12), page 8, line 12 by striking out "(e)" and inserting: (d)

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Goldman.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Mr. President, I apologize for the delay in preparation of my amendment to the amendment, but the session starting in the afternoon and the quickness of the calling of the Stout Amendment on the table prevented it from being ready sooner. Let me explain exactly what I am trying to accomplish. I believe after the number of drafts we have gone through on this amendment, I certainly hope that the words say what I intend them to say. Let me explain them to you so you know exactly what we are talking about. We have been involved in discussion of the election of statewide judges. We have been saying that we want to take these judges out of politics and we want them to make their decisions and their final judgments free from any political consideration. Yet, we also know and this has been admitted to by the proponent to the Stout Amendment that our current Statewide judges are rendering decisions that are good throughout this entire country, that the decisions being rendered by our appellate courts, are being used as reference by other appellate courts throughout the entire country and, therefore, in the decisions rendered by these courts, even though the judges have been elected, have not been politically oriented, have not been politically tainted.

I am trying to work out some system that will be acceptable to everyone here and yet at the same time, still keeping our court system within a framework that is free from politics as much as is possible, a system that will still render or still permit the courts to render valid, decent, honorable decisions, and this is what I have come up with.

First of all, I think we ought to retain basically the same type of election system that we now have with two exceptions. The first exception being, that after we have elected a judge he will run every ten years but for his re-election, we will use a merit retention system. We have already approved that for the local level and I am now proposing we do it on a statewide level. That the judges, once they are elected, will thereafter run for re-election solely on the basis of their past performance; that they would then go on to what we come to call a "yes or no" ballot. This keeps them out of politics, running solely and exclusively on their own background, on their own ability as they have proven it in their preceding term.

Secondly, I have gone on a little bit further and I have said that if the people of Pennsylvania want to have a panel system, then by referendum the people can vote in a panel system. I want to call your attention very closely to this. I have not tried to put anything in as a hooker. I have not tried to put anything in that would prevent the people from adopting such a panel system. I have required a five per cent number of electors in the general election to be able to call this referendum. This is no ten per cent or fifteen per cent. I am making this simple, requiring only five per cent of the people to bring in a panel system, should they so decide. Along with that, we have the continuing election of our statewide offices with the merit retention system of their re-election, if they run only on their own record and not against another political candidate, keeping our statewide judges out of politics. This is the only thing I am trying to accomplish by this amendment. I am trying to give us something that is not only acceptable and agreeable to all the delegates here, but something that is proper; something that is basically good and something that we need for a proper judicial system at the statewide level in Pennsylvania.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Butera.

DELEGATE BUTERA. I have one question to ask of Delegate Goldman, Mr. President: what would be the effect of the Kauffman Amendment if the Goldman Amendment to the Stout Amendment were adopted?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. I am sorry, what would be the effect of the Kauffman Amendment? What is the Kauffman Amendment?

DELEGATE BUTERA. That is gubernatorial appointments with advice and consent of the Senate.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. That is out, completely. We have no gubernatorial appointments with the advice and consent of the Senate. The only time we will have a gubernatorial appointment is if the people should come up by referendum, put in a judicial qualifications panel, in which event, from that panel, the governor would select one of those persons so designated.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hook. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE HOOK. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE HOOK. I direct this to Mr. Comisky. Can this now be done without a motion to reconsider the Kauffman Amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Apparently the answer is that this is an entirely new proposal and can be done without reconsidering the Kauffman Amendment.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. May I ask Delegate Goldman a question?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Yes.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. On the second page here, where you have that long piece of what is new about your amendment, the very last sentence on the first paragraph says: "The question shall not be placed upon the ballot in a judicial district at more than one election during any five-year period." Now you intend this, as I understand it, to be a referendum, an option of the voters statewide, and not in a judicial district.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Yes.

The words "judicial district" should have been eliminated.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. You are not trying to put the option back in locally?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. No, sir.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Then we have to take this out.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. This was done quickly and I am sure Style and Drafting will have to rearrange this to really set forth its accurate and true intent.

A question has been asked of me from the floor, if I may answer it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I do not know who it was.

I will now recognize Delegate Michener who wants to be heard.

DELEGATE MICHENER. In the lines right below the big insert on the second page it says, "Amend page 1 of the amendments by inserting between lines 22 and 23 . . ." Inserting what?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. That is a recopy, exactly verbatim, of the original Stout Amendment. However, that would have read, it should read again at the bottom of my page 2.

DELEGATE MICHENER. I simply cannot make this out, Mr. President. Mr. Goldman says that in the big insert two terribly important words are in there by accident and now the big problem of the inserting of something between lines 22 and 23 is left blank. I suppose we are supposed to be wizards to know these things. I certainly do not know what he is talking about.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. The parliamentarian has adequately answered that for Delegate Michener. For the benefit of the others who may not have heard the parliamentarian, his comments would be that at the end of the printed portion, where it should show the "State Judicial Qualifications Commission be established, then the Governor shall appoint a person from a . . ." and then we go back to the Stout Amendment, ". . . list of persons qualified for the office submitted to him by a State Judicial Qualifications Commission," and then continue on with the original Stout Amendment.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Bloom. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BLOOM. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BLOOM. I cannot understand, from my own knowledge of the English language—I understood Mr. Comisky to say that this wiped out the Kauffman and Stout Amendments, that this is an entirely different thing and it does not amend either one. It wipes them out. How can you amend something that wipes it out? This is an entirely new proposal. I am asking the Chair to dismiss it because it is not an amendment. It wipes out the entire proposals and you cannot amend anything that you wipe out in plain English.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Bloom, the Chair and counsel have gone over this very carefully and it was the decision of the Chair that we should have an amendment to the amendment, and that is what we are considering now. This does involve problems as to previous amendments that we have accepted, such as the Kauffman Amendment and other amendments.

DELEGATE BLOOM. Well, would you ask Mr. Comisky if he ever heard of an amendment that wiped out the original proposal and the amendment and wiped them completely out and put in a new proposal? I never heard of such a thing.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kline.

DELEGATE KLINE. Mr. President, I would like to ask the proposer of the amendment exactly what provisions it makes for the appointment of judges in case of death or resignation.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. It would be exactly the same as we are now providing for it at the local level. Should the event occur during the time the Senate were in session, the governor would then appoint someone but that person would have to run. It would be a short interim appointment exactly the same as it is on the local level.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. I wonder if Delegate Goldman would allow himself to be interrogated?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he would, proceed.

DELEGATE CASEY. Delegate Goldman, I think I share the view of many of this body at this moment. We are hardput to understand precisely the effect of your amendment. Would you just please explain, in four or five sentences, what your amendment does and does not do in terms of the Stout Amendment and the Kauffman Amendment?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. We will elect judges; that is No. 1.

DELEGATE CASEY. Statewide?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. This amendment relates only to statewide offices.

DELEGATE CASEY. To what extent will that be subject to referendum?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. That will be subject to referendum if five per cent of the voters in the Commonwealth, decides to have a panel selection of judges, after the five per cent is put on the ballot, if the people so approve it.

DELEGATE CASEY. Well, then, if I understand your amendment correctly, if your amendment to the Stout Amendment is adopted, all statewide judges will continue to be elected as they are now. Is that correct?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. That is correct, with the exception that they will be retained by the merit retention system.

DELEGATE CASEY. And the only change that would be made is if a statewide referendum election was had for such a change and installed the judicial qualifications panel. Is that correct?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. That is correct.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I have a problem. I am a member of that self same Style and Drafting Committee, which is supposed to perform all these miracles, and I spent, I think, somewhere between five and seven hours last night with the counsel to the Style and Drafting Committee and counsel to the Judiciary Committee trying to simply put together the effect of the amendments that there are there now. That being the case, I took a very good look at this amendment, and I have all kinds of problems with it, which, perhaps, if the sponsor of this resolution would be good enough to stand for interrogation, I may or may not be able to resolve.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation. Proceed with your questions.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, if I understand this correctly, page 1 of your amendment, the paper identified as "RLC AO 2/26/68," simply establishes statewide election machinery. Is that correct?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. No. It does not establish statewide election machinery at all. It merely provides for the continuing election of judges, with the addition that they are retained by the merit system.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Let me, perhaps, rephrase the question. Page 1 of your amendment as I understand it, simply says, that all statewide judges shall be elected. Is this not correct?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Yes.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Now, when I go over to page 2, the first thing that confronts me on page 2 is a comment that says "Amend page 1 of the amendments," plural. I take it you mean of the Stout Amendment, singular, do you?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Delegate O'Donnell, that was copied very much from what your original amendment was going to have been in relation to the continuing election of the judges.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I am not sure that your answer is germane to my question.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Yes, it does relate to the Stout Amendment.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. So if I strike lines 1 to 4 in the Stout Amendment, I have then stricken the line that begins "Amend Section 1," the line that begins with "and inserting," the line that begins "provided however," and the line that begins "with the advice and consent." Am I correct?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. That is correct.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Now, if I strike all those, and in addition to that in the fifth line have stricken, according to the second comment in your proposal, the words "Governor appoints a person from a"

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Yes.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Then the only thing left in the Stout Amendment is the comment that goes on "from them this a list of persons—" and so forth.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. That is correct.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I have stricken it down to "Governor appoints a person from a," and then I return to the proposal, Printer's No. 26 and it says "Amend page 6 by inserting between lines 12 and 13"—

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. I do not know where you are reading now, Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Well, after I have stricken the words—the first four lines of the Stout Amendment, and I have stricken the words that begin in the fifth line, to wit "Governor appoints a person from a," and I am inserting—what do I insert?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. "List of persons qualified for the office submitted." You are inserting those words back again from the Stout Amendment.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Where do I put that?—

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Those words beginning with "List," you put it right after where it says on my amendment "a person from a." Then the word "List" comes in.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. You say I do that on page 6, line 11 by removing the period after "Senate." Of course, my problem is that the word "Senate" does not appear on line 11 at all, not on Printer's No. 26 it does not.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. It does say it on Printer's No. 23. I do not know which printer's number you are looking at on No. 7.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I am on Printer's No. 23. I take it that the Stout Amendment refers to Printer's No. 23?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Yes.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. And your amendment, however, addresses itself to Printer's No. 26?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. We were up to No. 26 already. They intend to correlate themselves one to the other.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. So, you would then strike after the word "Senate"—in Printer's No. 23—"with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate a list of persons qualified for the office submitted to him by a State Judicial Qualifications Commission."

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Would you tell me what page you are on? Are you on Printer's No. 23?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Yes, sir. You have now told me, I believe, that you intended in your reference to the Stout Amendment to return to Printer's No. 23, leaving Printer's No. 26, and you wish me to go to page 6, line 11, and you wish me to strike after the word "Senate" the period, and add the words "a list of persons qualified for the office submitted to him" and so forth; which means it would read "with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate, a list of persons qualified for the office submitted—"

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. That is not correct at all, Delegate O'Donnell. That would not make sense.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I agree with you.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. The intent, Delegate O'Donnell, as I believe has been stated before, is to take away the two-thirds concurrence of the Senate, to eliminate that completely.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Well, Mr. President, I cannot vote on this intelligently. I cannot put all these together to be perfectly frank with you.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Casey. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE CASEY. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE CASEY. If the Goldman Amendment were withdrawn at this moment and a vote were taken on the Stout Amendment, and if the Stout Amendment were adopted by the Convention, would not the Goldman Amendment then be subject to being offered separately as a separate amendment without the necessity of reconsidering anything?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes. It is my understanding that it would, and I want the delegates to know that we had this discussion with Delegate Goldman and he had the choice of offering it as an independent amendment or offering it as an amendment to the Stout Amendment. It does make it difficult to amend the Stout Amendment, because there is so little left in the Stout Amendment, but this has been the ruling of the Chair consistently, that you can amend an amendment as long as you leave some of the amendment in.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, if I can make a suggestion very respectfully to Delegate Goldman, I have no desire Delegate Goldman to in any way inhibit your right to offer any amendment before this body, but I would suggest to you, sir, that interrogation on the part of Delegate O'Donnell, has demonstrated to my satisfaction, is that what began as a very clear-cut issue on the Stout Amendment, which was debated in very clear-cut terms, has now become very blurred, and I would not want to see this extremely important issue become blurred or confused by reason of the imposition on the present language of your amendment.

Would the delegate mind withdrawing his amendment at this time and submit it separately, and let us vote separately on the two amendments?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. As the President mentioned I had the option before and I felt it best to continue with the amendment as an amendment to the Stout Amendment. The reason for that is if we did pass the Stout Amendment, we would have tremendous difficulty trying to get in this particular language. That would not completely obviate or negate anything we have done with the Stout Amendment. I was trying to keep it in so that we are dealing with both issues at the same time and saying exactly what we intend to say, rather than saying it piece-meal to begin with and then putting in another amendment which would further be trying to piece it. I think if we spend a few minutes to discuss it, it would become very clear to everyone here who is interested in having it become clear. I cannot see any difficulty, that is why I am taking so much time to explain on the record exactly what my intentions are exactly, and what I hope to have accomplished by this amendment.

DELEGATE CASEY. I would just suggest to the delegate that both the Stout Amendment and his amendment, as far as I am concerned, will be considered in a way that will be clearer and in a way which would be more conducive to ruling on both of them on their merits if they are considered separately, and I would respectfully request and ask you if he would withdraw it, and if he would submit it separately so we can get a clear-cut decision on both the Stout Amendment and his amendment. In the absence of that, I would have to vote against his amendment, because I am not clear as to what it does, and I think it would just make a very difficult situation worse.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Mr. President, may I suggest that I do not intend to withdraw the amendment. I would, however, be more than willing to stand for interrogation, not only from Delegate Casey, but from anyone to answer any questions that might come up. I think it is necessary that we attack the problems immediately as they are arising. I agree that this is a basic problem we are attacking. Let us not deviate from that problem. Let us keep our attention focused sharply on it, and I will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, I think the interrogation as it has already demonstrated, can have no meetings of the minds as to what the effect of the Goldman amendment will be.

GOLDMAN AMENDMENT LAID ON TABLE

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, I move that the Goldman amendment be laid on the table.

DELEGATE MICHENER. I second that motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I have a motion to table the Goldman Amendment by Delegate Casey and seconded by Delegate Michener.

Let me restate the motion.

The motion is to table the Goldman Amendment to the Stout Amendment.

The motion was made by Delegate Casey and seconded by Delegate Michener. I understand the motion is not debatable.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Does this motion then have the effect of tabling the Stout Amendment itself?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am advised by the Parliamentarian that we can have a motion to table this amendment to the amendment and it will not affect the Stout Amendment, and that is pursuant to our own rules on page 21 which say a motion to lay an amendment on the table, if adopted, does not carry with it a proposal or resolution or other matter being amended. The Chair so rules pursuant to that rule.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Mattioni. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE MATTIONI. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE MATTIONI. On page 21, I refer you to the rule, at the top of the table, where it says, "Lay On Table," and it seems to me that it says: "A motion to lay on the table is not debatable, cannot be amended and requires a majority vote of the delegates present. Any motion to lay on the table, if adopted, carries with it the main question and everything that adheres to it;"—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am advised by our Parliamentarian that you have to complete reading the paragraph, and our Parliamentarian still states that this does not affect the Stout Amendment.

DELEGATE MICHENER. I think we should ask Delegate Mattioni to read the part that follows after the semicolon.

We were usually taught in writing that usually the meat of the thing follows the semi-colon. It says: "provided however, that a motion to lay an amendment on the table, if adopted, does not carry with it a proposal or resolution or other matter being amended."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is the ruling of the Chair based on the advice of the Parliamentarian and our own rules.

On the motion,

Will the Convention agree to the motion?

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. To change my vote from "nay" to "aye" since the vote has not been recorded and announced. Under the rules I am allowed to change.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You have a right to do that. From "nay" to "aye."

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, is it now in order to move the question on the Stout amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It is.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, in that event, this Convention having now at this moment an opportunity to go from a good Convention to a great Convention, I move the Stout Amendment and ask for its passage.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have a motion that has been made by Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE HOOK. I will second it, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The motion has been seconded by Delegate Hook, that we close debate and vote on the pending question and the pending question is, will the Convention agree to the Stout Amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. This is a motion to close debate and vote on the pending question and I just stated what the question was before the Convention.

Now you are voting on the motion to close debate.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Aberman. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I have deferred entry of an amendment on the Stout Amendment because I have waited to see the resolution of the Goldman Amendment. This amendment has been drawn and sitting on the desk, ready for distribution for approximately an hour and a half prior to Delegate Goldman's distribution. Since this amendment bears directly on the Stout Amendment, I would ask please to introduce the amendment at this time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am advised that since we have a motion before the Convention to close debate, that motion was made and seconded, we have to vote on the motion. We now unlock the voting machine and vote on the motion to close debate and vote on the pending question. All those voting "aye" vote in favor of the motion to close debate. All those voting "nay" vote to continue debate.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

ABERMAN AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment being offered by Delegate Stout to Committee Proposal No. 7?

DELEGATE ABERMAN offered the following amendment to the amendment offered by Delegate Stout which was read by the clerk:

Amend page 1 of the amendments by inserting a period after "Commission" in line 7

Amend page 1 of the amendments by striking out "composed of four non-lawyer electors appointed by" in line 7, all of lines 8 to 22, and inserting: Such State Judicial Qualifications Commission shall be established by the General Assembly by law.

Amend page 1 of the amendments by striking out all of lines 23 to 34 and inserting:

Amend Schedule (Sec. 21), page 34, lines 17 to 27, by striking out all of said lines

Amend Schedule (Sec. 22), page 34, line 28, by striking out "22" and inserting: 21

Amend Schedule (Sec. 23), page 35, line 11, by striking out "23" and inserting: 22

Amend Schedule (Sec. 24), page 35, line 23, by striking out "24" and inserting: 23

Amend Schedule (Sec. 25), page 35, line 29, by striking out "25" and inserting: 24

Amend Schedule (Sec. 26), page 36, line 6, by striking out "26" and inserting: 25

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Aberman.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Mr. President, I have sat for many weeks and bore the brunt of many comments asking me when I was going to stand and when I was going to talk. I think because of the performance in Local Government many expected me to talk. But I have listened long and hard about the Judiciary Article because I came to this Convention with mixed feelings. I came to this Convention as an elected delegate from a district that encompasses the widest possible space between economic levels in the City of Philadelphia; probably encompasses the widest spectrum of political opinion in the City of Philadelphia. I have listened long and hard to many of the arguments that have been advanced and I have listened to the arguments in the name of reform and watched the many reform proposals that have been adopted by us—the tenure selection, the qualifications of the judges, and their mandatory retirement, the uniform administration of justice in the Commonwealth, and the fact that every judge is now responsible and responsive. I thought these were very great advances and indicative of what could be done. Over the weekend, as we are well aware, I was entreated to make another advance in the name of reform. I must confess when I heard this great change in the name of reform I asked myself a question, and I still have yet to satisfy myself of the answer, and that is, are we qualified to define reform for the people of the State of Pennsylvania?

I am not sure as an individual delegate what reform is, when it comes to the question of the appellate courts. I share with my dear friend, Frank Fay, the unanswered question, what is wrong with the system that is presently in existence?

I have heard innumerable times what is wrong with the magistrates' courts of Philadelphia, and everybody is quite sure they are filled with what I have been led to believe are dishonest, incompetent and illiterate men. I have never stood and said anything on that point because it seemed to be universally held opinion, which unfortunately I do not share. But when it came to the appellate courts and the judges therein, I have waited very long and very patiently for someone to tell me how the people are going to be better served by this reform plan. I listened to the distinguished representative from Pittsburgh, Delegate Irvis, articulate a point of view that I hold. I do not think I could articulate it any better or any more competently than he just expressed it today, and that is, that the people—of whom my parents were probably one of many millions—came to the United States to escape a tyranny that drove them from their homes and prevented them from holding real estate and forced them to deal in money because they could not own real estate. The only thing they could own was that which they could grab and run from their house before the advancing hordes of people who were driving them from country to country.

I have extereme difficulty with accepting a point of view that says to me that the people now must give up a right. So I looked at the Stout Amendment and I thought long and hard about it and I said, I am convinced in my own mind if the people want this, let them adopt it. I cannot speak with surety that the judicial qualifications commission is a good idea. I do not think we have a right here to say that it is a good idea. All I have simply done is to provide for the alternative, that there will be an appointment with two-thirds consent of the Senate, or that there will be such a judicial qualifications commission as may be established by the General Assembly. Now why did I do it? I did it because it was such a good idea that the General Assembly, which respresents the people, should create the judicial qualifications. I am unsatisfied with the detail that presently exists in this plan. I do not think that a telegram delivered to my house at 7:30 on a Sunday morning—which did not endear me too much to the people that sent it—is enough to sway my mind to bring something to bear, which I think deserves a vote from the people of the Commonwealth. I would ask you to think long and hard about what you are doing. If this idea represents a reform in your mind, ask yourself the next question, if it is a reform, do the people that I represent, are they fully and adequately aware of what we are giving them in the Stout Amendment and do they in fact want it? If you feel you are adequately prepared to answer the latter question, well, then you can vote for the Stout Amendment and vote against this proposed amendment. But I am not satisfied. I am not satisfied that what has come before us today is adequately thought out, represents the best possible interest for all of the people of the Commonwealth.

Therefore, Mr. President I have prepared this amendment to allow myself the satisfaction of testing my point of view. If you disagree with it, I ask you to vote one way or the other, but at least test yourself on the dilemma that I have found myself throughout the entire discussion in Proposal No. 7.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Rappaport.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Mr. President, I had the privilege of addressing this floor earlier and I think that my opinions of any other method besides that of electing judges are well done. I too had the same experience as Delegate Aberman did of being stopped by people in my own neighborhood and being asked, "Say, what are you fellows doing up there and why aren't you in favor of reform?" I discussed earlier what my concept of that word means. I am troubled by this whole idea of mandating various methods in our Constitution. I rise to support this amendment and it has not yet been seconded, I would second the amendment.

If the panel idea is a good one, and I personally am very skeptical about it, let the legislature study this matter and study it at great length. We had I think three days to think about it or perhaps three months. The present method of selecting judges has been in effect since the 1838 Constitution was amended in 1850. The reform movement in 1850 was to provide for elected judges. It would appear that the reform movement of 1968 was to go back to the selected judges. If that is what the people want, so be it, so therefore I would urge support of this amendment.

Let it be provided by law as the legislature shall do it. We were very much down on the Legislature the first couple of weeks, but since being here, maybe we do not have the typical view. We have had the privilege of being with the leadership of the Legislature and they have been a great help to us. I think they can come out with a proper plan and I urge support of the Aberman Amendment.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Would the sponsor of this amendment consent to be interrogated, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he would. Would you please stand for interrogation?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I think I understand this one perfectly. Delegate Aberman, as I understand, this does not like the Goldman proposal, install or admit the election of judges?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. That is correct. I am willing, although I said before I am in favor of election, to live with the appointment. I am simply providing that the method for creation of the commission should be done by the General Assembly and not by this Constitutional Convention.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Your proposal contemplates that appointment of statewide judges shall continue to be by the governor with the consent of two-thirds of the Senate, until and unless the State Legislature would appoint a judicial qualifications commission of its own creation, is that correct?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Yes, I believe the effect of this language is to mandate that the General Assembly shall act.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. What happens if they do not act?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I do not know whether there is a right of an individual to force the General Assembly ever to act. We have made that assumption throughout the Local Government article that the General Assembly will act when we say they should act.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. A final question. One of the plans which a majority of the House and a majority of the Senate could carry would be to install its own majority officers as the judicial qualifications commission, could it not?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. The Legislature could be competent to do anything it would deem to do in its wisdom. My reply to you would be that they would then be responsible to the voters who elected them. The people who sent us telegrams over the weekend, feel they want to bring their errs to us; that the General Assembly would act on such an atrocious matter, let them do it then. I do not think it is our province to do it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. In other words, the only change between your proposal and the Stout proposal, where the Stout proposal insures that non-lawyers have the majority and further insures that these be appointed by staggered terms of governors, and assures that certain appointments be made by the Supreme Court and appointment by the Superior Court; you take all of that machinery away and say the judicial qualifications commission shall be composed of anybody at all that the Legislature might put into the job, is that correct?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I would not state it quite that way, Mr. President. I would say the alternatives that are available to the General Assembly are any one of innumerable alternatives, one of which might be the one you just mentioned.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barry.

DELEGATE BARRY. It seems to me Delegate Aberman did not correctly answer Delegate O'Donnell's questions. He provided that there will be a commission. In other words, the commission is mandated and in response to his question, what happens if the General Assembly does not act? Is it not provided, the schedule will go into effect on January 1, 1969 and therefore, the General Assembly does have to act?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. It was my assumption that they would act. If the answer is that they must act, I am perfectly satisfied with that answer. I am not aware of the scheduled provision on this particular qualifications commission. I will accept your statement that they must act under the existing schedule.

DELEGATE BARRY. In other words, you do mandate that there shall be such a commission but the makeup of it, you have not designated, but you do mandate that they shall act in this article.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. That is correct.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. President, it seems to me, in view of all the talk about reformers and the like, that it is well, at this time, just to state the basis of facts upon which the proponents of this Stout Amendment appeal. The basis is that it has been found in experience that the political system of selecting judges cannot be depended upon to get the wisest and best men we have for judges. As I begin what I have to say on this subject, I want to quote some wise words of Oliver Wendell Holmes, the late Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, which are well known to all lawyers. He said: "The life of the law has not been logic. It has been experience."

Therefore, as I heard all of these impatient statements about doing away with the rights of man and our sacred rights and interfering with the sacred fabric of our government, I think about Justice Holmes: "The life of the law has not been logic but it has been experience." Now on the side of logic are some of the delegates who are willing to admit that they have come representing aggregations of political power prepared and determined to defend the political system of appointment of judges. It is, of course, obvious that judges make very valuable pawns in the game of politics. Sometimes the judge may determine the entire political question. Remember also that unchecked political power can always find judges to do its will. Witness, bloody Jeffries in England, witness the judges appointed by the Hitler regime in Germany. To choose a handy American example, the judges in Missouri during the reign of the Prendergast regime. This experience is most valuable at this time. It was not devised in Missouri but by the great research institutions of the law in this country, which are comparable to the research people in business or science. In their desperation, the good people of Missouri laid hope upon this plan already prepared for them. They allowed their judges to be recommended to the governor in the first instance by a panel of distinguished citizens. They required the judges to serve a trial term and then accepted or rejected the judges on the basis of their performance.

It was the political powers who prevented the general application of the Missouri plan in all counties of the State initially. It is the political power in the Legislature which has beaten down every attempt to extend that system statewide. This will finally come to a vote over the objections of the political authorities this year. In the meantime, the people of Missouri have steadfastly refused to go back to the old traditional system of electing judges. Three or four referendums to destroy the system have been defeated. The merit system in Missouri has continued for the last twenty-five years. Fifteen states now employ the Missouri plan in whole or in part. In Iowa and in Colorado recently the bench, the bar and the public united in the effort. In Illinois, the Penn plan failed upon first attempt but the women's organizations—I heard a good bit in this country of free speech, I heard a good bit about maligning women for asserting their views about politics. Since when have too many people become interested in politics? Since when have too many people become too deeply involved in politics? I would say to the gentlemen of the press that I am ashamed to have that come from a lawyer. It is unworthy of us lawyers.

In Oklahoma, this is a significant case. In Oklahoma, the people had suffered the deep disgrace of seeing three of the justices of the highest court of their state driven from office indicted and convicted of selling justice for money. In those circumstances, the people turned from the old system of electing judges and appointing judges to the modern merit system of electing judges.

I want to add in conclusion on that point that no state, ever having adopted it, has gone back on it. Now all this talk that we have heard here against this simple idea is in the face of the known experience. I plead for a fair consideration of the experience on the subject. In some departments of our new Constitution, the Local Government and Finance for example, the delegates have been willing to listen to experts. In others, they have not. Arguments for a new and modern judicial system, based upon the experience, have been met by appeals to logic, to supposed patriotism and sometimes by smears. In this circumstance, I ask you to consider the thing that Benjamin Franklin recommended in the great Convention. He recommended that delegates resort not to arguments but to an examination of their collective knowledge and a comparison of their respective views.

This is all we ask today. Examine the results of experience on this very subject. We talk about the Supreme Court of the United States. The Supreme Court of the United States was doing very badly in many of its appointments until bolstered by many types of these commissions and committees. Give us this application of the merit system, watered down even though it is by the variety of past votes and confused somewhat by these amendments, we will need the merit plan in our project this fall.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. I intend to vote against this amendment. I think it will effectively kill the principle of the Stout Amendment. I would just like to ask one question in conclusion. What is the position of the Judiciary Committee on this amendment? Are they for it or against it?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, naturally we cannot speak on behalf of the entire Judiciary Committee, but it is quite clear from what has happened as a result of our report to this body that the judicial panel, the way it was originally set up in the Stout Amendment, is much closer to what we recommended than the panel which is set forth in the amendment which is before us at this time. Therefore, I would recommend that we vote down this amendment and vote for the Stout Amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, over the months of this Convention I have come to admire and respect the thinking processes of some of the young men who have come to us and who have worked so devotedly and with so much dedication to improve our status and make their contribution to this Constitution. Among those are many who are of the opposite political faith which I have the privilege to represent. I say that one is Delegate Aberman. I know he has given deep thoughts to this matter. Therefore, I think, perhaps it has merit. But for my own clarification and my thinking processes on the amendment, and perhaps with some contribution to my fellow delegates, I desire to ask just a couple of questions.

If this amendment is adopted, as I understand it, the Governor would appoint statewide judges by and with the consent of two-thirds of the Senate, is that correct?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. That is correct.

DELEGATE STROUP. Then, second, there is a moral obligation in this amendment imposed upon the General Assembly, if I read this correctly, to set up a state judicial qualifications commission, is that correct?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. That is correct.

DELEGATE STROUP. Such moral obligation would be a matter which the General Assembly must take very much to heart and would try, with all effort, I should imagine, to adhere to. Would that be a correct statement of the gentleman's thinking?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I would think it is even more than a moral obligation, but I think that the mandated language makes it more than moral, but I will take your word "moral." That is correct.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, I think we would consider, in the General Assembly, that it is a moral obligation. I do not know of legal enforcement of it because I think there has been, in Constitutions heretofore—the Constitution of 1874—Constitutional Articles which were not carried out. However, that would be a matter which the General Assembly would have to take into its own heart and soul and to try to comply with the Article stated in the Constitution.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Roberts.

DELEGATE ROBERTS. I move the question or the amendment before us with the provision that Delegate Aberman be given an opportunity to make closing remarks.

DELEGATE WOODRING. Seconded.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Moved by Delegate Roberts and seconded by Delegate Woodring that we close debate and vote on the pending question. The pending question before us is the Aberman Amendment to the Stout Amendment with the proviso that Delegate Aberman be given a closing.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

The roll was recorded as follows:

The majority having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the affirmative and the motion was agreed to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Aberman.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Mr. President, my closing will be very short because I think I adequately expressed the point of view that I feel this amendment represents. The simple question really is, should not the General Assembly, which in my mind is the elected representative of the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, formulate a panel which, when constituted and adopted by the governor in the alternative, set the social, economic and legal policies that govern this Commonwealth?

I am not old enough to remember in the latter part of the 18th Century but all of us that are lawyers who read these cases and who look at the domination of the judiciary throughout this Commonwealth must, long and hard, think about this particular problem. You must be aware of what the domination of the Commonwealth could be or could not be under a Supreme or Superior Court. It is this point that I believe the people have a right to speak to and, therefore, this amendment simply says there shall be a commission, but the format of that commission and how it should be constituted and what it needs as an alternative to the appointment with two-thirds of the people should be available for the people to bring to bear upon the General Assembly, their pressures and their principles.

I, therefore, ask you to adopt this amendment so as to permit this very important question to be dealt with under the moral obligations put upon by Senator Stroup, but I think it is more than a moral obligation. I think we owe the moral obligation also.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now we are ready for the question.

The question recurs,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment to the Stout amendment offered by Delegate Aberman?

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Stout. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE STOUT. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE STOUT. Mr. President, just actually what is the present status of my original amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The status is that your amendment has been amended by the Aberman Amendment, which the Convention just adopted as an amendment to your amendment.

The question before the Convention is now on the adoption of the Stout Amendment as amended.

DELEGATE STOUT. How does it now read?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I would be glad to have Delegate Aberman, who amended it, read his amendment to the Stout amendment, if he will, please.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. The Stout Amendment starting from the beginning then says and inserting "provided, however, that such an appointment shall not require the advice and consent of the Senate in the event the Governor appoints a person from a list of persons qualified for the office submitted to him by a state judicial qualifications commission. Such state judicial qualifications commission shall be established by the General Assembly by law."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Stout.

DELEGATE STOUT. Would you consider a five minute recess?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is going to be up to the body. Does anyone have an objection to a five-minute recess as requested by Delegate Stout?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We seem to be hearing objections, Delegate Stout, to a request for recess.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Woodside.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, on the question, the previous question that was moved before, I would have liked to talk on that point, but since it has now been adopted, it is still a part of this.

There is in the Constitution undoubtedly certain provisions which are self executing. There are also in the Constitution, and there were in the Constitution of 1874, and there is in our Constitution certain things which are not self executing, and those things which are not self executing cannot be enforced as a general rule. There is practically no exception to that. Possibly the only one is the exception that was made in the case of the Apportionment which was forced upon us, not by our own law, but by the law of the Federal Government, and by the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States as to the application of the Federal Constitution.

Now, there is not any question about it, the amendment that was put in here, is not a self-executing provision, and there is nothing in the world that can be done to ever make it a self-executing provision.

In the Senate each one of the Senators can satisfy himself because he says, "I want to do it this way," and each member of the House can satisfy himself by saying, "I want to do it this way," and the Governor can satisfy himself by saying, "I wanted to do it different from the way the House and Senate did it." There is no question about it, there is no means of enforcing this. We should have known that before we voted, where it was suggested that there was a means to enforce it, because there is none, and there are a great number of provisions in the Constitution of 1874, and there are a great number of provisions in our own proposals that are not self-executing, and this certainly is one. If anybody thinks that they can enforce this by compelling the Senate and House to vote one way or the other, or adopt something on this, they are absolutely wrong.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barry.

DELEGATE BARRY. May I ask counsel a question?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Certainly.

DELEGATE BARRY. If there is a provision in the schedule that the judicial qualifications commission shall come into effect on January 1, 1969, would that be a self-executing provision?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am going to have counsel discuss it with you, and you can answer—

DELEGATE BARRY. I do not want it to be discussed with me.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You can give the answer to the body.

DELEGATE BARRY. All right.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We must give counsel an opportunity to answer.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Barry.

DELEGATE BARRY. Apparently the answer is "no," Mr. Chairman.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Amsterdam. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I am not at all clear as to the colloquy that took place just a little while ago. I wonder whether we might not have some clarification. Perhaps if I could ask Judge Woodside a question or two, it might help.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure Judge Woodside will stand for interrogation. You may proceed with your questions.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I assume that if there were put into the schedule a provision that a qualifications commission made up in a particular way was to be effective by January 1, 1969, unless the Legislature set up a different way of setting up the qualifications commission, that provision would be self-executing and effective unless the Legislature itself set up a different type of qualification commission. Is that correct, sir?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. That is correct, assuming that in the schedule there would be sufficient detail that it would automatically become effective and operative without any action on the part of the Legislature, and it would state that it would become operative on such and such a date if the Legislature had not acted otherwise. That would be the self-executing proposition.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, that was my understanding. I should like to amend the schedule to provide for that in order to make effective what I believe was intended by this body in approving the Aberman Amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, I suggest to this body that we should be at ease until we discuss the amendment that Delegate Amsterdam wishes to make.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. I think, Mr. President, if I may have the attention of the delegates for a moment on consideration of our vote on the Aberman Amendment, I would like to point out this factor to my fellow delegates:

With the action of this Convention and with the conclusion of the statewide qualifications commission made a part thereof, with the burden imposed upon the General Assembly, there is little question whatsoever, but this will be an issue in an election.

You understand me, I hope. There will be those who will be driving for it and then the referendum will be expressed to their elected representatives on this particular issue.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Forster.

DELEGATE FORSTER. Mr. President, I take it, it is a matter of clarification that Delegate Amsterdam's comment of intention to offer an amendment to the schedule would have to be considered after the Stout Amendment as amended is voted upon, because it would have no meaning unless that passed.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I quite agree with that last statement, and it would seem to me to save a lot of time if we were to vote upon the Stout Amendment at this time as amended, and then if it passes, I would be glad to offer at that time the necessary amendment to the schedule.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I have been advised that you can do it the way you suggested or you could offer it as an amendment to the amendment, which I thought you were doing. Then are we ready for the question?

The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I wonder if Judge Woodside would consent to be interrogated, because I think that there are a lot of people very puzzled by this?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he would, so you may proceed with your questions.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, the effect of the situation we now have, as last carried by this body, and I do not refer to the Aberman Amendment nor to the Stout Amendment, would make a gubernatorial appointment subject to the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate. Is that correct?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. That is what I understand the proposal to be at this time.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Even though the initial members of the judicial qualifications commission were put into motion or appointed by the schedule, the Legislature would, under this Aberman Amendment, have the authority not only to amend the schedule but to change the entire basis of the selection and it would be a selection of its own choice. Is that correct?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. You say the Legislature would?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Yes. The Aberman proposal says that, as I understand it, that the Commission shall be selected in such a way as the General Assembly shall determine.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Well, as I understood it, and I have not been able to read all of this exceedingly carefully, the Legislature would be asked to provide for the commission. I do not think they can change the whole system around, but they would be asked to set up a commission. If they did not set up a commission, then, of course, the only remaining thing in the Constitution would be the appointment by two-thirds of the Senate. If they did set up the commission, they could set up the type of commission that they wanted to set up. That could vary in any way that the General Assembly would see fit to to have it vary.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. In other words, it would make it subject, however, to a method of selection of the panel other than its initial members, which would presumably be controlled by the schedule according to the way that it should determine, is this not correct?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. If the schedule set up a method. Of course, here again we are talking about language that we do not have before us, and it would be very difficult for me to say with specificity what would be the effect of the language which we do not have before us. The language could limit the Assembly to the form of the commission. Again, it could go further and set forth a whole new method of picking through a panel. So, again, I do not know what would be proposed in that.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Then, my final question to the delegate is, if the schedule change contemplated by Delegate Amsterdam were defeated, then there would be no judicial qualifications commission in effect whatever. Is this correct?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. That would be correct.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. May I ask Delegate Woodside a question?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro. I am sure he will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Is it not true that the same thing you have said with respect to the Aberman Amendment is also true with respect to community courts and with respect to commonwealth courts, that these provisions are not self-executing, that we must depend on the Legislature to implement them?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Those provisions are not self-executing and I think the Legislature is more likely to execute those than they are the others, for very obvious reasons, but they are not self-executing. I am not sure about the community courts, I am sure about the Commonwealth Court.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. Will Delegate Aberman answer one question?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, when this amendment says "such state judicial qualifications commission shall be established by the General Assembly by law," I take that to mean that the General Assembly, from one session to another, could change the composition of the commission, could it not?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. That is correct.

DELEGATE CASEY. It could, for example, make all members of the commission members of the dominant political party of the administration that happens to have control of the assembly at that time, is that right?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. As I answered the question of Delegate O'Donnell, we could suppose probably the most horrendous set of examples. We could spend the rest of the night, as a matter of fact, doing it.

DELEGATE CASEY. Would you mind just answering my question?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Well, the answer to the question, yes, they can do any one of innumerable things, one of which is this.

DELEGATE CASEY. The answer is yes. So that there would be no way of knowing, as we sit here this evening, as to what shape or form or composition the qualifications panel would assume from one legislative session to the next, is that correct?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. If we are now engaging in a debate upon a motion that has carried, Mr. President, I wonder whether the delegate's interrogation is in order.

My response to it will not be governed by that point, but I simply raise it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want to inform Delegate Aberman that your amendment is now a part of the amendment, and is before the Convention at this time, so I would say that the questions are in order, but you do not have to stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I will stand for interrogation. I just wanted to make sure of the position of this interrogation.

DELEGATE CASEY. I just want to know what we are voting on, that is all.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. In answer to the question, let me go a little beyond the simple examples and simply deal with the problem. The problem is, as I sponsored an amendment, I felt that the General Assembly is the responsible animal to handle this machinery. I therefore said that the Constitution should not contain in it provisions of details relating to the constitution of this committee, because I do not think it is the proper constitutional issue. Therefore I deleted that portion of the schedule which related to the composition and I created a simple statement that the General Assembly by law shall do it. I am not prepared to condemn or conceive of any possible way by which the General Assembly can deviate from this motion. I simply say that this type of a procedure will bring to bear on the General Assembly the same types of pressures for reform that we have just finished discussing, and in my mind this is the best solution and the most satisfactory one.

DELEGATE CASEY. I will restate the question, Delegate Aberman. It is a fact, is it not, that the General Assembly, under your amendment, can change the composition of the panel, the number on the panel, the political complexion of the panel, the qualifications for members of the panel, from one legislative session to another ad infinitum? Is that not right?

Would the delegate mind answering the question?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Mr. President, I would simply say that the answer is yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone else wish to be recognized?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Swope.

DELEGATE SWOPE. I would like to ask one question of Delegate Aberman if he would stand for interrogation once more.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will. Proceed with your question.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Under the provisions of your amendment to the amendment, and if the Legislature created a panel, would it be confined to any number of candidates it would submit to the governor?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. It would not, sir.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Kline.

DELEGATE KLINE. Mr. President, I want to make a couple of comments and then I would like to ask a question of the Chair and of the legal counsel. I wish everybody would listen to the answer to the question. I think it is very important. We have practically decided basically on everything in this judicial article except the way we are going to select judges to the appellate courts. As I view the thinking of the Convention, we are split into three camps, but basically two camps; some who prefer the statewide election of these judges as we now have and others who prefer a judicial panel. Because we cannot really agree on either, we have sort of come up with a compromise form that presents appointment and sometimes judicial panels, and no one really knows what is happening. I wonder if there might be some wisdom if we pause for a few minutes and let some of the experts go back to work and consider the possibility of separating this question entirely when we submit it to the people.

DELEGATE LAPUTKA. If Delegate Kline will make that in the form of a motion I will second it.

DELEGATE KLINE. I am one who wants to keep the status quo in the election of judges, but I would be willing to put on the ballot, apart from everything else, a clear-cut judicial panel question for the people to vote yes or no; and if they vote for it, they will get the judicial panel, and if they do not they will keep the election of judges. Now can that question alone be separated and stand alone on the ballot?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Kline, I am going to have counsel confer with you and you can announce the answer. I would like to see counsel for the Convention as well as counsel for the Judiciary Committee, and give them an opportunity to discuss the facts.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Laputka.

DELEGATE LAPUTKA. I, like Delegate Kline, am very concerned about where we are going. It appears to me that we are now going from bad to worse. It appears to me that we have now got a situation whereby, instead of having a confirmation of two-thirds of the Senate, we now set the position where the Senate by majority vote can rule how the state judges are going to be chosen.

I suggest that we take time out, that we recess, think this thing over, and discuss it a little bit before we come back to vote on it.

COMMITTEE REPORT

COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING ON PROPOSAL No. 4

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is it the feeling of the body that they would like to have a recess for dinner now and come back later? While we are thinking that over, the Chair would like to recognize Chairman Pelletier of the Style and Drafting Committee or Chairman Johnson, whichever one. They are going to report, I believe, on Proposal No. 4.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Mr. President, I stand in place and present our report for third consideration on Proposal No. 4.

COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING

519 North Office Building
Harrisburg, Pennsylvania 17106

February 26, 1968

To the Honorable,
The Delegates Assembled,
1967-1968 Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention

Re: Audit and Budget Procedures

Mesdames and Sirs:

We submit herewith our Report on Committee Proposal Four respecting audit control of public funds, the Governor's budgets and financial plan, and appropriations.

As we have noted previously, the Committee on Style and Drafting, to insure harmonious usage in style and manner of expression throughout the proposed Article Eight, held this proposal until the Committee had completed its consideration of Proposals Three and Five. Similarly, the Committee, in consultation with one of the Co-Chairmen of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People, has renumbered the sections amended by this proposal to insure a logical numerical pattern in accordance with the view of the Convention expressed Friday last during third consideration of Proposal Three.

The Committee once again acknowledges the cooperative spirit and willing attention to detail of the substantive committee as this Committee sought to discharge its duty of examination and editing under Rule 22. We are pleased to note that the changes in style and manner of expression have met with the agreement of the substantive committee.

Significant Changes in Drafting

1. In Section 10, the description "body" was deleted and a more encompassing noun "entity" inserted.

2. The statement with respect to the officer responsible for the pre-transaction and post-transaction audit has been restated to make clear the sense of the Convention that the officer who initially oversees financial transactions cannot be the officer held responsible for the ultimate verification of those transactions.

3. Section 12 has been rearranged to eliminate unnecessary duplication and to more precisely describe the Governor's responsibilities in the preparation of a budget and financial plan. Similarly, in Section 13 precision of expression was sought by minor changes in style.

4. Section 12 (b) has been reworded to insure that the intention of the Convention to bring all capital expenditures within the scope of the capital budget is realized.

Respectfully submitted,

COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING
By: ROY H. JOHNSON
LAWRENCE L. PELLETIER

ANF:WPH:met

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you. It will be accepted by the Chair. It will be printed and placed on the calendar.

COMMITTEE MEETINGS

DELEGATE JOHNSON. The Committee on Style and Drafting would like to have the Chairman of the Committee on Taxation and State Finance and co-chairman meet after we recess in our workroom on the second floor.

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is there any objection to a recess for dinner, about one and one-half hours, and then coming back?

The Chair hears none, and the Convention is now in recess until 8 p.m.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time of recess having expired, the Convention will come to order.

COMMITTEE MEETING

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kline.

DELEGATE KLINE. Mr. President, based on the thought that we might split the question on the judiciary on the ballot, several persons have been at work developing a form that this might take. We are now down to two basic approaches. Rather than get into the details of either, I have agreed with the presiding officer, the president, who differs slightly from my approach, in that we might both present the respective approaches to the Judiciary Committee and get their reaction to it. I think it would be a more orderly way of doing it, Mr. President, and would not in any way preclude the full Convention utimately considering both proposals.

I, therefore, request we stand in recess and call an immediate meeting of the Committee on Judiciary to consider this question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I might add, I have talked to the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee and I now recognize Chairman Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, the entire Judiciary Committee, if it is the will of this body that we handle it as Senator Kline has indicated, will meet at this time in the Senate Caucus Room on the first floor.

We hope to report back here within the hour.

MOTION TO RECONSIDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Mr. President, during the dinner hour I discovered a mistake that I made today and I would like to move for reconsideration of the Aberman Amendment. Many of the false impressions I had of the amendment were brought to light. I was under the false impression like many of our delegates, that the panel created by the Legislature, would be a long term, permanent type thing which would solve the problems for future appointments to the judicial bench. I now find this is a temporary type set-up. It could be changed from death or vacancy every time it exists. It is not the type of thing I want to be recorded as voting "yea" on and therefore sir, I would like to move for immediate reconsideration of the Aberman Amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kline.

DELEGATE KLINE. Mr. President, before a second to that amendment is forthcoming, if it is possible to work out a slightly different approach, none of us may have to consider again the amendment of Delegate Aberman or Delegate Stout, and I would suggest that the Convention rather than engage in a rather difficult and bitter debate on something that it might otherwise solve, would await the meeting of the Judiciary Committee.

I am perfectly willing to stay here and debate the Aberman Amendment again. We cannot indulge in the luxury of time any longer. Our deadline is pressing and I think with a minimum amount of time, we can come out of the Judiciary Committee with a sound proposal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Do you have any objection to holding your motion until the Committee returns, Delegate Murray?

DELEGATE MURRAY. In reply to Senator Kline, is it not true if the Aberman Amendment should be reversed, that would solve a lot of their problems?

DELEGATE KLINE. Not necessarily, Mr. President. I do not want to quarrel over this. I only suggested and I think it would be a sensible approach.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Forster.

DELEGATE FORSTER. Mr. President, I think it might be helpful to this body if Senator Kline would suggest the nature of the two areas that he wishes to discuss with the Judiciary Committee. If he does not wish to do that, I would think the very least he could do is include Chairman Nelson and Chairman Gray of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People, to that meeting.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think he will be happy to include them as invitees to that meeting. Is that right, Senator Kline?

DELEGATE KLINE. I would not object to the Convention convening as a Committee of the whole, if that be the will of the Convention to discuss this matter. I do think that it would be more sensible if we approached it in this way. I do agree it is a good idea that those who are involved, both in Style and Drafting and also in the presentation to the people be included at that brief meeting.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fawcett.

DELEGATE FAWCETT. Mr. President, would I be out of order to make a motion that we accept Delegate Kline's proposal to recess? I think that we have debated this thing to death, probably killed it and perhaps the Judiciary is willing now to compromise and come up with a proposal we could all accept.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Fawcett, frankly I had assumed there was not any objection to Delegate Kline's proposal. If there is, we can certainly put it in the form of a motion. I do not know what is on the minds of the other delegates that I have not called upon yet, so if you will permit me to recognize them, we may have to go to a motion.

DELEGATE KLINE. I move this Convention resolve itself into a committee on the whole for the purpose of considering the question of statewide appellate courts and their selection in the future.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I have been appraised by our Parliamentarian, that we have no provision for a committee on the whole meeting under our rules. I do think in line with Delegate Kline's suggestion, I think we could make more progress if this matter could be discussed with the Judiciary Committee and then come back. We would set a certain time. Let me recognize the other delegates and see what they have on their minds.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, this is a very serious problem which is so controversial now and has been all week. There are those in this Convention who favor the election of the statewide delegates. There are those who have indicated that they favor appointments by two-thirds consent of the Senate. There are those who favor the commission method of making this selection. Anyone of these that does carry, carries by just a few votes. It is, therefore, indicative and essential that we get more unanimity of consideration in this Convention if we are to send the proposal to the polls. I, therefore, heartily support my colleague, Delegate Kline's suggestion and I suggest that we take a recess and refer this matter not only to the Judiciary Committee but to Style and Drafting to see what they can come up with and see if we can reach more unanimity in consideration of passing this controversial problem.

DELEGATE CARON. The only question I have is whether or not it is not still more practical to have the committee meeting as a whole. I and the non-members of the Judiciary Committee are supposed to make a decision once more and we will not have the benefit of the discussion that will go on for the next half or three-quarters of an hour.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Leach.

DELEGATE LEACH. As one of the laymen in the group having listened for these many weeks to the situation, if we could be assured within the hour that the Judiciary Committee will come back to this floor with unanimity of opinion, it would seem to me it would be well worthwhile. Otherwise, I would have to go along with the delegate that discussed the situation, Delegate Caron. Unanimity of opinion would solve our problem.

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Since there is no objection to a recess, we do now recess for a period of one hour to permit the Judiciary Committee to discuss a problem.

The Chair hearing no objection, the Convention is now at recess until 10 o'clock p.m.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time of recess having expired, the Convention will come to order.

STATEMENT BY DELEGATE KLINE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will now recognize Delegate Kline, who will make a report.

DELEGATE KLINE. Mr. President, this is not a report from the Judiciary Committee. In a few minutes, when I am finished, Chairman Scranton will generally report to you on the thinking of the Judiciary Committee. I merely want to make a statement of what motivated my suggestion for compromise and what the attitude of the committee was. I hope it is as close to accurate as I can possibly make it. I felt that when I made the suggestion before we broke for dinner, that this very touchy issue was bogging down the whole judicial article and our whole progress towards a sensible approach and conclusion to the Convention, and ask that we might have a break to consider some possible compromise. During the break for dinner, two basic plans evolved as to what we might do with this knotty question. Please understand that when I discussed these two suggested compromises, neither suggests that we abandon what we presently have before the Convention because we already have before us here a plan whereby the judges on the Superior Court and Supreme Court can be appointed by the Governor with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate, and we have also the immediate question of the Stout Amendment, which was amended by the Aberman Amendment. None of us wants to wipe out that question which is before us.

I had suggested the possibility of separating this whole matter from the rest of the Judicial Article and going to the people at the April Primary and ask them a question which would take this basic form: Which do you prefer in the selection of justices and judges to serve on the Supreme, Superior and Commonwealth Courts? A or B? A, being the election method or basically the status quo which the gubernatorial appointment of vacancies with two-thirds of the Senate, or B, the appointment of judges and justices by the governor from a judicial panel without the advice and consent of the Senate.

I wish to report that I have lost many times in my life but this is the first time I ever lost unanimously. No one on the committee thought that was a good approach. Incidentally, from what has come out of the Judicial Committee so far, I am almost convinced that maybe that is a good approach.

Seriously, there was an alternative suggestion to compromise which, in effect, would write the article to include the election of judges, the status quo now, with the gubernatorial appointments and vacancies, with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate as embodied by Delegate Barron, and specified in the Convention another election in the Primary of 1969 to decide further the question of judicial panel.

Of the two compromise plans, the second one was felt, as I understood the wishes of the Committee, to be the better of the two, with very strong feeling that we should first resolve the question before the Convention now of whether we want what we have. It was suggested by the majority of those present, that we, understanding that those two compromises stand in the wing, we immediately address ourselves to the present question; that is, the Stout Amendment as amended by Delegate Aberman.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Chairman Scranton of the Judiciary.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Delegate Kline is a very modest man. He came to the Judiciary Committee greatly enlarged, incidentally. We had many other people there, but the voting was done only by the Judiciary Committee members. I think it is fair to say almost everyone felt the suggestion that he made was a helpful one because all of us are aware that this has become a very difficult nut to crack in this Convention and because there seemed to be three different thoughts on the part of members of the Convention: Those who want elections of statewide judges; Those who want appointment by the Governor with two-thirds of the Senate confirming same; and those who would like the panel method where the governor appoints. Now it is very hard to reconcile all those ideas. We have not succeeded in doing it once again.

We, first of all, as he said, took up the suggestion that he had made in comparison to another version of it. Unanimously, agreed that the second version was preferable; namely, that we adopt as a Convention the election method statewide and have in the adoption of that method a provision that a plebiscite be taken in the Primary Election in 1969 on whether the people wanted the panel method or the selection of statewide judges. This, because it would be determined for all time in one election. Secondly, because it would give them one year to understand what the panel method is all about. Most of us have been dealing with it for three months and are now quite conversant with it. People are not. Third, perhaps most important, the thinking was that if we put this question on the April 23rd ballot, it would cause very great confusion among the public in relationship to the other questions which we have already passed upon or will pass upon and that have been determined by the Convention and must now be approved by the people. We thought the less they were confused on those major items, by some additional item, the better off this particular election would be.

It was then suggested—by me, frankly, and I am presenting it to you—after a great deal of discussion by various members of the Committee to the fact that we now have on the floor of the Convention the fact that it has approved, as of the Kauffman Amendment, the appointment by the governor with two-thirds consent of the Senate and a substitute, therefore, in the Stout Amendment and in the Aberman Amendment to the Stout Amendment. It was suggested by me with the idea in mind that it might be fair to all of these groups, those who want elections, those who want appointments with two-thirds consent of the Senate, those who want the panel method, that the Convention, as a whole, now vote on the motion that was made by Delegate Murray to reconsider the Aberman Amendment, because there seemed to be a great deal of feeling over the dinner hour that a lot of people wanted to do this and if it was reconsidered and turned down we could then vote on the Stout Amendment, which we have not yet done, and which would give the people who believe in that one an opportunity to vote. Whether the Stout Amendment was approved or was not approved, that we then vote on the version that I just outlined to you, Senator Kline's suggestion, which would then give the opportunity for the Convention to decide they wanted elections as of now or a year from now, if people want an opportunity to change their mind and have the panel method.

The theory was that with these three votes we would give everybody who felt any of these different ways an opportunity to assert their thinking. The Convention would then finally determine which one we were going to adopt immediately on the floor. The one that is so far approved by the Convention is the Kauffman Amendment, which is the one in being at the moment, that we would give the appointment by the governor with confirmation of two-thirds of the Senate. We would then vote to reconsider the Aberman Amendment; if that was reconsidered and turned down, we would then vote on the Stout Amendment. Whether that was approved or not approved, we would then vote on the renewed version of Senator Kline's suggestion.

MOTION TO RECONSIDER ABERMAN AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Horne.

DELEGATE HORNE. Mr. President, I voted "yea" on the Aberman Amendment, and I vote now that we move this Convention to reconsider that amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have a motion on the floor to reconsider the vote by which the Aberman Amendment was adopted, and that motion is made by Delegate Horne, and as I understand you voted in the affirmative, on the prevailing side.

DELEGATE SHARP. I second that motion, and I likewise voted on the prevailing side.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Sharp, you voted likewise, on the prevailing side. Let me please ask the Clerk if he will check the voting machine to determine that both delegates voted on the prevailing side.

I am next going to recognize Delegate Jirolanio as soon as we have checked the voting.

I understand that Delegate Horne voted on the prevailing side and Delegate Sharp voted on the prevailing side.

We do have a motion on the floor, and the motion is to reconsider the vote by which the Aberman Amendment to the Stout Amendment was adopted.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Do I understand this to have taken place. There was a Stout Amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is correct.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Then there was an Aberman Amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. To the Stout Amendment.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Now, then, the Aberman Amendment passed onto the Stout Amendment.

Is that not so?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is correct.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Is it not a fact that the Stout Amendment today contains the Aberman Amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No. I understand from our Parliamentarian that the Stout Amendment has not been voted on, and this has not been agreed to. We have only voted on the amendment to the Stout Amendment, and I understand from the Parliamentarian that that is subject to a motion of reconsideration at this time.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. May I further my parliamentary inquiry?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Since the Stout Amendment was not voted on, the Stout Amendment has incorporated into it the Aberman Amendment. Is that not so?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. As of this moment it has, yes. That is what they want to reconsider.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Just a moment. I do not think that the Aberman Amendment itself is any longer the Aberman Amendment. It is now part of the Stout Amendment and they are both combined into one, because we agreed upon the amendment to be a part of the Stout Amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Jirolanio, according to the Parliamentarian's statement here, I still would rule that we can have a motion at this time to reconsider the vote by which the Aberman Amendment was adopted. Are we ready for the question? Apparently we are. We will unlock the voting machine.

The question on the motion is, will the Convention reconsider the vote by which the Aberman Amendment was adopted?

All those voting "yea" will vote in favor of the motion to reconsider. Those voting "nay" will vote against the motion to reconsider.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the motion?

The majority having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the affirmative and the motion was agreed to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, the question recurs on the adoption of the Aberman Amendment to the Stout Amendment.

Do we want discussion?

The Chair now wishes to recognize Delegate Shoemaker.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, I am a little bit confused by the necessity of backing up and reconsidering and rewiping out this amendment. Apparently, it is the committee's suggestion that we do that before we can proceed. We have to wipe out what we have already done by a ten-vote margain. I would like to ask Governor Scranton if he would answer me please, why it was necessary before we vote to wipe out this Aberman Amendment? Why is it necessary to wipe it out? Why can we not just go ahead and vote on the Stout Amendment as it was amended, and then take the steps to be outlined?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. First of all, may I make it very clear that the Committee made no such recommendation, and I made that very clear earlier. I said openly that this was my suggestion as to the method of procedure so that all the various groups who were interested here would have an opportunity to assert their own thinking. I did not personally suggest for example, that we reconsider the Aberman Amendment. This came up at the Committee meeting by both people who were on the Committee and people who were not on the Committee saying that the motion had been placed on the floor by Delegate Murray, and there had been a great deal of consideration over the dinner hour, and, therefore, the suggestion was that if the Convention so wished to do, they ought to have this opportunity.

The Committee is not making a recommendation as to how you vote on anything. All we are suggesting is that everybody be given an opportunity to assert their three-way thinking here, and we thought that this was the best way to do it, and I think it will be. I think you should vote on this amendment now, and if you vote on the Stout Amendment, and if you vote on the Kline suggestion, every person, every group will have an opportunity to assert themselves.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Then, as I understand you, Governor Scranton, it is not necessary to vote one way or the other for anyone to have an opportunity to express their line of thought or opinion.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. That is right.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I have a motion by Delegate Hook that we close the debate and move the pending question. It has been seconded by Delegate Thornburgh, and now we have a parliamentary inquiry before we vote.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Goldman. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Mr. President, would we not be able to accomplish what Delegate Scranton is saying if the Stout Amendment were just withdrawn, put in the Committee proposal of their compromise, and vote on that and proceed? I think we have all discussed these issues an awfully long time. I am just asking as a parliamentary procedure.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You are asking the Chair a question that cannot be answered, contrary to the motion we have on the floor; and the motion we have on the floor is pursuant to the motion to reconsider. The question before us is on the Aberman Amendment. We now have a motion to close debate and to vote on the pending question, so, therefore, I am going to unlock the voting machine.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

Less than the majority having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the negative and the amendment was not agreed to.

The question recurs,
Will the Convention agree to the Stout Amendment?

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, now I think we are moving much too fast.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Stroup, we have a motion on the floor and the motion was carried by a large margin, that we close debate and move the question. So this body was mandated that we now vote on the question and the question is, will the Convention agree to the Stout Amendment.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Prendergast.

DELEGATE PRENDERGAST. I would ask you what a large margin is?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I can only say I thought it was large. Let us look at it. The vote was 135 to 11.

DELEGATE PRENDERGAST. That is pretty large.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is one thing about my friend Delegate Prendergast, he will admit what a large margin is. The question before the Convention is, will the Convention agree to the Stout Amendment? We will unlock the voting machine and those voting "yea" will vote for the Stout Amendment; those voting "nay" will vote to reject the Stout Amendment.

DELEGATE TATE. Mr. President, may I ask for a verification before the vote is announced, please.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am asking the Parliamentarian to check the rules on verification before we announce the vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It requires the request of two delegates. The request has been made by Delegate Tate and Delegate Hook, so we therefore are going to ask for verification.

I first ask the clerk to read the affirmative roll. This is the affirmative roll. The clerk will now read the affirmative roll and all those voting yea, please let us have the attention of the delegates.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are there any corrections in the affirmative vote?

The Chair recognizes Delegate Bunting.

DELEGATE BUNTING. I voted "aye" in favor of the Stout Amendment and I did not hear my name called by the clerk.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will check that, Delegate Bunting.

You are recorded as having voted "aye." Apparently it was a mistake in the reading of the roll.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Banes. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BANES. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BANES. I respectfully suggest the rules do not provide for a verification of the roll call when it is taken by the electronic equipment. The rule in the last sentence states after the comma on page 17 after the word "or," "upon demand of two delegates before the result of a vote has been declared, the yeas and nays shall be taken by the electric roll call system." The only time verification may be called for is if there has not been an electric roll call vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Banes, the Parliamentarian has called my attention to the top of page 17 which states, "Upon completion of a roll call and before the result is announced, if there appears to be need for verification, the President may direct the Secretary to verify it, or five Delegates may demand a verification."

The Chair did say two and in that respect, the Chair did make a mistake at that time. It would require five under these rules.

DELEGATE BANES. I will withdraw my question. Proceed with the "nays."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The clerk will proceed. Are there any corrections in connection with the affirmative roll? The Chair hears none.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Fleming.

DELEGATE FLEMING. Rules call for this, that the affirmative roll vote be announced at this moment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand from the Parliamentarian, we cannot do that until we have verified both votes and I just want to state, that unless there are further corrections, the affirmative roll will stand as read.

Now, please verify the negative roll.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are there any corrections to the negative roll call?

The Chair recognizes Delegate Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY. I would like to know why Delegate Quiles of Philadelphia was in his seat and did not vote?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Do you have a vote for Delegate Quiles?

DELEGATE MURRAY. Under the rules, if a man is sitting in his chair, he must explain if he does not vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Prendergast.

DELEGATE PRENDERGAST. Delegate Quiles was not in his seat and did not vote, for the information of Delegate Murray from Philadelphia.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Will Delegate Quiles state that?

DELEGATE PRENDERGAST. I think Delegate Murray is out of order, because I am sure the roll call will record the fact that Delegate Quiles was not in his seat and was recorded as not voting or in the negative, whichever the roll call indicates.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The roll indicates Delegate Quiles did not vote.

DELEGATE PRENDERGAST. That is correct, for the information of Delegate Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Is the roll official yet or is it still being challenged? I do not recall the Chair announcing the count.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have not announced a count because a question has been stated from the floor whether Delegate Quiles was in his seat and did not vote. That is a question of fact. That can be determined by the body.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Will you ask Delegate Quiles why he did not vote?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Quiles.

(Whereupon, Delegate Quiles answered in Spanish.)

(Delegate Murray replies in Spanish.)

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want you to know our rule book does not cover that situation.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Mr. President, I still do not understand the vote.

DELEGATE KLINE. I suggest the rules clearly cover this situation. The delegate if he did not cast his vote and was in his seat, cannot now be recorded. His vote will go down in the negative.

DELEGATE MURRAY. He must explain his vote.

DELEGATE PRENDERGAST. This delegate was not in his seat and he did not vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me ask the question. The question was raised by Delegate Murray. Are you satisfied with the explanation of Delegate Prendergast, that he was not in his seat?

DELEGATE MURRAY. Sir, I would like to hear it from Delegate Quiles and I might be satisfied.

DELEGATE QUILES. Mr. President. I was making a telephone call so I was not present.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The delegate says he was not present in his seat. Let me ask one question. The negative roll has now been read. Are there any corrections? If not, it stands verified.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

The roll was recorded as follows:

MOTION TO RECOMMIT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Kline.

DELEGATE KLINE. Mr. President, to be faithful to the report that I made after my meeting with the committee on the Judiciary, I now want to make a motion and explain to you precisely what is involved. We now have agreed to this point on the selection of judges to the Supreme Court, Superior Court and Commonwealth Court by gubernatorial appointment with two-thirds Senate confirmation.

I am going to move and will move that this specific section be recommitted to the committee on Judiciary with specific instructions that it write the article to provide for the election on a partisan basis of statewide judges with the Governor to fill vacancies with two-thirds consent of the Senate, largely as it exists today, and that the proposal contain provisions for a clear election in the Primary of 1969 on a judicial qualifications commission, as a referendum on that clear question in the Primary of 1969.

AMSTERDAM AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Section II:

1. Delete page 5, Lines 19-23 inclusive, starting with "(a)".

2. Insert—"(a) Justices, judges and justices of the peace shall be elected at municipal elections by qualified electors of the Commonwealth or respective districts over which they are to preside, as the case may be."

3. Delete—page 5—Lines 24-30 inclusive.

4. Insert—"(b) Any vacancy happening by death, resignation or otherwise in the office of justice, judge or justice of the peace, shall be filled by appointment by the Governor to continue till the first Monday of January next succeeding the first municipal election, which shall occur ten or more months after the happening of such vacancy." If the vacancy occurs during the session of the Senate such appointment shall be by the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate. If the vacancy occurs during sine die adjournment of the Senate such appointment shall not require the advice and consent of the Senate.

5. Insert—"(c) At the Primary Election in 1969 the qualified electors of the Commonwealth may by majority vote of those voting on the question elect to have judges of State-wide Courts, the Supreme, the Superior, the Commonwealth Courts and such other State-wide Courts as shall be provided by law, appointed as provided for in Section 12.

If a majority vote is in favor of this method, then whenever any vacancy occurs thereafter for any reason in the office of justice or judge of any State-wide Court, the Governor shall fill the vacancy by appointment from a list of persons qualified for the offices submitted, to him by the State Judicial Qualifications Commission provided for in Section 12. Such appointment shall not require the consent of the Senate."

6. Insert Section 12. Judicial Qualifications Commissions.—(a) There shall be a State Judicial Qualifications Commission for courts of Statewide jurisdiction composed of four non-lawyer electors appointed by the Governor and three non-judge members of the bar of the Supreme Court appointed by the Supreme Court. The members of the commission shall serve for terms of seven years, staggered so that one member shall be selected each year, and no more than four of the members of the commission shall be members of the same political party. The commission shall consider all names submitted to it and recommend to the Governor not less than ten nor more than twenty of those qualified for each vacancy to be filled.

(b) During the term for which he has been appointed, no member of any commission shall hold any office in a political party or political organization nor shall he hold any public office or appointment for which he receives any compensation.

(c) Vacancies in any Judicial Qualifications Commission shall be filled for the balance of the term by the appointing authority.

Page 7—Line 19—Change "11(a)" to "11(c)".

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. May we have a recess for about ten minutes so we can look at this amendment? It is very difficult to know what they are doing here.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I have no objection. Delegate Jirolanio has asked for a ten minute recess. Is there any objection to that? All right, I understand that there is no objection provided it is limited to ten minutes, so at exactly thirteen minutes of eleven we will go back into session.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time for recess having expired the Convention will come to order.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, the amendment which has been distributed to all the delegates conforms to the suggestion made by Senator Kline and Governor Scranton. It provides for the election of all judges, justices of the peace, and, of course, justices of the Supreme Court. In the case of the statewide courts, it also provides that in the Primary Election of 1969, the electors of the Commonwealth may, by a majority vote, decide to use the panel system and a state judicial qualifications commission for state-wide justices and judges. This means there will be a year for the electorate to be indoctrinated as we have been these past three months with all of the good reasons for doing all the things we want them to do, whether it be to use the panel or not use the panel or to use election or not use elections in the case of statewide courts. This mandates an election one year from the date that the Constitutional changes are approved, as we hope they will be on April 23rd of this year, and in the Primary of 1969 there will be a vote taken to determine whether the majority of those in the Commonwealth prefer to have their judges appointed by the governor with the help of a qualifications commission.

The regular provisions we have seen in many of the amendments to date require for each vacancy no less than ten and no more than twenty names to be given to the governor, the permission for the qualifications commission to be made up of four non-lawyer electors appointed by the governor and three non-judge members of the bar of the Supreme Court appointed by the Supreme Court. We have continued the requirement that they shall serve for terms of seven years staggered so that one member shall be selected in each year and so on.

I might point out, however, that we included, in error, a proviso in the handwritten material at the bottom of the sheet, which is the so-called Barron Amendment. We have provided that vacancies occurring during the session of the Senate shall be filled by the governor with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate, which is quite correct in all cases except in the case of justices of the peace. We had decided by a vote several days ago that appointments by the governor of justices of the peace should be made with a majority of the Senate concurring and through an inadvertency, because of the way the language was set up, that was changed by the material which has been handed out. However, I suggest that if we insert after the word "Senate" in the fourth line of the written material at the bottom of the sheet the words "except in the case of justices of the peace, which shall be by the majority of the Senate," we will have continued to do what we had agreed to do several days ago. I believe, Mr. Chairman, that this is the change that was discussed at some length by the Governor and by Senator Kline.

If there are any questions, I shall be glad to answer them.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I would like to interrogate Governor Scranton, if I may, as co-chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure that he will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, was the amendment that is now before the House approved and recommended by the Judiciary Committee?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. No. I think I can answer it this way. The way this came before this body was, as the delegate will remember, that Senator Kline came up with a suggestion that something like it be considered by the body as a compromise for all the various positions that we are taking. Then we went and had the Judiciary Committee meeting, and, as an alternative to precisely what he suggested, the Committee thought this would be a better suggestion but they did not approve vis-a-vis any other type of method of selection.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. In other words, this is not recommended over the method of selection of appointment by the governor with consent of two-thirds of the Senate.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. No, there was no vis-a-vis any other type of method of selection, Mr. President.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Is there any method in their proposed amendment for those who would like to have appointment by the governor with two-thirds of the consent of the Senate to express that opinion?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. No. There is no opportunity for the people who believe that the governor should appoint the statewide judges with confirmation of two-thirds of the Senate. The only way they can get that now is by turning this amendment down, which would keep the provision in the Constitution that you put in with your amendment, which is the one that presently is there.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, this morning I made a motion to take off the table what I considered to be a palatable compromise and what I thought would help this Convention demonstrate to the people of the Commonwealth that we both deserve and want their support. I respectfully submit to you, if you pass the amendment that is now before you, you will be condemning this Convention, you will be insuring the defeat of the Judicial Article at the polls. We will be shirking our duty completely to maintain the status quo of election of statewide judges. There were a lot of very legitimate arguments presented both in the Judiciary sub-Committee where I was co-chairman on selection of judges, the Standing Committee and on the floor of this Convention for election of judges in a local judicial district. There are no really valid arguments why we should have election of judges statewide. There are many arguments which I would not repeat why we should not. I could tell you that it was virtually unanimous—at the very least, it was tremendously overwhelming, both in the sub-Committee and in the Standing Committee, at the time the Judiciary Committee was meeting that we did not want election of judges statewide. We considered that that was not good for the Commonwealth. We wanted appointmet of judges statewide. The only question was how will they be appointed.

I submit to you, that the one plan that we have left for appointment of judges statewide is appointment by the governor with two-thirds consent of the Senate, which insures minority representation and places responsibility where it belongs. It gives the governor the opportunity to do just what Governor Scranton did when he was one of the finest governors we ever had; appoint his own commission. He has appointed excellent judges and he did it under a plan set up by him voluntarily, not mandated by Constitutional provision, and I tell you that if we go to the people and tell them that we have decided to maintain the status quo, to maintain election of judges, that we have rejected the Federal system, that we rejected the system used in New Jersey and Hawaii, the system recommended by the National League of Municipalities in its model state constitution, we rejected a system that gives the governor the right voluntarily to set up the very panel that so many of us here have been fighting for, then I think that the people rightfully would reject so much good that we have done. We have done a tremendous amount of good in this Judicial Article. It makes my blood boil when I read the writings of people who say we have not done anything. We have done a tremendous amount of good. Please do not ruin it now. Let us go to the people and let us show them that we will accept the responsibility that we definitely have and not go to them and let them make elections as to whether or not we are going to have election of judges or some other method. That is what we were sent here to do, not to turn around and give the question back to them. They asked us, they elected us to come here and make that very decision. If we refuse to make that decision, then we do not deserve their support. Please let us defeat this amendment.

MOTION TO SUSPEND RULES

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Butera.

DELEGATE BUTERA. Mr. President, I tried this once before and I think my timing is better this time. I would like to make a motion in two parts. I would like to make a motion that this Convention suspend its rules first in moving this Proposal No. 7 to third reading, thus saving a day, and secondly, that we suspend our rules within this motion to permit amendments to be offered on third reading so as not to prevent anyone who has an amendment to offer it tomorrow.

I think the issues are much too great to decide at 11:00 o'clock at night, particularly when this day is almost over.

McGLYNN AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment being offered by Delegate Amsterdam to Committee Proposal No. 7?

DELEGATE McGLYNN offered the following amendment to the amendment offered by Delegate Amsterdam which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1, page 7, by inserting between lines 2 and 3: Section 12. Judicial Nominating Commission.—(a) There shall be a Statewide Judicial Nominating Commission for courts of Statewide jurisdiction. The commission shall consist of one judge of a court of common pleas who shall be elected by the judges of the courts of common pleas; three members of the bar who shall be elected by the members of the bar and three deans from law schools located within the Commonwealth, who shall be selected in alphabetical order according to the name of the law school.

(b) With the exception of the first selected deans, the members of the commission shall serve for a term of three years. Of the deans selected following the effective date of this section, the dean from the law school highest in alphabetical order shall be selected for a term of one year, the next in order for a term of two years and the following one for a term of three years. Thereafter the appointment shall be for a three-year term. Vacancies in the membership with reference to the judge and the members of the bar shall be filled for the balance of the term by the same persons who elected the member whose place has become vacant. Vacancies in the membership with reference to the deans shall be filled for the balance of the term from the same law school. The members of the commission shall elect one member to serve as chairman for a term of one year, but no person shall serve as chairman for more than three years in succession. The commission shall act only with the concurrence of a majority of all its members.

(c) During the terms of office for which members of the Judicial Nominating Commissions have been chosen, they shall not hold any office in a political party or organization, nor except for the members who are judges, shall they hold any public office or appointment for which they receive salary or other compensation. They shall not be compensated for service on the commission, but shall be reimbursed for travel and other expenses necessarily incurred in the discharge of their official duties.

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 12), page 7, line 3, by striking out "12." and inserting: 13.

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 13), page 8, line 15, by striking out "13." and inserting: 14.

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 14), page 9, line 1, by striking out "14." and inserting: 15.

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 15), page 9, line 23, by striking out "15." and inserting: 16.

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 16), page 12, line 22, by striking out "16." and inserting: 17.

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 17), page 13, line 19, by striking out "17." and inserting: 18.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment to the amendment?

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Butera. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BUTERA. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BUTERA. Does my motion require a second? Is that why you have not acted upon it?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, it does.

According to the Parliamentarian it needs 109 votes.

Delegate Butera made a motion to suspend the rules and move this proposal to third reading and permit amendments on third reading, I take it, amendments without the consent of the body as is generally required on third reading.

DELEGATE BUTERA. Mr. President, that is why I made the motion in two parts, so we would not have to do it again tomorrow and thus possibly deny an individual, such as the amendment which is before us, to offer that amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want to say we have a problem with your motion, and I just want to further point out to you that if we were ready to go over to third consideration, you know, it goes to Style and Drafting, and this motion should go to Style and Drafting, and if you bring it out and it is amended, then it goes back again.

I want to point out one additional thing to Delegate Butera before we act on his motion; that the Chair with the Parliamentarian has been considering procedures to expedite the handling of these matters, and under the procedures that we have been considering, we could have at least two calendars a day. Frankly, as soon as we finish amending this Judiciary Article on second consideration, we are going to have it printed and get it back as soon as possible.

DELEGATE BUTERA. The motion speaks for itself. This body with 109 votes could do whatever it wants to do.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. There is no problem about that. I just wanted to say to you that we have a problem of it going into Style and Drafting.

DELEGATE BUTERA. Mr. President, a further point of parliamentary inquiry. If you are suggesting to me that, perhaps, we should bypass Style and Drafting for the purpose of expediting this procedure—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No. I have not made that suggestion.

DELEGATE BUTERA. If I were to make that suggestion, would I then have to have a three-part motion?

DELEGATE PRENDERGAST. Mr. President, Delegate Butera has suggested that we suspend the rules and move this proposal to third reading; that we further suspend the rules to accept amendments on third reading. Well, our rules already provide that amendments may be accepted on third reading with a majority vote of delegates that are present.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is correct.

DELEGATE PRENDERGAST. The second part of his amendment is out of order because the rules already provide for it. Is this correct?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I assume that what Delegate Butera was saying was that on third reading it was his motion that we can accept the amendments without consent, and I asked him that question. I am not sure, he will have to tell us.

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Cosetti. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE COSETTI. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE COSETTI. Mr. President, the first part is out of order, too, because we have not effectively amended this proposal yet, and if we do not, it will go to third consideration without any suspension of the rules. I do not see how we could suspend the rules. We have not done anything to change its status yet.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I agree with Delegate Cosetti, also.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE STROUP. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE STROUP. Did Delegate Butera withdraw his motion?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think the Parliamentarian ruled that the motion at this time was out of order.

DELEGATE STROUP. Thank you, Mr. President. I just wanted to hear that statement made.

MOTION TO ADJOURN

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Burkholder.

DELEGATE BURKHOLDER. I move that we adjourn. It is too late to consider any of these amendments, and I am too sleepy and tired, and I do not intend to stay here any more.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have a motion to adjourn. Is that seconded?

DELEGATE MURRAY. It has been seconded.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have a motion to adjourn by Delegate Burkholder and it was seconded by Delegate Murray that we adjourn until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

Less than the majority having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the negative and the motion was not agreed to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate McGlynn.

DELEGATE McGLYNN. Mr. President, this amendment to the amendment provides for a change in the makeup of the judicial nominating commission. It would consist of a judge of the common pleas court elected by the judges of the common pleas court. It would consist of three lawyers elected by the membership of the Pennsylvania Bar Association. It would consist of three members of the academic world, specifically deans of law schools who would serve for three years, after three years, in alphabetical order. I submit, Mr. President, that a judge on the nominating commission would be desirable since his job is to pick judges; three lawyers, if they are qualified, to determine which among lawyers should be nominated; the three deans of law schools because they would be sufficiently removed from politics to give objective views to the candidates.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, I believe that this is now the eighth day we have been on this Judiciary Article and I do not know how many times this Convention, in different ways, has voted down a judicial nominating commission. Now it seems to me that all we are doing is going around the mulberry bush looking for different ways and for various ways to do the same thing. I think it is entirely out of order. I think we have got to stop playing lawyers at this Convention and stop looking for ways to do the same thing over and over again. I move you the previous question on this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Pasquerilla and seconded by Delegate Westerberg that we close debate on this McGlynn Amendment and that we vote on the McGlynn Amendment.

Will the Convention agree to the motion?

SHAPIRO AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment being offered by Delegate Amsterdam to Committee Proposal No. 7?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO offered the following amendment to the amendment offered by Delegate Amsterdam which was read by the clerk:

Amend page 1 of the amendment by striking out lines 1 to 11 and the written material relative thereto appearing at the bottom of page 1

Amend page 1 of the amendment by striking out "5. Insert "(c)" on line 12 and inserting: Page 7—between lines 2 and 3 (f)

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. Chairman, Article 7 as it presently reads provides for the selection of statewide judges by appointment by the governor with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate. Delegate Amsterdam has offered an amendment, the purpose of which is principally to provide the voters with a referendum in 1969, I believe, which will allow the voters to adopt a nominating panel for selection of statewide judges. However, his amendment would delete the provisions for appointment of judges in the interim by the governor with the advice and consent of the Senate and substitute therefor an elective method for selection of such judges. This elective method would be in force not only between now and the time of the referendum, but if the referendum for a judicial nominating commission were not adopted by the electorate in 1969, the method that would then continue in effect would be the elective partisan election method.

My amendment would strike the first eleven lines of the Amsterdam Amendment and thereby I hope to retain the appointive method, first of all, until the 1969 Primary, and thereafter, if in the 1969 Primary the electorate did not support the judicial nominating commission. In other words, if my amendment is adopted the voters will get a crack in 1969 at a referendum, have an opportunity to adopt a judicial nominating panel by referendum in 1969, and if it fails we will have the appointive method which is now in Article 7 remain in effect thereafter.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
It was agreed to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the amendment to the amendment offered by Delegate Shapiro. The elective system has been in effect now for well over a century in this Commonwealth and the people are well aware of their rights in the system. What we are really going to say to them I hope is whether or not they wish it changed, but what Delegate Shapiro would have us do is change it first and then ask the people whether they want to change back. I suggest that will only confuse the issue further, that it has already been confused in the minds of the public and that a simpler approach is the approach of the Amsterdam Amendment.

Mr. President, I move the previous question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Irvis and seconded by Delegate Jirolanio that we close debate on the Shapiro Amendment to the amendment and that we vote on the matter.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment to the amendment?

Less than the majority having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the negative and the amendment was not agreed to.

The question recurs,
Will the Convention agree to the Amsterdam Amendment?

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, may I now interrogate Delegate Amsterdam briefly?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Yes, sir.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, I have a technical question only on the amendment. I note on the amendment sheet offered to me, there is a Section 12 listed as judicial qualifications commission. In my printed copy of Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 26, Section 12 on page 7 is headed "Tenure of Justices, Judges, and Justices of the Peace." I think we have discovered where the error is. Whoever drafted this I think was referring to the clean copy which was unlined and was not a printer's number, but this amendment referring to Printer's No. 26, does not tell me where Section 12 headed "Judicial Qualifications Commission" should be inserted.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. This is a new Section 12, Mr. President.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Then, the present Section 12 should be stricken and changed to Section 13, is that correct?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. It will become Section 13, that is correct, Mr. President.

DELEGATE IRVIS. As long as that is in the record for Style and Drafting, I wanted to point that out so there will be no confusion.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. That is correct.

DELEGATE IRVIS. May I address myself to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Proceed.

DELEGATE IRVIS. I quite recognize how late the hour is and I quite recognize how fatigued many of us must be, but we have now decided by the vote on the motion to adjourn that we want to finish this business tonight and I think we should.

I have stated over and over again my position on the election versus the appointment of statewide judges and I shall not reiterate. I do here rise in strong support of Delegate Amterdam's Amendment to Proposal No. 7.

I believe it combines the best features of many of the proposals we have already had. It does keep the elective system until such time as the voters of the Commonwealth shall speak, and they will speak at the Primary Election of 1969. They will then tell all of us, individually and in groups, what they feel about the selection versus the election method of getting appellate judges and justices on the bench. I think this is the fairest method of doing this. It is not the method which I would have followed had I had my own way, but I have said over and over again, that we must go with the people and this way gives the people an opportunity to tell us how they will go, and I strongly urge your support for the Amsterdam Amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, I have been on my feet for the last 45 minutes trying to get the eye of the President to interrogate on this particular amendment for some clarification myself and maybe for others.

I think the old adage that haste makes waste is well proven here tonight. I do want to thank those who asked for a recess on the Amsterdam Amendment which gave me an opportunity to get my feet on the ground and understand it. I have a few questions, and I shall be brief, to direct to Delegate Amsterdam.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed. I am sure he will answer your questions.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I will be glad to try, Mr. President.

DELEGATE STROUP. I will not be surprised. I direct attention to the Commonwealth part which I have been concerned with. We have created a new Section 4, the number of the judges in the jurisdiction by law. This I take it is done by an act of the General Assembly?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. That is correct.

DELEGATE STROUP. Then, we go to page 14 and there we did amend and I think you will recall we set up the time limit as of January 1, 1970 when this should be accomplished, am I correct?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. That is correct, sir.

DELEGATE STROUP. If our electorate, in accordance with the amendment in the Primary Election in 1969, should go to the commission system, then the Commonwealth composition, the members would be appointed through that system through the commission and by the governor, is that correct?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. That is correct.

DELEGATE STROUP. And the partisan or political complexion of that court would then be determined by that commission and by the governor?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. The membership of the court would be, that is correct.

DELEGATE STROUP. If the electorate should defeat the commission proposal in the Primary of 1969, then I take it the complexion of the court will rest with the General Assembly, am I correct?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. That is correct.

DELEGATE STROUP. I thank the Delegate, for his response.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Forster.

DELEGATE FORSTER. I have one question that I would like to direct to Delegate Amsterdam.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed.

DELEGATE FORSTER. Not being a lawyer and being more than a little confused, does this amendment do anything to the retention plan of judges elected after one term?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. It does not.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. I move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question is moved by Delegate Solomon and seconded by Delegate Miller, that we close debate and vote on the Amsterdam Amendment and unlock the machine. All those in favor on that motion vote yea. Those opposed, vote nay.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY RECOGNIZED

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, before you take up the Casey Amendment, we have a duty to perform to one of our delegate members. He has been married as of this date for 24 years. He promised his wife he would be back home at 7:30 this evening to celebrate their anniversary. She does not believe he is really staying this long on the floor of the Convention and I suggest we put it into the record for Delegate Caron, who sits here behind me, that he is actually physically present and is doing business and not monkey business on his 24th wedding anniversary.

CASEY AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE CASEY offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 1), page 1, line 11, by removing the comma after "peace" and inserting: and

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 1), page 1, line 11, by striking out "and traffic courts" and inserting: court

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 7), page 2, line 29, by striking out "and Traffic Court"

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 7), page 4, lines 3 and 4, by striking out "and a traffic court"

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 7), page 4, lines 4 and 5, by striking out "of both"

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 10), page 5, lines 1 and 2, by striking out "except the judges of the traffic court in Philadelphia"

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 10), page 5, lines 12 and 13, by striking out "and judges of the traffic court in Philadelphia"

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 11), page 6, lines 22 to 24, by striking out "except that the" in line 22, all of line 23, and "shall be appointed by the Governor" in line 24.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President and members of this Convention, this amendment which is now on your desks is, in my opinion, an extremely important one and one which I would ask the body to consider most carefully. It is a controversial one. It is one which will require some time to explain and consider and debate. I would prefer very much, Mr. President, since the proposal has already been amended and will, therefore, in the morning, be on second consideration as amended, is that correct?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is right.

MOTION TO ADJOURN

DELEGATE CASEY. I would prefer, subject to the wishes of the Convention we might now adjourn subject only to taking up this amendment the first thing in the morning, which will give the delegates some opportunity to read it and consider it and will give the Committee on Style and Drafting, I should think, the same amount of time to deal with the judiciary proposal as it will have if we consider this amendment tonight, so that I would now make the motion at this time, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Casey, I just want you to know that there are other amendments here and part of your motion to adjourn is perfectly all right but we do have other amendments to consider. My only point is that if you are just making a motion to adjourn, that we take these other amendments up in the morning but—is your motion to cut off these other amendments?

DELEGATE CASEY. No.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Then I misunderstood you. So you are making a motion to adjourn. I am sorry, I misunderstood you.

DELEGATE CASEY. My motion was made with the understanding, Mr. President, that mine was the only amendment that was left.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Bloom. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BLOOM. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BLOOM. I want to say that if you keep on and wear us old folks out, I say that you are going to have to give us nine hours before you start tomorrow morning's session so that I can sleep and have some breakfast. I am saying that as a warning because I do not believe that I was voted to come down here to commit suicide for any convention or anybody.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No. We have other amendments.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Caron.

DELEGATE CARON. With all due respect to the gentleman, have we not been through the substance of this particular amendment before? I think it is a poor time. I know the Chair has been overly fair in the past on considering amendments for the second time and not requiring a vote to reconsider, but it seems like the Chair should tighten up a bit at this point. I think we have been through the substance of this amendment before.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will take your advice to get tight but I want you to know that the Chair very carefully went over with counsel and the Parliamentarian the Casey Amendment and this body has not considered this amendment or a similar amendment before, so I can only say, from a parliamentary standpoint, that the gentleman has the right to present his amendment.

Now I recognize Delegate Hook.

DELEGATE HOOK. No offense, Mr. President, to Delegate Casey, but I believe that a motion to adjourn is out of order until other business is taken up before this Convention and voted upon.

DELEGATE CASEY. I am perfectly willing to withdraw it and abide by the wishes of this Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Parliamentarian indicates we have taken up his amendment and the Parliamentarian has indicated that the motion, if he wants to make it to adjourn, is in order. That is what the Parliamentarian has just ruled.

If you want to renew your motion, we can proceed to vote on it or you can pursue your amendment.

DELEGATE CASEY. I so move that we adjourn.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You move we adjourn until 9:00 tomorrow morning. Is it seconded?

DELEGATE BAGENSTOSE. I second it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Seconded by Delegate Bagenstose.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Aberman. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. If we adjourn tonight, having completed all business, on what day are we for referral to Style and Drafting? Are we on yesterday?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No. The Chair will rule you are still on today.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. No. Today is yesterday or else we carry over until Wednesday?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are still on today. Our day ends when we adjourn, according to the Parliamentarian, and the Chair agrees.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

POINT OF ORDER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kline. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE KLINE. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE KLINE. Would the Chair please advise the delegates after we finish with the amendments to the judicial articles, what other important business, if any, he wants to conclude in this Convention today?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me say, Delegate Kline, that we have on our calendar Proposal No. 4, on third consideration, but I see no necessity to take it up tonight. If you are asking the Chair what business we would like to conclude, I think you should ask our fellow delegates who have voted down the motion to adjourn about three times. But I can tell you this: We do have two or three amendments left to the judiciary proposal for consideration and if it is the feeling of the delegates that they want to complete the amendments that we have to the judiciary proposal, we would then have the judiciary article, of course, printed in its amended form and it would be on your desks in the morning.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. May I just make one comment? We have after Delegate Casey's amendment only two other amendments, one of which may not be put in if certain things happen to the Casey Amendment. Delegate Casey is abolishing the traffic court in Philadelphia. The other two amendments that are left are comparatively just as simple. If you will just listen briefly to the delegate who is sponsoring it, I think you could do this job, if you just will not keep interrupting with a lot of parliamentary inquiries.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you, Delegate Scranton.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, I realize the lateness of the hour and I will try to keep this as brief as possible.

Last Friday I stood on this floor and urged the Convention to consider carefully every line of the judiciary proposal. I tried to do this myself over the weekend, and I tried to reflect on the words which had been spoken on this floor concerning this proposal, and I reflected, too, on what had been said earlier in this convention regarding the judicial system in Philadelphia. I rise at this time to offer very seriously for the consideration of the delegates an amendment which would make a significant change in the proposal as it left the Judiciary Committee. We have been told time and time again that we have in Proposal No. 7 a unified judicial system, but I have read this proposal over and over again, and it is complex, it is interrelated, and I keep coming back to the basic point that somehow the proposal carves out a special niche, if you will, for the traffic court in the City of Philadelphia. It has separate treatment in the following respects, if I read it correctly: The proposal says in its present form that the judges of the traffic court need not be lawyers. It says that six of the present magistrates in the City of Philadelphia will be the judges in this traffic court. It further states that they will be eligible for re-election under the merit plan, that is, the yes or no vote, and unlike the treatment of municipal court judges who will be composed of the remaining twenty-two magistrates in Philadelphia, and who will get the completion of their present terms and one additional term, the judges of the traffic court, if I read the proposal correctly, are subject to no such limitation. So, you have the result, as I read Proposal No. 7, that we are carving out a separate island within the judicial system of Philadelphia where judges of the traffic court will be made up of magistrates now sitting in Philadelphia, who may never become lawyers and who are not subject to any cut-off in terms of their tenure. I offer this amendment so that the Convention squarely understands, as I do, that this is the effect of the proposal, and I suggest to you that we should look very carefully at the traffic court in Philadelphia to decide whether or not this Convention wants to accord this special preferential treatment to this court. I have done as much research as time would permit on this subject, and I would remind the delegates that we did not know until last Friday what the final form of this proposal would be, but in the intervening time I have done such research as time permits, and I must confess that nowhere do I find in any of the literature on this subject, in the numerous studies that have been made of this subject, any justification for this treatment.

As a matter of fact, everything that I have read is to the contrary. For example, in 1962 a book was written by a gentleman by the name of Sidney Schulman called "Toward Judicial Reform in Pennsylvania." It was a study in court reorganization and is the first modern comprehensive survey of courthouse government at the lower judicial level in this State. This, gentlemen, was extremely uncomplimentary with regard to the minor judiciary system in Philadelphia. He points out that Philadelphia, for example, is the only major city in the country which has not replaced untrained lay judges with lawyer judges. He points out that the 1958 Bureau of Municipal Research Report on the magistrate court in Philadelphia discloses, of the five cities with one million or more population, Philadelphia is the only one that retains the lay judge in its judicial structure. New York, Chicago, Detroit, and Los Angeles have made this replacement with trained judges more than a quarter of a century ago.

Then we move to the year 1964 when the then Attorney General Walter Alessandroni appointed Arlan Specter to make an investigation of the magisterial system in the City of Philadelphia, and Mr. Specter submitted a 515-page report which documented the existence of widespread corruption in the magisterial system in the City of Philadelphia, which he said required tearing out the current system by its roots and replacing it with a new court structure. He said that we were faced with facts of incompetency, indifference, and outright corruption, and he felt that it was imperative that the magisterial system be abolished.

Proposal No. 7, as I read it, does nothing of the kind for the six magistrates in Philadelphia who will be welded into the traffic court, and the other gentlemen that are now serving on the magisterial system in Philadelphia are, by and large, the same individuals who were serving there when this Specter investigation was made. In the Specter report he has a separate section, a separate chapter on the traffic court. His investigation disclosed substantial deficiencies in the enforcement of the motor vehicle laws by this court. There are some very interesting statistics in that report. As the delegate body I am sure knows, notices of violations must be reported to the Bureau of Traffic Safety of the Commonwealth. It is pointed out in the Specter report that of 1,000 cases selected between June of 1962 and January of 1964, no notice was received by the Bureau of Traffic Safety in 69.2% of the cases. Further he states that, according to Police Commissioner Leary of the City of Philadelphia, in 1964, 1,110,685 summonses were issued by this Court. Five hundred and fifty-six thousand were listed for hearings, and of that total 163,000 were heard and 146,000 of these were discharged, with fines being imposed in 10,000, and 5,700 being continued. Thus, out of 157,000 cases the conviction rate was 6.9%

Going on into the more recent history, the Philadelphia Inquirer on the 21st of February, 1968, had the following to say about Committee Proposal No. 7 as it relates to the matter under discussion: "The Convention has rejected this reform"—they are talking about the merit selection—"in large measure, and has decided to hold on to the system of elective judges in most courts." At the same time, the Convention has made a concession to politicians by setting up a separate traffic court which will be manned by six persons who do not need to be lawyers. They will simply be required to complete a course in training and on duties of their office. A haven is thus secured for some of the magistrates. The others will be able to sit on a new municipal court without any bothersome rules prescribing that they be learned in the law for the duration of their present terms, and another six-year term.

The magistrates and politicians, generally, can find much to applaud in the Convention's performance, but what of the public. It will take more than a 60-page booklet and $250,000 worth of press releases to convince many voters that they have not been sold down the river on judicial reform.

At this time, Mr. President, I will save the rest of my time for closing.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Kauffman.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I would like to interrogate Delegate Casey.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Delegate Casey suggested that Philadelphia has been treated differently in this regard than the rest of the Commonwealth. Is the jurisdiction of the traffic court any more than the jurisdiction of the justices of the peace throughout the rest of the Commonwealth?

DELEGATE CASEY. Does the delegate mean in terms of the types of cases they can consider?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Yes, Mr. President.

DELEGATE CASEY. I think the jurisdiction of the traffic court is more limited than the jurisdiction of the justices of the peace because their jurisdiction as I understand the proposal, is limited to summary offenses under the motor vehicle laws.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. All right, then, they are not handling cases of any more serious nature at least than the justices of the peace throughout the rest of the Commonwealth, is that correct?

DELEGATE CASEY. I think that would be correct, Mr. President.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Is it also correct that the members of the traffic court will have to undergo a training program and pass an examination just as the justices of the peace throughout the rest of the Commonwealth have to do?

DELEGATE CASEY. That is correct, Mr. President.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Is it also correct that there is an option provided for the people of Philadelphia by referendum to vote for a community court system just as they are in the rest of the Commonwealth?

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, I would answer that question in the affirmative subject to this qualification. I am not convinced from my reading of Proposal No. 7 in its present form that a referendum such as the gentleman refers to would accomplish the installation of a community court manned by trained judges in lieu of the municipal court and traffic court. I believe that was the intention of the Shapiro Amendment but I am not satisfied in my own mind, after having read the proposal very carefully, that this objective has been accomplished.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, since that is exactly the way I read the Shapiro Amendment and because of the other answers I have received to my question from Delegate Casey, I urge that this proposed amendment be defeated and move the question after Governor Scranton has had a chance to speak. And also subject to Delegate Casey's right to close.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes. I want to say, Delegate Casey, that you have just about a half a minute or so left on your time to close.

Now, there was a motion you made, is that right, Delegate Kauffman?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I move the question after Governor Scranton has had an opportunity to speak.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The motion has been seconded by Delegate Keller, so we have a motion on the floor. I think we should vote on the motion, because then we can hear from Delegate Scranton and Delegate Casey in his closing.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the motion?

The majority having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the affirmative and the motion was agreed to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. What Delegate Kauffman says is correct. We do have a provision in here which allows for the justices of the peace and the judges of the traffic court to be members of the bar and the Supreme Court, or to complete a course of training, and we have the provision in the Shapiro Amendment which, if it does not now specifically say the community courts should have members learned in the law, certainly that is what is intended; certainly the Committee on Style and Drafting can take care of it. What I really wanted to add is simply this; the Committee did have considerable discussion on this matter and did take a vote and overwhelmingly approved the constitutionality of putting a constitutional court in known as the traffic court. Part of this was based on testimony we received from other jurisdictions on how workable this can be.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, for closing, Delegate Casey, you have about a half a minute left on your time.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, I would just conclude by reading from a letter sent to the co-chairman of the Judiciary Committee on February the 13th by the Committee of Seventy in Philadelphia, where they advocate what I am doing here tonight.

> "To permit any vestige of the magisterial system to remain would only result eventually in a return to the deplorable conditions which now exist in our minor court system. If this happens it will surely be said that the Constitutional Convention was a dismal failure in terms of magisterial reform in Philadelphia."

Mr. President, the chips are right up on the table now. I have heard a lot of discussion ever since I came to Harrisburg in 1962 about who was for and who was against judicial reform. This is the issue before us now and I urge everyone to vote in favor of this amendment.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendments being offered by Delegate Casey?

JIROLANIO AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 24, lines 10 to 23 by striking out all of said lines
Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 24, line 24 by striking out "(4)" and inserting: (3)
Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 24, line 26 by striking out "(5)" and inserting: (4)
Amend Schedule (Sec. 14), page 25, line 5 by striking out "(6)" and inserting: (5)

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, I realize that the time is very late and I also realize that we have been voting no and knocking down all amendments. But I sincerely and earnestly ask each and everyone of you to take Committee Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 26, and turn to page 24. What I am attempting to do is strike out on page 24, beginning with line 10 to line 25. This is what it says: "All criminal offenses for which no prison term may be imposed or which are punishable by a term of imprisonment of not more than two years, and indictable offenses under the motor vehicle code for which no prison term may be imposed or punishable by a term of imprisonment of not more than three years. In these cases the defendant shall have no right of trial by jury but he shall have the right of appeal for trial de novo to the trial division of the Court of Common Pleas."

And then listen to this: "Unless there are a sufficient number of judges who are members of the bar of the Supreme Court serving in the municipal court to handle such matters, the trial division of the court of common pleas shall have concurrent jurisdiction over the matter."

What this amendment does, it takes away from the people of Philadelphia the same right that everybody else in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania has, those eleven million people. You are saying to the two million people in the City of Philadelphia: "You are third-class citizens, not even second-class citizens. You do not have trial by jury. You do not have the trial by jury up to the fact where a court could impose a sentence upon you of two years and an indictable offense up to three years, while all over the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania they do have." And then they have a little joker in there that you have a right of trial de novo, an appeal de novo in the court of common pleas. But it does not say that you shall have the right of a trial by jury de novo. You just go to the court of common pleas on the same facts that you brought before the municipal court of the City of Philadelphia.

Now, I know the time is getting late but I wonder whether or not you just would not think over that particular area that I just pointed out to you. Last night I spent hours over this and I came to the conclusion that regardless of what time it would be, I could not stand here as a lawyer and see the people of Philadelphia being made third-class citizens and being deprived of certain rights which everybody else in the Commonwealth has.

Mind you, they then say: "Yes, when we do get judges." And I must hang my head in shame to realize now that the committee themselves, the Judiciary Committee, came to the realization that they did not have a sufficient number of judges. But when they do have the judges, then the two million people of Philadelphia shall be given the right which they are entitled to. They are being deprived of certain rights that the rest of the Commonwealth has, only because they do not have the judges now. I ask you, ladies and gentlemen and members of this Convention, if you think that is the kind of a thing that you should give to Philadelphia—I have been against Philadelphia many times on propositions that they wanted in the Senate. I have not voted for them all the time here. But I am certainly not going to take away the rights of the people of Philadelphia that the Constitution has. Oh, yes, you may say to me, under our Constitution the trial by jury shall be as heretofore but that only applies to certain laws and applies to common law trials, and does not apply to those matters that are made a crime by the General Assembly.

I say to you, members of this Convention, if you do nothing else for Philadelphia, preserve that right for the two million that you have and give them the same right of trial by jury as the rest of the Commonwealth.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Silverman.

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. Mr. President, I hate to disagree with Delegate Jirolanio, but this matter was discussed at some length with counsel and I believe, if I am correct, counsel's opinion was that on trial de novo the defendant would have a right to a jury trial. The purpose of the waiver or the non-jury trial is to expedite the cleaning up of minor claims, basically, for which no prison term will be imposed.

We have a similar system working now in Philadelphia that disposes of a great many cases right now and is a great asset to eliminating some of the backlog that would ordinarily build up.

If I am correct—and I believe that possibly that we should hear from counsel on this—it would be impossible and unconstitutional or beyond the scope of this Convention for us to take away from criminal defendants the right to trial by jury. I think the problem that Delegate Jirolanio is worried about, as I read it, does not exist. Trial de novo means trial de novo and the defendant may choose when he appeals to be tried by a jury.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Kauffman.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, may I interrogate Delegate Jirolanio?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. You may.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Delegate Jirolanio, is it not true that under the language now contained in the schedule to which your amendment has reference provides that even on the first trial on these matters no judge will sit who is not a member of the bar?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. That is right.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. So that anyone who is being tried for one of these cases will be tried even in the first instance by a member of the bar of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, is that right?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. That is correct.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Is it not true, Delegate Jirolanio, that trial de novo does give the right to the defendant the right to have a trial by jury?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Absolutely not, because you cannot read into the language what you think should be there. It merely says "a trial de novo" and a trial de novo, as I look at it in this particular case, would mean that the court of common pleas would merely review the same set of witnesses, listen to the same set of facts as was done in the municipal court. If that is so, I would disagree. If you would insert in there the words "trial by jury in the Court of Common Pleas," I would then sit down.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. If you were assured by counsel, Delegate Jirolanio, that the language in there does just that, would you be satisfied?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. No, for this reason, because it also violates another part of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, the equal protection clause, because the equal protection clause does say it must be uniform and equal in the entire Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and you would be depriving the people of Philadelphia from something that the rest of the Commonwealth could have.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Is the statement that the language, "trial de novo," does not provide for trial by jury? Is it an opinion? Does he have any authority for that position?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Just a moment, I want to apologize because my learned assistant counsel, Delegate Barron, was trying to give me some good advice and unfortunately I could not hear your remarks. Would you be kind enough to repeat it?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. What I was asking was whether or not in the delegate's statement that the language, "trial de novo," does not provide for trial by jury as a matter of right, substantiated by any authority or is simply his opinion?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I would say it is both my opinion and substantiated by the work that I have done as a lawyer for about 34 years.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. And he feels that way regarding the language, "trial de novo," even if counsel of the Convention says it provides for trial by jury?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Counsel for the Convention is just another lawyer and they change their opinions day by day, morning and afternoon. May I say, Mr. President, that there is definitely, in line 15, the words to the effect the defendant shall have no right of trial by jury.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Does not line 21 also provide for a trial de novo?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. But we have gone over that and I have said that "de novo" does not mean trial by jury.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I submit that it does, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, I would like to direct a question to my good friend Senator Jirolanio.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will permit that.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. It is a pleasure to have the Majority Leader of the distinguished Senate interrogate me.

DELEGATE STROUP. Article 1, Section 6, after side bar conference back here in the rear provides, and I read it from the Constitution, "Trial by jury shall be as heretofore, and the right thereof shall remain inviolate." I, therefore, direct this question: Would the denial of the right to trial by jury as set forth in this proposal not be inconsistent with Article 1, Section 6 of our Constitution?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. As I stated before, the term "Trial by jury" refers to certain crimes, and you can take away the trial by jury if those crimes were defined by the Legislature and they made them a crime. If you look at the provision in the Constitution which refers to trial by jury, it refers to those crimes that were recognized prior to the Constitution of 1873 and went into effect in 1874, the Common Law crimes that we had at that time.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, I am not satisfied with Delegate Jirolanio's response, and I would like to ask counsel for the Convention if we can get a response from him on it?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will ask counsel for the Judiciary Committee as well as counsel for the Convention to convey their opinion to Chairman Amsterdam or Chairman Scranton, and they will report it.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Kline.

DELEGATE KLINE. Delegate Jirolanio, one of the problems you laywers make is that you do not realize that we do not understand this language, and I do not know what "de novo" means, and I think you ought to put it in clear, concise English language. Even the Catholic Church has abandoned Latin, and I think we ought to in this Constitution. If you say "de novo" means trial by jury, put it in English so we can understand it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Cortese.

DELEGATE CORTESE. Mr. President, I should like to interrogate Delegate Jirolanio.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will be happy to be interrogated.

DELEGATE CORTESE. Do you have in your county, the disposal of cases by the method of arbitration?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Yes. Are you talking about civil cases?

DELEGATE CORTESE. I am talking about civil cases.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Yes.

DELEGATE CORTESE. What may an aggrieved litigant do if he loses his case at the arbitration level?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. By reason of statute, he is given the right to appeal.

DELEGATE CORTESE. Do you happen to know which statute it is?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I do not have my books with me now, and I cannot tell you.

DELEGATE CORTESE. Mr. President, I should like to refresh the legalistic memory of Delegate Jirolanio.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair hopes that will not take too long.

DELEGATE CORTESE. The Act of 1836. I may remind Delegate Jirolanio that in that Act there is specifically expressed these words, "The right of appeal for trial de novo." De novo is a Latin phrase which means from the beginning, and so when you take an appeal on a right to a de novo proceeding, you begin all over again, and a person in a civil case who feels aggrieved by the disposition of that case, may as a matter of course go into common pleas and there do one of two things. Either have his case disposed of by a waiver or by a jury trial. Does the delegate agree with that statement of the law?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. It is not as simple as all that, and I am just a little country lawyer from Northampton County and not as smart as some of you gentlemen from the great City of Philadelphia. I am not familiar with the various methods you use. In my county, I do not think we have what you stated. We have appeal in civil cases, and I never heard of what you told me about the others.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have a motion now, and the motion was made by Delegate Cortese. The motion is, as I understand it, that we close the debate and move the question. Do we have a second for it? It is seconded by Delegate Desmond. Let us vote on the motion as it is before the Convention. We will unlock the voting machine. All those in favor of closing debate, vote "yea."

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

The roll was recorded as follows:

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Amsterdam. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. The opinion of counsel that was mentioned earlier has not yet been received. That may become very pertinent. Does that mean we may reopen this at a later period, if the opinion indicates there is a need to do so?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me just say that I had assumed that counsel for the committee and the counsel for the Convention had given you that opinion.

MOTION TO LAY ON TABLE

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, I now move to table my amendment until tomorrow morning at 9:00, so we can get written opinion from counsel, because of counsel's opinion, and because of the importance of this matter to the people of Philadelphia.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am advised by the Parliamentarian that the motion is out of order. I have to, at this time, announce the vote.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I am sorry. I apologize.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand the motion to lay on the table takes precedence, and we have a motion on the floor to lay on the table. Is that correct? That is the motion of Delegate Jirolanio and seconded by Delegate Keller.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Woodring.

DELEGATE WOODRING. The Convention has just voted to move the previous question. It occurs to me the only thing before the Convention is a vote on the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Parliamentarian has ruled the motion to lay on the table takes precedence at this time, and I so rule. We will vote on the question of whether this gets laid on the table. We will now unlock the voting machine. We will proceed to vote. All those voting "yea" will vote to lay on the table. Those voting "nay" will vote against the motion. Has everyone had an opportunity to vote?

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BARRON. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BARRON. Do I understand that it is counsel's opinion that the words in line 15 of page 24 wherein it is said, "The defendant shall have no right of trial by jury," does not affect the opinion of counsel in this regard?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think you should direct your question to Chairman Amsterdam.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Woodring.

DELEGATE WOODRING. The point recurs that the only thing before the Convention is a vote on Delegate Jirolanio's motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think you are absolutely correct, and you will have to get your information after we vote. We will unlock the voting machine.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. May I have a last opportunity to talk on behalf of the Philadelphians?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No, you may not. In that motion to close, there was no reservation to give a closing to the proposal.

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Jirolanio?

The roll was recorded as follows:

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Michener. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE MICHENER. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, I voted against the last amendment for a variety of reasons, but Senator Jirolanio did strike a responsive chord in my heart on some things he said, and I wonder if Style and Drafting is not the proper place to look at these words to see if something really needs to be cleared up. Do you agree to that, Delegate Jirolanio?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Absolutely.

DELEGATE MICHENER. I think we should give it a second thought.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE IRVIS. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Are we ready to move this proposal now to third consideration, or would it require a suspension of the rules to do so?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No. We have to have, under the rules, it printed and looked at again in the morning. You would have to suspend the rules in other words.

ADJOURNMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis for the adjournment motion.

DELEGATE IRVIS. I move that this Convention do now adjourn until Tuesday, February 27, 1968, at 11:00 a.m., e.s.t.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Irvis and seconded by Delegate Caron that this Convention do now adjourn until Tuesday, February 27, 1968, at 11 a.m., e.s.t.

The motion was agreed to, and (at 12:55 a.m.) the Convention was adjourned.

PENNSYLVANIA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION 1967-1968

JOURNAL

Volume 1 Tuesday, February 27, 1968 Number 52

The Convention was called to order at 11 a.m., e.s.t.

THE PRESIDENT (Raymond J. Broderick) IN THE CHAIR

PRAYER

THE REVEREND WILLIAM F. McCLAIN of the First Presbyterian Church of State College offered the following prayer:

Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless His holy name.

Almighty God, the enduring reality of all life, out of whom all just power derives, grant us to see in these necessary difficulties before us the opportunities for new achievements in constitutional government through which our people may be guided. Give us the wisdom to see that point at which we can find common agreement and which we can support in order that our basic law may express the full desires and needs of the people and receive their full support. Grant us each this day the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord.

Make us of quick understanding and give us a good sense of humor for Christ's sake. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Convention joined together in the Pledge of Allegiance, led by Delegate Redick.

APPROVAL OF JOURNALS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. There are no Journals to be approved this morning.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes the Secretary, Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, I want to submit the following requests for leaves of absence:

The delegate from the 48th District, BYRON K. HORNE, for February 27, 1968 to attend an education meeting;

The delegate from the 32nd District, LOUIS L. MANDERINO, for February 27, 1968.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you, Secretary Michener.

Is there any objection to the leaves of absence?

The Chair hears none, and the leaves are granted.

DELEGATE MICHENER. I had a rather pleasant request this morning from one of our lady delegates. She wanted to retire permanently from this Convention, from the point of view that her work was done, and her name is Mrs. Pandora. I told her she could go if she would take her luggage with her and I last saw her heading for Richmond, Virginia. They are going to have a Convention down there one of these days.

DELEGATE FAWCETT. Since a dissident member of the female group has left, I suggest that the rest of the women take charge.

CONGRATULATIONS EXTENDED TO DELEGATE

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Yesterday we protected the record so Delegate Caron would not be subject to representation by his wife's counsel. We owe it to another delegate here who is celebrating his 19th wedding anniversary yesterday, Delegate Bunting.

Delegate Bunting gave up his 19th wedding anniversary with his wife to stay with us until 1:30 this morning. I think the record should protect Delegate Bunting.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We offer him our sincere congratulations.

QUORUM CALL

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will now call the roll for the purpose of determining a quorum. The delegates will please record their presence by voting "aye."

The roll was recorded as follows:

Aberman	Desmond	Leach	Roberts
Allison	Devlin	Lee, K.	Rovner
Amsterdam	Dumbauld	Lee, L.	Ruth

CALENDAR

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON SECOND CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to the second consideration of Committee Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 28, entitled:

A proposal repealing article five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania relating to the Judiciary and adding a new Judiciary article.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, we will take up Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 28.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Fawcett pursuant to the Chair's promise that as soon as we are free, we would hear Delegate Fawcett.

MOTION

DELEGATE FAWCETT. Mr. President, I believe that we have debated all of the issues until there is absolutely no debate left.

I move you Printer's No. 7, Proposal No. 7.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I have a motion by Delegate Fawcett. Is there a second?

DELEGATE NELSON. I second the motion. I understand this will take us back to the original Committee proposal with respect to amendments and therefore, I second it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Fawcett, do I understand you are moving to advance Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 28 to second consideration.

DELEGATE FAWCETT. No. 7, the original Committee proposal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The original Committee proposal is not on the calendar, it is not before us at the present time. What you would have to do would be to revert to the original printer's number.

DELEGATE FAWCETT. Have we voted on the original printer's number?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The original printer's number has been amended at least 75 or 100 times.

DELEGATE FAWCETT. I know, but we have not voted on it in its original concept.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We voted on the amendments and this is the process that we have been going through with all proposals.

We have the proposal presented by the Committee and then, I do not know how many days ago, about seven days ago we started the process of amendment. It was probably longer than that.

DELEGATE FAWCETT. If I move to a prior printer's number, what does that do?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am advised by the Parliamentarian that there can be a motion to revert to the prior printer's number.

DELEGATE NELSON. Which one?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have to find out which printer's number the delegate is referring to.

You are referring to the original Committee proposal?

DELEGATE FAWCETT. Mr. President, I was hopeful that we could consider the original proposal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Fawcett, I think I understand now what you probably want to do. You want to revert to the prior printer's number and that would be whatever it is on the original proposal that came out of the Committee, and that would be Proposal No. 7 and I will have to find out what that printer's number is. I understand it was Printer's No. 7.

DELEGATE FAWCETT. Yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is there a second to Delegate Fawcett's motion?

DELEGATE NELSON. Mr. President, I second the motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The motion has been made by Delegate Fawcett and seconded by Delegate Nelson that this Convention now revert to Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 7, which I understand was the original proposal of the Judiciary Committee.

This proposal is open for debate and I will now recognize anyone who wants to be heard.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. As I understand the motion to have been made, the motion is to call up or reconsider the original Proposal No. 7 as brought out by the Committee. Am I wrong or right?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think the motion is to revert to the prior Printer's No. 7, which I think was the procedure used in connection with Proposal 1 or 2 or both.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. May I ask a further question?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. The original proposal has been amended many, many, many times so that the original proposal, before that could be taken up, I believe, as a parliamentary question, that you would have to take up each amendment that was passed and incorporated in the original proposal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. All the Chair can say in answer to that is, I hope not.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I would like to have a ruling because you have the original proposal, you amended the original proposal, the original proposal is no longer before us.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will give you a ruling if you will just stand by at ease.

The Parliamentarian has stated that the motion is in order.

We have used this motion before in connection with Printer's No. 1 and it, in effect, is a motion to revert to the prior printer's number.

The motion is now open for debate.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Goldman.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Mr. President, normally I am not a very excitable sort of person but that was a terrible thing to throw on a fellow the first thing in the morning, that Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 7. So that there is no misunderstanding in any of your minds as to exactly what has been proposed and what will be on the floor for a vote, it is an attempt to destroy and to negate absolutely everything we have done in the last two weeks.

Now I do not care how much we become enbroiled in argument and in dispute and in compromise in finally working out the final proposal which is Printer's No. 28. Regardless of all that work that has gone into it, that work represents a composite belief of all of us delegates here. To now deny the results of our work is not only wrong insofar as our beliefs are concerned, but is entirely wrong and is, in my opinion, a shoddy attempt to just completely obviate everything we have done and to call everything that we have done of no effect whatsoever. I strongly urge that we turn this down.

MOTION TO TABLE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Barron.

DELEGATE BARRON. Mr. President, I believe the issues are sharply drawn. I think everyone comprehends what is intended. Accordingly, I move that Delegate Fawcett's motion be laid upon the table.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Barron and seconded by Delegate Keller that the motion made by Delegate Fawcett be laid on the table.

Just a moment while we check with the Parliamentarian.

I would like to discuss with Delegate Barron his motion, please.

MOTIONS WITHDRAWN

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Do you want to be heard, Delegate Fawcett?

DELEGATE FAWCETT. I will withdraw my motion.

I hope that I have shaken everyone up sufficiently so that they will be willing to compromise and come to some kind of reasonable decision on this Proposal No. 7.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Fawcett, let me say that the Chair thanks you and I just want to say that you woke them up. I will assume that all other motions have likewise been withdrawn.

Now the question before the Convention is, will the Convention agree to advance Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 28 to third consideration?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 28 does not conform to the actions of this body last evening, specifically in connection with the amendment offered, I believe, by Delegate Amsterdam.

At page 6, lines 29 and 30, it contains the language: ". . . except in the cases of justices of the peace, which shall be by a majority." This language did not appear in the amendment that was presented to us last night.

Now on a number of occasions, both last night and on prior occasions the Chair has consistently ruled that an amendment to an amendment must be in writing. You ruled that way in connection with Delegate McGlynn's offer to amend the Amsterdam Amendment and in connection with my offer to amend the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want the delegates to know that you are correct. I have consistently so ruled. But when that amendment in language was offered last night by Delegate Amsterdam, there was no objection, and, frankly, the Chair thought he indicated that it was a typographical error.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I heard no motion to amend the amendment or to suspend the rules. The rules clearly provide that amendments to amendments must be in writing. I heard no motion to suspend the rules. I, therefore, submit to you, sir, that the amendment, as written and as handed out to the delegates, is the amendment which we adopted last night.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. As I undertstand it, the amendment was written and handed out to the delegates. There was an explanation. I will call right now on Chairman Amsterdam to repeat the explanation he gave last night. No one seemed to object.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I did not object because I heard no motion, Mr. President. I heard everything Delegate Amsterdam said.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I indicated that that portion which Delegate Shapiro is talking to was put in as an inadvertence and represented a complete reversal of a decision made within the preceding second or third legislative day and that it was intended from the beginning that those words which he referred to—namely: ". . . except justices of the peace, which shall be by a simple majority."—was intended to be included as a part of the amendment and, at that time, no objection of any kind was made. I naturally assumed that that was satisfactory unanimously to the entire body.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. President, I submit that under our rules, regardless of what Delegate Amsterdam's intention may have been, the amendment that was passed out to all of the delegates and who voted on that amendment was the amendment which does not include the words, and there was no motion to suspend the rules, and the rules clearly provide that amendments to amendments must be in writing.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Irvis.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, I move that this body suspend the rules for the purpose of accepting those words and that phraseology.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Irvis, I want you to know that as far as the Chair is concerned, we accepted that phrase last night and that phrase was made part of the amendment. If this body feels that they do not wish that amendment, there can be a motion to reconsider and we can vote on it if that is what Delegate Shapiro wants to do.

The Chair rules that last night, when this statement was made, the official copies of the amendment included that. All the delegates were asked to include that particular phrase in the amendment. We did that to expedite the process. I might add that that was not the first time that that has been done by this body. This was done to expedite the proceedings. It was considered as explained by Delegate Amsterdam a typographical omission, as I understood it.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I submit that Delegate Irvis' motion is the proper way to correct the situation but I will accept your ruling.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have it in the official copy that is right in front of you. It has already been accepted. That is what the Parliamentarian has advised me. As my memory serves me, the amendment we adopted had the language in it.

DELEGATE IRVIS. I support the Chair's ruling absolutely.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Goldman.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. I am getting just as sick and tired of this nitpicking as a great many of the other nonlawyer delegates are and I move Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 28.

DELEGATE IRVIS. I would second that motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The motion and the question is, will the Convention agree to advance Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 28 to third consideration?

It has been moved and seconded.

Are we ready for the question?

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. Point of parliamentary inquiry.

Do we not have a right to speak on this motion?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. There is a right to speak. There is a right to debate and speak.

I now recognize Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. I want to speak to the merits of Proposal No. 7. Before this proposal is placed in position for third consideration, there are a number of points that I want to bring to the attention of this Convention because I think the record should be absolutely clear on this matter. I refer to the traffic court system in the City of Philadelphia as it exists today and as it will exist under Committee Proposal No. 7 in its present form. I rise to speak against that portion of Committee Proposal No. 7 for the following reasons:

The traffic court system in Philadelphia is now a statutory system, presided over, as I understand it, by a chief magistrate who has complete and full power and dominion over the personnel in that department.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I believe that the learned delegate from Lackawanna County is not speaking on the question because he is now speaking on a matter that has already been passed and decided upon and, therefore, is out of order to talk about the traffic court.

DELEGATE CASEY. I am speaking directly to the point, Mr. President. We have the right now to rise, as I understand the rules, and debate this matter on the merits and to speak either for or against the proposal in its present form.

I am speaking against it. If Delegate Jirolanio wants to speak for it, that is his privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will answer the point of parliamentary inquiry: I think the delegates have a right, at this time, if they so desire, to speak for or against the entire proposal as it now stands. As I have said before, we have this privilege provided by the rules and until we get a motion to close debate and move the question—and that motion cannot be given at this time while the delegate has the floor.

Delegate Casey, you may proceed.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, the present traffic court system in Philadelphia has been discredited and criticized by every knowledgeable observer, every knowledgeable person who has investigated it. It is a patronage system pure and simple, and my understanding was that one of the primary goals of Proposal No. 7 was to take the judiciary out of politics, and I question seriously whether Committee Proposal No. 7 does it with regard to the traffic court when we consider that the president judge of the traffic court will be appointed by the governor, just as the chief magistrate is now appointed by the governor, and that the president judge will continue to have complete and utter control and dominion over the personnel in that particular department.

I say to you, Mr. President, this is a bad system, whether the governor is a Democrat or a Republican. This is not a system that we should recommend to the people of Philadelphia. This is not a system, Mr. President, I submit, that the people of Philadelphia want. How can we in this body ignore the recommendations of the Specter Report? How can we ignore the recommendations of the American Bar Association committee which investigated the traffic court in 1963 and very clearly said to the Board of Magistrates that the people of Philadelphia have lost confidence in the integrity of that system? How can we ignore the committee of 70 as well as the co-chairman of the Judiciary Committee on February 13th which pointed out that this system is wrong? It should not be perpetuated. How can we freeze in the 28 magistrates in the City of Philadelphia, 22 in the municipal court and 6 in the traffic court? How can we treat them differently and give the municipal court magistrates a double grandfather, not only the completion of their present term, but an additional term? How can we let the judges in the traffic court go on running with no limit on their tenure? What is the justification for this?

We were told last evening that this is the way it is done in other states. Well, I ask the members of this Convention, in the other states that were studied, did those states place in control of the minor judicial system, men who have been discredited and found to be corrupt in the way the magisterial system in Philadelphia has been found to be corrupt? How can we sell this plan to the people of Philadelphia and the people of Pennsylvania, a system which the people in Philadelphia, from all available evidence that I can gather, do not want? How can we say this is really judicial reform for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania? I have been told that the panacea, the answer to all these questions, is the fact that there is now a referendum provision in this proposal which lets the people of Philadelphia vote on this question.

To that contention I have two answers. No. 1, I am not convinced as a matter of statutory construction, as I read Proposal No. 7, that a referendum on this question would wipe out the municipal court and traffic court and require the judges in those courts be learned in the law, but the second question I raise is a more fundamental one. I do not think on this issue we can pass the buck back to the people of the City of Philadelphia. We were sent here to make a judgment on the minor judicial system in Pennsylvania. I am prepared to make that judgment, and I have been told that it is very late and we cannot do anything about it. I say it is not too late. We have until Thursday night at midnight, as I read the statute, and until that time I intend to continue to fight for the best judicial proposal we can find, and I think we can do a lot better than Proposal No. 7 in its present form as it applies to the traffic court in the City of Philadelphia.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Goldman.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. I would like to amend my original offering to move this question, and I would like to amend it to the extent of limiting debate to those delegates who are now standing, Delegate Michener and Delegate Kauffman.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Michener. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE MICHENER. I rise for a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE MICHENER. I do not wish to speak to the amendment. I want advice from the Chair on a technical problem.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I would be glad to answer.

DELEGATE MICHENER. In New York a lot of delegates got into serious trouble because they voted for an amendment like this, which carried a great many things, and then they went out across the state and fought against it. Their rationale was that they thought they had to vote for it in order to terminate the work of the Convention, and yet they were not giving it their sponsorship, and they fell under heavy criticism. I do not want to fall under that criticism. A great many agencies of public opinion are hammering right now for opinions on the Convention, and I think it is a wonderful job that we have done.

I do find in Committee Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 28, three or four things that I simply cannot speak in favor of, and I want somewhere where I can, to register the fact, although I want to move this forward as Convention business, I do not want to be bound later on by somebody saying, "Well, you voted for it." I have not voted for it. How do we do this?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. I have a motion on the floor.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. There is a motion on the floor and the motion is to close debate and vote on the question. Is that correct?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. That is correct.

DELEGATE CROOP. I second the motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That motion was seconded by Delegate Croop.

Your motion permitted Delegate Michener and Delegate Kauffman to speak.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. That was all.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think Delegate Orban was there. I am not sure.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Orban. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE ORBAN. I rise for a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE ORBAN. I would point out to the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, that under Proposal No. 6, which we have passed, we have constituted various officers as constitutional officers. Will that section of Committee Proposal No. 6, Section 4, be negated by the unified judicial set-up in Proposal No. 7? In other words, can the Supreme Court eliminate any of those officers that are set forth in Section 4 of Proposal No. 6?

I raise the question because I have received two different opinions.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I suggest that is really a legal question. We would like to get the advice of counsel for the Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will have counsel for the Judiciary Committee and counsel for the Convention confer with the Chairmen, and the Chairmen can express the opinion when it is received.

Delegate Michener, I was not ignoring your point of inquiry. I just want to point out from the standpoint of the Chair that we now have a period, and you have been recognized as being within those lines, so that you can still speak within the motion if you wanted to express your opinion.

DELEGATE MICHENER. It is just a technical question as to how a delegate ought to vote. The first provision was divided in two and you could choose. In the third it was the same way. Here, it seems to me, if one votes now in favor of both moving this and voting it final, as I propose to do, it commits you to the whole proposal. How do you enter a disclaimer on the part that you do not want to be held responsible for in the debate that follows?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think that is a matter of the delegate's preference and conscience. You can only say that you are in agreement with everything in the proposal except that you are going to vote for, and I think that is something that every delegate has a right to do, except for the motion that has been made.

SENIOR CLASS OF WARWICK HIGH SCHOOL OF LITITZ WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I have had a request from Delegate Horne that he has some guests and they have to leave at exaclty 12:00 o'clock, and I promised that they would be recognized. We have with us in the balcony today the Senior Class of Warwick High School, Lititz. They are the guests of Delegates Caron of Berks, Feather of Lebanon, and Horne of Lancaster.

Would they please stand so we can give them our warm cordial welcome?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, we are informed, and those who have been in the conference agree, that the officers which are mentioned in Section 4 of the Local Government Article are constitutionally protected and cannot be removed by the Supreme Court. However, the Supreme Court under the unified judicial system and its administration may change the duties from time to time, eliminate duties, add duties, but may not under the Constitution remove actually those officers. They are protected.

DELEGATE ORBAN. Thank you.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, the Chair will take up Proposal No. 4, Printer's No. 27, which is a proposal on third consideration.

The question is, will the Convention agree to advance Proposal No. 4, Printer's No. 27 to final passage?

This is the last opportunity to amend this proposal, but I want to remind the delegates that before an amendment may be received for consideration, it must obtain the consent of a majority of the delegates present, and in accordance with our previous procedure, we first are going to recognize Chairman Johnson who will give the Committee Report, and then after we receive the Committee Report, the other delegates who want to be recognized will be recognized.

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON THIRD CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,
The Convention proceeded to the third consideration of Committee Proposal No. 4, Printer's No. 27, entitled:

A proposal amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania specifying audit control of public moneys and establishing and regulating a balanced State budget for the next fiscal year and financial plans for the succeeding five years.

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania further regulating exemptions from taxation and providing for the taxation of real property of public utilities.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Mr. President, I stand in place and read the Report on Committee Proposal No. 4.

COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING

519 North Office Building
Harrisburg, Pennsylvania 17106

February 26, 1968

To the Honorable,
The Delegates Assembled,
1967-1968 Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention

Re: Audit and Budget Procedures

Mesdames and Sirs:

We submit herewith our Report on Commmittee Proposal Four respecting audit control of public funds, the Governor's budgets and financial plan, and appropriations.

As we have noted previously, the Committee on Style and Drafting, to insure harmonious usage in style and manner of expression throughout the proposed Article Eight, held this proposal until the Committee had completed its consideration of Proposals Three and Five. Similarly, the Committee, in consultation with one of the Co-Chairmen of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People, has renumbered the sections amended by this proposal to insure a logical numerical pattern in accordance with the view of the Convention expressed Friday last during third consideration of Proposal Three.

The Committee once again acknowledges the cooperative spirit and willing attention to detail of the substantive committee as this Committee sought to discharge its duty of examination and editing under Rule 22. We are pleased to note that the changes in style and manner of expression have met with the agreement of the substantive committee.

Significant Changes in Drafting

1. In Section 10, the description "body" was deleted and a more encompassing noun "entity" inserted.

2. The statement with respect to the officer responsible for the pre-transaction and post-transaction audit has been restated to make clear the sense of the Convention that the officer who initially oversees financial transactions cannot be the officer held responsible for the ultimate verification of those transactions.

3. Section 12 has been rearranged to eliminate unnecessary duplication and to more precisely describe the Governor's responsibilities in the preparation of a budget and financial plan. Similarly, in Section 13 precision of expression was sought by minor changes in style.

4. Section 12 (b) has been reworded to insure that the intention of the Convention to bring all capital expenditures within the scope of the capital budget is realized.

Respectfully submitted,
COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL NO. 4

A PROPOSAL

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania specifying audit control of public moneys and establishing and regulating a balanced State budget for the next fiscal year and financial plans for the succeeding five years.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Section fourteen of article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended to read:

Section [14. The making of profit out of the public moneys or using the same for any purpose not authorized by law by any officer of the State, or member or officer of the General Assembly, shall be a misdemeanor and shall be punished as may be provided by law, but part of such punishment shall be disqualification to hold office for a period of not less than five years.] 10. Audit.—The financial affairs of any ENTITY funded or financially aided by the Commonwealth, and all departments, boards, commissions, agencies, instrumentalities, authorities and institutions of the Commonwealth, shall be subject to AUDITS made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards.

ANY COMMONWEALTH OFFICER WHOSE APPROVAL IS NECESSARY FOR ANY TRANSACTION RELATIVE TO THE FINANCIAL AFFAIRS OF THE COMMONWEALTH SHALL NOT BE CHARGED WITH THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR AUDITING THAT TRANSACTION AFTER ITS OCCURRENCE.

Section 2. Article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended by adding three new sections to read:

Section 12. Governor's Budgets and Financial Plan.—ANNUALLY, AT the TIMES SET by law, the Governor shall submit to the General Assembly:

(A) A balanced operating budget for the ensuing fiscal year setting forth in detail (I) proposed expenditures CLASSIFIED BY department or agency and BY program AND (II) estimated revenues from all sources. If estimated revenues AND AVAILABLE SURPLUS are LESS THAN proposed expenditures, the Governor shall recommend specific additional sources of revenue sufficient to pay THE deficiency AND the estimated REVENUE TO be derived from each source;

(B) A capital budget for the ensuing fiscal year setting forth in detail PROPOSED expenditures to be financed from the proceeds of OBLIGATIONS OF THE COMMONWEALTH OR OF ITS

AGENCIES OR AUTHORITIES or from operating funds; AND

(C) A financial plan for NOT less than the NEXT succeeding five fiscal years, WHICH plan shall include for each such fiscal year:

(I) PROJECTED operating expenditures CLASSIFIED BY DEPARTMENT OR AGENCY AND BY program, in reasonable detail and ESTIMATED revenues, by major categories, from existing and ADDITIONAL sources, and

(II) PROJECTED expenditures FOR CAPITAL PROJECTS SPECIFICALLY ITEMIZED by purpose, and THE proposed source of financing each.

Section 13. Appropriations.—(a) Operating budget appropriations made by the General Assembly shall not exceed the actual and estimated revenues AND SURPLUS available in THE SAME fiscal year.

(b) The General Assembly shall ADOPT a capital budget for the ensuing fiscal year.

Section 14. Surplus.—All surplus of operating funds at the end of the fiscal year shall be appropriated during the ensuing fiscal year by the General Assembly.

Section 3. The following schedule is adopted: Sections TEN, TWELVE, THIRTEEN and FOURTEEN of Article eight shall take effect as soon as possible, but no later than July 1, 1970.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA

1968 SESSION

PROPOSAL NO. 4

A PROPOSAL

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania specifying audit control of public moneys and establishing and regulating a balanced State budget for the next fiscal year and financial plans for the succeeding five years.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Section fourteen of article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended to read:

Section 10. Audit.—The financial affairs of any entity funded or financially aided by the Commonwealth, and all departments, boards, commissions, agencies, instrumentalities, authorities and institutions of the Commonwealth, shall be subject to audits made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards.

Any Commonwealth officer whose approval is necessary for any transaction relative to the financial affairs of the Commonwealth shall not be charged with the responsibility for auditing that transaction after its occurrence.

Section 2. Article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended by adding three new sections to read:

Section 12. Governor's Budgets and Financial Plan.—Annually, at the times set by law, the Governor shall submit to the General Assembly:

(a) A balanced operating budget for the ensuing fiscal year setting forth in detail (i) proposed expenditures classified by department or agency and by program and (ii) estimated revenues from all sources. If estimated revenues and available surplus are less than proposed expenditures, the Governor shall recommend specific additional sources of revenue sufficient to pay the deficiency and the estimated revenue to be derived from each source;

(b) A capital budget for the ensuing fiscal year setting forth in detail proposed expenditures to be financed from the proceeds of obligations of the Commonwealth or of its agencies or authorities or from operating funds; and

(c) A financial plan for not less than the next succeeding five fiscal years, which plan shall include for each such fiscal year:

(i) Projected operating expenditures classified by department or agency and by program, in reasonable detail, and estimated revenues, by major categories, from existing and additional sources, and (ii) projected expenditures for capital projects specifically itemized by purpose, and the proposed source of financing each.

Section 13. Appropriations.—(a) Operating budget appropriations made by the General Assembly shall not exceed the actual and estimated revenues and surplus available in the same fiscal year.

(b) The General Assembly shall adopt a capital budget for the ensuing fiscal year.

Section 14. Surplus.—All surplus of operating funds at the end of the fiscal year shall be appropriated during the ensuing fiscal year by the General Assembly.

Section 3. The following schedule is adopted: Sections ten, twelve, thirteen and fourteen of Article eight shall take effect as soon as possible, but no later than July 1, 1970.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Convention will now please come to order so we can receive the report of Style and Drafting on Proposal No. 4, Printer's No. 27.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Mr. President, every delegate should have these two items of information, a report from the Committee on Style and Drafting and also Proposal No. 4, as it has been revised by the Committee on Style and Drafting. These were distributed yesterday by the pages and I understand they have additional copies if you do not have them at hand.

I will now proceed with our report and you will note the first page simply repeats the rationale of our committee and that we have conferred with the committee and sub-committee chairmen relative to this proposal. We have secured their agreement and we now wish to call your attention to certain significant changes in drafting that had been incorporated into the proposal as now submitted by Style and Drafting.

You will note first of all that in Section 10, "descriptive body" was deleted and we use a more encompassing now "entity," to confirm that, so including those of any "entity created, funded, or financially aided by the Commonwealth."

You will also note that the statement with respect to the officer responsible for the pre-transaction and post-transaction audit have been restated to make it clear; that the officer who initially oversees financial transactions cannot be the officer held responsible for the ultimate verification of those transactions.

If you will again refer to your most recent copy of the proposal, you will see that Section 12 has been re-arranged to eliminate unnecessary duplication and to more precisely describe the governor's responsibilities in the preparation of the budget and financial plan.

There are also minor changes expressed in Section 13.

Finally, Section 12 (b) has been reworded to insure that the intention of this Convention to bring all capital expenditures within the scope of capital budget is realized. With these changes I think you should understand what has been done in the redrafting of this proposal.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will recognize Delegate Hocker, who I think had the microphone first.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. President, I would like to interrogate Delegate Johnson.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. President, some of us on the committee are a little bit concerned with what has been done in Style and Drafting. We think that by erasing line 14 and part of 15 and putting the new language in it, they have overstepped their bounds and added new material which changes the original concept that was in the proposal.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. I can say in reply, Mr. President, that this was done with full approval and even the collaboration of the chairman and co-chairman of your Committee.

DELEGATE HOCKER. I agree with that. Mr. President, I would ask the gentleman in his opinion, whether he thinks this does change the concept?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. I think it clarifies it rather than changes it. That is my own judgment.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. President, that is all for Delegate Johnson and I thank the gentleman. Some of us on the original Committee think that they did change the concept. If I may return to this microphone at a later date, I may have some people here who are vitally interested, and I think that they can explain what we are trying to do, before I ask for a vote to offer my amendment. I would like to yield to Delegate Swope, if I may, sir.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will come back to Delegate Hocker.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Swope.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Mr. President, may I further interrogate Delegate Johnson?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Mr. President, is it a fact that the Auditor General is a Constitutional officer?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Yes, it is.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Is it a fact that by the Constitution and statute, the Auditor General prepares warrants upon the Treasurer for payment of Commonwealth funds for obligations for which the Commonwealth is responsible?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Yes.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Is it a fact that the Auditor General by Constitutional power and statutory power, also is the general auditing officer of all the Commonwealth's financial transactions?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. The gentleman is correct, Mr. President.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Is it therefore the intention of the Committee to take away from the Auditor General some of the functions that have for many years been vested in that officer by statute and Constitutional power?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Mr. President, I think the rationale of the action of the Committee, and again I call attention to the fact with the full collaboration of the representatives of the substantive committee in question, was to clearly separate what is sometimes known as the pre-audit and the post-audit, and not have the same officer in charge of both.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Would this language that has been placed in here by this Committee take away from the Auditor General, either the warranting power or the auditing power?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. That is a legal question, Mr. President.

DELEGATE SWOPE. I think the question should be resolved whether it is legal or otherwise. I think the Convention cannot vote intelligently on this question unless they know.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. My colleague, Delegate Pelletier, may be able to answer that.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, perhaps I can clarify this matter again. If you will go back to the original copy, the original copy says, "The same Commonwealth officer shall not have the responsibility for both the pre-audit and post-audit function." I assume that means exactly what it says. The function of the Committee here was to try to get away from the use of pre-audit and the post-audit which seems to be confusing, so the Committee tried to describe generally what was covered by the terms pre-audit and post-audit.

To respond directly to the question, I thought the vote of the Convention said, that the pre-audit and the post-audit function should not be exercised by the same officer of the Commonwealth. I think our language says the same thing.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Swope.

DELEGATE SWOPE. May I proceed with further interrogation?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may. Who did you wish to interrogate?

DELEGATE SWOPE. Either chairman.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Either Chairman Johnson or Chairman Pelletier.

Chaiman Johnson will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE SWOPE. I do not think I have had a yes or no answer on my question as to whether this language will deprive the Auditor General of one of the functions that has been vested upon him by the Constitution and statutory law, that being, namely, the requirement that he warrant the Treasurer to pay funds, and, secondly that he be the general auditing officer of the Commonwealth.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. The matter that was mentioned by Delegate Swope, was not considered as far as I know by either the substantive committee or by the Committee on Style and Drafting. We were concerned with the matter of intent and purpose, and I think that is clearly expressed in the language of the proposal.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Is the delegate saying that one of these functions, then, by this language, would be taken away from the Auditor General?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. That is conceivable, Mr. President.

DELEGATE SWOPE. I think it is not only conceivable, but I think it is absolute, because the Auditor General does perform these two functions by virtue of constitutional and statutory power.

Now, if one of these functions is taken away from him, it is very difficult for me, as a Certified Public Accountant and as a former Deputy State Treasurer, to understand where one of these functions could be placed.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. I understand the delegate's dilemma.

We, as a Committee on Style and Drafting, have merely been trying to carry out the intent of the substantive committee and if the Treasury Department could have one function and the post-audit another, that could solve the dilemma.

DELEGATE SWOPE. I would like to have the gentleman repeat the last sentence because I did not hear it.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. If the Treasury Department could exercise one function and the Auditor General another, that could solve the dilemma.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Mr. President, Delegate Johnson has now given a very interesting sidelight on this—as his opinion, I assume—and I would agree with that opinion, not as a lawyer but as one who is familiar with the workings of Commonwealth government. I think, under the original language, the Treasurer could be made responsible for what has been called the pre-audit.

Now I ask, Mr. President, for a suspension of consideration at this point until counsel for the Convention has answered my question of whether this language will deprive the Auditor General of one of two functions—not only two functions, but one of these two functions which I have repeated: The warranting process and the auditing process. I think we must have a legal ruling on this before we can have any intelligent approach to the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Swope, I will ask the counsel for the Committee and counsel to the Convention to confer with you right now to determine your inquiry. I will also ask them to give their answer to the chairman of the substantive committee, Chairman Leonard, so that he may give it to the Convention. This is the way we have been having the opinions given.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Thank you, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will ask the counsel to please confer with Delegate Swope.

Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, I have independently—I did not know about this colloquy that was going to go on—a problem about this wording also. If they are going to reword this section at any time, I would like to make my point. It is unfortunate in Pennsylvania that the Auditor General is not a completely independent office, which is the way it ought to be. It does come under the Executive arm of the government. Frequently, as we know, even in parties, the Governor and the Auditor General are one and the same in their partisanship. This, I think, is also unfortunate. However, since this is the case, we have to take it into consideration when we are raising constitutional articles—and when I read this section, which now says:

"Any Commonwealth officer whose approval is necessary for any transaction relative to financial affairs of the Commonwealth," and I point out that this includes the Governor in many instances, ". . . shall not be charged with the responsibility for auditing that transaction after its occurrence." I would like to point out that the Governor, under our non-independent Auditor General set up, is responsible for any executive action that is taken, including that of the Auditor General, in the final analysis. I think this is putting him in a position which is most unfortunate. May I say that I think this could be easily corrected, as far as I am concerned, by simply pointing out that they shall not be charged with the primary responsibility for the function of auditing, which would then precisely put it where it is and not make the Governor responsible for both of these things.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Mr. President, I have a few questions I would like to direct to the chairman.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You wish to question whom?

DELEGATE MURRAY. Chairman Johnson or Pelletier, either one.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Chairman Johnson or Pelletier. Chairman Johnson has the microphone.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Mr. President, was the fiscal code of the Commonwealth considered in the redrafting of this item?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Not by the Committee, no.

DELEGATE MURRAY. If the fiscal code of the Commonwealth makes both fiscal offices, the Auditor General's Department and the State Treasurer's Department, the person "whose approval is necessary," does that not prohibit the Auditor General from auditing the affairs of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I take it that was a question directed to Chairman Johnson.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Yes, Mr. President.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Will you please restate it?

DELEGATE MURRAY. If the fiscal code, which gives the authority or the responsibility to the State Treasurer and the Auditor General—and I use the quote directly from the rewording, "whose approval is necessary for the financial transaction," does that not prohibit those two agencies or the two fiscal offices—in particular, does it prohibit the Auditor General from auditing the affairs of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Yes, Mr. President.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Another question: This item, which seems to stem from a long attempt to destroy or to diminish the duties of the Auditor General, has been kicking around in the Committee of which I was a part for many months. It has been said someone from the Committee collaborated with the delegates on the working of this new wording, who was that?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. We had the co-chairmen of the Committee, Delegates Woodring and Leonard, who collaborated with us.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Another question: Regarding the Fohl Amendment, was the intent of the Fohl Amendment not to change the entire functions around and hand out contracts to outside accounting firms; was that concept kept in the new wording of your proposal here?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Yes. It was our purpose to retain all amendments.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Mr. President, it would seem to me that if the fiscal code would stop the Auditor General and the Treasurer, the two fiscal offices, and, as Governor Scranton said, the administrative offices, from doing the auditing of the transaction after its occurrence, it would almost mandate the use of large accounting firms, doing outside work for the Commonwealth, is that not true?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. That was not the intention.

DELEGATE MURRAY. I know it was not the intention but is that not true?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. That is your judgment.

DELEGATE MURRAY. I think this needs a lot more work. It is not the intention that came out of this committee.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Leonard.

DELEGATE LEONARD. Mr. President, it is easy to recognize the people who are raising the same questions now and are standing up trying to read something into this where there was no intention for such to be. These same people fought the matter in the sub-committee, they fought it in the standing committee, they fought it on the floor, they fought for reconsideration and in everyone of these areas they were in the minority. Now we have come to this point where it has gone through all these stages and we get up to here and we are going back through the same thing.

Let me tell you several things.

No. 1, these words were written by Delegate O'Donnell, a member of the Style and Drafting Committee, and Judge Woodring and I—particularly myself—to merely put a few clarifying words in there. The basic idea of not putting the words "pre-audit" and "post-audit" was that of Delegate O'Donnell, which I heartily concur with.

No. 2, there is not a question in the world—and this has been said many times—that the idea of this is to strengthen the Auditor General's office and is going to take him off the hook. When it is put in such a way that it is depriving him of jobs and responsibilities, that is looking at it from the wrong viewpoint. It will mean if he chooses, or if the General Assembly prescribes—who we certainly trusted up to this point and I hope we will continue to trust them in the future to write proper laws—it is going to mean that they will designate who will be doing the post-audit work and who will be doing the pre-audit work. What this establishes is nothing new in the Constitution. The Constitution just recently—and you people probably voted upon it at the polls—set up the principle that the same person who is a part of a transaction cannot later audit himself. This was done very recently with the amendment that the State Treasurer may not become the Auditor General until after a four-year period. What do you think that principle is? It is clearly for the reason that a person who has a part of a transaction cannot later audit himself. Now you put that in the Constitution already. Now you are coming back and nit picking at this and trying to make it appear as though it was something it is not. I would very much like to interrogate Governor Scranton, if he will, because I think his point may be well taken and I would like to understand that because that gets to the substance of what we are talking about.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The delegate will proceed.

DELEGATE LEONARD. I do not understand how the Governor is put into a bad position here because the meaning of these words is that an officer whose signature or approval is necessary to consummate a transaction, that means that he is head of the part of decision making, he shall not later be asked or have the responsibility for auditing that transaction after it has been consummated.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. My problem, Mr. President, is the word "responsibility." The Governor is responsible under our present system for all Executive Department actions. My suggestion which I just put in—this is the first time I have been a nit picker, and I admit it—but I feel very strongly that I am here to protect the Governor, which is one of my lesser functions in this and all I would suggest is that we take the words "the responsibility for" out and put in "the function of." Then it is clear that it is the function of auditing and not the responsibility of auditing.

DELEGATE LEONARD. That makes sense. I would certainly be willing to accept that wording, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now we will recognize Delegate Swope.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Mr. President, I believe that the counsel have come to a resolution of the question that I propounded previously.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want to ask counsel if they have given their opinion to Chairman Leonard. They are prepared to give their opinion and they are on their way down.

DELEGATE LEONARD. I do not need it. I know the answer. It is crystal clear but I would be glad to have it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That makes it all the clearer.

Now, while they are engaging in that transaction, may I recognize Delegate Dailey?

DELEGATE DAILEY. Mr. President, I came here with greatest intentions in the world. I tried to play it square. I became friends with Delegate Devlin. I trust him. I voted with him and I voted against him. I voted the way I felt and I told the people that voted for me that I would come down here and vote for what I thought was right. But I am not going to desert the party that I am registered with, and Delegate Leonard has got to convince me that somebody is not trying to steal 200 jobs from the Auditor General.

I listened to all you fellows, and you can smile all you want, but we farmers are not so dumb either, and somewhere in here there is a catch. Somewhere in this act is a catch. You gentlemen can smile all you want to. I will ask one thing, what are you going to do with these 200 jobs? Where will they go as they now exist? There are, at present time, with what you are talking about, a sum of 200 jobs. Where do they go? Do they stay with the Auditor General or do you have 200 employes that have to have a job next fall? I would like to be sure they have those jobs. There is a doubt in my mind. I trust you. We are friends, like I told Delegate Devlin. But I ask you one question, where do these 200 jobs go? I know you will not eliminate them because you never have eliminated any so you will not start now.

DELEGATE LEONARD. Are we through with the questioning?

DELEGATE DAILEY. Yes.

DELEGATE LEONARD. I must answer very coldly that it is not my concern, nor the concern of our Committee, what happens to anyone in the Auditor General's Department or any other office whose function is eliminated. I do not believe that there will be, under this proposal, 200 jobs eliminated but it is not my purpose here, as a member of this Committee involved in the Constitutional Convention, to be concerned with 200 jobs. I think we are trying to establish a principle and I think this principle is well established and well documented. I can present some documentation as to the history of this principle. I just stated it is already written in the Constitution with respect to the Auditor General not being able to have been a Treasurer immediately preceding being elected to Auditor General. That is a well-established principle. I can go back to the report of the Joint State Government Commission in 1950 where it says the post-auditing and pre-auditing functions will be separated. I can go back to the Chessman Report in 1953 which states that the post-auditing and pre-auditing function be separated. I can go back to all sorts of tax books and all sorts of reports written in the state around this country which say that the post-auditing and pre-auditing function should be separated. There is no trick. It is so simple and so basic, and if people get concerned that there will be jobs lost, I am sorry I wasted my three months up here as a member of this Constitutional Convention.

DELEGATE DAILEY. I am sorry about your three months. That is too bad for you. But I am not intellectually dishonest and I would be very hypocritical if I did not have the intestinal fortitude to stand here and ask you that and I am still not convinced that there is not something wrong. There have been no dishonest Treasurers nor have there been dishonest—I do not think that is a matter for this outfit, to try and change those jobs now, that is the Legislature's job. You are a better educated man than I am. The trouble with this whole outfit here is that there are too many that are intellectually dishonest. They can twist these words. That is all we did for three months. We twisted this word and twisted that word. That is why we are here so long. That will suffice for that.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I shall attempt to be less critical than the last speaker, but I feel just about as strongly concerning this Proposal No. 4.

I would call the attention of the delegates to the fact that to the rear of this Hall are three panels, the center of which has a rather attractive painting thereon. The side panels on either side have no paintings. The reason, I understand, is that the artist became too old or too ill or died and was unable to place a painting thereon. It occurs to me, why did not someone else do the job? Why was not something put in there? The obvious answer is that when you have something beautiful and you want something equally beautiful with it, you do not want to just step in and put anything there just to fill the gap. Now gentlemen, this is certainly true of all artists, all poets, all musicians, all legislators and all delegates to the Constitutional Convention that our product is not equal in all areas. In some areas, it may be laudable. In some areas, it may be superb. In some areas, it may not come up to the full measure of the standard that we would like it. We have already, on the question of state debt, approved unanimously a change in the debt limit. To take this proposal and place it side by side with that one is going to make something good and something not so good stand side by side.

I can agree that there are some laudable comments or concepts in the text of Proposal No. 4 which lies before us for consideration. But just because there are some laudable concepts there, does not mean that we must be duty bound to approve and pass onto the people as constitutional timber those concepts, especially if they do not measure up to the standard which we have set in other areas.

Mr. President, I do not believe that this proposal is necessary to imbed in the Constitution. I believe it contains legislative material. I believe and I respectfully submit that the Committee proceeded with this with all good intent and I regret heartily that I must speak against the fruits of their three months of labor thereon. I would call attention that we, too, the rest of the delegation, spent a great deal of time debating and discussing this question, but that does not excuse us putting before the people and saying we feel this is something they should approve and place in the Constitution of our great State when we feel it is something that does not measure up. It is my opinion that it does not measure up and that it is legislative in nature. It is not necessary for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to have this in the Constitution. I intend to vote "no" on this on its final passage and I ask the rest of you to consider carefully whether or not you should not do likewise.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Percey.

DELEGATE PERCEY. Mr. President, I do not see where it is the function of this Convention to concern itself with patronage jobs, and I would like to move that Delegate Leonard would answer Delegate Swope's question, and then I move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will recognize Delegate Murray, and then we will return, if we may.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Mr. President, I would like to direct a few things in line with what was just said. Yes, there is a tremendous political significance to this thing. There are a great number of jobs. There is an element of political piracy involved in this thing, and there is an element of contracts, politically dealt out involved in this job. I am not just speaking off the top of my hat. Delegate Casey unfortunately is in a position in which he is a candidate and he cannot speak for himself. I think a lot of us understand his position. There are hundreds and hundreds of jobs in the Auditor General's office which will be politically pirated off with this move. You are going to take a large political party in this state, which is going to realize this, and start working against part of your Constitutional Convention work.

If the jobs are not dealt out to the opposite political party, you are going to get back to the contract system, and who gets the contracts and where do they go? Who handles the contracts now for the offices just like this that are allowed to be audited under certain statutes of the law? Let us take the gloves off. Let us call the shots right down the line. I am calling on Delegate Leonard with respect to some of this. Who has audited the Auditor General's office for the last two years? I submit it is the firm of Adler, Faunce and Leonard for the sum of $12,000 to June 30th, 1966.

Who audited the Auditor General's office last year, June 30th, 1967? It was the firm of Peat, Marwick and Mitchell Company. The contracts were signed on September 11, 1967 by Robert L. Leonard, partner, and it was signed by Mr. Sampson, Secretary of Administration, for $22,000. This is for one little small agency of the government with a small budget. What are we talking about in the whole Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, half a million dollars, a million dollars? We are talking about enormous contracts, or enormous patronages. Let us not kid ourselves. This is political piracy in handing out jobs for the big contracts. Let us call the shots down the line. Let us not let this auditing go on in the Constitution, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Leonard.

DELEGATE LEONARD. I would say that Delegate Murray was in error. We also had a contract for the year ending December 30th, 1964 to audit the affairs of the Auditor General. I must say, Mr. President, I had expected this sort of thing was going to come up. It is not surprising as a fight in which we are trying to do something worthwhile here. One of the reasons that I am so interested in the Auditor General's office is because I have been privy to the affairs and have had the opportunity to audit this office for the past three years. Let me say Mr. President, that the Administrative Code and Fiscal Code of the Commonwealth provides for the Governor to be able to audit the financial affairs of the Auditor General. Again, this is showing the division of responsibility so that a person cannot audit himself. In 1964, under the direction of Governor Scranton, I believe it was the first time that the Auditor General's office had been audited, and it was as a result of that audit that I learned a great deal about the auditing function in this Commonwealth. It was as a result of that audit in 1964, and again in 1966 that I set out to do all that I could to improve the effectiveness of the audit functions in this Commonwealth.

I want to make it crystal clear that when Delegate Murray was going to bring this up in the committee; I made it known to all of the committee people that he thought he had something that was going to be one on me. I made it crystal clear that the reason that I know so much about the affairs of the Auditor General is only because I had the opportunity to be the partner in charge of the audit of this office for the last several years.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Swope.

DELEGATE SWOPE. I think I would like to clear up a statement that was made by Chairman Leonard, that by constitutionial provision adopted by the people of Pennsylvania at the Primary Election in 1967 it prevents the State Treasurer from becoming the Auditor General immediately following his term as State Treasurer. It can be very well understood why this was done, because the State Treasurer has financial transactions in his own department, and very obviously ought not be permitted to audit those transactions when he moves over to the Auditor General's department, as he has been able to do throughout a great many years. This is not the same thing as auditing the affairs of the state government. The affairs of the state government are not the affairs of the Treasurer. They are not the affairs of the Auditor General. They are the affairs of the administration, and in the wisdom of our forefathers, they decided that two independent fiscal offices ought to be created in order that they could examine the transactions made by the administration.

Since the question of outside certified public accountants has come up, Mr. President, and I think it is pertinent, completely pertinent to this question, the State of Illinois, which placed something like this in its present constitution, is today employing 60 certified public accounting firms in its auditing procedures. If this is the direction the delegates want to go, I have no objection, but I want my constituents to know that I am not willing to go in that direction.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Fineman.

DELEGATE FINEMAN. Mr. President, I am afraid that in these closing days when most of the delegates are quite tired from the energies that they expended in getting these articles together, there might be a tendency to leave pass through this chamber, proposals which do not represent the best work products of this Constitutional Convention. I have very serious misgivings about the wisdom of this section and Committee Proposal No. 4 dealing with audits. Certainly, the language that is used is language that does not have all the clarity of intention and purpose that is possible. Admittedly, the subject matter is one that is complex and one that is not too rapidly understood by members who have not been exposed to this problem, and I am concerned, lest we put out in the form of a constitutional document, language that is going to invite subsequent litigation. I think this is language that will invite litigation. It is language that is totally unnecessary and has no place in the constitutional document. This view is shared by General Schnader whom we all know has been a moving force in bringing about constitutional change in the state, and with whom I have not always agreed as to the merits of constitutional proposals, but with whom I would not disagree as to whether or not language should or should not be found in a Constitution. General Schnader unequivocally stated that this kind of language has no place in a constitutional document, and I share that view completely. As to the merits of the proposal, I will also have very serious reservations as to the wisdom of the incorporation of this language in the Constitution. Under this proposal, as I read it, once the Auditor General signs a warrant, he would be completely estopped from thereafter making an audit of that transaction, because once he signs that warrant, that execution of the warrant, in effect, constituted an approval by him of the transaction.

Let me tell you what happened just several years ago, which illustrates the shortcoming in such a situation. Several years ago warrants were submitted or requests for warrants were submitted to the Auditor General's office. We subsequently learned that the information that was submitted to the Auditor General's office was false information. The invoices were falsified. The Auditor General had no way of knowing this at the time he issued his warrants. For instance, there was one invoice that provided for reimbursement to an officer, a law enforcement officer of this Commonwealth, for a trip to another part of the country to buy electronic equipment. We did not learn that that electronic equipment included wire-tap equipment, which was contrary to the law of this state, and the expenditure of any money for wire-tap equipment was completely illegal. The Auditor General did not know this. The fact that he approved the warrant for these monies was not a bad reflection on him, but if this language, which we now seek to put in the Constitution, were then in effect, the Auditor General could not have gone back and retraced his steps and made an audit of the monies that were expended by the State Police for the purchase of wire-tap equipment. I say this would have seriously curtailed the proper activities of the Auditor General who is charged with the responsibility of auditing the fiscal affairs of the Commonwealth, and we should think twice about inserting such encumbering language in our constitutional document. Our fiscal code, as Delegate Murray has already stated, clearly spelled out what the responsibilities of the fiscal officers are of this Commonwealth, and if this proposal does have any merit, then I say it should be the subject of legislative enactment and not the subject of embracement within a constitutional document. I would hope that this body would, therefore, move to strike out completely from this constitutional document all language dealing with this post- and pre-audit subject matter. It is one that must be delved into more in depth. It is one that has to be more completely understood, more understood than we at this moment understand it, and one that has no place in the constitutional document.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Clark.

DELEGATE CLARK. Mr. President, I regret that it is necessary to speak again on this subject. It has been debated through hours of subcommittee meetings, through hours of the standing committee and on this floor.

I characterize myself as a businessman in support of this type of language in our proposal. I support completely the stand that Chairman Leonard has taken in this situation. I cannot understand the opposition which Delegate Murray uses to oppose the simple function of auditing the accounts of this state, which is, as I have remarked before, a two billion dollar annual business. We should not under any circumstances permit a situation to exist in this state, or for that matter in any business, which makes it easy for anyone to use dishonest practices. I submit to you, as I did a few days ago, it is our responsibility to set up every standard and every possible means to prevent such things.

Auditing is not something that is opposed to by businessmen. There are towns that have their activities audited regularly, and it is a common practice for financial organizations and public accounting firms to do this, that is outside organizations, and it seems to me that we are coming to a point where we are, again, going over ground which has been carefully explored and carefully considered. With the suggestion that Governor Scranton has made, and I understand there will be an amendment incorporated in the language, it seems to me that we have a good sound piece of work here which we should support and I urge you to do so.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Caron.

DELEGATE CARON. I would like to speak for the proposal and if there is somebody else who would like to speak against it, perhaps they would like to speak first.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed, Delegate Caron.

DELEGATE CARON. The question that disturbs me is the allegations that have been thrown around this morning.

I came from a state which had a scandal, and one of the reasons it had a scandal is because it had nothing within its Administrative Code whereby an audit could be made of the monies handled by the State Auditor General. I realize that this state has never had a scandal and as a practical businessman I think we have an obligation to see that it does not have a scandal. One of the basic ways to avoid the scandal is as Delegate Clark just said, to separate the difference between the man who takes a look at your books and the man who checks it afterwards.

The thought that crosses my mind when we start talking about honesty, is the fact that this does not preclude that some day somebody might come along who has sticky fingers, and I hope if we have established a guideline within our own Constitution, that this can be prevented. One of the things that disturbs me when people get up and talk against an audit is whether or not there is a reason behind their own thinking. I believe that every transaction within the state should be audited, and I do not think there is anything that should not be audited. One of the questions I would like to pose to your own conscience and to your own thinking is whether or not the Legislature's contingency fund should not be audited, and if this is true, then, in my opinion, we have an obligation to support this article. I spent three months on it, and if it is the will of this group to feel that the work that I and others did is in vain, I am quite willing to go along with your conscience, but I do not think so. I will readily agree that there can be minor language changes to, perhaps, make it a little bit more readable and understandable, as I have seen done in other articles and other proposals, but basically and essentially I say that we should have an audit in the State of Pennsylvania, and I support the proposal as submitted.

MOTION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Gouger.

DELEGATE GOUGER. I move you the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have a motion to move the question.

I will now recognize Delegate Hocker.

DELEGATE HOCKER. I would ask before we put the question, we are still having some legal troubles and I am having additional amendments, and before I ask this body to do anything, I want to make sure that I am right in what I am doing. I am sure we all feel the same.

I suggest that we take a lunch break wherein we will iron out the legal problems over the lunch break, and then come back and pick it up from there.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want to point out to Delegate Gouger who rose and made the motion to close debate on the question, that Delegate Hocker has had an amendment that ran into some legal difficulties, and if it had not been for that, I am sure he would have probably introduced it; also Delegate Scranton has an amendment, and he is standing at the microphone. I have not had a second to your motion, but I want to point out to you that both of these gentlemen had come up here with their amendments.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, I think we can get over with mine quickly, because I have already consulted with the Committee chairman and counsel, and it seems to be acceptable to them.

MOTION WITHDRAWN

DELEGATE GOUGER. I withdraw my motion.

DELEGATE HOCKER. The answer I would give to the Governor is that if his amendment goes in and then my amendment, which is already drafted, but I have one legal question on it, it would not fit the article that we are working on if he gets his amendment in.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, if everybody is agreeable to my motion, I will put it in, and then when Delegate Hocker comes up with his problem we can face the problem at that time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want to say that the Chair is in the position where it can accept an amendment. I want to say we have been having trouble with your language, and we will certainly accommodate it, and I have not read this amendment of Governor Scranton's, so I do not know exactly what it is, except in connection with what he said. So, we are ready to accept amendments.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. President, all I want to say, and I am going to plead with Governor Scranton, since he has always been fair with me. I have not always been fair with him. That is a confession, Governor Scranton. I wish we could iron this out, and then we will move ahead in one thrust rather than confusing the delegation.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. All right, we will get together, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Scranton said that he will be glad to get together with Delegate Hocker.

Now, are we ready for a luncheon recess?

POINTS OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Orbin. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE ORBIN. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE ORBIN. Thank you. I have with me my wife Ozzie and two of my five children, Robin and Douglas sitting back in the audience.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think that is personal enough. We ask Mrs. Orbin and the children to stand so we can give them our warm cordial greeting.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Shrager.

DELEGATE SHRAGER. I rise on a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. State what it is, please.

DELEGATE SHRAGER. I voted "yea" for the Casey Amendment No. 3, to the famous Proposal No. 7 last night. My vote was not so recorded and I wanted it recorded "yea."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will spread that remark on the record.

COMMITTEE ANNOUNCEMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Nelson.

DELEGATE NELSON. I have a committee announcement. The luncheon meeting of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People immediately following the adjournment of this session has been moved from Room 401 to Room 615.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Clark.

DELEGATE CLARK. Mr. President. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. State what that is, please.

DELEGATE CLARK. Mr. President, I rise to speak on the remarks made by Delegate Gerber yesterday.

Delegate Gerber chose to make some remarks regarding the League of Women Voters, the Association of the American University Women and in fact, it seems to me, cast some doubt upon the activities of all women who are wives, mothers and daughters. I realize one of the closest, finest and most precious assets we have in this Convention at this time is time itself, and I think we also have some honor. Delegate Gerber's remarks were recorded rather broadly in the press; the public in general has come to the conclusion that he was speaking for the entire Convention; I would like to have the record indicate that I for one, do not agree with his comments. I think they are ill-conceived and they were very ill-mannered, and I would like very much to have my thoughts and my feelings spread on the record of this Convention.

DINNER TICKETS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Waldron.

DELEGATE WALDRON. Mr. President, I would appreciate it if those who have not picked their dinner tickets will do so. We will be set up in the hall when you come out.

Also, I would like to state at this time, for those who are observing the season of Lent, the Lieutenant Governor's office has had a confirmation that we are permitted to eat meat once that day.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. This must be a new function of the Lieutenant Governor's office.

Now, unless we hear an objection, I am going to suggest that we recess for lunch until 2:30.

WIFE OF DELEGATE BUCK WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Curran.

DELEGATE CURRAN. Mr. President, I have refrained from introducing any particular guest up to this particular time. It is particularly gratifying to me that for my first introduction I have the privilege of introducing one of the loveliest wives that I have seen appear here at this Convention, and that is Mary Buck from Uniontown, Pennsylvania, who is the wife and bride of Herman Buck.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are very happy she is with us.

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Unless there is objection, we stand in recess for lunch until 2:30.

The Chair hears none, and the Convention is now in recess until 2:30 p.m.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time of recess having expired, the Convention will come to order.

GUESTS WELCOMED

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President. I rise on a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. State what your point of personal privilege is.

DELEGATE GERBER. I would like to introduce a constituent of mine, a law partner of mine and an uncle of mine, Mr. Raymond Pearlstein of Montgomery County.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want to say hello to Ray. He has been a friend of mine for many years. I am glad to have you with us.

GUESTS WELCOMED

DELEGATE BARRON. I rise to a point of personal privilege and ask to present my guests.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed.

DELEGATE BARRON. I am very pleased to present my aunt and cousin Frances A. McNitt and Marian E. McNitt.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We hope that the family and friends of Delegate Barron will stand up so we can give them our warm cordial welcome.

STUDENTS OF RADNOR TOWNSHIP JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL WELCOMED

DELEGATE WHITTUM. I rise to a point of personal privilege to introduce some guests.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed.

DELEGATE WHITTUM. I would like to introduce the Student Council of the Radnor Township Junior High School and their teacher, Mr. Donald McKenny. They have come to Harrisburg to learn how to write a Constitution, since they are in the process of revising their student constitution and I hope they can learn something from us.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The only thing I can say is that they came to the right place. Stand up and we will give them our cordial greeting. I am very happy to have you with us.

GUESTS WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Redick.

DELEGATE REDICK. Mr. President, I see another guest here from Pittsburgh and I am not speaking for Delegate Fagan, but Mrs. Fagan is in the audience.

DELEGATES WIVES WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Krill.

DELEGATE KRILL. Mr. President, there have been two women with us for a number of weeks. In fact, they have been with us last night up until the very end. I would like to introduce to the delegation Mrs. Pott and my wife, Mrs. Krill.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will Mrs. Pott and Mrs. Krill please stand and let me say again how happy we are to have you with us.

Are we ready to resume the amendment process? The Convention will please come to order.

The Chair will recognizes Delegate Hocker.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. President, I do not know exactly where we were when we left off. I know Delegate Gouger had moved the question. I do not think it was voted on.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. He withdrew his motion.

The Chair now recognizes you.

MOTION FOR CONSENT TO INTRODUCE HOCKER AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 4

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. President, at this time I would ask the permission of the delegation to be able to offer an amendment to Proposal No. 4 on third reading. I think I must ask permission.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You must at this time ask to obtain the consent of a majority of the delegation present, before you present and offer an amendment. But, we have ruled that you should be able at this time to explain what your amendment is, so the delegates may vote intelligently on this consent.

I have one question that I would like to ask. I have two pieces of paper and they both say Hocker Amendment. Can you tell me which one it is?

DELEGATE HOCKER. The first one that I had drafted and gave. In other words, the amendment taking out the language that was inserted by the Committee on Style and Drafting, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes. You may proceed with an explanation.

DELEGATE HOCKER. I have already explained this I think, but I will very quickly do it again. I think that the Committee on Style and Drafting went beyond their scope and I think legal counsel has ruled that it is new matter and that it is not the same as the old matter that was in, and for that reason, Mr. President, I present an amendment to erase the language in Proposal No. 4 at the bottom of the page starting on line 15, ending, "any Commonwealth Officer," over and including line 3. That is the material that was put in Style and Drafting. That is what I want to amend first.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May I ask that we be at ease? There is some question about these amendments and Delegate Hocker, I am sorry but would you come up and would the body be at ease please?

The Chair will recognize Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, while we are having a lull, I have been informed that the suggestion I want to make in this amendment can be taken care of by Style and Drafting so I will not have an amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Hocker.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. President, for the delegation, if you give me permission to amend the amendment that I will present, and it will only be one amendment, we will strike out all of lines 14, 15, 1, 2 and 3, and insert in lieu of "The General Assembly shall designate the officers or department to conduct any such audits." That will be the amendment. Are they being distributed?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am afraid they may have distributed two of yours. They have two. Will you please identify which amendment you wish to present?

DELEGATE HOCKER. The one that has the language on it, "The General Assembly shall designate the officers or departments to conduct any such audits."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Whittum.

DELEGATE WHITTUM. On Printer's No. 27, Proposal No. 4, lines 14 and 15 which are crossed out, were originally inserted in this proposal by the amendment of Delegate Fohl. The capitalized language on line 15 and 1, 2 and 3 of the second page were substituted by the Style and Drafting department.

My question is, do we need a vote to reconsider the Fohl Amendment in order to delete that language?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The answer to your question is, that we do not need a vote to reconsider because Delegate Hocker is offering a new and different amendment, different language which of course strikes that out, but he offers another amendment which, consistent with the Chair's ruling, heretofore has been that you can do this without a motion to reconsider.

DELEGATE WHITTUM. One further question. If Delegate Hocker's amendment is adopted, does the language of the Fohl Amendment which is now stricken, come back into this proposal?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No. My understanding is and I want you to ask Delegate Hocker, but my understanding is of his amendment, that he is striking that language out and inserting new language. Is that what you are doing Delegate Hocker? I do not wish to interpret your amendment because that is your job.

DELEGATE HOCKER. That is true, sir.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want you to know that Delegate Hocker still has the floor and you have the floor, Delegate Hocker, for the purpose of speaking to the delegates and asking their consent.

DELEGATE HOCKER. That is exactly what I have done. I am still doing it and I am simply asking the delegation whether they will give me permission to insert an amendment on third reading which must be done by consent of the delegates.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Caron. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE CARON. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE CARON. The question I have for the Chair is, every time Style and Drafting changes something, does that mean it can be amended? I thought Style and Drafting could not change the concept, just the wording to mean the same thing.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I have to answer your question by two answers. You asked me two questions.

One question is, that Style and Drafting, in effect, cannot change the substantive meaning. It can only make changes in the style and the drafting. But this particular amendment, now, is being offered to change the substance of what was in there.

DELEGATE CARON. Am I correct that the assumption is that Style and Drafting has also changed the substance?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me just say the Chair has not been asked to rule on that but what you are doing is, you are, in effect, on this amendment, striking out both the original Fohl language as well as the language of Style and Drafting and you are inserting new language. That is, if you agree to this amendment.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I was going to reply as a member of Style and Drafting in an effort to elucidate a bit on this motion. It was never the intention of Style and Drafting to change the language that we found in the original proposal as it came to us off the floor. We have been beset and besieged by any number of persons from both sides of the discussion that this language does not resolve the conflict that existed with the pre-audit and post-audit language. I would think, in the interest of solving this problem the minimum that we should do is allow Delegate Hocker to go onto the floor with this so that we can, once and for all, forestall this entire discussion. Perhaps the best thing we might do is simply delete the entire language from the proposal, because it has engendered more comment than solution, but I think, simply on the motion to reconsider, there are parties on both sides of the fence that would like to have this reopened and resolved.

DELEGATE CARON. The only question I have, Mr. President, is that Style and Drafting admits to the fact that the concept has changed—someone has. My question to you, Mr. President, is, should we not really be voting on Delegate Hocker's amendment based on the original language in the proposal rather than what Style and Drafting has presented? That is what I question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Hocker.

DELEGATE HOCKER. In order to expedite this, I ask the Chair for a ruling on whether or not counsel for the delegation thought that there was a change of concept in what Style and Drafting presented. You asked Mr. Leonard to explain that and he did not, so I am asking the Chair to ask the attorney what his ruling was.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. To which attorney are you referring?

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. Comisky.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Mr. Comisky advises me he has not ruled on this language.

I just want to say this, the question you wish to present regarding consent to the amendment makes this a matter that does not have to be decided as to whether or not the language offered by Style and Drafting constitutes a substantive change, because the amendment that you now want to offer is striking out both the language of the Fohl Amendment and the Style and Drafting Committee, and inserting entirely new language.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. President, I will agree with Delegate Aberman when he states there are people in the delegation who are dissatisfied with the whole thing and the first thing we must do is, get the permission of this delegation to reopen, and then we should move from there.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I second the motion and call for the question.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Do we have a motion that we close the debate and vote?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Yes. I have seconded Delegate Hocker's motion.

I now move to close debate on this topic and vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand that it has been moved by Delegate Hocker and seconded by Delegate Aberman that we close debate and vote on the question.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Goldman. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. May I have the right to interrogate without debate?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Not after we have a motion on the floor. We have to vote on the motion and see whether or not the body wants to hear more about it. This is a motion to close debate at this time.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

MOTION ON CONSENT TO RECEIVE HOCKER AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 4

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question before the Convention is, will the Convention agree to receive an amendment to Proposal No. 4 being offered by Delegate Hocker?

We now unlock the voting machine. Remember you are not voting on the amendment. You are voting on the consent. It requires a majority to give consent.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

HOCKER AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 4

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hocker.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 4.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE HOCKER offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 10), page 1, lines 14 and 15; page 2, lines 1 to 3, by striking out all of said lines, and inserting: The General Assembly shall designate the officers or departments to conduct any such audits.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Hocker.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. President, I think we have been over this thoroughly. I think the delegates understand the problem. I do not want to take up all their time and if there are any questions I will be happy to answer them. If not, I am ready to proceed.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You mean you are ready to proceed to vote?

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Woodring.

DELEGATE WOODRING. Mr. President, I think something should be said in opposition to this amendment. It is conceived out of hatred, malice and suspicion. I remember a colleague over on the other side of the Legislature who used to make an annual speech about "suspicion." It is the nastiest word in the English language. It is something that you cannot see, you cannot feel and you cannot guard yourself against it. The only attack that has been made on this section of Proposal No. 4, Mr. President, is because one or two of the delegates have become suspicious and have sown that nasty seed of thought among other delegates. Let us examine what we are talking about here. We are saying that any Commonwealth officer whose approval is necessary for any transaction relative to the financial affairs of the Commonwealth shall not be charged with the function of—that is the Scranton Amendment—auditing that transaction after its occurrence. I ask you and all of the delegates within the hearing of my voice, what is wrong with that section? If you had a business, if you had a corporation, if you have any kind of financial dealings of your own or in which you were interested, you would want the safeguard of exactly that type of provision. This proposal has come out of the Committee on Taxation and State Finance and that Committee, I might say, including both its Co-Chairmen —excepting present company—and the sub-chairman of several committees and of the committee members which was a good, honest, hard working committee. After debating this problem for a long time to try to put the fiscal affairs, the financial affairs of the Commonwealth on a sound bookkeeping and auditing basis, a basis on which there would be checks and double checks for the continued integrity and the good name of our Commonwealth, out of all that work came this harmless but desirable provision. Now out of this suspicion of which I spoke comes this proposal that we strike all of that. What do we add? We add the General Assembly shall designate the officers or departments to conduct any such audits. And what does that mean? It is a meaningless amendment. I suggest that we uphold the hands of a committee, uphold the hands of the co-chairman and all of its members and vote down this amendment which was born out of vengeance and suspicion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Forster.

DELEGATE FORSTER. I would say amen, Mr. President, to everything that Delegate Woodring has said. This has been a partisan matter from the beginning, and if you will think back to the day when Proposal No. 4 was first debated on this floor, Chairman Leonard pointed out that when the Constitution of 1874 was drafted, the knowledge of what auditing was was not even known.

The only thing they could do, if I remember his language, was if a man's hands was in the till, put him in the clink. The guts of Proposal No. 4 is in the pre-audit and post-audit which needs to be separated. We have gone through the devious task of having that amendment put in. It was refused for reconsideration last week. Style and Drafting made changes in the language, and now we come along with this stupid amendment to take it out and absolutely destroy the meaning of Proposal No. 4.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Fineman.

DELEGATE FINEMAN. Mr. President, I rise to respectfully ask the members of this Convention to adopt this amendment. I want to assure Delegate Woodring that I am not being motivated by malice, nor hatred nor suspicion. I do not choose to characterize this amendment as a stupid amendment. I think it is an amendment that makes a great deal of sense. I support the amendment simply because the implications of this language are not fully known nor fully understood. It will unquestionably invite litigation and bring trouble to this Commonwealth, and as I stated earlier, if the proposal has merit, it more properly belongs in a piece of legislation rather than a constitutional document.

We already have a fiscal code which in large measure spells out the fiscal responsibility and the auditing responsibility of both the State Treasurer and the Auditor General, as I have already informed Delegate Leonard in private conversation that I would be very happy to add my name as a sponsor to any meaningful piece of legislation which will tighten the audit of the Commonwealth's monies. I subscribe completely to the view that the disbursements of the Commonwealth's monies should be subject to audit, but to say in language that locks in for all time that it should be done in a particular way is, indeed, not a sensible approach. I also want to say that the mere fact that an opposing viewpoint is being heard here today does not cast any unfavorable reaction or reference on the Committee that suggested this.

I think that is why we are here as delegates, to examine collectively, together, on this floor proposal, whether they be the proposals of individual members or proposals of a Committee, and in the judgment and in the good sense of this body we have already changed many proposals as submitted by the Committee and that does not constitute any attack on the Committee to change their thinking. We have done that with other bills. This is not a meaningless amendment as it was suggested, nor is it a partisan approach to the problem. It certainly cannot be partisan if I have Senator Fleming joining my viewpoints on this matter, or even Delegate Hocker who is of a political party that is of a different persuasion than mine. I would respectfully ask the delegates of this Convention to adopt the Hocker Amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Percey.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

DELEGATE PERCEY. Mr. President, I have to part company with a lot of people. I have to part company with the learned judge in terms of his adjectives in describing this amendment, and I have to part company with an old friend, Delegate Forster, who is being partisan on his part, and I have to part company with Delegate Hocker, who tells me that this is merely a rearrangement of Style and Drafting. It is not. Delegate Hocker is not only rearranging what Style and Drafting has given to this Convention, he is rearranging the intent of the sub-committee and the Committee as a whole on this proposal, and I think what many of us ought to be aware of is that this issue is partisan, but it is not partisan Republican or Democrat. This is a patronage issue, and this is what some of my learned friends and colleagues are talking about. They know who controls the Auditor General's office today, but they do not know who is going to control it in January.

I do not think it is the business of this Convention to deal with how many jobs are in that office. I do not think it is our function at all. I think that what we are trying to do and what our Committee was trying to do is lay down a principle which we think is important, and that it is not relevant to partisan politics, and I would move the question, with the exception of the gentlemen who are now standing on the floor.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You move the question. Is there a second?

DELEGATE KRILL. I second the motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Percey and seconded by Delegate Krill that we close debate and vote on the question, with the exception of Delegates Wilcox, Morton, Scarlett, and of course, Hocker, Fohl, Caron and Swope, be heard.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

The majority having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the affirmative and the motion was agreed to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, the Chair will recognize Delegate Swope.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Mr. President, I hope I will not have to reassure my good personal friend, former Judge from Northampton County, Delegate Woodring, that my position on this amendment is not out of malice or out of suspicion. My position on this amendment is out of faith, faith in the Legislature of Pennsylvania, which has for the last hundred years prescribed the responsibilities with respect to the fiscal audits of our Commonwealth finances, properly in such a manner as has brought no suspicion, has brought no scandal upon the fiscal offices of the Commonwealth. I believe that the Legislature should be continued so as to have this kind of authority and to dispense with responsibility as it sees fit. I also would like, in closing, to say to my friend, Delegate Caron, from Reading—who was formerly from Illinois—that the finances of this Commonwealth are being audited. There is no gap in the audit procedure of Pennsylvania, and I, therefore, ask my fellow delegates to vote for this amendment and reassert their faith in the past performance of these two fiscal offices and the Legislature's ability to carry on in the future.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Wilcox.

DELEGATE WILCOX. Mr. President, I rise in vigorous opposition to this amendment. If the delegates will recall, when our Committee first brought this before the Convention, we had assigned various tasks with regard to post- and pre-audit to various officers. This proved controversial, and we took it out.

The Convention itself, when it adopted the Fohl Amendment, inserted the principle, the very valuable principle that we would not expect the mouse to be the guardian of the cheese. In this case we all have come along with this principle and now the present amendment would strip the principle entirely from the proposal.

As far as trusting the Legislature is concerned, I think it is obvious that the proposal as it now stands does precisely that. The proposal does not assign various tasks to any particular officers. It will be up to the Legislature to implement this. The Legislature will have time to study a very serious problem. It can get, at leisure, its recommendations from studies, commissions, and groups. If it chooses to go into an independent controller type modeled after the Federal system, it could do that. If it chooses to allocate between State officers, it could do that. If it chooses to give certain powers to administrators under the Governor, it could do that. But all of these would be bound by the valuable principle that we separate the functions and we do not have one person checking out his own previous actions. I think this is a very valuable principle. I think it does trust the Legislature, which will have time to make adequate provisions. I think most of us want a very independent auditing system in this State and I, therefore, urge all the delegates to vote down this amendment.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scarlett. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SCARLETT. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SCARLETT. Mr. President, I have a couple of questions I would like to ask. First, it is my understanding that the General Assembly will or shall designate offices or departments to conduct such audits. Does this mean that it will only be done by such offices or departments as designated by them?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure Delegate Hocker will answer your inquiry.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. President, I will answer the gentleman. I do not think that is quite true, Mr. President. I have faith in the legislative arm, to be sure. I think that they will do what is right. I am not a member of it anymore, but I have great faith in it, the same way as you people are going to have faith in the people who passed some of this trash that is going through this Convention. You better have faith. If you take Proposal No. 4 and you look at the statement on line 9, "Audit.—The financial affairs of any entity funded or financially aided by the Commonwealth, and all departments, boards, commissions, agencies, instrumentalities, authorities and institutions of the Commonwealth, shall be subject to audits made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards."

In my humble opinion, this covers the whole issue. If this whole mess were out of here, this would cover this. "Auditing standards" are something that are set up and things that are abided by by all people. I want to say to you, sir, I think that the Legislature who has to go to the people every two years for reelection will not make a mistake in this area.

DELEGATE SCARLETT. Thank you for that answer.

May I ask another question, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed.

DELEGATE SCARLETT. In reading this, it would then be my understanding that no office or department could or would be audited by any outside auditing firm. Is that correct?

DELEGATE HOCKER. No. I do not think that is true, because we have done it in the past under existing law. It was brought on the floor this morning that the Governor has the right to audit, and he did bring a firm into audit, and it can be done. This will not eliminate that, in my opinion.

DELEGATE SCARLETT. But it does not state in here that the General Assembly would have to authorize it.

DELEGATE HOCKER. I think you will find that in the Fiscal Code or in the Administrative Code. I cannot quote it, but I think that is where you will find it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Fohl.

DELEGATE FOHL. I would like to interrogate Delegate Hocker.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. He will stand for interrogation. Proceed with your question.

DELEGATE FOHL. In the present Style and Drafting language, as well as the original language, would it be the delegate's interpretation that it implies that the General Assembly shall designate how that be carried out?

DELEGATE HOCKER. Under my amendment, yes, Mr. President.

DELEGATE FOHL. No, no. Under the Style and Drafting language as well as the original language?

DELEGATE HOCKER. I do not think so, Mr. President. In fact, I cannot understand, and I have been studying it all day, just what Style and Drafting are trying to do or say. I cannot figure it out. I really do not know what is in there. The judge said there is an air of suspicion. I agree.

DELEGATE FOHL. If the Style and Drafting language were prefaced by saying, "the General Assembly shall provide that—" and then as it reads now, would that then be more understandable?

DELEGATE HOCKER. I am quite sure it would, yes. Mr. President, I think I could understand that then. Maybe I am stupid, but I cannot understand what they have inserted in here, and that arouses suspicion.

DELEGATE FOHL. If that insertion would be made, would that be any different from the proposed amendment?

DELEGATE HOCKER. I do not know how it can be made; that is the reason we are up here fighting. I have no other course than what I am following, Mr. President.

DELEGATE FOHL. It could be made by the same mechanism that you are going by, by amendment, but I was asking a hypothetical question. Would it be any different than yours if it had that?

DELEGATE HOCKER. If Style and Drafting were to put in there the language that I am trying to put in?

DELEGATE FOHL. No, no. If Style and Drafting had styled and drafted their revision to say the General Assembly shall by law provide that any Commonwealth officer whose approval is necessary for any transaction relative to the financial affairs of the Commonwealth shall not be charged with the responsibility for auditing that transaction after its occurrence.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Where is the gentleman reading from? Is he reading from Proposal No. 4?

DELEGATE FOHL. Yes, Mr. President.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Where?

DELEGATE FOHL. Section 12 of the paper in your left hand, line 15, where it starts off "any Commonwealth officer," and the first three lines on page 2.

DELEGATE HOCKER. The same Commonwealth officer or department shall not have the responsibility for both the pre- and post-audit; is that what you are saying? I do not think that would do what I am trying to do.

DELEGATE FOHL. That is not what I asked. Starting near the end of line 15 on page 1.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Starting with "any Commonwealth officer"?

DELEGATE FOHL. Yes. That is right, and the first three lines of page 2.

DELEGATE HOCKER. "Any Commonwealth officer whose approval is necessary for any transaction relative to the financial affairs of the Commonwealth shall not be charged with the responsibility for auditing that transaction after its occurrence."

I do not, and I beg ignorance, understand that language.

DELEGATE FOHL. Thank you for your replies.

I would suggest that it is quite clear that that language leaves in the hands of the General Assembly just what you want to leave in the hands of the General Assembly.

DELEGATE HOCKER. I have to disagree with the delegate. I do not think it does.

DELEGATE FOHL. Mr. President, since Committee Proposal No. 4 came on the floor it has been assaulted and reassaulted with emasculating amendments. This proposal is a proposal designed for good sound financial management of the Commonwealth's affairs. I think this Convention should right now say we are drawing the line on knocking the stuffing out of Committee Proposal No. 4. Let us not cross that line. Let us reject this amendment, and presuming that Governor Scranton introduces his corrective language, amend that and accept this Committee proposal. I do not believe the people on April 23rd will vote against any proposal that assures them sound financial management of two billion dollars a year.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Caron.

DELEGATE CARON. Mr. President, I also would like to speak in support unless there is somebody else who wishes to speak the other way.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We only have Delegate Morton left.

DELEGATE KLINE. Mr. President, I would like to direct a question to Delegate Hocker.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sorry, I do not think that is proper under our motion because our motion closed debate except for the delegates that were standing.

DELEGATE HOCKER. I will be happy to come over there and converse with the gentleman.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Caron, you may proceed.

DELEGATE CARON. I would like to speak against the amendment for very sound practical reasons. I think the previous speaker, Delegate Fohl, has very amply stated that this Committee Proposal No. 4 represents sound business judgment in taking a look at your own affairs. We have agreed, this council as a group, that the audit is a necessity, and now the next thing that has happened is the attempt to change the language in one section of it. The main reason I am against Delegate Hocker's amendment is very simple. The very principle of audit is to have somebody else check up on what you are doing to avoid any problems, and the amendment as proposed by Delegate Hocker specifically gives to the General Assembly, our Legislature, the right to be responsible for its own actions. This is the very thing that I think leads to the problems of tomorrow. I do not accuse anybody. I admit Delegate Swope was perfectly correct when he stated the State of Pennsylvania has never had a problem of the magnitude that was had in my own State of Illinois, but I would like to feel free that it would not happen here and that the citizens of our Commonwealth are protected. I find it very difficult to understand why the General Assembly should have the privilege of designating the offices or departments that are to conduct the audits when they themselves have the responsibility of a rather large sum of money, which as far as I know, has not been audited to this point.

What I am trying to say is, I do not think we can give the legislators the privilege to have the opportunity to say yes or no to auditing their own accounts. It has to be done across the board for every agency and every facility within this Commonwealth. I urge my fellow delegates to defeat this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Morton.

DELEGATE MORTON. Mr. President, this particular item of Proposal No. 4 has been subject to more debate, I think, than most of the items in the Judiciary. Finally after much debate as to whether it should be the Auditor General or Treasurer, we adopted the Fohl Amendment by a vote of 88 to 47, then we had stirring addresses by Delegate Michener and Delegate Casey about past actions of this Convention where we had rescinded other actions we had taken. A few days later a motion to reconsider the Fohl Amendment came up and it was defeated 86 to 53. Once again we are faced with a motion in another manner in which it is designed to throw out a different post-audit and a different pre-audit. I say to you that there are all those who have spoken about good business practices and many people in my own area have commented that this section introduces into government the best business practice that you can have, a separate pre-audit and a separate post-audit. If it is good for business, it is good for government, and I hope that this delegation will stay with its decision which it so soundly made a number of weeks ago, instead of letting someone now come in and say we have found a new whipping boy, we are going to take it out on Style and Drafting to try to do what we could not do before. To me it is very clear here all that Style and Drafting is doing is the same as we said before; there will be a pre-audit and there will be a post-audit and the same person will not do both of them. For good government and for good business let us stay with our decisions that we so overwhelmingly adopted last week.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Hocker for closing and you have eight and one-half minutes left.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. President, it will not take me that long. I think they have heard enough. I disagree with some of the proponents of the article as it is. I think Delegate Swope—and they talk about parties—Delegate Swope has always been on the other side of what I subscribed to, but we never accused each other of having malice or hatred. I am very sorry that had to enter into this. I want to answer the gentleman by saying that I have no malice in me. I may be a little cantankerous at times. Suspicious? Yes. That is the reason that I am up here. I could be just as well sitting in my seat. But I have suspicion of this language. Hatred? No. I never met a man in my life that I did not like—that has been said before—but some I liked better than others. I believe in what I am doing here. I believe it is good for government. I believe that when you start fooling with the constitutional offices, if those offices were not honest, if those offices were not doing a good job, I am quite sure that there would be a call in this Convention to do something about them. I believe what we are doing today is sufficient. I can see in the future with this language an additional expenditure of four or five million dollars a year to set up another department or to hire outside help. Mr. President, the suspicion still remains with me. It is the only thing that I will admit to. I ask this delegation, if you do not do anything else, do not go away from this Convention hating the Legislature and the legislators that put in just as bad hours as you are putting in here now. You are getting a little taste of what they go through and what I went through for twenty years. It is not all peaches and cream. They are honest, honorable people, whether they be Democrats or Republicans. Mr. President, let us vote.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the Hocker amendment?

MOTION ON CONSENT TO RECEIVE SCRANTON AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 4

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
It was agreed to.

SCRANTON AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 4

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 4.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on second consideration?

DELEGATE SCRANTON offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 10), page 2, line 3, by striking out "THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR" and inserting: the function of

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, I have discussed this with the two co-chairmen of the Style and Drafting Committee and the two co-chairmen of Taxation and Finance Committee, and with my friend Delegate Hocker, and with a number of other people and so far everybody says we can do this. But, as I understand it, the parliamentary people say I have to go through this and that it is not just a change of wording. What I would like to do and what the amendment does is to take out on line 3 of page 2, the words "the responsibility for" and to insert "the function of." The only purpose for this is that in our form of government here in Pennsylvania the Governor is responsible, must make approval when necessary for some transaction relative to the financial affairs of the Commonwealth, and he is responsible for the auditing of that transaction after its occurrence. This sometimes does not take place for a very long time, but, unfortunately, that is an executive position and therefore, I want to make clear that we eliminate the possibility that we may be up against in charging him with the responsibility for the auditing when we are talking about the actual function of it. I want you to know that I am not doing this out of suspicion, hatred, malice, and I still like the League of Women Voters.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are we ready for the question?

I take it we have unanimous consent to vote on this amendment now without further discussion and I will unlock the voting machine. All those voting "yea" will vote to support the Scranton Amendment, and those voting "nay" will vote to reject it.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the Scranton amendment?

REFERRAL TO COMMITTEE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Under the rules this proposal will now be resubmitted to the Committee on Style and Drafting with the request that the Committee report it back to us just as quickly as it can be printed.

REPORT FROM COMMITTEE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, I understand Delegate Johnson has a report for us on Proposal No. 5.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Proposal No. 5 has now cleared the Committees and is at the printer's, so I wish to stand in place and present Proposal No. 5, which will be presented to the delegates.

COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING

Room 519, North Office Building
Harrisburg, Pennsylvania 17106

February 27, 1968

To the Honorable,
The Delegates Assembled,
1967-68 Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention

Re: Taxation and State Finance
Exemptions—Public Utilities

Mesdames and Sirs:

On behalf of the Committee, we are pleased to submit to you herewith our report on Committee Proposal No. 5, relative to exemptions from taxation and providing for the taxation of real property of public utilities.

As was the case with Proposals Nos. 3 and 4, this Committee has worked closely with the Co-Chairmen and Counsel of the substantive committee on Taxation and State Finance, and we are pleased to report that the changes effected in this proposal are concurred in by those gentlemen:

The following is a summary of the significant changes in draft effected by this committee:

1. The provisions set forth in Sections 1A and 1A1 of Committee Proposal No. 5 have been regrouped and renumbered on a subject basis. Subsection (a) continues as before to set forth categories of property and institutions which the General Assembly is authorized to exempt from taxation; subsection (b) sets forth the subjects of taxation for which the General Assembly may by general law establish standards and qualifications, and may grant exemptions or make special tax provisions; and subsection (c) sets forth the self-operating exemption of residence property occupied by certain wounded war veterans.

Subsection (c), which was approved by the voters in 1961, has been retained verbatim, but the Committee would call your attention to the fact that this subsection would now seem to be redundant in view of the expanded section relative to certain classes of exemptions, including "disability." We further observe that the section contains certain poorly phrased descriptors, makes constitutional reference to a non-constitutional agency, viz.: "the State Veterans' Commission," and more important, is limited in application. For example, is a citizen and resident of the Commonwealth who became a paraplegic as a result of service on a United States vessel standing off the coast of Israel and inadvertently attacked eligible under this section? We believe not as the veteran has not served in "any war or armed conflict in which the United States was engaged. . . ." We understand this section was added by amendment on second consideration and thus do not believe we can act upon it, although the Committee is of the strong opinion it ought to be deleted or, at minimum, authorization given to provide more precise language.

2. In the listing of exemptions from taxation which the General Assembly is authorized to adopt, set forth in subsection 1 (a), the Committee retained verbatim several adjectives which are in our opinion redundant and apt to cause confusion. The Committee understands that the insertion of "actually" in certain phrases was an attempt to make more strict the construction of the exemption and to provide an appropriate rule of reference for judicial interpretation. Recognizing the detailed consideration this subsection has been given, this Committee finally acquiesced in the verbatim language chosen by the substantive committee. This reliance upon prior judicial interpretations which have not been, in the opinion of the Committee, sufficiently restrictive with respect to tax exemptions is a grave mistake.

3. The Section dealing with the taxation of real property of public utilities has been rearranged and reworded to accomplish the following objectives:

(a) The exemption for the real property useful in furnishing public utility services is an exception to the general principle that the real property of public utilities shall be subject to real estate taxes imposed by local taxing authorities. (The last sentence of Committee Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 18 has simply restated this principle and has therefore been deleted.)

(b) The exemption is only applicable to the extent that the General Assembly provides for the distribution of funds to compensate local taxing authorities for lost real property taxes.

(c) The phrase "in lieu of local taxes" has been retained, but in view of the ambiguity of that phrase standing alone, it has been defined in terms of the requirements originally set forth in that Section for the applicability of the exemption.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. I ask that it be placed on the calendar for a third reading.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will accept your report and we will see that it is printed and placed on the calendar.

Will the delegates please take their seats and would the clerk please sound the bell for the delegates outside to come in?

Fellow delegates. We have now completed the calendar this afternoon as far as we can go at this time. But, we have more work to do today. What the Chair has been doing is trying to obtain an estimate as to when Proposals Nos. 4 and 5 will be ready for third and final consideration on the calendar. The safest estimate that I can receive on Proposals Nos. 4 and 5 is 8:00 o'clock this evening.

The Chair would therefore like to suggest that we recess now until 8:00 p.m. this evening and come back on Proposals Nos. 4 and 5 with a hope that we will pass both of them on third consideration and final passage. Of course, they will both be on third consideration.

In addition, we have the problem of Proposal No. 7 on the Judiciary, and I know that Style and Drafting is working as hard as they can on the Judiciary proposal, and when we come back tonight we will have an announcement from Style and Drafting, I hope, as to when we can expect Proposal No. 7 to come back on third consideration from the Judiciary, which will not be tonight by the way, but will be some time I hope tomorrow morning.

COMMITTEE MEETING

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Nelson.

DELEGATE NELSON. I have a Committee announcement. The Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People will meet in Room 401 of this building after we leave here.

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It is now 4:15 p.m. and unless there is objection, we will recess until 8:00 p.m. The Chair is willing to hear objections to that if there are any.

The Chair hears none, and the Convention is now in recess until 8 p.m.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time of recess having expired, the Convention will come to order.

VIRGINIA KNAUER WELCOMED

DELEGATE WOODRING. Mr. President and members of the Convention, it is my great pleasure to present to the Chair at this Convention, a very dear friend of mine, a former member of the Philadelphia Council and present Consumer Research Director of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Virginia Knauer.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Where is Viriginia? We are very happy to have you with us this evening.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Reynolds.

DELEGATE REYNOLDS. Mr. President. We have been here for quite a while. Very few people have helped us with our problems in Philadelphia, but tonight we had a glorious occasion. A delegate from another county has tried to steal our glory. I want to re-introduce and tell you that we are very proud of a lady from Philadelphia who has been appointed as Director of the Bureau of Consumer Protection in the Department of Justice. She has been one of the greatest advocates of all the fine things that we have tried to do here. She has been in the legislative department of Philadelphia for two consecutive terms. She has served in all the places. Yesterday one of our delegates said that the women were not serving. She has done everything to make America a better place to live. I want to re-introduce our great lady from Philadelphia, Virginia Knauer, who is one of our greatest advocates of freedom, justice and equal opportunity, and I want to congratulate the Governor of the State of Pennsylvania for appointing her as well as the people of Philadelphia who caused the appointment.

I wish she would stand again so we can really see Virginia Knauer.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Bloom. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BLOOM. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BLOOM. Mr. President and delegates of this Convention. I took it upon myself, nobody nominated me, and I am appearing here on personal privilege.

It seems as though the Pennsylvania Bar Association's name has been ridiculed with malice and hatred towards none of the delegates that did so. I wish to take this opportunity to inform the delegates as to what the Pennsylvania State Bar Association stands for in a little history and give you some facts. I am doing it at this time because the Judicial Article is practically finished. If I did this or made this talk to you on personal privilege before this time, you may think that I was a representative of the Pennsylvania State Bar Association. I have been a member of this Association for the past 40 years. I have never held an office in this Association. I have never been on a Committee in this Association. I have been what is known as a member that attended the meeting of this Association at such times that I was able to do so and get away from my offce.

I think it is very important that someone gives these delegates that are assembled here, some history and some background of the Pennsylvania State Bar Association. In the first place, I have been hooted before gentlemen, by a larger delegation than this.

I am very serious about it, because I think that most of us do not understand the Pennsylvania Bar Association and what it stands for.

This Association has been in existence since 1895. It is not a come lately thing, it has been here since 1895 and that is practically 73 years. The membership of the Association on January 1st of this year was 8,346 and that is quite a few attorneys that belong to this Association. Of the 67 counties, 60 per cent of the county Bar Associations are members of this Association and they are integrated members. By integrated members for those who do not understand the term, it means every member of that particular county bar association; the dues are paid by that particular county bar association and each member of that association is a member of the Pennsylvania State Bar Association.

To give you some idea as to what the by-laws of the Association state: It was formed to advance the science of jurisprudence. To promote the administration of justice. To see that no one on account of poverty is deprived his legal rights. To secure proper legislation. To encourage a thorough legal education. To uphold the honor and dignity of the Bar. To cultivate cordial intercourse among the lawyers of Pennsylvania and to perpetuate the history of the profession in the memory of its members.

The reason why it is important for these delegates to know about this Association is the fact that it has been said that this Association has been dominated by the large law offices of the State of Pennsylvania. Let me tell you this. Gilbert Nurick of Harrisburg, Dauphin County, was the past president. The present president is Andrew Horrigan of Luzerne County. Neither one of these gentlemen are members of any large law firms. Judge Braham was also president of this Association and he comes from New Castle and there are only two members of his firm. You can see by the presidents of the Bar Association in the past three years that it has not been dominated by the large law firms of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

There are 89 delegates in the House of Delegates that determine the policy of the Association. They are elected from different zones of the State of Pennsylvania, and they represent the zones in all its deliberations.

Since 1961, this Association has made a study of the revised Constitution and particularly the Judicial Article. They have been studying that by a commission and the commission not only contains one lawyer or two lawyers or a small committee, but it contains 300 lawyers, and after a study of five to six years on this particular project where they had meetings and discussed this problem, they came up with their article on Judicial reform.

We, as delegates, had a right to ignore the Pennsylvania Bar Association on its proposal. I do not think they at any time came before this Association and asked this Association to adopt it. They did not use any tactics to state how any member of the Association should vote, but I want to state this: In our particular Bar Association of which I was President, and I was also President of the Pitlaw Association, that you get to be president of these particular bodies by the work that you do in these associations and the interest that you portray in carrying forward the constructive matters that they have. I want to advise you that I am proud, and it hurt me very much as a member of long standing of the State Bar Association, to have been placed on the line in the manner in which it was done by some of the members of this Association.

I think that after five or six years of study by a committee of 300 judges and members of the Association, that they came up with a proposal. We should have given them some credit for the study they made of that particular proposal. I say this: When they call us the 90-day wonders, we are the 90-day wonders when we could come up with a proposal such as we did.

I want to say one other thing and this is just in the manner of a joke and I will conclude with this little joke of mine and it is my own joke. When I came to this Convention, I told the people that I was going to take a trip. They said, "What, are you taking LSD?" I said, "No, Con Con pills and thank goodness in about two more days I will not have to take the Con Con pill and I will come down to earth."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. I wanted to add one sentence by way of comment to Delegate Bloom's speech. The sentence is, I like to see a man stand up for his horse, even if it is a mule.

MOTHER OF DELEGATE COSETTI WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Cortese.

DELEGATE CORTESE. Mr. President. I rise to a point of personal delight.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Parliamentarian indicates we have not had one of those for a long time.

DELEGATE CORTESE. Mr. President, I respectfully request that you recognize the presence here of a distinguished visitor from Ohio, the La Dist Inere Senoire Mary Cosetti, mother of our illustrious Delegate Cosetti.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will Mrs. Cosetti please stand so we can give her our cordial greeting?

CALENDAR

COMMITTEE PROPOSALS ON THIRD CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to the third consideration of Committee Proposal No. 4, Printer's No. 29, entitled:

A proposal amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania specifying audit control of public moneys and establishing and regulating a balanced State budget for the next fiscal year and financial plans for the succeeding five years.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, we take up the calendar and we call up Proposal No. 4, Printer's No. 29. This is on third consideration and the question before the Convention is, will the Convention agree to advance Proposal No. 4, Printer's No. 29 to final passage.

The Chair wishes to point out that Proposal No. 4 is now on third consideration. This means that this is the last opportunity to amend the proposal, but before any amendment can be received for consideration, delegates must obtain the consent of a majority of those present.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Swope.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Mr. President, I have run up the white flag. I do not fight any more after I have been beaten three or four times. I believe I am duty bound as a delegate of this Convention to point out my concept of the reading that was placed in Proposal No. 4 by the Style and Drafting Committee, when I say to you, Mr. President, that under that language, since the Auditor General and the State Treasurer, together with the Governor, must take steps for the annual borrowing of cash anticipation notes and thereby, their approval is necessary to that financial transaction, I hope that under this language, neither the Auditor General nor the State Treasurer can possibly audit any of the expenditures that are made with the money that has been borrowed through the action of these two fiscal officers and the Governor. I am not going to make any motion of any kind. I want this in the record. I want to show what this Convention did today.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Goldman.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Mr. President, we have debated Proposal No. 4 for many lengthy hours. I would like to move Proposal No. 4, Printer's No. 29 with no further debate.

DELEGATE WILCOX. I second the motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Moved by Delegate Goldman and seconded by Delegate Wilcox that we close debate and vote.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the motion?

The roll was recorded as follows:

The majority having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the affirmative and the proposal was agreed to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now this proposal, pursuant to the rules, has been considered on three different days and agreed to and the question now is, will the Convention finally pass this proposal? At this time, of course, the proposal must receive 32 votes.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Kline.

DELEGATE KLINE. Mr. President, I intend to vote against this proposal. I think it is one of the poorest things we have drafted in the Convention and I would like to tell you why. As far as pre-audit and post-auditing of Commonwealth accounts, the way this language now reads, this proposal effectively does nothing. All you have to do is read the language. That is precisely what persons will do when they look to this section of the Constitution in the future. It says, essentially, that the financial affairs of any entity of the Commonwealth shall be subject to audit. That, of course, does not mandate any audit. It just means they shall be subject to audit. Then, in the battle over language, the fight became so intense between the two forces that I think we ended up with, if not a negative, certainly a neuter that really says absolutely nothing. It says, in effect, any Commonwealth officer whose approval is necessary for any transaction relative to the financial affairs of the Commonwealth—and here we get very negative and I say we do nothing—shall not be charged with the function of auditing the transaction after its occurrence. So we say that anyone who has to approve an expenditure before the money is expended shall not be charged with auditing it after it is expended. Then we go silent and do not say anything about who is supposed to audit it after it is expended.

I am satisfied that if this passes, the Fiscal Code which now empowers the Auditor General and other certain officers with certain responsibilities will prevail and protect the interests of the citizens. That code, of course, comes from the General Assembly, so actually we are doing, I think, what Delegate Hocker wanted to do in the clearest, plainest language possible; charge the General Assembly with the responsibility. This could have been much better. I am disappointed that it was not.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair asks, does anyone else wish to be heard or are we ready for the question?

The question is, will the Convention finally pass this proposal?

And said proposal having been read a third time, considered and agreed to,

On the question,

Shall the proposal be finally adopted?

REFERRAL TO COMMITTEE

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON THIRD CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to the third consideration of Committee Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 30, entitled:

A proposal repealing article five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania relating to the Judiciary and adding a new Judiciary article.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now we take up Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 30.

The Chair, at this time, recognizes the Chairman of Style and Drafting, either Chairman Pelletier or Chairman Johnson.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Mr. President, it will be about 15 minutes before we are ready for this. There is one slight change that has to be made.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Michener. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE MICHENER. I rise for a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE MICHENER. I had a very difficult problem last night. In view of Delegate Gerber's attack upon the fair sex, it was pointed out to me that he was the man who had introduced my wife to this assembly and it was the legal opinion that everything he said was retroactive and that, therefore, technically, my wife was not introduced properly. But we had other legal opinions this morning and they say that Delegate Gerber's attack did not wipe out the female side of the race completely. It was highly selective. It did apply to Barbara Sprogell and my beautiful seatmate here but it did not apply to my wife, who is not a member of that association, and the legal opinion was that my wife was duly introduced, a fact for which I am highly grateful.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Gerber.

DELEGATE GERBER. One of the reasons that Delegate Michener's wife evidently was not introduced prior to my having this pointed opportunity to do so, was because he was so wrapped up in words for such a long period of time that he forgot about beauty, and I would only like to say that I do not need legal opinions to direct my attacks but I always need the help of beauty to show me beauty, and were it not for the lovely wife of Delegate Rea, who pointed out the omission on the part of Delegate Michener, I would not have had the privilege of presenting Delegate Michener's wife's name to the record and I think it only fair that when we talk about lovely, beautiful women, we also place in that category the lovely wife of Delegate Rea.

PRESENTATION TO DELEGATE GERBER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Do you wish to be recognized, Delegate Scales?

DELEGATE SCALES. Mr. President, a very serious problem has arisen. I wish that Delegate Gerber would remain at the microphone because it is such a characteristic pose for him.

DELEGATE GERBER. I thank the gentleman, Mr. President.

DELEGATE SCALES. By mistake, I am sure, Mr. President, a package was delivered to my desk this evening. I am sure it is by mistake because on the package it says "For Delegate Gerber, with love from the League of Women Voters."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You better drop it in water.

DELEGATE SCALES. One of the comments appears to be out of place, Mr. President, but I am sure Style and Drafting could take care of that problem. I would like one of the pages, however, to come forward so that this may be delivered to Delegate Gerber.

DELEGATE BANES. From where I stand, it looks to me like a doghouse.

DELEGATE GERBER. I never had the dean of a law school play the part of a delivery boy before and I want to thank Dean Manderino for his kind help.

The question now is as I hold this in my hand, do I pull it out with my finger or do I pull it out with my teeth? I am told that I cannot pull it out with my teeth because I have both feet in my mouth.

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Unless there is objection, we will recess for about 15 minutes. We will then be ready to take up Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 30.

The Chair hears none.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time of recess having expired, the Convention will come to order.

DELEGATES' WIVES WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Cortese.

DELEGATE CORTESE. I have the honor to introduce the charming wife, the counsellor of Delegate Corey, Mrs. Elizabeth Corey, who is here among us as a most interested spectator. I ask that her presence be officially recognized.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We would ask that Mrs. Corey, the wife of Delegate Corey, stand. There she is.

We are all very happy to have you here.

Now, I understand, we also have with us the wife of Delegate Croop, and if Mrs. Croop will please stand, we would like to give you our warm cordial greeting.

Now, the Chair recognizes Delegate Leach.

DELEGATE LEACH. Mr. President, one of your most faithful followers happens to be sitting right beside Mrs. Croop. Her first name is Claire, and I have been married to her for a few days. I do not think she has been introduced yet.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Well, let me just say this, that we certainly want to present Mrs. Leach.

Where are you, Mrs. Leach? There she is. We are very, very glad to have you with us.

Now, the Chair recognizes Delegate Richter.

DELEGATE RICHTER. I would like to rise for a point of personal privilege. There is a lady in this Convention who has attended practically every session we have had, and I believe that she should be introduced and given a good appreciative hand. She is Mrs. Ruth Scott, the wife of Delegate Mayor Scott.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Where are you, Mrs. Scott? There she is. Let us give her a big hand.

BIRTH ANNOUNCEMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, the Chair recognizes Delegate Orbin.

DELEGATE ORBIN. I would just like to say that on November 30th, after driving through a snowstorm for five hours, we arrived in Harrisburg and shortly thereafter we received a phone call that we had a new granddaughter, Robyn Elaine back home. Today, after the recess, we went back to the hotel, and within a half hour we had another phone call and another granddaughter, Kelley Rae.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think that is very good news, indeed.

I can only say it is lucky for you that this Convention is going to be over on the 29th.

Now, returning to business, we will take up Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 30.

The question is, will the Convention agree to advance this proposal to final passage, and the Chair first recognizes the Chairman of the Committee on Style and Drafting, Chairman Johnson.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Mr. President, I stand here now on behalf of the Committee on Style and Drafting to present for a third reading Proposal No. 5.

COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING

Room 519, North Office Building
Harrisburg, Pennsylvania 17106

February 27, 1968

To the Honorable,
The Delegates Assembled,
1967-68 Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention

Re: Taxation and State Finance
Exemptions—Public Utilities

Mesdames and Sirs:

On behalf of the Committee, we are pleased to submit to you herewith our report on Committee Proposal No. 5, relative to exemptions from taxation and providing for the taxation of real property of public utilities.

As was the case with Proposals Nos. 3 and 4, this Committee has worked closely with the Co-Chairmen and Counsel of the substantive committee on Taxation and State Finance, and we are pleased to report that the changes effected in this proposal are concurred in by those gentlemen:

The following is a summary of the significant changes in draft effected by this committee:

1. The provisions set forth in Section 1A and 1A1 of Committee Proposal No. 5 have been regrouped and renumbered on a subject basis. Subsection (a) continues as before to set forth categories of property and institutions which the General Assembly is authorized to exempt from taxation; subsection (b) sets forth the subjects of taxation for which the General Assembly may by general law establish standards and qualifications, and may grant exemptions or make special tax provisions; and subsection (c) sets forth the self-operating exemption of residence property occupied by certain wounded war veterans.

Subsection (c), which was approved by the voters in 1961, has been retained verbatim, but the Committee would call your attention to the fact that this subsection would now seem to be redundant in view of the expanded section relative to certain classes of exemptions, including "disability." We further observe that the section contains certain poorly phrased descriptors, makes constitutional reference to a non-constitutional agency, viz.: "the State Veterans' Commission", and more important, is limited in application. For example, is a citizen and resident of the Commonwealth who became a paraplegic as a result of service on a United States vessel standing off the coast of Israel and inadvertently attacked eligible under this section? We believe not as the veteran has not served in "any war or armed conflict in which the United States was engaged. . . ." We understand this section was added by amendment on second consideration and thus do not believe we can act upon it, although the Committee is of the strong opinion it ought to be deleted or, at minimum, authorization given to provide more precise language.

2. In the listing of exemptions from taxation which the General Assembly is authorized to adopt, set forth in subsection 1 (a), the Committee retained verbatim several adjectives which are in our opinion redundant and apt to cause confusion. The Committee understands that the insertion of "actually" in certain phrases was an attempt to make more strict the construction of the exemption and to provide an appropriate rule of reference for judicial interpretation. Recognizing the detailed consideration this subsection has been given, this Committee finally acquiesced in the verbatim language chosen by the substantive committee. This reliance upon prior judicial interpretations which have not been, in the opinion of the Committee, sufficiently restrictive with respect to tax exemptions is a grave mistake.

3. The Section dealing with the taxation of real property of public utilities has been rearranged and reworded to accomplish the following objectives:

(a) The exemption for the real property useful in furnishing public utility services is an exception to the general principle that the real property of public utilities shall be subject to real estate taxes imposed by local taxing authorities. (The last sentence of Committee Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 18 has simply restated this principle and has therefore been deleted.)

(b) The exemption is only applicable to the extent that the General Assembly provides for the distribution of funds to compensate local taxing authorities for lost real property taxes.

(c) The phrase "in lieu of local taxes" has been retained, but in view of the ambiguity of that phrase standing alone, it has been defined in terms of the requirements originally set forth in that Section for the applicability of the exemption.

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL NO. 5

A PROPOSAL

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania further regulating exemptions from taxation and providing for the taxation of real property of public utilities.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Section one of article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended and A NEW SECTION IS added after said section, to read:

Section 1. Uniformity of Taxation.—All taxes shall be uniform, upon the same class of subjects, within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax, and shall be levied and collected under general laws [; but the General Assembly may, by general laws, exempt from taxation public property used for public purposes, actual places of religious worship, places of burial not used or held for private or corporate profit, institutions of purely public charity and real and personal property owned, occupied, and used by any branch, post or camp of honorably discharged soldiers, sailors, and marines; and the General Assembly may, by general laws, set up standards and qualifications for private forest reserves, and make special provision for the taxation thereof. Citizens and residents of this Commonwealth, who served in any war or armed conflict in which the United States was engaged and were honorably discharged or released under honorable circumstances from active service, shall be exempt from the payment of all real property taxes upon the residence occupied by the said citizens and residents of this Commonwealth imposed by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania or any of its political subdivisions if, as a result of military service, they are blind, paraplegic or double or quadruple amputees, and if the State Veterans' Commission determines that such persons are in need of the tax exemptions granted herein. Any taxing authority may exempt from occupational privilege taxes, persons deriving less than one thousand dollars per year from such occupation].

Section 2. EXEMPTIONS AND SPECIAL PROVISIONS.—(a) The General Assembly may by LAW exempt from taxation:

(I) Actual places of regularly stated religious worship;

(II) Actual places of burial, when used or held by a person or organization deriving no private or corporate profit therefrom and no substantial part of whose activity consists of selling personal property in connection therewith;

(III) That portion of public property which is actually and regularly used for public purposes;

(IV) That portion of the property owned and occupied by any branch, post or camp of honorably discharged servicemen or servicewomen which is actually and regularly used for benevolent, charitable or patriotic purposes; AND

(V) Institutions of purely public charity, but in the case of any real property tax exemptions only that portion of real property of such institution which is actually and regularly used for the purposes of the institution.

(b) The General Assembly may, by LAW:

(I) ESTABLISH standards and qualifications for private forest reserves, and make special provision for the taxation thereof;

(II) ESTABLISH as a class or classes of subjects of taxation the property or privileges of persons who, because of age, disability, infirmity or poverty are determined to be in need of tax exemption or of special tax provisions, AND FOR any such class or classes, uniform standards and qualifications. The Commonwealth, or any other taxing authority, may adopt or employ such class or classes and standards and qualifications, and except AS HEREIN PROVIDED may impose taxes, grant exemptions, or make special tax provisions in accordance therewith. NO EXEMPTION OR SPECIAL PROVISION SHALL BE MADE UNDER THIS SUBPARAGRAPH WITH RESPECT TO TAXES UPON THE SALE OR USE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY, AND NO EXEMPTION FROM ANY TAX UPON REAL PROPERTY SHALL BE GRANTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY UNDER THIS SUBPARAGRAPH UNLESS THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY SHALL PROVIDE for the reimbursement of local taxing authorities by or through the Commonwealth for revenue losses occasioned by such exemption;

(III) ESTABLISH standards and qualifications by which local taxing authorities may make uniform special tax provisions AVAILABLE TO A TAXPAYER FOR A LIMITED PERIOD OF TIME TO ENCOURAGE IMPROVEMENT OF deteriorating property or areas BY AN INDIVIDUAL, ASSOCIATION OR CORPORATION, OR TO ENCOURAGE industrial development BY a non-profit corporation; AND

(IV) MAKE special tax provisions on ANY INCREASE IN value of real estate resulting from RESIDENTIAL construction. Such special tax provisions shall BE AVAILABLE FOR A PERIOD NOT TO EXCEED two years.

(C) Citizens and residents of this Commonwealth, who served in any war or armed conflict in which the United States was engaged and were honorably discharged or released under honorable circumstances from active service, shall be exempt from the payment of all real property taxes upon the residence occupied by the said citizens and residents of this Commonwealth imposed by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania or any of its political subdivisions if, as a result of military service, THEY are blind, paraplegic or double or quadruple amputees, and if the State Veterans' Commission determines that such persons are in need of the tax exemptions granted herein.

SECTION 2. SECTIONS ONE B, TWO, EIGHTEEN, TWENTY-FOUR AND TWENTY-FIVE OF ARTICLE EIGHT OF THE CONSTITUTION OF PENNSYLVANIA ARE RENUMBERED THREE, FIVE, ELEVEN, FIFTEEN AND SIXTEEN RESPECTIVELY, AND SECTION THREE OF ARTICLE EIGHT OF THE CONSTITUTION OF PENNSYLVANIA IS AMENDED TO READ:

SECTION [3] 6. TAXATION OF CORPORATIONS.—THE POWER TO TAX CORPORATIONS AND CORPORATE PROPERTY SHALL NOT BE SURRENDERED OR SUSPENDED BY ANY CONTRACT OR GRANT TO WHICH THE [STATE] COMMONWEALTH SHALL BE A PARTY.

SECTION 3. ARTICLE EIGHT OF THE CONSTITUTION OF PENNSYLVANIA IS AMENDED BY ADDING AFTER SECTION 3, A NEW SECTION, TO READ:

SECTION 4. PUBLIC UTILITIES.—THE REAL PROPERTY OF PUBLIC UTILITIES IS SUBJECT TO REAL ESTATE TAXES IMPOSED BY LOCAL TAXING AUTHORITIES. PAYMENT TO THE COMMONWEALTH OF GROSS RECEIPTS TAXES OR OTHER SPECIAL TAXES IN REPLACEMENT OF GROSS RECEIPTS TAXES BY A PUBLIC UTILITY AND THE DISTRIBUTION BY THE COMMONWEALTH TO THE LOCAL TAXING AUTHORITIES OF THE AMOUNT AS HEREIN PROVIDED SHALL, HOWEVER, BE IN LIEU OF LOCAL TAXES UPON ITS REAL PROPERTY WHICH IS USED OR USEFUL IN FURNISHING ITS PUBLIC UTILITY SERVICE. THE AMOUNT RAISED ANNUALLY BY SUCH GROSS RECEIPTS OR OTHER SPECIAL TAXES SHALL NOT BE LESS THAN THE GROSS AMOUNT OF REAL ESTATE TAXES WHICH THE LOCAL TAXING AUTHORITIES COULD HAVE IMPOSED UPON SUCH REAL PROPERTY BUT FOR THE EXEMPTION HEREIN PROVIDED. THIS GROSS AMOUNT SHALL BE DETERMINED IN THE MANNER PROVIDED BY LAW. AN AMOUNT EQUIVALENT TO SUCH REAL ESTATE TAXES SHALL BE DISTRIBUTED ANNUALLY AMONG ALL LOCAL TAXING AUTHORITIES IN THE PROPORTION WHICH THE TOTAL TAX RECEIPTS OF EACH LOCAL TAXING AUTHORITY BEAR TO THE TOTAL TAX RECEIPTS OF ALL LOCAL TAXING AUTHORITIES.

SECTION 4. THE FOLLOWING SCHEDULE IS ADOPTED:

SECTION 1. NOT WITHSTANDING THE PROVISIONS OF SECTION 4 OF ARTICLE EIGHT, STATUTES WHICH PRESENTLY SUBJECT REAL PROPERTY OF PUBLIC UTILITIES USED AND USEFUL IN FURNISHING PUBLIC UTILITY SERVICES TO LOCAL REAL ESTATE TAXATION BY LOCAL TAXING AUTHORITIES SHALL REMAIN IN FULL FORCE AND EFFECT UNTIL REPEALED.

SECTION 2. SECTIONS 1 AND 2 SHALL TAKE EFFECT AS SOON AS POSSIBLE, BUT NO LATER THAN JULY 1, 1970. SECTION 4 SHALL TAKE EFFECT JULY 1, 1970, UNLESS THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY EARLIER PROVIDES ENABLING LEGISLATION IN ACCORDANCE THEREWITH.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA

1968 SESSION

PROPOSAL NO. 5

A PROPOSAL

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania further regulating exemptions from taxation and providing for the taxation of real property of public utilities.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Section one of article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended and a new section is added after said section, to read:

Section 1. Uniformity of Taxation.—All taxes shall be uniform, upon the same class of subects, within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax, and shall be levied and collected under general laws.

Section 2. Exemptions and Special Provisions. —(a) The General Assembly may by law exempt from taxation:

(i) Actual places of regularly stated religious worship;

(ii) Actual places of burial, when used or held by a person or organization deriving no private or corporate profit therefrom and no substantial part of whose activity consists of selling personal property in connection therewith;

(iii) That portion of public property which is actually and regularly used for public purposes;

(iv) That portion of the property owned and occupied by any branch, post or camp of honorably discharged servicemen or servicewomen which is actually and regularly used for benevolent, charitable or patriotic purposes; and

(v) Institutions of purely public charity, but in the case of any real property tax exemptions only that portion of real property of such institution which is actually and regularly used for the purposes of the institution.

(b) The General Assembly may, by law:

(i) Establish standards and qualifications for private forest reserves, and make special provision for the taxation thereof;

(ii) Establish as a class or classes of subjects of taxation the property or privileges of persons who, because of age, disability, infirmity or poverty are determined to be in need of tax exemption or of special tax provisions, and for any such class or classes, uniform standards and qualifications. The Commonwealth, or any other taxing authority, may adopt or employ such class or classes and standards and qualifications, and except as herein provided may impose taxes, grant exemptions, or make special tax provisions in accordance therewith. No exemption or special provision shall be made under this subparagraph with respect to taxes upon the sale or use of personal property, and no exemption from any tax upon real property shall be granted by the General Assembly under this subparagraph unless the General Assembly shall provide for the reimbursement of local taxing authorities by or through the Commonwealth for revenue losses occasioned by such exemption;

(iii) Establish standards and qualifications by which local taxing authorities may make uniform special tax provisions available to a taxpayer for a limited period of time to encourage improvement of deteriorating property or areas by an individual, association or corporation, or to encourage industrial development by a non-profit corporation; and

(iv) Make special tax provisions on any increase in value of real estate resulting from residential construction. Such special tax provisions shall be available for a period not to exceed two years.

(c) Citizens and residents of this Commonwealth, who served in any war or armed conflict in which the United States was engaged and were honorably discharged or released under honorable circumstances from active service, shall be exempt from the payment of all real property taxes upon the residence occupied by the said citizens and residents of this Commonwealth imposed by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania or any of its political subdivisions if, as a result of military service, they are blind, paraplegic or double or quadruple amputees, and if the State Veterans' Commission determines that such persons are in need of the tax exemptions granted herein.

Section 2. Sections one B, two, eighteen, twenty-four and twenty-five of article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania are renumbered three, five, eleven, fifteen and sixteen respectively, and section three of article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended to read:

Section 6. Taxation of Corporations.—The power to tax corporations and corporate property shall not be surrendered or suspended by any contract or grant to which the Commonwealth shall be a party.

Section 3. Article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended by adding after section 3, a new section, to read:

Section 4. Public Utilities.—The real property of public utilities is subject to real estate taxes imposed by local taxing authorities. Payment to the Commonwealth of gross receipts taxes or other special taxes in replacement of gross receipts taxes by a public utility and the distribution by the Commonwealth to the local taxing authorities of the amount as herein provided shall, however, be in lieu of local taxes upon its real property which is used or useful in furnishing its public utility service. The amount raised annually by such gross receipts or other special taxes shall not be less than the gross amount of real estate taxes which the local taxing authorities could have imposed upon such real property but for the exemption herein provided. This gross amount shall be determined in the manner provided by law. An amount equivalent to such real estate taxes shall be distributed annually among all local taxing authorities in the proportion which the total tax receipts of each local taxing authority bear to the total tax receipts of all local taxing authorities.

Section 4. The following schedule is adopted:

Section 1. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 4 of article eight, statutes which presently subject real property of public utilities used and useful in furnishing public utility services to local real estate taxation by local taxing authorities shall remain in full force and effect until repealed.

Section 2. Sections 1 and 2 shall take effect as soon as possible, but no later than July 1, 1970. Section 4 shall take effect July 1, 1970, unless the General Assembly earlier provides enabling legislation in accordance therewith.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Mr. President, I call to the attention of the delegates the address of the Committee on Style and Drafting commenting on Proposal No. 5 as it now appears, and you will note that according to this comment, that the provisions set forth in Section 1A and 1A1 of Committee Proposal No. 5 have been regrouped and renumbered on a subject basis. Subsection (a) continues as before to set forth categories of property and institutions which the General Assembly is authorized to exempt from taxation; subsection (b) sets forth the subjects of taxation for which the General Assembly may by general law establish standards and qualifications, and may grant exemptions or make special tax provisions; and also subsection (c) sets forth the self-operating exemption of residential property owned by certain wounded war veterans. And since I wish to comment some in part in detail on this, if the delegates will please turn to page 3, line 24, where you will find this section; subsection (c), you will recall that this was approved in exactly this form by the voters as an amendment to the Constitution in 1961. But the committee would call your attention to the fact that this subsection would now seem to be redundant in view of the expanded section relative to certain classes of exemptions, including "disability." We further observe that the section contains certain poorly phrased descriptions, makes constitutional reference to a non-constitutional agency, viz.: "the State Veterans' Commission", and more important, is limited in application. For example, is a citizen and resident of the Commonwealth who became a paraplegic as a result of service in the United Nation's peace-keeping forces contributed by the United States at the request of the Secretary General, eligible under this section? We believe not as the veteran has not served in "any war or armed conflict in which the United States was engaged . . . ." We understand this section was added by amendment on second consideration and thus do not believe we can act upon it, although the Committee is of the strong opinion it ought to be deleted or, at minimum, authorization given to provide more precise language.

Also, in the listing of exemptions from taxation which the General Assembly is authorized to adopt, set forth in subsection 1 (a), the Committee has retained verbatim several adjectives which are in our opinion redundant and apt to cause confusion. The Committee understands that the insertion of "actually" in certain phrases was an attempt to make more strict the construction of the exemption and to provide an appropriate rule of reference for judicial interpretation. Recognizing the detailed consideration this subsection has been given, this Committee finally acquiesced in the verbatim language chosen by the substantive committee. This reliance upon prior judicial interpretations which have not been, in the opinion of the Committee, sufficiently respective with respect to tax exemptions is a grave mistake.

The Section dealing with the taxation of real property of public utilities has been rearranged and reworded to accomplish the following objectives:

(a) The exemption for the real property useful in furnishing public utility services is an exception to the general principle that the real property of public utilities shall be subject to real estate taxes imposed by local taxing authorities. (The last sentence of Committee Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 18 has simply restated this principle and has not therefore been deleted.)

(b) The exemption is only applicable to the extent that the General Assembly provides for the distribution of funds to compensate local taxing authorities for lost real property taxes.

(c) The phrase "in lieu of local taxes" has been retained, but in view of the ambiguity of that phrase standing alone, it has been defined in terms of the requirements originally set forth in that Section for the applicability of the exemption.

Now, Mr. President, there was a slight delay and you called a recess because inadvertently certain items had been left out of Proposal No. 5 as presented for a third reading. If the delegates will kindly turn to page 5, line 15, and after the word "authorities" we have to insert a comma and this phraseology "or in such other equitable proportion as may be provided by law"; that should have been in the draft and we now ask permission to put it in. On line 19 of the same page, delete the word "and" and substitute "or," "utilities used or useful in furnishing public utility services to local real estate taxation." With those corrections I think I will conclude my report.

DELEGATE BALDWIN. Would you state that again?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. It is found on page 5, line 15, after the word "authorities, taxing authorities" insert a comma "or in such other equitable proportion as may be provided by law."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Was there another change? Did you mention another change, Chairman Johnson?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Yes, the other change was substituting in line 9, deleting "and" and inserting "or" on line 19.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is that the "and" after "used"?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. The "and" after "used" should be deleted and "or" substituted.

MOTION

DELEGATE MICHENER. In view of the discussion we ran into this afternoon, I think we should take formal note in the entire body that these changes are acceptable to us, so they cannot be challenged later, and I so move you, sir.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May I recognize, please, Chairman Pelletier?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. May I make one other comment, also, before we move to Delegate Michener's motion, and that is that in submitting this schedule, since Section 1 is of a permanent character, that is, reasonably so, we would like it to be clearly understood that this schedule is a part of this article, and it is intended that the provisions contained herein shall have the same force and effect as those contained in the number section of this article, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are you suggesting any change in language?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. No, we simply want it to be clear that this is simply regarded as schedulized changes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are there any delegates who object to these two changes that have been made? I understand they are typographical.

Now, the Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, I wish to direct an inquiry to Delegate Johnson.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes. Proceed.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Does subsection (c) remain as passed by this Convention?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Yes, it is as passed by this Convention.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. And the recommendations have no effect, other than raised in the question, is that correct?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. I just raised the question that it does not cover certain persons who may need exemptions or who have served in the military.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. That is not off the coast of Israel either.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. No.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. In Vietnam.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. That is right.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Tate. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE TATE. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE TATE. Mr. President, I am concerned by the same section, and I am not quite sure that I understand the recommendation or the statements of Style and Drafting. I wonder if I might have a further clarification from Delegate Johnson.

Did I understand him to say in his initial report that subsection (c), as it now stands, and as previously passed by this Convention on second consideration, is regarded by the Committee on Style and Drafting as surplusage and redundant as a result of other provisions that are in this proposal?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Yes. Delegate Tate, you will find in the proposal that local tax authorities are empowered to grant exemptions to persons who are disabled, any disabled person, and that, of course, will cover veterans who are disabled.

DELEGATE TATE. Mr. President, does that mean that there is nothing contained in Subsection (c) which is not already authorized somewhere else in this proposal?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Yes. Subsection (c) of course, specifies certain types of persons.

DELEGATE TATE. But it does not expand authorization given elsewhere?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. No, Mr. President.

DELEGATE TATE. Well, then, Mr. President, I would like to ask a question of parliamentary inquiry at this stage in the proceeding. What would be the proper step to take in order to serve the cause of brevity in our Constitution as well as good draftsmanship so that we might eliminate this, in view of the fact that it seems to be the opinion of Style and Drafting that we would not take anything out of the Constitution by so doing.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It is the opinion of the Parliamentarian, which I will express, that it would require an amendment.

DELEGATE TATE. May I ask, Mr. President, whether such an amendment has been requested by any delegate of the drafting bureau?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have no amendments, I am advised.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Amsterdam. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I rise for a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I am wondering whether the explanation that has been given is quite correct.

It seems to me that the general clause that was first referred to permits the establishment of a class or classes of subjects and so on which includes those who are incapacitated, whereas (c) specifically requires, without giving an authorization to a local community to do something about it, specifically requires an exemption to be given. It seems to me they are quite different, if I am correct.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. The delegate is correct in that the one is mandatory and the other is permissible.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. One certainly is not covered by the other. The mere fact that a community has the right to give such an exemption is quite different from the fact that we are mandating an exemption here. I cannot see that one includes the other; that is my difficulty.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Goldman.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. May I interrogate Delegate Johnson, please?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Mr. President, in the two errors that were commented on as typographical errors on page 5, he added in, if my note taking was correct, on line 15 "or such other equitable proportions as provided by law." Is that correct?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Yes, Mr. President.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. That was not the context of the original proposal as amended to Style and Drafting. Am I correct?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Yes.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. It was not?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. It was not, no.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. So that they have made a substantive change in that respect.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. No, Mr. President.

I will now call on Delegate Leonard who is the Chairman of that Committee.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Leonard.

DELEGATE LEONARD. I would like to say that it was in the original proposal that the method of apportioning this tax among the local taxing authorities was not specifically in accordance with the ratio or proportion that the total tax receipt of each local taxing authority bears to the total of all, but that there was some discretion in there, the original wording was "that it would have due regard for the proportion." I would say that it was the intent of the Committee that these words that are being added now be in here, and it was strictly an omission that this was not printed, because it came from our Committee, and it came through Style and Drafting. Am I clear on this?

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. The delegate is clear on that, Mr. President.

I am just concerned if that was the intent of the delegates here or whether it was really the intent to return all of the funds, or as was said, "such equitable proportions as shall be provided by law."

DELEGATE LEONARD. It is intended to return all the funds. What we are dealing with here is the manner of allocating these funds to the various taxing authorities.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Except that this does not say that. It now says, "or such other equitable proportions as provided by law," so that one could conceivably work out a proportion which would be returning something far less.

DELEGATE LEONARD. That is not meant to be.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Am I correct, though, in my understanding? Am I reading my interpretation of what this says correctly?

DELEGATE LEONARD. It is not meant to be less.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. I have one other question. Where the typographical change is in line 19, where they changed "and" to "or," now is that not a deviation from the actual state of the law, the case law which states—

DELEGATE LEONARD. Excuse me, Mr. President, the wording is "or in such other equitable proportions as shall be provided by law." So it is meant to distribute the entire amount. The only question that is being dealt with here is how the sum is to be allocated. I think that is crystal clear, and the words are "or in such other equitable proportions."

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. I would rather see the word "manner" than "proportions," because to my thinking the word "proportions" indicates that something less or something more may be redistributed, and the word "manner" would clearly define that you intended that all the money is to be redistributed, because when you use the word "proportions" you could conceivably cut down the amount that is being redistributed or increased. That is my thought on it.

Mr. President, where they changed the word "and" to "or" in line 19, have they not changed substantively the test of what constitutes public utilities to be subject to taxes? Has not the test always been in the past that real property which is used and useful in furnishing public utility services to local real estate shall continue to remain in full force and effect? Have they not changed that test to now make it "or" rather than "and" which requires both?

DELEGATE JOHNSON. Yes, to broaden the coverage.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. So that they have substantively changed it, and have not made a typographical correction.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. That is a matter of opinion. I would just recommend in commenting that both of these typographical changes are not in fact typographical, but they are, in fact, substantive, which will require the voting of the delegates.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gerber.

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, in response to Delegate Goldman's position and his questions, with reference to the language "or in such other equitable proportions as may be prescribed by law," which unfortunately and inadvertently the Style and Drafting Committee in their copy they submitted to us as delegates, those words do not appear. This was the intent of the subcommittee. This was the intent of the Standing Committee, because what this purports to express is that—I think Delegate Leonard expressed it rather well—we hope to get the money back, monies collected in the form that the monies collected would be that which the local municipalities would be able to collect if they were able to charge a local real estate tax.

However, we want to provide a formula, flexible enough for the General Assembly to be able to allocate funds back to the municipalities, that will be able to take into consideration issues not inclusively dealing with the amount of property from the specific municipalities which are covered by the public utilities. In other words, in our expression there was no effort on our part to create a Peach Bottom problem through the gross receipt tax that could have just as easily been created through a local real estate tax, and that is why this is the language that we elected to adopt in order to permit the General Assembly to allocate the funds back to the municipalities in a proportion that they feel is equitable to the municipalities based on their tax exemption. I feel that was expressed rather clearly by Delegate Leonard, and I hope my response may be not equally but may be better of an answer to Delegate Goldman.

I must say, though, however, that the change of the word "and" to "or" does change words of art and it does change words that we in the subcommittee and in the standing committee have become accustomed to working with, because as I understood the words heretofore, we were not talking about real property of public utilities used and useful, and there was no word, no language that I recall in the months of deliberation that had the word "or" instead of "and." It seems to me that Delegate Goldman does raise a pertinent point, because the difference between the three letter word "and" and the two letter word "or" does change the picture considerably from the language that we have been accustomed to working with.

Now, if I am wrong on this, I respectfully yield to Delegate Woodring who is the co-chairman of the Committee, but it seems to me that the change in the word "and" and the word "or" does change the situation.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want at this time to call on either Delegate Leonard or Delegate Woodring to answer the question that has been propounded by Delegate Gerber in connection with this matter.

DELEGATE KLINE. I would like to ask a question to get some clear explanation of what this language means in connection with public utilities. If you start on page 4, and read, Section 4. Public Utilities.—it says "The real property of public utilities is subject to real estate taxes imposed by local taxing authorities." Then it proceeds to say that payment to the Commonwealth of gross receipts taxes or other special taxes in replacement of gross receipts taxes by a public utility shall be in lieu of local taxes.

I would like to understand clearly if this is the thinking of the committee, if the Commonwealth were to repeal its gross receipts taxes, would utilities then be subject to local taxes? I read it that way. Is that what we are doing?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now asks the chairmen of the Committee, Chairman Woodring and Chairman Leonard to answer.

DELEGATE WOODRING. Mr. President, the answer is clearly, yes. If the gross receipts tax or some other special tax would replace at sometime the gross receipts tax would be repealed and not in effect, then the first sentence of this section would be applicable and the property, real estate of public utilities would be subject to local real estate taxation.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, Delegate Kline has asked the one part of the question. I would now like to ask Delegate Woodring the second part of the question, which I think is extremely important, and that is this, does this language imply that those public utilities that are not now paying gross receipts tax will pay property taxes?

DELEGATE WOODRING. Mr. President, the answer is clearly, yes, unless certain public utilities might be otherwise exempt under other provisions; but in the absence of some special provision, public utilities would be taxable unless they pay gross receipts taxes.

The only exemption under this clause is to those public utilities which pay the gross receipts taxes.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, is it possible to get an official opinion for the record on that from the counsel of this Convention or counsel for the Taxation Committee or from the Style and Drafting Committee or from somebody because to me it is rather confusing. It is in one paragraph and I think it should be emphatically stated that all public utilities are subject to taxes. Putting it together, I think, makes it a little confusing. I think it should be clear

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Woodring.

DELEGATE WOODRING. The only clear and forthright answer to that question is the first sentence of Section 4 beginning on page 4, "The real property of public utilities is subject to real estate taxes imposed by local taxing authorities."

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, I have two full time attorneys in my office who always tell me that there is legal language when it is contained in the same paragraph, one reads with the other. I am not an attorney and I think it should be plainer.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Well, now, Delegate Pasquerilla, you asked could we have an opinion.

I will ask the attorney for the Committee on Taxation as well as the attorney for the Convention to give their opinion on this matter to Delegate Woodring and Delegate Leonard and they can report it to the Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, the Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. President, I rise in defense of the Style and Drafting Committee on this question of "or" or "and." I would like to refer Delegate Goldman and everyone else who has discussed and raised questions about this to Printer's No. 5 which is the Proposal No. 5 as it originally came from the Committee. In the second sentence, gross receipts taxes imposed by the Commonwealth on said public utilities shall, however, be in lieu of local taxes on that real property which is used or useful in furnishing its public utility service.

Every printer's number of Proposal No. 5 since then has contained that language. The corrected amendment which was made on the floor tonight for the correction which was referred to on the floor tonight is in the schedule which deals with interim provisions that simply makes the language in the schedule correspond to the language in Section 4. But the words have always been in prior to Style and Drafting receiving it and from the time it first came on the floor, "used or useful." If there is an error in that, it is not the error of the Committee on Style and Drafting.

DELEGATE LEONARD. Mr. President, Delegate Shapiro is right. I erred in my response to Delegate Goldman first and I want it on the record that Delegate Shapiro's statement is correct. I checked my original Proposal No. 5 and I was in error in reporting that it was "and" instead of "or." He is correct.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE STROUP. I rise for a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, I do not know to whom I shall address my inquiry but I will just pose a question. First of all, as I understand, what we are trying to do in Proposal No. 5 is to impose a real estate tax upon all utilities whether those utilities are being used or useful or not. This is my first premise. I would ask one of the gentlemen who are the proposers and one of the chairmen whether or not I am correct.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will ask either Chairman Woodring or Chairman Leonard to please answer the question if they will.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, I am just trying to clarify this issue.

DELEGATE LEONARD. The intention, Mr. President, is: It is used or useful.

DELEGATE STROUP. And now Delegate Leonard, may I direct this question to you. A real estate tax shall be imposed by the General Assembly whether it is used or useful or whether it is not, is that correct?

DELEGATE LEONARD. No, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Chairman Woodring.

DELEGATE WOODRING. Mr. President, the answer to Senator Stroup is "yes." The first sentence imposes real estate taxes on land used or useful or otherwise and presently, Senator Stroup, in further answer to that, land which is not used or useful is presently subject to real estate taxes.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, I thank Delegate Woodring now for that response and I am sure that is correct and this brings us now to the crux of the entire argument with relation to the entire subject. Therefore, I believe that when we vote, the suggestion made and the change in Section 1 from "and" to "or" is absolutely correct and should be adopted by this Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Camardella.

DELEGATE CAMARDELLA. Mr. President, I may be out of my league here among attorneys but on page 3, line 24, "Certain Disabled Veterans" has been crossed out.

As I read this, "Citizens and residents of this Commonwealth, who served in any war or armed conflict in which the United States was engaged and were honorably discharged or released under honorable circumstances from active service, shall be exempt from payment of all real property taxes," etc. Does this mean, Mr. President, that a veteran from the Russian Army or Italian Army or any other army that has fought against this country, by the mere fact that he becomes a citizen will be eligible for exemption? As I read this language it gives him that right.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Leonard.

DELEGATE LEONARD. Mr. President, as I understand the question of Delegate Camardella, it pertains to a section that was amended into the Committee proposal.

The words that were used were those identical to the existing Constitution and we were very careful not to change any commas, periods or semi-colons.

We do not know precisely what it means, but whatever it has meant in the past, that is what it means in the future.

DELEGATE CAMARDELLA. Mr. President, I am not taking anything for granted. As I read this, I would like to have a legal interpretation, I believe that any soldier or veteran from any foreign country that has fought against this country and becomes a citizen of this country or this Commonwealth will be eligible for the benefits as this is written. Some of these shrewd lawyers, from what I have seen here, can do something with this. I would like to see clear-cut language in it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Woodring.

DELEGATE WOODRING. Mr. President, this same question has been brought up previously in a different form.

Delegate Camardella is referring to Section (c) of the article on page 3. Section (c) is a verbatim insert from the present and existing 1874 Constitution. It was expressly placed into this article by amendment, I believe by Delegate Solomon.

Section 2 (b) (2) beginning on page 2 also grants exemption to people who are in need by reason of physical disability or otherwise. The Committee on Style and Drafting thinks that by reason of the provisions of (b) (2), the provisions of Section (c) are redundant. Nevertheless, the provisions of Section (c), the old 1874 Constitutional provision, have been expressly incorporated here by amendment of Delegate Solomon and they are part of this article by action of the Convention.

DELEGATE CAMARDELLA. Mr. President, I feel very strong about this. I would like to get a legal opinion. As I read this, any veteran from any foreign soil would be eligible according to the language.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Did you hear the answer of Delegate Woodring?

DELEGATE CAMARDELLA. Mr. President, I have heard this answer for the last three months, but after seeing some of these attorneys jockeying the law around, I would like to see it in clearer language.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I now recognize Delegate Woodring.

DELEGATE WOODRING. Mr. President, in further answer to the distraught Delegate Camardella, section (c), which is a reprint from the 1874 Constitution, ends up that those veterans are entitled to this, if the State Veterans' Commission determines that such persons are in need of the tax exemptions granted herein. In answer to his express question, it would seem to me that the State Veterans' Commission would not certify, Delegate Camardella, those veterans of the Russian Army or any other armies of foreign soil and foreign doctrines.

DELEGATE CAMARDELLA. Mr. President, I would appreciate very much if Delegate Woodring or anyone else would tell me where this document says he must fight for the United States Army. Where in this document?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. What you have asked is, can we give you a legal answer and we will try. I cannot guarantee legal answers. I will ask again the attorney for the Committee on Taxation to get together with the attorney for the Convention and provide an answer to Delegates Woodring and Leonard for transmittal to this Convention.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, perhaps I can talk to you and the members of this Convention. I do not know too much about Delegate Camardella. I do not know how much respect he has held for the Attorneys General of this State since 1961 and before, but this is the law of the state. This has been the law and those who have been given this very small exemption of real estate have been paraplegics and blind veterans who fought in the defense of their country. Delegate Camardella, if you cannot understand that sort of thing, it is tough.

DELEGATE CAMARDELLA. The sly remarks that have been made here seem to be like a union meeting and if you want that sort of thing you can have it. I am not standing here and talking against any disabled veteran. If we talk about giving our veterans exemptions, let us spell it out. If he wants to wear the armband, let him wear it and keep his remarks to himself.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Popil.

DELEGATE POPIL. Mr. President, I have in my hand Committee Proposal No. 5 as amended on second consideration and this is Printer's No. 16. The last sentence of this proposal which deals with utilities states as follows: "That real property of public utilities which is not used or useful in furnishing their public utility services, shall remain subject to local taxation."

In the proposal which we received today, this sentence has been deleted. I would like to know from Delegate Johnson whether the intent is still in the proposal as submitted by Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I see Delegate Leonard rising and he is raising his hand and if it is all right with you, we will have him answer it.

DELEGATE LEONARD. Mr. President, on line 17 of page 5, the Style and Drafting Committee decided that the best place for that would be in the schedule, so they wrote, "Notwithstanding the provisions of Section 4 of Article 8, statutes which presently subject real property of public utilities used, and that should be "or useful," "in furnishing public utility services to local real estate taxation by local taxing authorities shall remain in full force and effect until repealed." It was moved into the schedule by the suggestion of Style and Drafting.

DELEGATE POPIL. This is not what is stated in Proposal No. 5 as amended. Let me read it again. It states that real property of public utilities which is not used or useful in furnishing public utility services are subject to tax. We are not talking about that which is used, we are talking about that which is not used or useful.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Woodring.

DELEGATE WOODRING. Mr. President, the answer to Delegate Popil's question is that Style and Drafting has seen fit to transpose the sentence involved from the negative to the affirmative, and it now reads that "Notwithstanding the provisions of Section 4 of Article 8, statutes which presently subject real property of public utilities used or useful."

Heretofore, this sentence was raised in the negative as those properties which were not used or useful, and I think we get exactly the same result whether we state it in the affirmative manner or in the negative manner, because Style and Drafting has now stated it in the affirmative manner.

DELEGATE POPIL. All I am interested in is if the intent is there. I still do not fully agree with Delegate Woodring, but perhaps he is correct. I do know now properties which are not used or useful by the utilities, do pay a tax to the local municipalities.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Goldman.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. I would like to ask Delegate Gerber or any of the other delegates in Style and Drafting if they would be willing to change, since we are talking about a typographical error, we are talking about words that were inadvertently omitted. If in line 13 on page 5, the word "proportion" could be changed to "manner."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gerber.

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, I cannot answer that on behalf of the Committee. I would have to say "no," unless the co-chairmen of the Standing Committee, Judge Woodring and Delegate Leonard would agree to it. I would have to hold to the word "proportion" now because I think that expresses their intent.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would you yield a second please? The Chair would like to suggest that the chairman of the Taxation Committee, Delegate Woodring and Delegate Leonard, if they would come up front here with Delegate Gerber and anyone else they care to bring up, I think we can expedite this discussion. I think it is most important they get together on this thing and we find out what the opinion of the substantive committee is.

DELEGATE LEONARD. I would like to suggest the members of the Style and Drafting Committee also come up front. Those who worked on this particular proposal should be up front to relieve us of a lot of the problems that have arisen.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is an excellent suggestion and if we congregate up at the two mikes, I think we can expedite the two questions.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I rise for a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, before we go into that, is it going to require an amendment on page 5, line 19 to insert the word "or" in place of "and?"

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. When we return from recess, I will give you that answer.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. The other answer I would like to know which confuses me is the change in the language in the schedule where it says, "real estate taxation by local taxing authorities shall remain in full force and effect until repealed." Repealed by whom? I think there are a lot of questions that the Style and Drafting attorneys or their co-chairmen should come forth and answer on this very important document.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May I suggest that you come up and join the discussion and ask your questions, because it is up to the Committee here to answer these questions. You understand that the Chair is not able to answer them.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. If I may have the attention of the delegates, I have an important matter to call to your attention. In Section 4 of this proposal, there is no definition of "public utilities." I think it is important to know whether or not we are talking about private utilities or municipal utilities and if you are to use Section 1 under Section 4, then those municipal utilities which are presently possibly exempt from taxation, would now be subject to taxation and I refer this to the Committee for their consideration.

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Unless there is objection, we will recess for about 10 minutes and let these committees get organized to answer the questions of this Convention.

The Chair hears none, and the Convention is now in recess until 10 p.m.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time of recess having expired, the Convention will come to order.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE CHAIR

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Fellow delegates, I understand that the problems in the language are being worked out now. I have also received an estimate that it would take about another thirty minutes to have the language mimeographed or typed, whatever they are doing, to present it to you. This change of language, I understand, is a change being made by the Committee on Style and Drafting and I, at this time, just repeat what they have told me that there are no changes in substance but a change in Style and Drafting's language. If this is so, we can get this change within about thirty minutes.

Several delegates have come up to me and asked why we are waiting tonight. I want you to know that if we can make the change satisfactorily, we can consider the proposal as we intended to on third consideration and we will not have to come in until late tomorrow because tomorrow afternoon is the first time we will be able to get Proposal No. 7 back from the Committee on Style and Drafting. Therefore, I say to you fellow delegates, if you will remain at ease for about thirty minutes, I think we can complete this this evening and we will have tomorrow morning and part of the afternoon for committee meetings.

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Unless there is objection, we will recess for thirty minutes.

The Chair hears none, and the Convention is now in recess.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time of recess having expired, the Convention will come to order.

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON THIRD CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to the third consideration of Committee Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 28, entitled:

A proposal repealing article five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania relating to the Judiciary and adding a new Judiciary article.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pelletier, Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, the Style and Drafting Committee, in working on Proposal No. 7 of the Judiciary Committee, does not find provisions which seem important in view of the decision made by this Convention to elect all judges in the Commonwealth.

These are, one, the lack of a provision permitting the Legislature in setting up the commonwealth courts to provide for selection of nine original judges and to provide for the staggering of terms so that all of the judges of that court are not required to run for office in the same election or retention election. Two, the lack of a provision permitting the Legislature to set up an orderly procedure for the election of judges to succeed judges who have reached the mandatory retirement age of seventy years, including the extension of the terms of such judges to the end of the calendar year in which such successor is elected.

We, therefore, would like to suggest that the Judiciary Committee may wish to meet as promptly as possible to recommend to this Convention appropriate provisions to cover these problems so that the Convention, in turn, may act in time for the Style and Drafting Committee to incorporate the proposals of the Committee in the proposal to be returned to the Convention tomorrow.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Do I understand, Chairman Pelletier, that you are now temporarily returning to the Convention, Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 28, which is now on third consideration?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. That is correct.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Amsterdam of the Judiciary Committee.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, the members of the Judiciary Committee that have been working with the Committee on Style and Drafting have been discussing the very problems that Delegate Pelletier just gave to this Convention. We are of the opinion that a meeting of the Judiciary Committee at this time might be very helpful in trying to arrive at a conclusion that we could recommend to this body.

I might say that Judge Woodside, in rereading the entire Judiciary Article in light of the last important decision which we made to elect statewide judges, came across the very problems that have been indicated by Style and Drafting.

These seem, to us, to be quite serious also and, therefore, we should like to announce a meeting of the Judiciary Committee to be held immediately in the Senate caucus room on the first floor of the Capitol and we would appreciate it if the members of the Judiciary Committee would prepare there at this time.

We would hope to report back to this Convention as soon as possible and I would think, from the discussions that we have had, that it may take anywhere from thirty to forty-five minutes for us to report back to this Convention floor.

RESOLUTION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Croop.

DELEGATE CROOP. Mr. President, I ask your indulgence for just a few minutes to read and present for immediate consideration, and I trust favorable consideration, the following resolution:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 27, 1968

Delegate Floyd W. Musselman residing in Cumberland County and representing the 31st Senatorial District reentered the Polyclinic Hospital in Harrisburg this past Monday for examination and treatment.

During the past three months, Delegate Musselman has gained the respect of this body through his contributions to the Convention and the friendship of many of his fellow delegates; therefore be it RESOLVED, That this Constitutional Convention pay tribute to Delegate Floyd W. Musselman for his fine contributions and wish him a speedy recovery.

FRANK D. CROOP
DOROTHY K. TULLY
JOHN T. VAN SANT
H. RICHARD HOSTETLER
JAMES W. NELSON
BILL DEVLIN

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the resolution?
It was agreed to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The resolution is unanimously adopted and will appear in the record. A copy will be prepared.

DUPLICATING STAFF AND CONVENTION REPORTING STAFF COMMENDED AND THANKED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Irvis.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, I have not had the privilege of introducing my wife because I do not have one. I have not introduced my mother because she is deceased. I have not introduced any fourth, fifth, sixth or seventh graders because I no longer teach. But I have noted that we have failed to give credit to one group in this Convention which I think is the hardest working group of any of the employees. If you will count the number of sheets of paper that we have used so far in amendments and realize that every single one of them had to be prepared and duplicated, I think you will all join with me in thanking the people who have been working on the duplicating machinery and preparing the amendments. I think we owe them to put this into the record, that we are very grateful for them.

Mr. President, I regret to say that it was necessary to remind me that we ought to include the Convention stenographers who have been sitting down here trying to take down every foolish thing that we have said as well as some of the wise ones.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair certainly agrees with Delegate Irvis. I think we owe them a big round of applause because they have done a wonderful job.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Rappaport. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I gather that the Judiciary Committee is presently meeting and that the Committee on Style and Drafting is also presently meeting. Am I correct in my assumption that we will transact no business for about a half hour?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Rappaport, the Chair shares your dilemma and the dilemma is, when are we going to be ready? Let me make some inquiries because I think it would be nice if we had a definite time.

Delegate Rappaport, I have had an estimate up here that we think it will be definitely at least twenty minutes before we will be ready.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I thank the Chair.

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE OTTO requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

>
> The efficient and time consuming chores of maintaining good relations between the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1967-1968 and the press, informing and educating the public about the Convention's activities and functions, and preparing the "Reporter," the publication of the Convention, have been performed with diligence and skill by the Information Officer, Peter M. Coleman, and his staff.
>
> Mr. Coleman, of Mechanicsburg, under the general direction of Executive Director John W. Ingram, has been aided in his efforts by two Assistant Information Officers, David Lcherr, and Gordon Griffiths, and two assistants, Jane H. Henninger and Albert F. Ceres; therefore be it
>
> RESOLVED, That the Convention extend its congratulations to Peter M. Coleman and his staff for their excellent job of publicizing the work of the Convention, and be it further
>
> RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to Mr. Peter M. Coleman and his staff.

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If there is no objection we will remain completely at ease until 11:00.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time of recess having expired, the Convention will come to order.

PAGES COMMENDED AND THANKED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will recognize Delegate Scott.

DELEGATE SCOTT. I would like to amend Delegate Irvis' motion and give the page boys a big hand because they have done a wonderful job.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand, Delegate Amsterdam, that the amendment is not ready.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. That is correct, but we have something that is so unusual and so startling, Mr. President, that I think it ought to be announced without waiting at all. We have finally had an amendment that has been approved unanimously by all the members of the Judiciary Committee.

(Overwhelming ovation.)

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I have noted in the minutes of our proceedings that there are numerous instances where applause is noted in the comments of various speakers. I would hope that the comment made under the remark of Delegate Amsterdam is an overwhelming ovation.

DELEGATE BANES. The Chair recognizes that that announcement was so startling it even awakened me, and I might add I think at this time that I would demand a roll call vote to verify that.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is the amendment ready to be distributed?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I understand, Mr. President, that we need the approval of this Convention to consider the amendment in order to take it up at this time, and whatever the procedure is for having that consideration, I would like to recommend it to the Convention. I would be glad to identify the amendment without it being specifically written. It will be written in a very few minutes and we will have it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think you may proceed.

The understanding is, of course, that this is here on third consideration temporarily, and in order to amend a proposal on third consideration, you must receive the consent of the majority of the delegates present, and you are now recognized for the purpose of explaining your amendment in order to obtain that consent.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. We found as a result of the consideration in front of the Judiciary Committee that we have, in effect, placed a straight jacket around the Legislature so that they would have, in setting up the commonwealth court, been required to have all the judges of that court run in an election at the same time, and that they would be required in the future years to, also, continue to run all at the same time. That obviously would not be a beneficial method of election of judges in the commonwealth or a statewide court. Under the circumstances, we are going to recommend an amendment to the schedule of the Judiciary Article which will read substantially as follows:

"Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in this article, the General Assembly shall stagger the initial terms of judges of the Commonwealth Court."

This will permit the General Assembly in setting up the court to provide for staggered terms so that they will be elected two at a time or one at a time, or whatever the Legislature may feel is desirable, depending upon the number of members of that court that are set up by the Legislature.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, I want to commend Delegate Amsterdam and the Judiciary Committee for this correction. I have taken the microphone now on two occasions, and I have tried to point out this same factor which has disturbed me for the last couple of weeks with relation to the commonwealth court, and I certainly am well pleased with the report which he gives us in taking care of this particular situation, and I will be very happy to support the recommendation that this Committee brings to us when we have the amendment in front of us.

MOTION ON CONSENT TO RECEIVE SCRANTON-AMSTERDAM AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now are we ready for the question? The question is, will the Convention agree to receive an amendment to Proposal No. 7 as described and explained by Delegate Amsterdam.

All those voting "yea" will vote their consent, and those voting "nay" will reject the consent.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

The roll was recorded as follows:

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Amsterdam. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I wonder at this time whether I might ask for some information? Will it be necessary, since this is on third reading, to receive the consent of this body to keep it on third consideration after this amendment, or will it automatically remain on third consideration?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It automatically goes back to the Committee where it came from and it is the hope of the presiding officer that they will be able to get it out some time soon. I think we estimated tomorrow afternoon, but we will have a later report on that before we adjourn this evening.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, may I have the attention of the delegates for just a moment? As I have been attending this Convention and the work all through these proceedings, I have been singularly impressed with the burden of conformity of the legislative process with the demands being made, and revised in the Constitution. As I contemplate the burden which is going to be placed under the time schedule upon the General Assembly, I question very seriously whether or not we are not forcing upon the General Assembly an impossibility of performance under that time schedule. I am not referring to any particular proposal, but I do say this, Mr. President, that if we are to provide a legislative process under this Constitution and have it adopted in the Primary Election in 1968, I do not see how it can be done by January 1st, 1969, in many of the instances which we are required to do it, and I would ask, therefore, that some attention be given to this particular problem.

You must realize, as Governor Scranton stated, he hopes that the Legislature will not be in long session, but if we must address ourselves to all of the problems now being forced upon us by this Constitutional Convention, then it would be almost an impossibility for us to accomplish what would be required to be accomplished if all the revisions are adopted. I, therefore, suggest to the committee chairmen that they adhere very carefully to the time schedule that they are putting on the General Assembly of Pennsylvania.

SCRANTON-AMSTERDAM AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule, page 32, by inserting between lines 24 and 25: Commonwealth Court

Section 24. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in this article, the General Assembly shall stagger the initial terms of judges of the Commonwealth Court.

Amend Schedule, page 32, line 26, by striking out "24." and inserting: 25.

Amend Schedule, page 32, line 2, by striking out "25." and inserting: 26.

Amend Schedule, page 32, line 9, by striking out "26." and inserting: 27.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I am almost afraid to push my luck. The response has been so overwhelming that it would seem to me that simply looking at the amendment and seeing that it does, indeed, say what I had indicated, namely, that there be added to the schedule a provision for the commonwealth court as Section 24, and providing therein, "Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in this article, the General Assembly shall stagger the initial terms of judges of the Commonwealth Court."

The language apparently is exactly as I have indicated, and I believe we are ready for the question, and I should like to suggest that we take a vote at this time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are we ready for the question?

The question before the Convention is, will the Convention agree to the amendment being offered by Delegate Amsterdam.

The Chair will recognize Delegate Jirolanio.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. May I interrogate Delegate Amsterdam?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I do not want to hold up the Convention at all. There is a question I would like to ask the delegate. As I understand it, the Legislature would have the authority to stagger the initial terms of the judges of the commonwealth court; is that correct?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. That is correct, sir. They already have been given the authority to fix the number of judges and so on.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Now, who, then, would appoint judges of this particular court?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. They would be appointed in exactly the same way that it is provided for in any other vacancy, by the Governor, depending on whether the Legislature was then in session or had been adjourned sine die; either with two-thirds or without the consent of the Senate. In other words, it would be done in exactly the way we set it up heretofore. There would be no changes made, none whatsoever.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, assuming that the Senate would be adjourned sine die, would that mean, assuming that the Legislature had said there would be seven or nine members who would compose this particular court, that the Governor could then appoint the entire seven or the entire nine members without the consent and advice of two-thirds of the Senate?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. That is correct, but, of course, he would have to appoint them to whatever staggered terms the Legislature had set up, and presumably the Legislature would see that the appointments were made at the time they were in session. As was indicated, if they were not in session, the appointment would be made without the consent of the Senate.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are we ready for the question?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. One moment, please, Mr. President. I understand that there is a change. There may be a change which is necessary, there are three references to page numbers. The first is page 32, line 26 which is correct. The next one says, page 32, line 2, which is incorrect. It should be page 33, line 2. The next one reads, page 32, line 9, and that should be page 33, line 9.

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegates Scranton and Amsterdam?

The roll was recorded as follows:

REFERRAL TO COMMITTEE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Proposal No. 7 is recommitted to the Committee on Style and Drafting, having been reported out for the purpose of amendment in this instance.

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON THIRD CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to the third consideration of Committee Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 30, entitled:

A proposal amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania further regulating exemptions from taxation and providing for the taxation of real property of public utilities.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

REVISIONS TO REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now we get on to Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 30 and we now recognize the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee, Delegate Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. I have two revisions to Committee Report of Style and Drafting on No. 5 which I would like to present.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand your revision, I think the short one is being handed out first. There is no way the delegates have of determining whether it is the long one or the short one, but if it only has about six lines, it is the short one. Is that the one that you are referring to now?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President. This revision refers to the language in Section (c) on page 3. This is the language relating to exemptions for disabled veterans.

The Committee would like to suggest as a revision in language there in Section 2, that is paragraph (c), the striking of "any war or armed conflict in which the United States was engaged," on lines 25 and 26 and inserting, "the Armed Forces of the United States."

Secondly, it would revise line 29 by inserting after the last "of," that is at the very end of the line "as a result of," insert "hostile action while in the" so that lines 29 and 30 would read, "as a result of hostile action while in the military service."

These two revisions, Mr. President, we think would clarify the obvious intent of this provision.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. My understanding is there are no substantive changes involved here but just changes in Style and Drafting, is that correct?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. That is correct, Mr. President. I would like to move this Convention approve these revisions in style.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair first recognizes Delegate Westerberg.

DELEGATE WESTERBERG. I would like to ask Delegate Pelletier one question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation. You may proceed.

DELEGATE WESTERBERG. Mr. President, in this wording now, would this actually cover someone who served in the Pennsylvania National Guard?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. I would assume so, but I think you will have to ask—

DELEGATE SAHLI. This would only apply when on active duty with the National Guard.

DELEGATE WESTERBERG. Even in peacetime?

DELEGATE SAHLI. Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Powell.

DELEGATE POWELL. Does this, now refer to anyone in the Armed Forces?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. I would read it that way.

DELEGATE POWELL. Is that what the old amendment which was passed by referendum also stated?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Well, the delegate has the original language of that referendum in front of him. We are amending it right now.

DELEGATE POWELL. Perhaps I ought to question Judge Woodring or Delegate Pott whether this is a substantive change based on the Committee's recommendation.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pott.

I would suggest at this time, that the chairman of this Committee come forward to answer these substantive questions. It is understood that the chairman of the Committee on Style and Drafting should answer the questions on Style and Drafting.

Now, we recognize Delegate Pott.

DELEGATE POTT. Mr. President, it is my interpretation that this is correct, only while a member of the Armed Forces is engaged in hostile action would they be exempt. What if a person was in training in the United States and was in a serious automobile accident and became a double or quadruple amputee, which happens, or what if he was in training on a grenade range or something like this? This is a concern to me. Maybe it is explicit in here but I cannot see it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Sahli.

DELEGATE SAHLI. The original wording was, "citizens and residents of this Commonwealth, who served in any war or armed conflict," so there is no substantive change. That was the original.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May the Chair again suggest that the members of Delegate Leonard's Committee come up here.

I think they should come forward and answer these questions.

DELEGATE LEONARD. Delegate Powell asked whether this was considered in Committee. This was an amendment that was made on the floor and the words in that section from line 24 down are the identical words that now appear in the Constitution today, so what is now happening is, and this was Delegate Solomon's amendment, and it was taken precisely from the Constitution which we had deleted in Committee, but now it was brought back and now there are a few changes, so we cannot go back to what the Committee meant. I do not think there is any substantive change here at all.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kelly.

DELEGATE KELLY. Delegate Leonard, going back to line 24, "citizens and residents of this Commonwealth, who served in any war," and that leaves a whole lot to the imagination. Would it not be wise to add in there after "Commonwealth," "who never fought against the United States."

DELEGATE LEONARD. These are words that appear in the Constitution today.

DELEGATE KELLY. We were not having wars all over the world in 1873.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gerber.

DELEGATE GERBER. Delegate Kelly, there has been no problem with the language in the present Constitution today as was adopted by referendum by the people of Pennsylvania, and it was interpreted by the Department of Justice of the Commonwealth, and the specific veterans' organization to which any individual covered by the amendment would go to if he could prove need. There has been no problems up-to-date and I see no reasons to raise problems here tonight.

DELEGATE KELLY. What would be wrong with protecting it?

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, I suspect there would be nothing wrong with protecting it. My experience in law has been when you tamper with language and change it, especially when it has been established in the Commonwealth, it seems foolish to change it now.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, language which we have now in the proposal is good language, mainly because it has been passed on by the people of Pennsylvania and it operated upon those who they sought to take care of growing out of World War II and the Korean Conflict and I am sure that it is workable, it is pliable, and it expresses the sentiment of the Commonwealth. Those who felt perhaps they did not want it in their proposal and still feel they do not want it in this Constitution, I dare them to amend this and destroy the affect of it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Morton who has been up and then I will recognize the other side.

DELEGATE MORTON. I can appreciate the problem raised by Delegate Camardella. I see the possibility of this amendment putting us in the reverse situation.

It is my recollection that during the Second World War, some of our residents served with the Canadian Air Force and the Canadian Army. As I would see this, this amendment is limited to the Armed Forces of the United States and would limit them to be eligible now. Is there anyone now receiving a pension who served with the allied forces who was not a member or is not a member of the Armed Forces of the United States?

DELEGATE LEONARD. We do not know.

DELEGATE MORTON. I am opposed to making any changes in the 1961 language. We might be cutting off someone who served with the allies and not with the Armed Forces of the United States.

DELEGATE LEONARD. We do not know where this amendment came from. It does not have any name on it. We were very pleased to leave the language as it is in the Constitution today.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want first of all to say, Delegate Leonard, that you have no amendment that I know of and we are not considering any amendment. What we received was a revised report from the Committee on Style and Drafting, and I just want to point out to the delegates, most of the questions I have been hearing recently have been substantive questions in relation to this matter. Of course, if substantively something is changed, it has to have an amendment.

FIRST REVISION WITHDRAWN

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Pelletier, Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee in connection with this matter.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, I would like to withdraw this revision.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The language is now withdrawn.

Now I recognize Delegate Pelletier in connection with the second revision of your report. We will now have it distributed. There are some delegates who wanted to be recognized before I recognized Delegate Pelletier in connection with this report that is now being distributed.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Something has been distributed here that says, "The report of the Committee on Style and Drafting is revised to read as follows."

I should like to ask whether there has been a meeting of the Style and Drafting Committee at which this revision was agreed upon. I know of no such meeting.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I suggest you ask the chairman, he is right here. Delegate Pelletier.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I ask that question, then, of Delegate Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Delegate Shapiro, I assumed that we had a quorum of the Style and Drafting Committee as we were working on this over in this corner of the room.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. This language has just been presented to me and I know I have not voted on this at all and I do not know that any other member of the Committee on Style and Drafting has voted to present this language. I find a great deal of fault with this language.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. I thought we were all in this corner of the room. If the Committee does not feel it can accept this language, I think it ought to say so.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair, I think, was aware that a group of the Committee was together here and I thought you were part of that group.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I was part of the group but this is the first time, a few moments ago, when I saw this language. I do not think that the Committee on Style and Drafting have recommended this language. I think Mr. Comisky has prepared this.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are you suggesting you would like for us to recess until the Committee on Style and Drafting meets? If that is your suggestion, we will.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I am making no suggestion except that if this matter is to be presented at this time and without a vote having been taken, that the section of it which reads, "The report of the Committee on Style and Drafting is revised to read as follows" be deleted and this be offered as an amendment by whoever it is that proposes this as an amendment.

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Unless there is objection, we will recess for approximately five minutes and the Committee on Style and Drafting can gather for a meeting.

The Chair hears none, and the Convention is now in recess.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time of recess having expired, the Convention will come to order.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Pelletier, Chairman of Style and Drafting.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, I realize the hour is late, the problem is complex, and it is going to get more complex, I suspect, because the Committee on Style and Drafting voted unanimously to go back to its initial proposal which you have before you in Committee Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 30, as included in Section 4, pages 4 and 5.

I would like to ask Delegate Aberman to comment on the reasons for the Committee taking this position.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Aberman.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I am beginning to wonder whether Style and Drafting should get hazard pay in addition to their salary. We find ourselves in a rather enviable position. There seems to be three sides to an argument and we seem to occupy the middle ground.

Very simply—if I can use that word for such a complex matter—the situation is basically this:

The Style and Drafting Committee acted upon the language that came off the floor of the Convention. That language that came off the floor reflected an amendment which was proposed by Delegate Shapiro and was adopted by a vote of approximately 124 to 8, or somewhere in that general vicinity. After this language was acted upon by the Style and Drafting Committee, we were then met with the explanation by members of the substantive committee that the net effect of what we had done was to change the intention of the substantive committee and the issue that you will be asked to discuss and to disguise is whether or not the intention of the substantive committee, not of the Style and Drafting, is reflected in the language or whether or not Style and Drafting has not reached the intention. I just want to focus on the issue so you can follow the discussion from this point. The issue revolves around certain real estate which is located in the Cities of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

You may have noted the reference to these particular pieces of real estate owned by utilities in your manual. These pieces of utility real estate were not exempted under the Constitution of 1874. The exemption that they were given were developed prior to that time and they were developed according to a court opinion that was issued subsequent to the 1874 Constitution. That may sound involved but the point of the matter was that some utilities said, "We cannot be taxed because we were exempt prior to the Constitution and the Constitution did not speak, and, therefore, we are now exempt after the Constitution of 1874." The court said, "That is correct, you are exempt."

Statutes were then passed to remedy what was considered to be a bad court opinion and this real estate was then taxed under the statutes.

The question that now evolves is, where do we go with the presently taxed real estate?

Now this type of real estate, to further complicate your life, divides itself into two types of real estate: The type of real estate that is used in the operation of the utility and the type of real estate that is not used in the operation of the utility.

If any of you are attempting to graph this, that is a very important distinction that Delegates Baldus and Brennan will bring forward to you and I wish you would keep it in mind.

So we are now dealing with real estate that was held to be exempt and then taxed by a statute passed by the General Assembly. We are now attempting to decide what happens to this real estate in the face of the expressed intention of this Constitutional Convention that this real estate of public utilities from this time forward shall be subject to real estate taxes by local taxing authorities. If you remember, there were saving clauses in the original Committee proposal which attempted to save from the operation of this exemption clause. I use the term "exemption clause" because the distribution of the gross receipts under this clause is an attempt to resolve the exemption question, what happens to this real estate which is presently taxed under this statute? That is the question we are trying to resolve right now. I hate to sound like I am lecturing, but this is a terrifically complicated thing at 12:45 in the morning. Is there any question anyone would like to ask from this point up to now?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I have questions but I do not know who to ask them of at this point.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand Delegate Aberman is speaking on behalf of Style and Drafting and either Delegate Woodring or Delegate Leonard will represent the Committee on Taxation. If it is a question involving substance then I think the Committee on Taxation should be able to help.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I will ask the President questions. He can direct them to someone.

As I understand it, we are now reverting back to consideration of the Committee Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 30 as it now came out of Style and Drafting, is that correct?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. That is correct.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I have several questions I would like to ask. On page 5, line 17, if the Legislature repeals certain statutes which permits taxation of the railroad properties in the Cities of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, who taxes the property and who gets the money?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. May I reply first on behalf of Style and Drafting?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. It was exactly at this point that we begin to diverge. The answer of the Style and Drafting Committee is that it was our intention that this real estate would remain taxable until such time as the General Assembly discontinued its taxation, and thereafter when that taxation terminated, that real estate to the extent that it was used or useable within the meaning of the language in the immediate preceding section of Section 4, would then fall within the distribution scheme, and would then become part of the over-all local taxable property; and that was the answer of Style and Drafting.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. In other words, what the gentleman is now saying is that if the statutes are repealed, and let me get this in very simple language, the taxes that Pittsburgh or Philadelphia are now collecting, will now be distributed under your distribution system?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. That is the answer of Style and Drafting.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Is that the intent of the substantive committee?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Woodring, and I understand the question is now directed toward your committee.

DELEGATE WOODRING. Mr. President, I think in order to fully appreciate the situation, and in order to endeavor to answer this question, we have to recognize that there are three types of real estate involved: That which is used or useful and which by reason of its being used or useful has been up to this time exempt from real estate tax, but the public utilities have been subject to a gross receipts tax. That land which is not used or useful and that has been subject to a real estate tax, and the remaining classification is that which is used or useful and is subject to tax.

The small segment in which we have developed difficulty here, this small portion of the real estate in the Commonwealth belonging to public utilities which has given rise to the problem, is that portion of public utility real estate owned by the railroad in the old Allegheny and in the old Philadelphia County, which is used and useful but taxable as real estate.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. What is the answer to my question? If the Legislature would repeal that act, who gets this tax money?

DELEGATE WOODRING. Mr. President, my answer would be, if and when the Legislature repeals any tax, there would be no tax revenues to be accounted for.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. In other words, the railroad property in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia would pay no taxes whatsoever?

DELEGATE WOODRING. As such, but they are public utilities and would fall within the first line of Section 4. The real property of public utilities is subject to real estate taxes at the local level. It would become subject to taxes at the local level, but in lieu of making such payment, providing the Legislature continues the gross receipts tax or some other special tax in replacement of the gross receipts tax, and provided that that revenue would be at least equal to the amount which would be recovered from the real estate at the local level, makes that distribution, then such distribution shall be in lieu of the local taxation.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Does the Pennsylvania Railroad pay gross receipts tax right now?

DELEGATE WOODRING. I cannot answer that.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. They do not. I will answer it. Now, what happens to the money?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I hate to interrupt, but that is an erroneous statement, I believe.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I was told that the Pennsylvania Railroad does not pay gross receipts tax. Would somebody correct me?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will recognize the delegates, and you will be recognized, Delegate Shapiro, but just let us have one delegate talking at a time.

DELEGATE WOODRING. Mr. President, I think we ought to go back for clarification in another attempt to answer the question. We have to distinguish between three types of real estate.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I am going to get to the second part as soon as we get the railroad over with.

DELEGATE WOODRING. What is the question about the railroad?

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. My question is, is the Pennsylvania Railroad paying gross receipts tax, and if the Legislature repeals the present laws, where Pittsburgh and Philadelphia are now collecting real estate tax, who gets the money?

DELEGATE WOODRING. I am advised by counsel for the Committee that the railroads, in addition to the local real estate tax, do pay gross receipts tax.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. In other words, then the answer is that this money will now go into the so-called pool and the money will be distributed?

DELEGATE WOODRING. No. There is a savings clause here.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Where is the savings clause?

DELEGATE WOODRING. The savings clause reads this way: "All real property of public utilities subject to local taxation at the time of the adoption of this provision shall remain subject to local taxation."

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, I call attention once again to page 5, line 17, which says that the Pennsylvania Railroad is paying taxes under an old statute, and it says that is in effect until it is repealed. What happens if they repeal the statute?

DELEGATE WOODRING. The same as any taxation which is repealed. If there is a repeal, there would be no taxes collected, and that applies to the six per cent sales tax.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. As I interpret this, Mr. President, if the Legislature repeals the present statute which permits Pittsburgh and Philadelphia to collect these taxes, and since the Pennsylvania Railroad you have now said to us is paying a gross receipts tax, therefore, then this will now come in lieu of the gross receipts tax and will be distributed on an equitable basis as established by the General Assembly. Is that correct or not correct?

DELEGATE WOODRING. Well, I did not hear the whole thing because I was interrupted. I think the answer is yes.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Therefore, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, if the statute is repealed, will lose the taxes they are presently getting, all of it.

DELEGATE WOODRING. If the tax is repealed, they will not get the tax; that is true.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. My second question is, the taxes which are being paid to the municipalities for property which was not used or useful in public utilities such as office buildings, now that is, also, by what, law or statute?

DELEGATE WOODRING. Statutes are part of law.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Statutes are part of law?

DELEGATE WOODRING. That is right.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. If that is ever changed, does that mean that the local municipality that is now collecting all the money for this office building, then would lose all of this money, and it also would come under gross receipts?

DELEGATE WOODRING. If these taxes are repealed, then the municipality would not get the taxes. So long as the local municipality exacts taxes on not used or useful property, this act does not apply to that land.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Would it be correct to say that the Committee on Style and Drafting has substantially changed your report by adding the section on page 5 when it talks about the statutes until repealed, and it now means that the present local municipalities who are collecting taxes are going to lose this benefit they now have?

DELEGATE WOODRING. I would say, Mr. President, that Section 4 reflects the intent of the Taxation Committee from lines 30 on page 4 to and including line 15 on page 5.

I believe that Style and Drafting has added in its report, I think it stated that at the end of the sentence, as it appears in the printed form on line 15, that there should be added these words "or in such other equitable manner provided by law." I believe that is incorporated by and through the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting.

Section 1 of the schedule, I, individually,—perhaps I speak for the committee—am not in accord and I think that the language which we have previously used in our reports ought to be incorporated as a substantive part of Section 4 and not made a part of the schedule, and that part to which I refer says this, and it is a savings clause and protects the municipalities which are now receiving local real estate tax, and it says that, "All real property of public utilities subject to local taxation at the time of the adoption of this provision shall remain subject to local taxation." We cannot say it with much more direct language than that.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, I submit that I buy that language, but did not Style and Drafting change that language?

DELEGATE WOODRING. They have endeavored to substitute what appears in the schedule as Section 1 of the schedule.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Therefore, Mr. President, we are not in disagreement and I submit to this Convention that Style and Drafting made a substantial change when they added into the schedule Section 1, line 17, and were entirely out of order. I submit that the Committee was right in their submission to the proposal which was approved by this Convention, and that we did make a big change, because there now appears to be complete disagreement between Delegate Aberman who is speaking for Style and Drafting and between the Committee on Taxation and Finance which is what this Convention adopted. I believe that we have changed this thing entirely wrong, and we have now hurt the communities who are presently collecting real estate taxes from utilities under the present statute.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Aberman.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Delegate Pasquerilla, I would like to yield for the moment to Delegate Shapiro so that you might hear from Delegate Shapiro the response I would have given you relating to the Shapiro Amendment. I think that everything you say may be true if we adopt the substantive committee amendment. I would respectfully submit to you, sir, that Delegate Shapiro's amendment precludes that speech you just made.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. President, I submit what the Style and Drafting Committee has submitted to this Convention tonight, is simply a change in Style and Drafting of Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 18; Printer's No. 30 reflects in it Style and Drafting changes. Printer's No. 18 which was approved by this Convention, incorporates into it not only the intention of the Committee on Taxation, but also amendments made on the floor including an amendment which speaks directly to the subject that Delegate Pasquerilla is addressing himself to. The Committee on Style and Drafting deleted certain language which it believed was redundant and I believe it is redundant, but the specific amendment that was adopted on the floor of this Convention by the vote of 128 to 4, incorporated first in Printer's No. 16, carried through No. 18, a phrase which read, "and not specifically subjected to local taxation by statute."

The Committee on Style and Drafting felt that was a schedule item and therefore moved it into the section about which Delegate Pasquerilla is now complaining about and changed the language somewhat, but did not change the meaning.

I think there have been a number of unfortunate answers here. The facts are as follows: Taxation of utilities. Utilities are presently exempt by court interpretation except that there are two old statutes which remain on the books; one was adopted in 1858 and one in 1859. Those statutes respectively imposed a tax; the first one on real estate used or useful in the operation of certain transportation companies in the City of Philadelphia, notwithstanding the fact that other properties of other utilities were exempt, and the second imposed a tax on the transportation companies in the City of Pittsburgh, even though that property was used or useful. All other properties used or useful in the operation of utilities is at this moment exempt from taxation.

What the Committee came up with is a provision which would subject all real estate of utilities to tax, except if a utility pays a gross receipts tax, and if the money paid by the utility to the State in the form of gross receipts taxes is passed onto local communities or at least if a certain portion of it is passed onto local communities, then the property which is used or useful is not to be taxed by the local authorities with the exception that these two statutes are to remain in force and effect. It was the assumption of the Committee on Style and Drafting, since these two items of property are subjected to tax only by statute, that taxation could always have been terminated by the Legislature by repealing its statute and there was nothing that was brought to the Committee on Style and Drafting, either in the Committee reports, in the Proposals, or any of the printer's numbers, that would have indicated anything to the contrary. The language that was incorporated in Printer's Nos. 16 and 18 as a result of my amendment followed that pattern and there is no reason Style and Drafting had to change that. I submit, the language in Printer's No. 30, while altered, is altered as a matter of Style and Drafting and carries with it the substance of what was in Printer's No. 18. That may not be what the Committee wants, but it was what the Committee wanted as amended on the floor of this Convention. The Style and Drafting Committee has not changed that.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, I would have to disagree with the lawyer, because it says on page 4, line 15, "That real property of public utilities which is not used or useful in furnishing their public utility services shall remain subject to local taxation."

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. As I explained earlier, that language was omitted by the Committee on Style and Drafting on the recommendation of its counsel as being completely redundant of the language which appears at the very beginning of the section. "The real property of public utilities shall be subject to real estate taxes imposed by local taxing authorities."

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I would have to disagree with the gentleman, because I interpret that language to mean that at all times, public utility property which is not used or useful, which means an office building or the Pennsylvania Railroad property in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia or an office building of any kind in any community in this Commonwealth, is always subject to local taxation, and that is what this Committee and this Convention adopted.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Woodring.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. The gentleman is shaking his head that I am right.

DELEGATE WOODRING. Of course you are right. Mr. President, that is exactly what the Committee has stated right along. The property which is not used or useful for the manufacture of the utilities' services has always been subject to taxation. The Bell Telephone Office Building in the City of Harrisburg and every community which has an office building and not used by the utility is taxable at the local level.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I request, Mr. President, that we agree on that point. However, when you go to page 5 and start reading line 17, if those statutes are repealed and you have now stricken out lines 15 and 16 on page 4, that means then that that property which is not used and if the utility is paying gross receipts taxes that means it comes out of gross receipts and is distributed in a manner provided by the General Assembly and that is a tremendous substantive change in this report and in this article.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. It does not direct itself to property not used or useful. It directs itself to used or useful property.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. It says, "not used."

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I do not see the word "not" in my copy.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If the delegates will kindly address their questions to the Chair, we will proceed more expeditiously.

Now, we recognize Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, I try to direct my question to the Chair. On page 4, line 15, "That real property of public utilities which is not used or useful in furnishing the public utility services, shall remain subject to local taxation."

It definitely says, "not used."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, I do not know whether I can make a contribution to this particular problem or not, but I will make a suggestion. I now have before me the revision of Committee Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 30. I suggest in the savings clause, that that savings clause include whether that property is used or useful and also those not used or useful, and then you will have satisfied Delegate Pasquerilla's question. In that savings clause, you will then protect it. I try to make that contribution, Delegate Leonard, so take it the way you please.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand that report you have in front of you has been withdrawn. Of course, you can refer to it.

DELEGATE STROUP. I was not aware of that.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That has been withdrawn.

DELEGATE STROUP. Then, Mr. President, I would have to submit that Delegate Pasquerilla is correct. Line 15, page 4 should be retained and not be stricken out.

I have another problem which I would like to direct to either Delegate Aberman, Delegate Leonard or Delegate Shapiro, or whoever can answer my question. I have directed to this assembly before my question for a definition of what is a public utility. We have in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania many municipal public utilities, water works, storage plants, gas works, electric companies and so forth. There is no definition as to whether or not these municipally-owned utilities are subject to real estate taxes or not, at least as far as I can see, unless, Mr. President, you would rely upon the provision on page 2, Exemptions and Special Provisions, Article subsection (iii), "That portion of public property which is actually and regularly used for public purposes."

If that is the provision on which we rely, I question very much the depthness of it, the specificity of it and whether or not we are under some litigation. At the present time, as I understand it, municipally-owned lands are not subject to real estate taxation. However, they can be by the General Assembly, subject to the gross receipts tax and I direct this question to whoever can answer the question for me in the interests of the municipally-owned public utilities.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gerber.

DELEGATE GERBER. In behalf of the committee, it was the intent of the Committee that the municipally-owned water works or other utilities, would fit under that section which would be defined as that portion of public property which is actually and regularly used for public purposes. That is to be distinguished from non-municipally owned utilities which would fit into the section defined as public utilities, Mr. President.

DELEGATE STROUP. One more question. This then, puts the burden upon the General Assembly, as to whether or not, the General Assembly shall impose by statute, real estate taxation upon municipally-owned property. Can it or can it not? I pose this question to you.

Also, gross receipts tax upon municipally-owned utilities used or useful in public service. Will you respond to that question, please?

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, in response to the last question, it is my understanding that the language, "That portion of public property which is actually and regularly used for public purposes," is a permissive exemption; permissive in that the Constitution permits the General Assembly to grant that exemption and the General Assembly does not have to grant that exemption if it does not wish to do so.

DELEGATE STROUP. I believe, Mr. President, now that I have an adequate response to my interrogation, and I want to summarize it for the interest of the delegates and for myself and for the future action of the General Assembly. I want to be sure I am correct. The General Assembly could if it saw fit to tax the real estate of municipally-owned properties, is that correct?

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, that is correct in the language of Section 2, Subsection (iii).

DELEGATE STROUP. The second thing is the General Assembly could also tax with gross receipts the income from the services rendered by a municipally-owned public service.

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, no, sir. I repeat again that utility which is publicly owned fits as I understand the language and the intent of the language of the Committee under Section 2, Subsection (iii), that portion of public property which is actually and regularly used for public purposes. It does not, as I understand it, fall within the category of Section 4, Public Utilities. Therefore, as I understand it, it is real estate that would be exempt if the General Assembly would so deem to permit, but I do not think it fell in the category of Section 4 under the gross receipts tax.

DELEGATE STROUP. This again poses a question. Heretofore the General Assembly has had the authority to impose the gross receipts tax upon municipally-owned properties on their income. Now, are you telling me this Constitution is changing that permissive right to the General Assembly?

DELEGATE GERBER. No, I am not stating the General Assembly is right to impose the gross receipts tax on municipally-owned utilities has changed. I must correct myself in stating the General Assembly would have the right to impose both the gross receipts tax, as they are presently permitted to do, and impose the real estate tax which I might add as I understand it, they are presently able to do also on that portion of public property which is actually and regularly used for public purposes which is presently an exemption, which is only a permissive exemption now.

DELEGATE STROUP. The whole purpose of my interrogation is to try to straighten out, insofar as the general fund is concerned, the amount of money that may be taken from the general fund in lieu of taxes back to the local districts. I think now the problem has been clarified and I am satisfied with the response I received and I want to make this a matter of record in this Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Manderino.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. There has been a conference between Delegates Pasquerilla, Brennan, Aberman, Woodring, and Gerber and I think there is agreement that this language might settle most objections and problems, maybe not everybody's.

If you take the language of the Style and Drafting Committee up to line 15 and leave it exactly as it is and cross out "Section 4. The following schedule is adopted," all of line 16, and cross out the words "Section 1" in line 17, and then following, it would read, "Notwithstanding the provisions," of the previous paragraph, because this would be part of Article 8, any law changing statutes to any law which presently subjects real property of public utilities, cross out "used and useful in furnishing public utility services," so it would read, "of public utilities to local real estate taxation by local taxing authorities shall remain in full force and effect."

I think everyone that I talked to thinks that meets the objection.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let the Chair make a comment. We have to do, fellow delegates, either one of two things.

One. We ask the Committee on Style and Drafting to revise their report.

Two. We offer an amendment.

We went through this procedure a few minutes ago, asking Style and Drafting to revise the report. I might add, that we are now on as you know the third consideration and it may expedite matters if this is agreeable to Style and Drafting, to submit a revised report.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I submit, it is not the function of Style and Drafting and it never had asserted the right to make substantive changes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If this is a substantive change, it has to be done by amendment.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Realizing the hour and not wanting to cut anybody off, I would like to suggest that I offer a motion which would determine the feeling of the delegates as to whether or not there should be a change and without foreclosing anybody from doing anything that they want beyond that if the Convention is willing to wait for further changes. If this Convention is satisfied to adopt Proposal No. 5 in its present form as presented by the Style and Drafting Committee, I think we ought to vote.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I would like to know, as a matter of parliamentary inquiry, whether it would be possible at this time to move that we revert, in these sections only, to the language used in Printer's No. 18. In other words, we came off this floor and went to Style and Drafting out of Printer's 18 and that was passed by a vote of 133 to 2 and I would like to know if we could take Section 1(C), from line 20 on page 4 over to line 6 on page 5 and revert to that language which we have already approved and hashed over in place of this disputed language under question here.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Do you make this in the form of an inquiry?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I do.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am advised by the Parliamentarian that it cannot be done that way.

MOTION ON CONSENT TO OFFER IRVIS AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 5

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, we have an amendment which we think will simplify the matter. We have an amendment which we think we can vote on and settle this point. If you will give us five minutes to have the girl type it—she is working on it now—we think we can resolve this without any further technicalities involved.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Do you suggest we be at ease until we work on the amendment?

DELEGATE IRVIS. If you will.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May I state that we are now on third consideration, and because it is on third consideration, the delegate must obtain the consent of the majority of the delegates present in order to offer this amendment.

Now unless there is going to be debate, we can put the question on the consent.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. Chairman, I think this amendment squarely puts the issue of whether or not we want to freeze into this Constitution certain provisions which are presently statutory and decision law. They relate solely to property in Pittsburgh and property in Philadelphia. If we stay with the proposal that has been brought before you by the Committee on Style and Drafting, you retain what has been adopted previously by this Convention, which is, that property now subject to tax by the 1858 and 1859 statutes will remain subject to tax as long as the Legislature wishes it to be subject to tax. When and if the Legislature decides otherwise, it is possible that the City of Philadelphia and the City of Pittsburgh would then cease to collect real estate taxes on that part of the property which we are dealing with, which is used or useful in the operation of those utilities, and that money would then go into the pot which would be distributed among all of the communities throughout the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The amendment which is being offered would eliminate that possibility and provide constitutionally that for all time the City of Philadelphia and the City of Pittsburgh shall continue to collect those taxes and that cannot be changed by the Legislature. I think we should vote on the issue.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Brennan.

DELEGATE BRENNAN. This is an extremely important issue. I know that the Pennsylvania Railroad is the largest taxpayer in the City of Pittsburgh. It is a very substantial taxpayer in Allegheny County and to the School District of the City of Pittsburgh. If we would not adopt this amendment, we would be putting the second largest area practically at the mercy of the Legislature. I believe if the City of Philadelphia knew what the impact of this is, they would be just as concerned as I am. I cannot more strenuously ask this delegation to hold this amendment to be adopted.

DELEGATE IRVIS. I think some of us are now being confused. We are debating the amendment. As I understand the procedure before this delegate body, we must first agree to open the proposal for an amendment and then, if we agree to do that, then we vote on the amendment; is that correct?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You are absolutely correct.

The question before the Convention now is, will the Convention agree to receive the amendment now being offered by Delegate Irvis? Of course, they can debate the question as to whether or not you should have consent to offer the amendment.

Now does anyone else wish to be heard?

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, this is such an important part of this whole Article that I would respectfully ask that these delegates permit this amendment to come before this floor for full consideration and debate and ask a yes vote to permit the amendment to be discussed.

I move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Question moved by Delegate Pasquerilla and seconded by Delegate Aberman that we close debate and vote on the pending question.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

IRVIS AMENDMENT TO COMMITTEE PROPOSAL No. 5

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 5.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

DELEGATE IRVIS offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule, Section 1, page 5, lines 16 and 17, by striking out all of line 16 and "SECTION 1." in line 17.
Amend Schedule, Section 1, page 5, line 18, by striking out "STATUTES WHICH PRESENTLY SUBJECT" and inserting: any law which presently subjects
Amend Schedule, Section 1, page 5, line 19, by striking out "USED AND USEFUL IN FURNISHING PUBLIC UTILITY SERVICES"
Amend Schedule, Section 1, page 5, line 21, by striking out "UNTIL REPEALED"

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

IRVIS AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes the proposer of the amendment, Delgate Irvis.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, the clerk has already read the amendment and I propose that this amendment be adopted. I quite agree with the learned gentleman from Allegheny County who stated that without this amendment we would very possibly be stripping Pittsburgh and Philadelphia of millions of dollars in tax funds, and subjecting them to the whim of the decision of the Legislature, which might or might not be in favor of returning that amount of money to Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. I think by adopting this amendment we will resolve a problem which has given us problems for the last four hours. I think it is a fair amendment. It does no more than what already has been done, and it will, of course, have to answer to the people to say whether or not they approve it, and I move the adoption of this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I would like to draw the attention of this body to a rather historical occasion.

It is now the 28th of February and Delegate O'Donnell did not once address this body on the 27th of February. I think that is a rather historical occasion.

I would like to speak on the 28th of February, however, very briefly.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I thought you were going to say you wanted to keep that record intact.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I believe I have my record for the 27th of February intact. On the 28th, however, I would like to speak against this amendment.

First of all, I find it astonishing that my very good friend and fellow delegate, Delegate Irvis, would premise an argument on the whim of the Legislature. I think that we have covered that issue in the last several weeks in favor of trusting the Legislature. The biggest problem with this amendment, and I would like to echo the comments made by Delegate Fagan of the Local Reapportionment Committee when he referred to a matter of sportsmanship, and I think that the matter of sportsmanship is an issue here. Once on Monday, once yesterday and today twice, I have heard a speaker address this body and state his view, and then immediately move the question, effectively cutting off a reply or retort by anyone. I happen to think that is poor form. Secondly, there is another problem of sportsmanship. We had plenty of time to cover the Shapiro Amendment to this Committee's proposal on this subject. That amendment passed this body by a vote of 128 to 4. We are now doing something which I think is incredibly foolish. We are trying to write a Constitution from the floor at ten minutes of 2 o'clock in the morning. I think we are insane for making the effort.

The principal problem, and I can well recognize that Delegate Irvis and certain delegates from Philadelphia would like to have the Constitution continue to see to it that Philadelphia and Pittsburgh receive certain taxes from the utilities, and I am with them 100 per cent. I think that these two cities should continue to receive those taxes, but am I willing to so freeze the tax structure of this State so that any effort by the General Assembly to adopt, perhaps, a uniform method of taxation which would exist throughout the entire Commonwealth of Pennsylvania will have to be structured around these two islands or these two exceptions, one for the City of Philadelphia and one for the City of Pittsburgh? I think it is an atrocious error. We have trusted the General Assembly in every single area of tax exemption. We have trusted the General Assembly to decide whether a tax exemption should or should not be granted. The thrust of this proposal would be to take away from the General Assembly the power to suggest that there should be a different method or a different approach to the taxation of public utility properties in two of the cities of this Commonwealth, and I think that is a mistake.

I think that Delegate Shapiro is entitled to be backed up by this body. I think he is entitled to the sportsmanship which is involved in supporting the proposal that carried this floor by such an astonishing majority, and I move the defeat of this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Gouger.

DELEGATE GOUGER. Mr. President, I am going to say many of the things that Delegate O'Donnell has just said. I had our distinguished delegate, Governor Scranton, remind me with great feeling about the growing maturity of the Legislature; about how they can be trusted to act with maturity and with fairness toward all people, and I say to the Legislature, I reiterate your ex-Governor's feelings, I am sure you can be trusted, and if you can, then you have no problems about freezing this matter into law. Now, we are overlooking one thing. As we protect Pittsburgh and Philadelphia by discriminatory legislation, we are doing so at the expense of the rest of the State. It is just that simple. We regulate our utilities by how much they can earn, and under this provision the taxes flow back to all areas on a pro rata basis. Now, this means very simply that all the small counties will simply receive less while we protect the status quo of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. I am a little startled and a little shocked at Delegate Pasquerilla who comes from a section of the State that could well use these revenues, that he is now going to deny them in order to protect the income of both Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. Now, all the way through this Convention I have heard of the special treatment of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh over and over again. Here we are again by reverse reasoning curiously enough this time, because now we cannot trust the Legislature, because if we do not freeze this in, the Legislature is liable to remove discriminatory taxes which now exist in favor of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

I move the defeat of this proposal, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, I am thoroughly amazed at several of the delegates on both sides of this issue who think that this problem is strictly Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, because it is not just Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. Now, we have a delegate from Johnstown who represents a utility company, and I do not want to interrogate him, but I do know this, Mr. President: that there are utility companies who are presently paying taxes in practically every county of this Commonwealth.

Under the present system this is not merely to protect Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. There are utility companies who are paying for properties which they own, which are not used or useful in the furnishing of their public utility services, and these are in other cities and counties throughout Pennsylvania.

This amendment that we are now offering is not just to protect Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. The only difference of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia is the special consideration of the railroad, the Pennsylvania Railroad, but we have not talked about other utility companies who pay gross receipts tax and who are also paying real estate taxes in other communities throughout the Commonwealth.

I am sure that if the delegate from Johnstown would want to verify it, he would be the first to tell you that his utility company, the General Telephone Company, presently pays real estate taxes in communities which his company is serving, and this is not a Pittsburgh and a Philadelphia amendment, and I urge that this amendment be accepted.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Cosetti.

DELEGATE COSETTI. Mr. President, I want to make it extremely clear that it was the intent of the Committee not to take any property that is subject to taxation off of the tax rolls, and no member of that Committee, whether he voted for this or voted against that will disagree with that statement.

Let me repeat, it was not the intent of the Committee to take any property which is now taxable off of the tax roll. Neither was it the intent of the Committee to grant to the Legislature a rather circuitous means to exempt real estate of utilities, which is the way the wording of the present measure would have its effect. It would be a circuitous way to take existing real estate property, which is now taxable off the tax roll; that was not the intent of the Committee. It is a possibility of the present language.

I want to object to the kind of reasoning we have heard here that our attempt to keep this property on the tax roll is expressing some special provision; that is a kind of negative approach. If you keep taxable property on the tax roll, you are granting some sort of special permission. The entire thrust of the Committee's action on exemption was to keep property on the tax roll, and I suggest that Representative Irvis' amendment does exactly that. It keeps existing property which is now taxable on the tax roll.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE

DELEGATE GERBER. I move the question, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have some delegates who are at the microphone.

DELEGATE GERBER. I meant to include those delegates who are presently up, Judge Woodring, Delegate Buck, Delegate Pelletier, Delegate Manderino, and then I move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Also Delegate Irvis.

DELEGATE GERBER. I am sorry. I did not know which one was speaking, and also Delegate Aberman who is to my right.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have a motion on the floor. You are not helping very much with that one.

Delegate Baldus, were you also on your feet to be included?

DELEGATE BALDUS. Yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. All right. Therefore, the motion before the House is to close debate and vote on the question after we have heard the delegates that are on their feet, and you do not have to rename them. They have already been named.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

The majority having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the affirmative and the motion was agreed to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will now recognize Delegate Woodring.

DELEGATE WOODRING. Mr. President, it occurs to me that we have become so enmeshed in necessary technicalities that we have lost sight of the purpose of this section of the proposal, and while I will not speak very long I think we ought to be reminded of the purpose of this section. It is not to impose taxes. It is rather to create an exemption for a very laudable purpose, a very necessary purpose, and that is to raise a fund to return to the municipalities all over the Commonwealth by reason of the shrinking tax base which they have experienced because of the growth of schools, because of the growth of colleges, because of the growth of our charitable institutions and our public institutions and so on. Because of this the Committee felt that it was necessary to try to do something and afford some assistance to the municipalities in order to get them some tax monies.

With respect to this amendment, I quite concur with my colleague and Committee member, Delegate Cosetti, who stated the case very ably, that this amendment does, in my opinion, restore the intent of the Committee. I am thoroughly in favor of it, and I am going to vote for it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Did you wish to be recognized, Delegate Baldus?

DELEGATE BALDUS. I would like to reply briefly to the statement made by Delegate Gouger. He stated that the passage of this amendment will reduce the proportionate share that the smaller communities of the Commonwealth will receive from the fund collected from gross receipts. This is an incorrect statement.

The proposal now before us provides for the annual distribution of a fund equivalent to all of the taxes which local bodies could have imposed. Whether or not Pittsburgh and Allegheny County and Philadelphia can continue to tax the property that they do now will in no way reduce the size of the fund which will be available for distribution. There will be no reduction in the proportionate amount that the smaller communities of the Commonwealth receive.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, I hesitate to say anything at this hour, but I must confess that the experience of this Committee on Style and Drafting with this Article suggests that one must be in a fantasy land. I would like to make a number of points.

One is, I wish somebody would make up his mind as to what his intent really is, because I have listened to a number of honest gentlemen on this floor tonight deny the report of this Committee, when yesterday they said this indicated precisely their intent. Now, I assume that they did not understand what they saw yesterday, and I can only assume that, perhaps, they do not understand what is before them today. If they were equally confused yesterday or at 2:00 o'clock in the morning I am willing to concede that even a flash of lightning has hit me, and suddenly they see what their intent really was. In any case, Mr. President, I must confess to an unusual feeling of frustration, and I have had many in this Convention, that one would spend a whole day working with them yesterday to find that it was a day wasted, and maybe they do not prize their time, but I prize mine.

Secondly, I think this Convention ought to keep in mind that it did vote the Shapiro Amendment, and quite frankly I will say that I am rather ashamed of myself because I lost the Shapiro Amendment in my own mind, and I very nearly gave it away as Chairman of the Committee. I think the Shapiro Amendment represented the intent of this Convention as it came to the Committee on Style and Drafting, and I do not think in the flush of this moment that we should forget that this Convention did vote that amendment, and I honestly think that if we are going to vote it again, we ought to vote in under some kind of reconsideration in fairness to Delegate Shapiro. Having made the points, I now side with the realization that they are probably more by nature of therapy for me than of any aid to the delegates.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Aberman.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Mr. President, Delegate Pelletier has saved me at least five minutes of my remarks, and I concur wholeheartedly in his last statement.

I would also call to the delegates' attention the fact that I led an unsuccessful fight to strip out the entire provision related to public utility exemption and the distribution of gross receipts, and I find myself in a rather curious position of supporting this motion, because as I interpret this motion, we have gone beyond the reach of the floor, and we now have imposed on the utilities the additional taxation which we never conceived of at the time we voted on this thing on the floor, and therefore, I rise to support this amendment.

DELEGATE IRVIS. I do not ask for summation.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

The roll was recorded as follows:

MOTION TO SUSPEND RULES

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, would it be in order for a motion to suspend the rules and have the present proposal up for third and final vote now?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want to say that it is always in order to suspend the rules. I understand it takes 109 votes, but I want to point out that certainly we have to come back here later on today and I also want to point out that I think that the delegates should probably take a look at this as it is amended in its final form but that is only a personal opinion of the Chair. I will still be guided by the wishes of this Convention.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, I direct attention to page 2, rule 5, Suspension of Rules, and you will find there is an execption on the 109 votes, and that is upon consideration of a bill on third reading. I ask the Parliamentarian to look at it, please.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Parliamentarian has interpreted that rule which states, "Any standing rule of the Convention may be suspended temporarily by a vote of two-thirds (109) of the Delegates—"

The exception is that you cannot suspend the rule requiring consideration of proposals on three different days.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I move to suspend the rule and call up this bill for third and final passage.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me state the motion, please, and I will recognize you.

I want to state what the motion is before the Convention.

The motion of Delegate Jirolanio and it was seconded by Delegate Gerber and we are referring to rule 26, subsection 12, which says, "In the event the proposal of the Committee on Style and Drafting is amended on third consideration, a vote on final passage shall not be taken thereon, but such proposal shall automatically be reprinted and recommitted to the Committee on Style and Drafting in the same manner and with the same effect as a proposal advanced from second to third consideration."

It has been moved and seconded and it is before the Convention.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scales. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SCALES. I rise for a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SCALES. Mr. President, before we take a vote on Delegate Jirolanio's motion may I ask Delegate Aberman briefly, concerning a single word change which I believe the Committee has agreed to in substance. The change does not affect substance. It is only a style change and as I understand it, there has been agreement by the Committee. The change I refer to is on page 3, line 14. As I understand it, the word "available," the third word from the end of the line appears perhaps by mistake, and the Committee wishes to change that word to "applicable," rather than "available."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Aberman.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Is the interrogation whether the statement is correct?

DELEGATE SCALES. Yes.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. That is correct. "Available" should be changed to "applicable" in that line 14.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will the delegates therefore please change their copies to conform? I understand this is a typographical error.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. There is another change requested by Delegate Baldus. The same repeat change on line 23 has been called to our attention, where the word "available" also appears and it should be made to read "applicable."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone else wish to be heard?

Are we ready for the question?

The question is on the motion to suspend the rules in order to, in effect, consider Proposal No. 5 immediately, without sending it back to Style and Drafting as required by the rule which I read.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the motion?

The roll was recorded as follows:

REFERRAL TO COMMITTEE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The proposal is referred back to the Committee on Style and Drafting.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Caron.

DELEGATE CARON. Mr. President, in deference to all of us, I feel we cannot intelligently vote, at least I cannot, and would suggest a motion that we adjourn until perhaps 1:00 o'clock or 2:00 o'clock tomorrow, or a time convenient that you may suggest.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I suggest for the benefit of my fellow delegates, to determine what time you wish to convene later today. This proposal can be back to us I think by 1:30 tomorrow.

We hope that we can and I want Delegate Pelletier to indicate approval or disapproval, that we can have the Judiciary Article back by 4:00 o'clock, because there are things that we would like to do also tomorrow evening.

My suggestion is that we adjourn until 2:00 o'clock tomorrow.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Rappaport.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Would it be better for us to leave the hall quietly and agree to meet at 1:30, so as not to pass a legislative day?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have not passed a legislative day according to our Parliamentarian. When we come in and pass the day, that day is the same day until you leave the house.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. What I am asking is, we not formally adjourn this evening.

When we act on these tomorrow, we will be on the February 27th calendar and go to another day.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We do not have any problem with the calendar day.

DELEGATE CARON. I move, sir, that we adjourn until 2:00 o'clock.

COMMITTEE MEETINGS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Johnson.

DELEGATE JOHNSON. If we are to keep the schedule and have proposals ready late tomorrow afternoon, the Committee on Style and Drafting will have to meet at 9:00 o'clock in the morning.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Bloom.

DELEGATE BLOOM. There will be a committee meeting of the Committee on Taxation and Finance in room 500 of the North Office Building.

Bring your pencil and notebook and I think this one will be one of the final meetings.

ADJOURNMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Caron for the adjournment motion.

DELEGATE CARON. Mr. President, I move that this Convention do now adjourn until Wednesday, February 28, 1968, at 2 p.m., e.s.t.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Caron, seconded by Delegate Rappaport, that this Convention do now adjourn until Wednesday, February 28, 1968, at 2 p.m., e.s.t.

The motion was agreed to, and (at 2:20 a.m., e.s.t.) the Convention was adjourned.

PENNSYLVANIA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION 1967-1968

JOURNAL

Volume 1 Wednesday, February 28, 1968 Number 53

The Convention was called to order at 2:40 p.m., e.s.t.

THE PRESIDENT (Raymond J. Broderick) IN THE CHAIR

PRAYER

DR. MORLEY MAYS, President of Elizabethtown College, Elizabethtown, offered the following prayer:

O God, mysterious presence from Whom there is no shrinking away and before Whom all the generations come and go, we face our tasks today in deference to Thee. Thou dost stand in judgment over us and within us moment by moment, beckoning us to seek Thy holy will for our lives, requiring of us justice and mercy, rather than to seek fame or favor.

Give us today a fresh understanding that we are responsible to Thee for the management of civil affairs. The orders of men and of nations are Thy handiwork as much as the scenes of nature and the interminable spaces beyond. We would understand that we toil not alone for the people of this Commonwealth but for Thee. Give us this dimension of the Eternal in all that we undertake in the closing hours of this historic assembly.

As we pray for ourselves, we pray also for this Commonwealth and the country of which it is a part, for its fields and streams, for the rich ores hidden in its hills, for the skill and strength of those on whose toil our life depends, for those who in commerce and industry, in communication and travel hold the state together, for those who nurture the minds and spirits—for all these we give Thee our humble thanks.

These are fateful days, O God, in which we live. We cannot be casual or selfish, nor can we be cynical or unenlightened. May what we do here build efficiency into our government, equity into our laws, and stability into our society. The threat to these things comes not only from without but also from within. Help us to understand that we do not need power so much as we need reconciliation, that we do not need bureaucracy so much as we need self-discipline and constraint, that we do not need affluence so much as we need character. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE TO THE FLAG

The Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag was recited by the Convention, led by Delegate Redick.

ANNOUNCEMENTS BY SECRETARY

SECRETARY MICHENER. Mr. President. I have three announcements on problems which delegates have brought to my attention at various times.

There will be bound copies of the complete journal delivered to your homes some time within six months after the termination of this Convention. Bound copies of the journal will reach you in your home.

There will be certificates of honor for all delegates who participated in this Convention. They are large parchment sheets and properly framed and put in any law office, will entitle you to charge $5 more an hour. There will be a ceremony provided whereby each of 163 of us will sign the document that results from our labors. How that will be done, we are not quite certain yet, but it will be done tomorrow and you should all have sharp fountain pens.

Yesterday, having gotten rid of a very troublesome lady delegate, it is only fair we now throw one of the bums on the male side out that has been giving us a lot of trouble at this Convention. He is a graduate of Penn Law School, of Dickinson, of Temple, of Pitt, of Duquesne. He is Mr. Thrust. We are sending him home forever, because of the fact that we are black and blue from being thrusted at from all sides. Mr. President, the thrust of what I am trying to say is this: We just want to get rid of him on this last day when we have our last crack at the Judiciary Article. No one may say today that the thrust of what I intended to say was something or other.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. In accordance with our procedure, the leaves will be approved unless objection is heard. I am happy to report that we have no leaves other than from Delegate Thrust.

APPROVAL OF JOURNALS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. There are no Journals to be approved this morning.

QUORUM CALL

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will now call the roll for the purpose of determining a quorum. The delegates will please record their presence by voting "aye."

COUNTY OFFICIALS WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Roberts.

DELEGATE ROBERTS. I would like to present to the Chair and fellow delegates, the Register of Wills and Recorder of Deeds of Monroe County who is visiting today and that is Mr. Carl Yost.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If he will stand, we will give him our cordial greeting.

WIVES OF DELEGATES WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hook.

DELEGATE HOOK. I rise to a point of personal privilege. I would like to introduce my wife to the delegate body and also the wife of Mr. William Stout. I would like to introduce my wife Edie Hook and Mary Stout.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will the ladies please rise so we can give them our cordial greeting?

GUEST OF DELEGATE WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gray.

DELEGATE GRAY. Mr. President, I would like to introduce a member of our church who does not sing in our choir so therefore she did not come up here when the choir was here. She is the sister of Superior Court Judge Theodore Spaulding. I would like to present Mrs. Odessa Spaulding to this delegation.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are very happy to have you here with us. Please rise and we will give you our cordial welcome.

FAMILIES OF DELEGATES WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me recognize Delegate Barry who has been standing for some time.

DELEGATE BARRY. Mr. President, I rise to a point of personal privilege. I would like to introduce my wife Ruth and my children Margaret, Thomas, Sheila, Francis, Patrick, Rita and Eileen.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think that deserves a long line of applause. We are very happy to have you with us and we want you to know we are very proud of the good work Delegate Barry has been doing.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Sharp.

DELEGATE SHARP. Mr. President, I should like to rise on a point of personal privilege and introduce the presiding judge of my household, my wife and my son Thomas.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If you will please stand up, we are very happy to have the Sharp family with us and we will give you our warm cordial welcome.

We now recognize Delegate Henderson.

DELEGATE HENDERSON. I rise to introduce Mrs. Carol Brennan, the daughter of one of our delegates, T. Robert Brennan. She is a student at Dunbarton College of Washington, D. C.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are very happy to have you with us. We want you to know we are proud of the good work your dad has been doing.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Buck. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BUCK. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

PRESIDENT BUCK. I wish first of all to record my presence.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will have your presence noted on the record and you make 145 present.

DAUGHTER OF DELEGATE WELCOMED

DELEGATE BUCK. I thank you and I also wish to introduce my youngest daughter, Judy.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Judy, would you stand? We are very happy to have you with us. We are very proud of your dad, he is doing a great job.

GUEST OF DELEGATE WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron.

DELEGATE BARRON. Mr. President, I rise to introduce the one person, the one human being who has made my appearance at this Convention possible, and that is my law partner who survived in a two-man law office, this particular three-month absence of the junior partner. It is with a great deal of pleasure I introduce to this delegate body, Mr. Harold W. Houck of the Mifflin County Bar.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are very happy to have you with us.

WIVES OF DELEGATES WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Bashoff.

DELEGATE BASHOFF. Mr. President, I rise to a point of personal privilege. I would like to present to the body my wife, Debbie Bashoff.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Mrs. Bashoff, would you please stand so we can give you our warm personal and cordial greeting?

I want you to know that your husband is doing a marvelous job.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Wilcox.

DELEGATE WILCOX. We also have with us the shy wives of the shy delegates, Westerberg and Whittum with us.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We certainly want them to stand and we will give them our cordial welcome and tell them how proud we are of the work that their good husbands have been doing.

BIRTHDAY GREETINGS TO DELEGATE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, the Chair recognizes Delegate Scales.

DELEGATE SCALES. Mr. President, I rise to a point of personal privilege and would like to announce that today is the 39th birthday of the distinguished Delegate Douglas Moorhead. I wish also to announce that the local Finance Subcommittee will celebrate the event by meeting in the back of this chamber during the first recess, in order to rewrite the local government article.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think we can all say happy birthday to Delegate Moorhead.

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE FAGAN requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 28, 1968

The standing Committee on Legislative Apportionment having now completed its substantive duties with respect to Legislative Apportionment proposals would indeed be remiss if it failed to give recognition to the members of the staff assigned to the committee to assist it in performing its duties.

First, the committee wishes to express its gratitude to Lawrence Zeger, Committee Staff Director, and Attorneys William Woodside, Ronald Davenport, Irving Backman, Fred Fiegenberg and Maxwell Ominsky, all of whom devoted many hours of their time collecting and preparing research material for the committee so that it could make intelligent decisions on proposals to be reported from our committee. Special mention should also be made that William Woodside, who is the son of Delegate Robert Woodside and Chief Counsel to Delegate Stanley Stroup, Majority Leader of the Senate, worked very closely with counsel to our committee in solving the problems the committee had before it. No convention committee could have asked for a more talented research staff than these men.

Second, the committee wishes to give recognition to Russell A. Davis who was assigned by the Preparatory Committee as counsel to our committee. The committee believes it appropriate here to point out to the convention that Mr. Davis has served State government well for a number of years. He started his State government career with the Legislative Reference Bureau, the drafting bureau for the Legislature and for this convention. Since then, and over a span of almost fourteeen years, he has served in many responsible governmental positions. Presently, he is chief counsel to Herbert Fineman, Democratic Floor Leader of the House, who is also a delegate to this convention. As chief counsel, he assisted in drafting the constitutional convention law, under which the convention is now assembled and spent numerous hours before this convention convened with Mark Gruell, Convention Parliamentarian, in drafting the operating rules for this convention. The committee makes reference to his governmental background solely to highlight the fact that with such knowledge and understanding of State government and the legislative process, Mr. Davis has been an outstanding legal adviser and an invaluable asset to our committee. Accordingly, the standing Legislative Apportionment Committee desires to express and place in the record that it is indeed grateful to him for his legal advice and counsel, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Constitutional Convention of Pennsylvania congratulate Russell A. Davis and the above-named research staff and express its gratitude to them for a task well done; and be it further RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution be prepared for Mr. Davis and the research staff members as a token of the convention's appreciation.

COMMITTEE MEETINGS

DELEGATE BLOOM. While we are wating here, I want to announce a very important meeting. I think it will be the final meeting of the Committee on Administration and Finance. This will be at room 401 in the Capitol here immediately after recess. It will be a very short meeting. I would like to have all the members present.

CALENDAR

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON THIRD CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to the third consideration of Committee Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 31, entitled:

A Proposal amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania further regulating exemptions from taxation and providing for the taxation of real property of public utilities.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, we take up the calendar of the day.

On our calendar for early this afternoon we have Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 31.

I have been advised that this has been distributed and is on the desks of all of our delegates.

I am also informed that it contains one small typographical error of omission on page 6, line 22.

After the word "provisions" should be inserted the word "of."

If you will look on the clean copy on page 4, line 22, you will see that the "of" is on the clean copy so this is clearly a typographical omission.

Now, the question before the Convention is, will the Convention agree to advance Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 31 to final passage?

I think we all know by this time that this is the last opportunity to amend and an amendment can only be accepted if consent is obtained.

Now we will unlock the voting machine and will vote over. That will be the easiest way to do it.

The question before the Convention is, will the Convention agree to advance Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 31 to final passage?

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

The roll was recorded as follows:

The majority having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the affirmative and the proposal was agreed to.

And said proposal having been read a third time, considered and agreed to,

On the question,

Shall the proposal be finally adopted?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Convention has advanced Proposal No. 5, Printer's No. 31 to final passage.

This proposal, under the rules, has been considered on three different days and has been agreed to and now we have the question, will the Convention finally pass this proposal? Of course, this vote must receive 82 votes.

I now recognize Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. On behalf of the nit pickers society, sir, on page 6, line 10, there is a misspelling of the word "service." May I suggest it be corrected before we finally pass the bill?

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to final passage of Proposal No. 5?

DELEGATE BROWN. Mr. President, on page 2, the back section of this proposal, you will see another misspelled word. On line 3, it says "that portion." They have "p-r-o-t-i-o-n."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. All right, we will fix that. That is line 3.

Now we will make another try. The question is, will the Convention finally adopt this proposal?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will the Convention please be at ease?

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will the Convention please come to order?

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pechan. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE PECHAN. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE PECHAN. To read into the record of this Convention a statement relating to the work of the Convention and my participation therein.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed.

DELEGATE PECHAN. Mr. President, I was honored to have been one of the members of the Preparatory Committee which worked for some six months preparing the groundwork for this Convention. During the very early days of the Convention I determined that having completed the preparatory work, I was delighted to exceed to the tenure of the Convention, wherein the elected delegates should take up the work and proceed forward.

I would like to read into the record, if I may, Mr. President, a letter that I wrote to the secretary, Mr. James A. Michener, Secretary of the Constitutional Convention, North Office Building, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, on January 10.

> "Dear Mr. Michener, accept this as a respectful request for a leave of absence from the Constitutional Convention. I am, however, prepared to meet my Convention obligations that demand my personal attention.
> Further, I feel that by virtue of my Senate office and as a member of the Preparatory Committee, I have discharged my designated Convention responsibilities, and that my Senatorial district is most ably represented by the duly elected delegate.
>
> Sincerely yours,
> Senator Ralph Pechan."

I would like at this time to mention that the elected delegates of my 41st Senatorial district in alphabetical order are Delegate Baldrige, Delegate Filson and Delegate Leach, and I am sure that they have been a credit, not only to the 41st Senatorial district, but to the operation of this Convention.

I want to say, too, Mr. President, if I may, I believe I offered Proposal No. 1, but you and your officers felt that the proposal did not fall within the purview of this Convention and it was not considered, and that was that the Legislature should not continue beyond 180 days. I understand there has been some movement. In fact, the Senate has passed such a resolution and sent such a bill to the House of Representatives for their concurrence, and I am hopeful that they will concur, and it will be adopted.

I would like to make this one observation, Mr. President, and that is that I feel that the delegates of this Convention have learned of the problems that we have in the Legislature, and I think they can be sympathetic with some of the time we spent and some of the work that we have to do. I would also like to say, Mr. President, that we in the Legislature have learned from you that you can do your work or that our work can be done more expeditiously if we stick to the work just as you fellows have. There are many times when we are in session until 3:00, 4:00 or 5:00 o'clock in the morning, but it is usually late in the session, but I think that if we have a set time, let us say 180 days, and know that we have to complete our work in that time, we can learn a good lesson from this Convention.

I would like to at this time, because I am going to leave, thank not only the officers and the delegates for the very many courtesies that they have not only shown me, but also other members of the Legislature. I want to thank the delegates. I think this is a grand group of men and women, and I am sure that the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is going to be a better place to live in in the next hundred years.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Huggins.

DELEGATE HUGGINS. Mr. President, I stand in place to read the following resolution.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed.

DELEGATE HUGGINS. I think it is appropriate in these last waiting hours that many of us look around the room, which is normally filled with members of the Legislature from which came the greatest guys of critical nobility. We thought they were wrong and we were going to show them how to do it. We were going to show them that we could, indeed, accomplish much in three months, minus all of the hot air, minus all of the things for which we were critical of them.

It is for this reason, Mr. President, that I offer the following resolution, and I think it is appropriate that it is offered following the remarks made by Senator Pechan.

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE HUGGINS requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

> In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 28, 1968
> It is evident after this long, but short, Constitutional Convention that we delegates have become more aware of the problems that must be, in part, faced by our legislators. We have used this august chamber, and have used their desks and names in a shared way for three months. We have been through our own special kind of legislative turmoil. And we have sheltered our selfish interests in ways similar to those for which we have been critical of them.

We have learned that dignity comes not in title, but in performance. We have learned that creative law is born through a brave spirit and a shared trust. We have learned that man is always capable of doing excellence if he struggles beyond human negligence; therefore be it RESOLVED, That through Delegates Fineman and Donaldson, we send our resolution concerning a new appreciation for their capabilities, their fortitude and their diligence for the good of this Commonwealth. We've filled their desks and chairs, but find it difficult to fill their shoes.

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE BLOOM requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 28, 1968

The many fine and competent employes of the Convention who have assisted in the preparation, reproduction and printing of the many proposals, amendments, amendments to amendments, revisions, and revisions to revisions which we have submitted to the Convention should be congratulated.

Regrettably, each of these cannot be thanked by name, but Frank P. Garber, and his staff of the Convention Drafting Bureau, the xerox machine operators, Regis D. Steighner and his staff of the Data Processing Center, and George E. Zeiders, Legislative Printing Clerk and his staff, all contributed to the success of the Convention; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1967-1968 express its gratitude to Frank P. Garber and his staff of the Convention Drafting Bureau, the xerox machine operators, Regis D. Steighner and his staff of the Data Processing Center, and George E. Zeiders, Legislative Printing Clerk and his staff; and be it further RESOLVED, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to Frank P. Garber, Convention Drafting Bureau; Regis D. Steighner, Data Processing Center; and George E. Zeiders, Legislative Printing Clerk.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hook.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, I rise to offer the following resolution, and as I offer this resolution, I will call off the various names and various individuals who I think all of us know by face but not by name, and I would like each and every one of them to step forward and be recognized by the body as a whole.

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE HOOK requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 28, 1968

All those who contributed to the smooth operation of this Convention deserve special thanks and recognition from the delegates. Those who recorded the proceedings will also share the appreciation of historians.

Among the persons directly involved during deliberations on the floor of the Convention Hall are John W. Ingram, Executive Director; Ralph D. Tive, Assistant Executive Director; Marvin Comisky, General Counsel; Mark Gruell, Jr., Parliamentarian; Thomas R. Balaban, Solicitor and Assistant Parliamentarian; Anthony J. Petrosky, Director of Convention Operations; Alan Hepford, Head Page; Howard Yale; Lillian Carr; Kay Clarke; John Zubeck; R. P. "Rags" Stimmel; Robert Sheipe; Ford O'Dell; Albert S. Marshall; Agnes O'Neill; Sue Smith; Douglas Wagner; Roy Brungard; Martin Stern; Herbert Kroll; Lewis Weinschel; Bill Reed; David Shultz, and Betty Aversa; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the delegates to the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1967-1968 extend their sincere appreciation to all of these persons who helped in the success of this Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Scales.

DELEGATE SCALES. Mr. President, it comes as a surprise to no one, I am sure, that I have not always agreed with the members of the press, and I suspect that, perhaps, there are one or two others in this Hall who will also not always agree with the members of the press.

Like the rest of us, the press becomes confused and makes mistakes; also like the rest of us, the press comes to Harrisburg to do a job for the people of Pennsylvania, and I submit, Mr. President, that the press has done just that.

There are many men and women newspaper people, television and radio people, who have come to this Convention and helped in its democratic processes.

There are five men who, in my recollection, Mr. President, have been here almost every single hour, certainly every single day since this Convention began, and I call the attention of the Chair to Pat Boyle of the Pittsburgh press, to Duke Kaminski of the Philadelphia Bulletin, William Ecenbarger of U. P. I., Bill Geiger of the Associated Press, and Fred Walters of Group W. Westinghouse.

Therefore, Mr. President, on behalf of Delegate Bob Curran and myself, I offer the following resolution:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 28, 1968

WHEREAS, The newspapers in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania have played a most important role in bringing about the Constitutional Convention of 1967-1968, and

WHEREAS, The press, with vigilance and determination, has informed the citizens of Pennsylvania of the progress of this Convention, and

WHEREAS, The press has demonstrated a commitment to a better Constitution for all Pennsylvanians; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That this Convention expresses its gratitude, its appreciation, and its commendation to the members of the press for their daily and regular coverage of this Constitutional Convention from December 1, 1967 to February 29, 1968, and for their devotion to the best interests of the people of Pennsylvania.

AMENDMENTS TO SCALES RESOLUTION

DELEGATE FLEMING. Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fleming.

DELEGATE FLEMING. Mr. President, I wonder if Delegate Scales would possibly agree to an amendment which I might possibly give to this. I am sure that newsmen and radio and the television and radio commentators for whom he has suggested we give just commendation have done a magnificent wonderful job, but I would, also, draw to your attention, Delegate Scales, that in western Pennsylvania we have two men here, particularly Mr. Patrick Boyle of the Pittsburgh press and Mr. Frank Matthews of the Pittsburgh Post Gazette who have covered this every single day. They have done a magnificent job of coverage for those of us in western Pennsylvania, and I would like, if I could possibly do so, to add their names to those who are especially being commended.

DELEGATE SCALES. Mr. President, I am delighted to accept the resolution of our fellow delegate.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Benedict.

DELEGATE BENEDICT. Would Delegate Scales accept a further amendment to the amendment, to also include Joe Miller and Saul Kohler?

DELEGATE SCALES. Mr. President, I am happy to accept Delegate Benedict's further amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Banes.

DELEGATE BANES. I should like to offer a further amendment of the resolution as follows:

Be it further resolved that they should be hereafter known as the roasting and toasting fraternity.

DELEGATE SCALES. In view of the various amendments, and in order to demonstrate my own sometime confusion, I would like to state that despite all the advertising that takes place in Philadelphia and the rest of this State, I still do not know whether in Philadelphia nearly everybody reads the Bulletin or the Inquirer.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now do I understand that you have accepted these amendments to your resolution?

DELEGATE SCALES. Yes, indeed, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Do you wish it voted on now?

DELEGATE SCALES. Yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is there any objection to the immediate consideration of this resolution? The Chair hears none. All those in favor of the resolution please signify by saying aye. Anyone opposed say no. The resolution is unanimously adopted and will appear in the record and copies will be made.

FAMILY OF DELEGATE CAPUTO WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Caputo.

DELEGATE CAPUTO. Mr. President, I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would you state what your point of personal privilege is?

DELEGATE CAPUTO. I have had the pleasure of sitting with this delegation for several months, but the most pleasant moment of this Convention has now arrived.

I had hoped that my daughter from Beverly Hills, California, Phyllis Varroff and her two children, Nicholas and Flavio would be here today, but my daughter from Palisades, New York, Paula Babalis and her three daughters, Alexandria, Maria and Lara are here, and also my wife, Mrs. Caputo, and I would like to present them to you.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If they will all stand up we will give them our cordial greeting and welcome.

COMMITTEE MEETING

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, there will be an immediate meeting of the Judiciary Committee in the Majority Senate Caucus room.

It will last fifteen minutes, but it must be right now.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will have the meeting.

May I make an announcement before they go to that meeting? I would like you to hear this announcement. We had various estimates as to the time when we would be ready to take up on this floor Proposal No. 7.

Is anything that you are going to do require action this afternoon? I was going to suggest we recess until No. 7 was ready, but will you require action on your meeting, or as a result of your meeting?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. The reason for the meeting is because of the request of the heads of the Legislature, of which you are aware.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. So, we better, therefore, remain in session until your meeting has been completed.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Frankly, I do not think any action could be taken on what we will do until the opening of the session with regard to the Style and Drafting report. I think you could do it at the beginning of that if that is what you want to do.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me suggest that we will remain at ease until your committee returns.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. We should not be more than fifteen minutes.

AMENDMENTS TO HOOK RESOLUTION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will be at ease for fifteen minutes.

I recognize Delegate Caron.

DELEGATE CARON. This has been a very long and difficult chore. Time after time I have been deeply concerned when I get on my feet and we have an amendment and then someone amends an amendment and then someone amends the amendment and I do not think that we should let this opportunity go by without amending the amendment to the amendment that I want to make to the amendment.

Under the circumstances, I have asked Delegate Hook if he would permit an amendment to the amendment to the amendment and in deference to the young lady who has worked so hard and helped so much, I would like to ask this group to add Betty Aversa's name to that list of those who we already recognized as having helped so much.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am happy to hear her name has been suggested. She has done a wonderful job.

Do you have any objection, Delegate Hook?

DELEGATE HOOK. I have no objection to this being added as an amendment to the amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you.

We will see that it is added to the record.

I recognize Delegate Gouger and then I will recognize Delegate Swope.

DELEGATE GOUGER. I do not present an amendment to an amendment.

I submit a proposal.

I submit to you and to the members of this Constitutional Convention that we have spread upon the records our sincere and profound appreciation for the following people:

First and foremost, our most capable and courteous sergeants-at-arms who have handled our guests so graciously and who have guarded our portals against disturbance and who have generally served us so remarkably well.

Secondly, the research staff that has not been mentioned in so many of these resolutions.

Thirdly, the counsel of so many of our committees who have worked so ably and so well.

Our messengers, the members of the secretarial pool who have put up with our idiosyncrasies and bad English.

The executive office staff, the telephone attendants, the fine people down in the document room, the pages, and all those people which we cannot identify but who made our ninety day stay here so highly comfortable and pleasant.

Mr. President, I move you this motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Gouger, that was in the form of a motion?

DELEGATE GOUGER. That is correct.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Gouger and seconded by Delegate Gerber.

Is there any discussion on the motion?

The Chair recognizes Delegate Croop.

DELEGATE CROOP. I wanted to add one other group which has tried to take very good care of us and has encountered at times the displeasure of others.

I refer to the police force which has seen to the availability of parking space out here for us day after day in all kinds of weather.

DELEGATE GOUGER. I happily accept that amendment to my resolution.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is there further discussion on that motion? The Chair hears none.

I recognize Delegate Van Sant.

DELEGATE VAN SANT. Mr. President, as long as we are expressing gratitude to people, I think that our blessings are very much in the interest of those who made out the checks.

DELEGATE GOUGER. I accept this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will now call for a vote on the resolution.

DELEGATE GOUGER. May I amend my own motion? Our most capable clerk, Bill Wagner, has not been mentioned in all these resolutions. May we add his name with great gratitude?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We certainly shall.

I now notice you are referring to it as a resolution and I will do likewise.

Now is there any objection to the immediate consideration of that resolution?

The Chair hears none. All those in favor of the adoption of the resolution please say aye. Anyone opposed say no. The resolution is unanimously adopted. It will appear in the record and copies will be made.

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE GOUGER requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 28, 1968

All those who contributed to the smooth operation of this Convention deserve special thanks and recognition from the delegates.

Among the persons making such contributions are: Research Staff; Counsels; Sergeants-at-Arms; Messengers; Members of Secretarial Pool; Executive Office Staff; Document Room Staff; Telephone Attendants; Postmasters; Pages; Reading Clerk and the Capitol Police and all others who contributed; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the delegates to the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1967-1968 extend their sincere appreciation to all of these persons who helped in the success of this Convention.

AMENDMENT TO SCALES RESOLUTION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Swope.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Mr. President, I would like to offer yet another amendment to the amended Scales' resolution and include the names of John Scotzin and Carmen Brutto, reporters from our local Harrisburg papers whose keen and perceptive writing have been instrumental in informing the people of our Senatorial District about the progress of this Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure that Delegate Scales will have no objection to that amendment.

Therefore, we will see that the record is amended to include the names just mentioned by Delegate Swope.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gerber. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE GERBER. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE GERBER. I would like to make a request to the Chair, in the spirit of ecumenicalism, that is being expressed here today, I would like to ask permission of the Chair to have certain phrases that I uttered extemporaneously on the floor expunged from the record in the statement I made earlier this week in view of the fact that I do not think those words belong in the final record of the Constitutional Convention of this great Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

I therefore make this request to the Chair and I believe my colleague, Delegate Thomson, would like to comment as well.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Since you have your lawyers there advising you, I have to have these gentlemen here advise me.

DELEGATE GERBER. I specifically refer to certain statements made about two days ago by me with reference to the League of Women Voters.

Pursuant to my request, I direct the attention of the Chief Clerk to page 78, certain words in the record which I have bracketed and on page 79, to have them expunged from the record of the Convention. I make that in a form of a personal request of the Chair.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does the Chair hear any objection to the request made by Delegate Gerber? The Chair hears none. Therefore, we will see that that request appears in the record.

DELEGATE GERBER. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Thomson.

DELEGATE THOMSON. Mr. President, in view of Delegate Gerber's request and the proceeding thereon, at the same session and following Delegate Gerber's remarks at that time, I made somewhat similar remarks that I would now request be removed from the record.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is there any objection to the request just made by Delegate Thomson? The Chair hears none. Therefore, the request will be recognized and will appear in the record.

DELEGATE THOMSON. Thank you.

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are officially at ease.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will the Convention please come to order?

WIVES OF DELEGATES WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want to ask if Mrs. Waldron is back there, the wife of Delegate Waldron. If she is, I would like her to stand. Where is Mrs. Waldron? There she is. I want to give her our cordial greeting. I just want you to know your good husband has been doing a wonderful job.

DELEGATE CARON. I rise to a point of personal privilege. As many of you know Monday night was my 24th wedding anniversary and I realize that it is in the record that I was here, but when I got home, my wife did not believe me. Inasmuch as Mrs. Caron is here today, I would appreciate the body as a whole, substantiating the fact that I was here on the occasion of my wedding anniversary and I would like to introduce my wife, Mrs. Caron.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Where is Mrs. Caron? I see her. Please stand up and we will give you our cordial welcome.

DELEGATE HOOK. Will Delegate Caron stand for interrogation please?

It has been called to my attention that there must be trouble in your household because you have two rooms at the hotel tonight, is this true?

DELEGATE CARON. That is true. Are you hinting?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair has also been made aware that Mrs. Baldwin, the wife of Delegate Baldwin is here. We want you to know we are very happy to have you with us.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Manderino.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. Mr. President, I would like to introduce the wife of one of our charming delegates Franklin Mangery, the real mayor of Belmont, Pennsylvania, Mrs. Nancy Mangery.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let us give her a warm greeting.

WIFE AND FAMILY OF DELEGATE MURRAY WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Mr. President, I would like to take the personal privilege of introducing my wife and family. Mrs. Bridget Murray and my mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Murray, Sr.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will the Murray family please stand? We welcome you.

WIFE AND SON OF DELEGATE SOLOMON AND WIFE OF DELEGATE SHRAGER WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shrager.

DELEGATE SHRAGER. I rise to a point of personal privilege. I want to introduce the wife and son of a very fine delegate, but he is too modest to rise, Delegate Solomon. I wish to welcome his wife Ann and his son Jeremiah.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are very happy to have you with us.

DELEGATE SHRAGER. And I also want to introduce my wife.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are very happy to see you here today, Mrs. Shrager.

WIFE OF DELEGATE LEINBACH WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Leinbach.

DELEGATE LEINBACH. Mr. President, I rise to a point of personal privilege to introduce my wife Ruth. She finally got here.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Where is Mrs. Leinbach? There she is. We are very happy to have you with us.

ANNOUNCEMENTS BY THE CHAIR

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair wishes to announce that we have been in constant contact with the Committee on Style and Drafting, as well the Drafting Bureau for the Convention.

I would like your attention please for just a moment. May I have your attention, fellow delegates, for just one moment?

I am going to ask you if you will please just hold that picture for a second until we finish, because everyone will want to hear what we are doing and why.

The Committee on Style and Drafting and the Drafting Bureau as well as the printers indicate that they cannot have the proposal on the Judiciary Article finished until about 8:00 p.m. this evening.

In view of the fact that we have had a dinner dance scheduled, I have consulted with the Chairman of the Dance, Delegate Waldron, and it was thought that the best plan for tonight would be to come back here at exactly 11:00 o'clock.

I know that this may not fit in with everyone's plan, but the alternative of coming back at 8:00 o'clock seemed not feasible under the circumstances.

Unless the Chair hears objection, I am going to suggest that we recess until 11:00 p.m. I want you to know that it seems that we must consider the Judiciary Article today.

A DELEGATE. What do we do at 11:00 o'clock tonight? Do we receive the report of Style and Drafting and act on it, or does it appear on the calendar?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It will be on the calendar tonight for third consideration and final passage, and I hope at that time, we can put it in the hands of the Committee on Arrangements, Submission and Address to the People. Of course, you have to give some consideration to the Committee on Arrangements, Submission and Address to the People. They have to have a report for us tomorrow morning which we will consider tomorrow, and it is the hope of your presiding officer, that we can close pursuant to our mandate tomorrow afternoon.

If we let this report go over to tomorrow, we run the risk of finding mistakes. We run the risk of amendment and this is a risk that your presiding officer would rather take tonight than tomorrow.

I hope I will have your agreement on that.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Banes.

DELEGATE BANES. Mr. President, does the Chair have any knowledge relative to any proposed amendment to the Judiciary Article?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair does not have any knowledge of any amendment to the Judiciary Article this evening. I want to also add that the Chair has not had too much knowledge of many of the amendments that have been offered.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Jirolanio. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. It seems so many of the delegates have their wives with them and they have arranged a get-together party with everyone concerned. I do believe that it somewhat will interfere with one night of enjoyment and good fellowship.

I wonder whether or not we could not resort to a parliamentary matter in this way. Not adjourning today, but recessing until tomorrow, keeping the day open as of today, and tomorrow, then of course very early at 8:30, come in or 9:00 o'clock come in and get the Proposal No. 7 and study it and then vote it and pass it on third reading and still give it to the Committee to draft it which will be a different day immediately after the proposal passed.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want to say that your suggestion—

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I am only trying to scheme a little time for the boys and girls.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Both the parliamentarian and attorney have pointed out something that we have been considering all day and that is this. We are not faced with any problem on extending today. The only problem we are faced with is getting our work done. It does not require any change of rules or any parliamentary maneuvering whatsoever. It is just a question of getting back here sometime and adopting this proposal which I hope it will be the feeling of the body, and show consideration to the Committee on Arrangements, Submission and Address, so they will have it and so they will be able to work.

I want to say this. The time of the party was considered and I have considered that with Delegate Waldron and let me just say this to you. If this thing is done quickly tonight when we return at 11:00 o'clock, I want you to know that the Chair has no objection to your returning to the party.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. How about a question of the quorum? We may not have a quorum present.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I feel we have a sufficient interest on the part of every delegate here that we want to get this job done pursuant to our mandate and get it done tomorrow on schedule, and I am going to ask now, is there any objection to the suggestion that we do recess until 11:00 o'clock? There is objection.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Butera.

DELEGATE BUTERA. As a practical matter, what is going to take place between 11:00 o'clock tonight and 9:00 o'clock tomorrow, that could not be done between 9:00 o'clock tomorrow and 11:00 o'clock tomorrow?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I wish I could answer you. I have said this and I have seen it happen too. I can only call your attention to Proposal No. 5 and our experience in connection with it.

I cannot guarantee you that we will not have the same experience in connection with Proposal No. 7, except to tell you that I hope and pray that we will not.

I do not think it is good planning to wait until tomorrow to see whether you are going to have such an experience. I would rather suggest that we face it today. The time that Style and Drafting, and I will state it again, they indicate they can have it at 8:00 o'clock this evening.

Let me say to you that I am willing to abide by the wishes and I have always abided by the wishes of this body, and I am willing to come back at the time this body determines, but I also want to urge you to give consideration to the fact that we may have problems and I have heard many of them being expressed up at this Chair today. I do not want to leave a step unturned or an hour wasted. I will feel a lot better and I think you will, if you know we are going to get the job done.

COMMITTEE MEETING

DELEGATE BUCK. The Committee on Arrangements, Submission and Address to the People will meet promptly following the adjournment or recess of this meeting in Room 517 B, which is in the North Office Building. It is very important.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, I have been assured by the rear benches that the rule in "Ludlow fair" will not apply this evening. They will be back at 11:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Do you wish to be recognized, Delegate Tate?

DELEGATE TATE. I have been in and out of the chambers several times and I may have missed what has been said on this subject but I wonder whether there are any portions of the report of the Committee on Arrangments, Submission, and Address to the People which might be considered by this body during the next half hour or hour, and if not, whether there are any portions which we might have to review individually so that we possibly can avoid further delay on this report either tonight or tomorrow.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Your question, of course, I think, has been directed to the Chair but I can only refer you to that Committee for an answer to that.

We have not received a report and, of course, under the rules, they are not required—as a matter of fact, the rules indicate that the report is due after these proposals go in.

Now if you want to know, I have had very many conversations with the co-chairmen of this Committee and I think they are pretty well organized. The plan was that they would have their report ready tomorrow morning.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Forster.

DELEGATE FORSTER. I think I can answer the gentleman's question on behalf of Chairman Nelson because I think he has stepped outside.

Our Committee's work is pretty well done but we do not have sufficient copies reproduced to distribute to all delegates for the primary reason that the reproduction and collating facilities are all tied up on the Judiciary Proposal No. 7 at the moment.

DELEGATE TATE. I understand that there is an approximately 45-page address to the people and if it would be at all possible to have any parts of that, or a draft of that, distributed so that we might read it sometime between now and when it is placed before this body for action, I think it might be helpful so that we do not act hastily and out of ignorance.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I would be very happy if you would consult with the Chairman and if that can be done, I think it would be wonderful that we would expedite it in that way.

Now the Chair recognizes Delegate McGeary.

DELEGATE McGEARY. This may be a completely silly suggestion but are we required by our rules to meet here?

We would save an awful lot of time if we met down there.

I am serious.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I know you are and I think that the act requires at least that we meet in Harrisburg and—I think we would have to take some formal action to change a meeting place. I know you are serious and I am just wondering how serious the deliberation would be.

Now we recognize Delegate Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Thank you, Mr. President.

We had a lot of jokes about the hidden force of the Convention. Possibly the wives of the delegates might become a hidden force tonight. I would like to see if we could amend your suggestion to 1:00 A.M. because we may sit here for two hours waiting for something to do from 11:00 to 1:00. The fair little ladies would rather be holding our hands and having our good fellowship. Could we not move it to 1:00 A.M. and then do it?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me say the Chair will be agreeable to anything.

I just want you to know that we have some delegates that are complaining that 11:00 is too late. I certainly would have no personal objection to any time except that I hope you will stay with me in my thought that we come back here and get this job done.

I ask your support in that.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Bloom.

DELEGATE BLOOM. As a matter of inquiry, Mr. President, will the printer's copy be ready at that time, at 10:30? Is that the assurance you have?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The assurance I have is that it will be ready sometime—I just want you to know that I have no assurance that this will be done, except that they have told me that they thought they would have it done by 11:00 o'clock tonight.

They have indicated that it could possibly be done by 8:00 o'clock. We are giving them this leeway. They are running into difficulties and the difficulties they run into are the changes that are being made by Style and Drafting. They then go to the Legislative Drafting Bureau. They then get typed. Then we have the printers standing by.

DELEGATE BLOOM. I suggest that as soon as you get your printer's copy and know that you are sure of it, that someone ought to appear and make an announcement down at this dance.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. How is that? I think that is the best suggestion I have heard tonight.

DELEGATE BLOOM. Then we could come up here and get our work done and those that want to go back and dance all night can do so.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. I was going to make a similar motion. I move we recess until 11:00 P.M. unless, prior to that time, a messenger brings an anouncement to the Holiday Inn that we are not ready at 11:00 and the new time will be set by the messenger's announcement.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We had a motion made by Delegate Manderino which was seconded by Delegate Baldrige.

All those in favor, please say aye.

Those opposed say no.

The ayes have it.

DELEGATE VAN SANT. Mr. President, I would suggest that we have a legislative procedure which would be very applicable for tonight. We coud run it on a consent calendar.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The parliamentarian has indicated that that is a very good suggestion but is not acceptable.

Now we stand, if I understand the motion, in recess until 11:00 P.M. unless word is received that we will not have the printer's copy ready by that time, and when it is ready after 11:00 P.M., we will come back.

May I say for the benefit of those that are not going to the dance, I personally regret the inconvenience.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Is it possible that if the proposal, itself, is prepared before 11:00 o'clock that it could be distributed as soon as possible and be on the desks, because there may be some delegates who will be here?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It is not only possible, it is the procedure. The moment it comes up it will be put on the desks.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Thank you.

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. As the Chair previously stated, it is now 4:40 and, unless there is objection, we will recess until 11:00 o'clock.

The Chair hears none, and the Convention is now in recess until 11 p.m.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time of recess having expired, the Convention will come to order.

I just want to explain this: The first estimate of the time we would have the proposal was 8:00 o'clock, then it went to 10:00 o'clock, then it went to 12:00 o'clock; now it is up to 1:00 o'clock in the morning. We had a meeting of the officers and some of the people on the committee and it was determined that it would be best for all of us if we came back tomorrow morning at 9:00 o'clock so that we now stand adjourned until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

DELEGATE VAN SANT. Are you recessing until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning or are you adjourning until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning? This is a very important technicality.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Just a minute until I consult with the parliamentarian. I think maybe we can adjourn until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

DELEGATE VAN SANT. You are losing a legislative day.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand we do not have to worry about the legislative day under the rules we have in connection with the consideration of this proposal. That is what Mark Gruell has been advising me. I think we can stick to this.

ADJOURNMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Van Sant for the adjournment motion.

DELEGATE VAN SANT. Mr. President, I move that this Convention do now adjourn until Thursday, February 29, 1968, at 9 a.m., e.s.t.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Van Sant that this Convention do now adjourn until Thursday, February 29, 1968, at 9 a.m., e.s.t.

The motion was agreed to, and (at 11:58 p.m., e.s.t.) the Convention was adjourned.

PENNSYLVANIA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION 1967-1968

JOURNAL

Volume 1 Thursday, February 29, 1968 Number 54

The Convention was called to order at 9:10 a.m., e.s.t.

THE PRESIDENT (Raymond J. Broderick) IN THE CHAIR

PRAYER

REV. GEORGE A. KEMP of St. John's Episcopal Church, York, Pennsylvania, offered the following prayer:

CHAPLAIN KEMP. Let us pray.

All eternal God through Whose almighty power our fathers won their liberties of old, grant us grace that we may maintain these liberties and righteousness and peace. Have mercy upon this whole land. Guide and direct our Governor and all in authority over us. Cast Thy blessings upon all people in every way possible and direct, we pray Thee by Thy Holy Spirit the deliberations of these Thy servants here present.

We have called upon Thee in days past, and Thou hast heard our plea. How precious are Thy councils, oh Lord, how glorious Thy wisdom. As prayers for the guidance have been raised unto Thee each day since this Convention first assembled, so now as these sessions draw to a close, we give Thee humble and hearty thanks for hearing our prayers and favoring us with Thy presence. Bless that which is good, which has been fashioned by the minds, hands and hearts of these Thy servants, and may all that has been begun in Thy name be continued to the glorious fruition. Thou hast prepared for it in all to Thy glory. These things we pray in Thy name and for Thy sake. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag was recited by the Convention, led by Delegate Redick.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes our secretary, Secretary Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, I am not submitting my report in writing this morning because as I was leaving the party last night, some Republican stepped on my fingers.

As to the leaves of absence, Mr. President, with regret and with sorrow for passing friendships, the other delegates have asked me to announce they will not be here after tomorrow. We shall miss you everyone.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you.

I am very happy to announce that we have no requests for leaves today.

QUORUM CALL

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will now call the roll for the purpose of determining a quorum. The delegates will please record their presence by voting "aye."

CALENDAR

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON THIRD CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to the third consideration of Committee Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 32, entitled:

A Proposal repealing article five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania relating to the Judiciary, and adding a new Judiciary article.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

WIFE AND DAUGHTER OF DELEGATE BENFIELD WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. At this time I see we have a delegate wishing to be recognized, Delegate Benfield.

DELEGATE BENFIELD. Mr. President, before we get down to business this morning, I would like very much to have the opportunity to introduce Mrs. Benfield and my daughter, Elaine. I want the Judiciary Committee to pay particular attention to this. I did not buy that wedding ring before. I had it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Where is Mrs. Benfield and Elaine? There they are. We want you to know we are very happy you are with us today. Again, to coin a new expression, your husband has been doing a great job.

WIFE OF DELEGATE GOLDSTEIN WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Goldstein.

DELEGATE GOLDSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise to introduce my wife to the Convention.

Last night we had a wonderful party. There were so many delegates there that I could not introduce my wife. I want to introduce my wife to all the delegates, Mrs. Lena Goldstein.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will Mrs. Goldstein please rise? We are very happy to have you with us. Again, I want you to know we have been very, very happy that Delegate Goldstein has been one of us.

DELEGATE GOLDSTEIN. Mr. President, may I say that as of last night, I will not sell you any more suits. You will have to buy your suits somewhere else.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gray.

DELEGATE GRAY. Mr. President, I want to record the fact that Brother Goldstein came to my church and gave $100 and now I invite Mrs. Goldstein there so I can get another $100.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. So far, you are the only one I know who has made any money out of this Convention.

LEGISLATIVE REPORTERS AND TYPISTS THANKED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Krill.

DELEGATE KRILL. Mr. President, I would like to amend, I do not know whether it is Delegate Scales' or Delegate Hook's amendment thanking the Legislative reporters and typists for the wonderful work and service they have given this Convention. I hope that Delegate Scales and Delegate Hook will agree to that.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Hook?

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, I will accept that amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you, and we will see that is placed on the record.

FAMILY OF DELEGATE TULLY WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Tully.

DELEGATE TULLY. Mr. President, I would like to introduce a very special lady this morning, my mother-in-law, Mrs. Tully, and my son, Richard and my youngest son Todd.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will the Tully family please stand? We are very, very happy to have you with us today.

WIFE OF DELEGATE HUGGINS WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand that Mrs. Joy Huggins is with us, the wife of Delegate Huggins. Would you stand so we can give you our greeting?

We want you to know we certainly have enjoyed having your husband with us.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, I was not here yesterday afternoon for the series of appropriums that we had, except briefly. It is my understanding, at least so I was informed last night, that one gentleman who I think has been responsible as anybody else in the entire City of Harrisburg for the success of this Convention, and particularly with regard to the details that always are forgotten by persons and, for the work he has done for literally three months' time, and in preparation therefor two months before that, and he is responsible for all the various units that were given appropriates yesterday, I want every member of this congregation—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That will cost you money.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I would like every member of this Convention to rise on their feet and applaud as loudly and as long as they can, for the man that just went out the door and this is Mr. John W. Ingram.

(Whereupon there was a standing ovation.)

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. To use a Scranton expression, I could not agree more.

Now, the Chair recognizes Delegate Pott.

DELEGATE POTT. Mr. President, last Friday this Convention passed a very momentous proposal, Proposal No. 6. For some unknown reason I was not reported as voting "aye" for it and I would like it to be on the record that I support it 100 per cent.

WIFE OF DELEGATE CURRAN WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Desmond.

DELEGATE DESMOND. It gives me great pleasure this morning, sir, to announce the presence of the wife and better half of Delegate Curran, Mrs. Mimi Curran.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Please stand. There she is.

As you heard your husband say last night, we are very happy and proud of the good work that Delegate Curran is doing.

HUSBAND OF DELEGATE MICHAEL WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Michael.

DELEGATE MICHAEL. Mr. President, I am very proud to introduce my husband, Dick, who was here before with the children but we spent most of that time in recess so I did not have the chance to introduce him.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Where is Mr. Michael?

We are very happy that you are with us today.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Rappaport. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Because of an unavoidable absence for part of the day, I was not recorded as having voted on Proposal No. 6 regarding Local Government and I wish to have the record reflect that I would have voted "aye" had I been here.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Your remarks will be spread upon the record.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Thomson. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE THOMSON. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE THOMSON. Mr. President, I was a little tardy. May I be marked present?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may. We will see that Delegate Thomson is marked present.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Michener. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE MICHENER. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, yesterday Delegate Scales brought in a very moving and appropriate memorial to the press and you announced the vote as unanimous. I wish it recorded that there was one loud dissent. It was 162 to 1. I have a book coming out shortly and it is an act of honor in my profession that when you are in that position you treat the press with complete contempt, because in a few weeks they will treat you that way.

The rule in our job is that the relationship between the press and the writer should be the same relationship that the press has with the Legislature, the knife to the throat.

This has done writers a great service, because it has kept our profession clean, and I think that that relationship in this Convention has helped us all very much. The press has ridden herd on us. We have been a better Convention because of it and, although I appreciate Delegate Scales' warm tribute to the press, I would like to be recorded as giving them the back of my hand, in the old Irish phrase.

SON OF DELEGATE BRENNAN WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hocker.

DELEGATE HOCKER. Mr. President, it is a real pleasure for me this morning to introduce Thomas Brennan, the son of our good friend, T. Robert Brennan or Delegate Robert Brennan. The boy is in the rear of the hall. He is also a student at Duquesne University.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will Thomas Brennan, Jr., please rise and be recognized?

We are very, very happy to have you with us. I just want you to know that your dad has been one of the great outstanding delegates in this Convention.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Horne. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE HORNE. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE HORNE. Mr. President, on Monday of this week, although I believe it has been expunged from the record, a certain ladies' organization was taken to task. I believe they were defended by a member of that organization. But I think comments must be made.

Incidentally, I am not a member of that organization, though I am a kind of biological monstrosity:

As the head of a girls' school, I am a male headmistress and I do think that I am necessarily aware, as the head of a girls' school, how pointedly women can tell a man what to do, when to do it and how to do it. As a matter of fact, I think I, more than any delegate here, know why the good Lord made women last. I think He made all creative things first, because He did not want any advice while making them. Having said that, I want to make three observations.

One, that we were under pressure here not only by this particular organization of "Lady Birds," but there were other groups, as well. I also want to make this observation for the record, that if it had not been, at least in my area, for the work of that group, I doubt whether the vote would have been as effective as it was.

My final observation is this, if this Convention is to be a success, that success will be determined by the attitude of the voters at the polls in April. I believe that we will need the help of all groups and I would, therefore, as a delegate, like to make my peace with the League of Women Voters.

BARBARA BROWN COMMENDED

DELEGATE HORNE. Mr. President, having voted the staunch support of the resolutions of commendations offered yesterday to the supporting staff of this Convention, I discovered with dismay that one, at least, was overlooked.

I here, then, submit and ask for its immediate adoption a resolution commending Mrs. Barbara Brown, office manager for the Convention, who has done so much for so many. That is my motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think that we can get a unanimous second to your motion, but it has been seconded here by Delegate Bloom.

All those in favor please say aye. Anyone opposed say no.

The record should show the motion was unanimously carried and we will place it in the form of a resolution and see that Mrs. Brown receives a copy.

RESOLUTION

In the Constitutional Convention, March 19, 1968

Mrs. Barbara Brown, Office Manager for the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1967-1968 was one of the major reasons for the smooth administrative work of the Convention.

Her dedication to her work and her thoroughness in carrying out the many tasks required of her were an example to all; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Constitutional Convention of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania expresses its gratitude to Mrs. Barbara Brown for her work as Office Manager of the Convention; and be it further RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to Mrs. Barbara Brown.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Braham. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BRAHAM. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. President, it has always been my custom, as with Mr. Bloom, to rise and speak in defense of my friends when I hear them somewhat traduced.

I want to say a word on behalf of the lawyers of the Convention. The lawyers have the best opportunity for making speeches of anyone. They are like the members of the press, the raw material is right before them. No matter whether the argument is to be on a trial of an hour or a year, the lawyer, at the end, is supposed to stand up and summarize. It is not unlike the story told about the sculptor who is making an effigy of an elephant out of granite. Someone asked him how he did it. He said: "It is very easy. You simply knock off everything that does not look like an elephant." That is the way a lawyer has to speak. Now the particular point of this is, I want to call your attention to something about the program last night. You will go a long time before you hear as much indigenous humor and wit as we heard from these young gentlemen last night, for the most part, lawyers. They spoke of experience in this Convention exclusively. No worn out cliches, no vaudeville tricks. Just commenting on what has happened. I thought it was admirable.

Of course, now, for example, there were some oversights. I would have liked to have heard Delegate O'Donnell, for example, who is one of our wits—we heard him on the defense—I on the offense, because it is my belief that Delegate O'Donnell could be just as offensive as any of these men.

I want to thank you all. I want to thank the people who got up this program last night for one of the memorable nights in my life and I shall always remember it with great pleasure.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I thank Delegate Braham for calling it to our attention. It was one of the most wonderful parties that I have ever attended in my life and those of you who missed it, I just say that you are going to regret missing one of the greatest performances—I would say almost impromptu—and one of the best that I have ever seen. The credit for last night's dinner goes to the Committee, and particularly Ed Waldron, our good delegate, and his assistants, Phil Harding, Ralph Orbin, Roy Miller and Mrs. Tully. They all did a magnificent job and there were so many that participated in the program. I want you to know that we have talent here in this Convention. It was displayed last night and the presiding officer just wants to thank you on behalf of your fellow delegates for the greatest show I have ever seen, believe me.

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE GOLDSTEIN requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, February 29, 1968

The sense of camaraderie that has developed these past few months between all the delegates of this Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1967-1968 should not be allowed to dissipate simply because the Convention ends on the 29th of February.

Though we travel separate and diverse paths these next few days, the flame of this spirit can be kept alive if each year on the 28th of February (on the 29th of February, when possible), the delegates gather together at one location in the Commonwealth to commemorate the anniversaries of this Convention; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Constitutional Convention of 1967-1968 meet each year to celebrate their labors.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Forster. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE FORSTER. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE FORSTER. I ask that the record show that Delegate Jirolanio as well as myself are in attendance this morning.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The record will show your presence.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Caron. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE CARON. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If you will yield a second, I am going to ask Chairman Pelletier to please take the microphone, because I am going to recognize either Chairman Pelletier or Chairman Johnson next to give their report on Proposal No. 7, because we must go to work.

DELEGATE CARON. In view of your remarks, I will make mine very brief.

I have been informed by the corporation by which I have been employed that now that I have spent three months up here, I might just as well look for a job somewhere else, and I decided that the best change of occupation would be to become an agent.

After reviewing the talents that I saw last night, I would like to offer my services as an agent to the 1969 dinner party, and I would like to advise that I will serve for 20 per cent commission, not 10 per cent like most people. I would like to ask the Chair to suggest to all of us that, perhaps, the present group which are thinking about it will accept my services as an agent and reinstitute a program for 1969 as a renewal to see what the voters do to us.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you, Delegate Caron. We will have to negotiate with you on your fee, but I am sure we can use your services.

COUNSEL AND STAFF FOR COMMITTEE COMMENDED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will recognize Chairman Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, before I present the final proposal which will come before this Convention, I would like to make the following motion:

The Committee on Style and Drafting wishes to acknowledge and commend the able and unique contributions of Mr. William Hackney and Mr. Andrew Farley, counsel for the committee. Without their industry and willingness to respond to all emergencies with energy and an unusual order of professional competence, the committee would have been unable to meet what has proved to be an almost impossible schedule.

Our sympathies go to Mr. Hackney whose mother passed away this last weekend and who hastened to return to be of assistance to the committee at a time when he was under severe strain from a loss which all of us understand and appreciate.

Mr. Andrew Farley has been steadily at work for the committee for the last 39 hours with only a three-hour break. This kind of demand should not be made on anyone, not even by a Constitutional Convention. We of the Style and Drafting Committee cannot adequately express our appreciation to Mr. Farley.

We would also acknowledge the invaluable assistance of Mr. Carter Buller and Mr. Arthur Frankston of the staff of the Judiciary Committee. They worked with us through the night and through yesterday so that this proposal could be before you.

We move that this Convention express its appreciation to these men for their services which go beyond what can be reasonably expected of any men.

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE PELLETIER requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 29, 1968.

Many of the essential operations of the Convention were not observed directly by the delegates and would normally go unnoticed. Yet, had it not been for the fine and competent staff of the Convention Drafting Bureau in preparing the many proposals, amendments, amendments to amendments, revisions and revisions to revisions, our deliberations could not have been so expeditiously processed.

Each of the following members of the Convention Drafting Bureau are to be congratulated for their individual contribution to the success of the Convention: Frank Garber, Esquire; Anthony Gianforti, Esquire; Milton Weisman, Esquire; John Rehr, Esquire; Robert A. Weinert, Esquire; John Hartman, Esquire; Robert L. Cable, Esquire; Robert Spitzer, Esquire; Joe Hill; Alice P. Drayer; Dorothy Barnes; Mary Kaminski; Alice Ogden; Cecile N. Norton; Carol L. Elser; Lillian E. Roberts; Dorothy Jacoby; Dorothy Martin; Ellen Woods; Dorothy Volas and Kathy Crane; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1967-1968 express its gratitude to the staff of the Convention Drafting Bureau; and be it further

RESOLVED, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to each of the above-named members of the staff.

CORRECTIONS TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair again recognizes Delegate Pelletier in connection with the report on Proposal No. 7.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. I would, Mr. President, on behalf of the Committee on Style and Drafting, present to you Committee Proposal No. 7. This is on the final order of business on the various committee proposals that have been brought before us.

The Committee on Style and Drafting worked with the co-chairmen of the Committee for the Judiciary, Governor Scranton, Delegate Amsterdam, and very early a decision was made that no changes should be made between the schedule and the body of the article, and I think this decision has been followed. We have tried not to make any substantive changes, and those changes which have been made have been made with the concurrence of Governor Scranton and Delegate Amsterdam. Necessarily working under pressure, some items were missed, and I would like to call to your attention a sheet of corrections which you should have at your desk.

If you have them, we will turn to the Committee Proposal, and I will call the corrections to your attention:

STYLE AND DRAFTING

Corrections in Proposal as Introduced

Proposal No. 7—Marked Copy

Page 3, line 4—1st word: substitute "was" for "were".
Page 3, line 18—change comma to period after "court".
Page 3, line 20—change "if" to "in the event".
Page 4, line 17—insert comma after "justices of the peace".

Page 7, line 5—change the second "of" to "or".
Page 7, line 15—change the word "A" to "an initial".
Page 7, line 18—change "Subsection (b)" to "Section 13 (b)" and insert "either" after "apply".
Page 7, line 20—change the semicolon to a comma, strike

"nor shall such provisions apply" and insert "or" in place thereof.

Page 7, line 21—insert "for retention election" after "declaration".

Page 7, line 22—insert period after "Section 15 (b)" and strike "or".

Page 7, line 23—change "Subsection (b)" to "Section 13 (b)", strike "which vacancies" and substitute "the vacancy".

Page 7, line 24—change "Subsection (a)" to "Section 13 (a)".

Page 8, line 20—change "section 13 (b)" to "Section 13 (d)"

Page 9, line 18—change "not" to "or".

Page 9, line 23—Delete "who has been" after "judge"; delete "or who has been" after "elected"; and substitute "under section 13 (a),".

Page 9, line 24—change "Section 13 (b)" to "Section 13 (d)".; and after "Section 13 (d)" insert "or retained under this Section 15 (b)".

Page 10, line 2—insert "under Section 13 (a)" after "election".

Page 10, line 3—change "Section 13 (b)" to "Section 13 (d)" and immediately thereafter add "if applicable".

Page 10, lines 10 and 11—strike "as provided herein" and insert "under Section 13 (b) or under Section 13 (d) if applicable".

Page 11, line 16—after "duties," insert "and".

Now, you also have, I think, a clean Section 13 (c), which has been distributed to you, and I am advised that the following changes are to be made in the clean copy so that it will read as set forth in the marked copy.

It is my understanding that there are also two amendments or two suggested changes which, if the approval of the Convention is given, will be added to this article to fill in a couple of gaps, and they will come from members. I think one is coming from Judge Woodside and the other is coming from, I think, Delegate Amsterdam, and they will be before you very shortly.

Let me say that this proposal I have brought before you is a baby which has gone through severe trials on being born. As a matter of fact, as I watched it before the Judiciary Committee it seemed to me that it became a high forceps case. Then it almost died with the verbiage created by discussion on the floor, and it is now again before you. I hope it does not start to cry too lustily this morning. I recall, I think, an admonition of Justice Cook, who, as you remember, carried on the battle with King James, and some place I think he said that matters of the law should not be profaned by the tongue of the layman. So that in discussing the details of this article, the Committee would like to call on the members of the legal profession to carry on this discussion, if questions are raised.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair wishes to state that we are on Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 32.

The question before the Convention is, will the Convention agree to advance this Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 32, to final passage, and as has been the custom, I point out at this time that this is the last opportunity to amend this proposal. Before any amendment may be received, for consideration, the delegate must obtain the consent of a majority of the delegates present.

I now recognize Delegate Huggins.

DELEGATE HUGGINS. Mr. President, I think there is an error in the clean copy on page 5 in Section 12 (b).

It reads, "Judges of the traffic court and justices of the peace in the City of Philadelphia shall be members of the bar."

I believe, Mr. President, in the original copy this meant that judges of the traffic court and justices of the peace throughout the Commonwealth, and the way it is written here it is saying that it is only in the City of Philadelphia. I think this is not correct.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want to call at this time on Chairman Pelletier and ask him if he will reply to that observation.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. I would like to ask Delegate Shapiro if he would reply to that.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. The clean copy, I believe, varies from the text as prepared on page 6. It is a transposition in the clean copy which does not correspond to Printer's No. 32 at page 6.

DELEGATE WILMARTH. Mr. President, there are some of us without a clean copy of No. 32, and we seem to be unable to get any.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Wilmarth, the one I have has a clean copy attached, but we will see that you get one.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I think you will find the clean copy in the back of Printer's No. 32.

DELEGATE WILMARTH. Printer's No. 32 seems to be hit and miss around here.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will see if we cannot get you a clean copy immediately.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, which one prevails, the back copy or the clean copy? I think it is right in the back copy.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The marked copy is the official copy, but I think the delegates should make the correction in their copies.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. All right. Then it should be changed to conform to the clean copy as it is in the back copy.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Is that now clear to everybody?

On page 5 of the clean copy, on line 2, it should read to conform with the marked copy, Subsection (b) "Judges of the traffic court in the City of Philadelphia and justices of the peace shall be members of the bar."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me ask Delegate Wilmarth, have you obtained your copy as yet? Do you have a clean copy back there?

DELEGATE SOLOMON. We do not have them yet.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We printed a limited number of these for the reason that these corrections were anticipated, and we are going to have, of course, corrected copies, but they will not be ready for many, many hours. We do not want to hold up any proceedings waiting for corrected copies, and we would appreciate it if you would work with this now. I want to make sure, however, that all the delegates have both the clean and the corrected copy in their possession. Frankly, there were 200 of them printed which we thought would be ample for the 163 delegates. If anyone has an extra one or two copies, please pass one back to Delegate Solomon, because I do not want those people out there in deep center field to be neglected on the last day.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. I move you that we advance Proposal No. 7, Printer's Nos. 32, 31, 30, 29, 28 and 27 to final consideration.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sorry, Delegate Solomon, but I have to say that Delegate Jirolanio had the floor and I asked him to yield when we were carrying on this administrative discussion. I will recognize you but I will have to first recognize my friend over here, Delegate Jirolanio.

RECESS

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, the proposal we have before us is of extreme importance. Many of us have just seen it before us now for the first time in its entirety. I believe that because of the importance of this proposal to the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania a recess should be called for about a half hour until the members of this Convention can look over the proposal thoroughly and come back and recommend if there are any changes, before we advance the proposal in question and pass it to third reading. It is important for everybody to know what we have. We cannot get a proposal like this and be asked to pass it right away.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hook.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, I would like to second Delegate Jirolanio's motion and ask that we return here at 10:30 this morning in order that we may have ample time to sit down and read this over.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Unless the Chair hears objection, we will be in recess until exactly 10:30 a.m., because we do have a big day. The purpose of this recess is to study, read and consider Proposal No. 7 in the anticipation of it being advanced to final passage.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time for recess having expired, the Convention will now come to order.

The Chair recognizes Chairman Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, I believe Judge Woodside has an amendment which he would like to offer, which fills in an omission which must be taken care of.

MOTION FOR CONSENT TO OFFER AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Woodside.

I want to state again, before we hear from Delegate Woodside, that in order to receive an amendment the delegate must obtain the consent of the majority of the delegates present.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, I am going to ask permission of the delegation to present an amendment to the proposal which involves a matter which I am sure was overlooked. It was brought to the attention of the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee and the Chairman of Style and Drafting and several others who have been dealing with the subject, and they all agree that the correction should be made. In order that you may understand what the amendment does and why it is necessary, I merely state that we have provided in the proposal that all judges shall hereafter be elected at the municipal election in an odd numbered year. Every judge in the Commonwealth has already been elected in an odd numbered year with the exception of a few judges on the Supreme Court and several on the Superior Court.

The judges on the Supreme Court who have been elected in an even numbered year will serve out their 21-year term, at which time they will all be over 70 years of age and will not be eligible for reelection so they are not affected. Neither are any of the judges of the common pleas and orphans' court, because all of them have always been elected at a municipal election. But, providing that a judge shall serve for a term of 10 years and then providing that his vacancy shall be filled in a municipal election, produces an inconsistency whereby the term ends on an even numbered year and, of course, it would continue on that way forever, so you must do something about correcting that provision.

Therefore, I am asking permission to present an amendment which amends the schedule in Section 2, page 16, line 19, by inserting after "court," the following, in the section dealing with the Superior Court and the Superior Court alone. "The present terms of all judges of the Superior Court which would otherwise expire on the first Monday of January in an odd-numbered year shall be extended to expire in the even-numbered year next following."

Mr. President, I do not consided it a personal matter and nobody to whom I have talked considers it so and I am therefore asking permission to introduce the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question before the Convention is, will the Convention agree to receive this amendment to Proposal No. 7 by Delegate Woodside? You have already received a copy of the amendment. Is there to be any discussion or debate in connection with it, or are you ready for the question?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Shapiro has asked for recognition, and the Chair now recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. President, I ask Judge Woodside whether he has considered the provisions of Article 3, Section 27, and would he want to make some minor change here to cover that situation? Article 3, Section 27, provides that no law shall extend the term of any public officer after his election or appointment. It would seem to me that he might want to specifically refer to that in his amendment.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, we could not do it by statute. I feel confident we can do that by constitutional amendment in a situation such as this.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I am not questioning on whether we can do it. I wonder if you want to change the wording of the amendment in order to make it clear it is intended to do that.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, I do not think it is necessary on that particular point.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May I ask, are we ready for the question? Does anyone wish to debate?

The question is, will the Convention agree to receive an amendment to Proposal No. 7 from Delegate Woodside?

Unless I hear objection, I will unlock the voting machine. We will unlock the voting machine and proceed to vote. All those voting "aye" will vote to receive the amendment of Delegate Woodside. Those voting "nay" will vote to reject it. I want to remind the delegates that they are not now voting for or against the amendment. They are voting for the consent.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

WOODSIDE AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Woodside.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule, Sec. 2, page 16, line 19, by inserting after "Court.": The present terms of all judges of the Superior Court which would otherwise expire on the first Monday of January in an odd-numbered year shall be extended to expire in the even-numbered year next following.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the Woodside amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Woodside and fellow delegates, the question now before the House is, will the Convention agree to the amendment now being presented by Delegate Woodside?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, I assumed all I needed to do here was offer the amendment at this time and ask that it be adopted.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. At this stage, does anyone wish to discuss the amendment pro or con?

Delegate Hook, did you wish to be recognized?

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, I ask Delegate Amsterdam whether his Committee considered this language?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, perhaps the gentleman better bring me up on the language he is talking about.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, this is the amendment as offered by Judge Woodside to the committee proposal.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, we considered it at some length. When I say the committee, the committee considered it a half dozen different times and it has since been considered in various groups, so it has been before us continuously. This cures an inconsistency, because there was a provision in Article 5 which a number of people, including general counsel for the convention, felt to be inconsistent. This cures the inconsistency and still makes very clear the Legislature shall continue.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will Delegate Amsterdam yield? I think we are talking about the amendment in connection with the terms of the judges in the Superior Court.

The Chair recognizes Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, the committee did not get into this matter at all. Judge Woodside found out about it last night and asked us about it last night and a number of us said that we thought it was the right thing to do, because otherwise somebody would have to determine what the Superior Court members and those being elected this year would do about their terms. We have not had a committee meeting, if that is what you are talking about.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, is it the Delegate's opinion that this matter should be approved by the delegate body?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Yes, Mr. President, everybody in the committee agrees, but there has not been a committee meeting.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are ready for the question. We will unlock the voting machine and all those voting "yea" will vote in favor of the Woodside amendment and those voting "nay" will vote to reject it.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the Woodside amendment?

MOTION FOR CONSENT TO OFFER SECOND WOODSIDE AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, I believe Judge Woodside has another amendment to offer.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, this amendment was not my suggestion but came from the staff, feeling there was an inconsistency on page 5, line 4, section 10(c). It was suggested by them that we might on page 5, line 4, strike the word "alter"; and insert "affect the right of the General Assembly to determine" and it goes on to read "the jurisdiction of any court or justice of the peace, nor suspend nor alter any statute of limitation or repose." There was a feeling of the staff that there may be some inconsistency in some of the language that is contained in sub-Section (c) of Section 10 before this point. It was the intent of the committee and the rest of us, I think, that the General Assembly should have the right to determine jurisdiction and, in order to clarify that matter, it was felt that this language should be put into it and this is the language that was finally agreed upon by those who were examining and dealing with it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question before the Convention at this time is, will the Convention agree to receive an amendment to Proposal No. 7 from Delegate Woodside? A copy of the amendment, I believe, you received, is that correct? Everyone has copies.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, since there does not seem to be any objection to this motion, I will move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will now unlock the voting machine. All those giving their consent will vote "yea," those who are opposed may vote "nay."

MOTION FOR CONSENT TO OFFER AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell who wishes to ask consent of this body to present an amendment.

The question is, will the Convention agree to receive an amendment to Proposal No. 7 from Delegate O'Donnell?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, first, on a matter of personal privilege, I wish to thank Judge Braham for his kind remarks earlier today. They reminded me of something which confronted me when I arrived here today. One of our delegates told me he defended me in an argument last night. He said that a fellow delegate claimed that I was not fit to throw to the dogs and he said I was. In any event, Judge Braham, when he made his observation, pointed out to me that he had overlooked a quotation from Lord Byron which he had intended to make and place on the record and he having overlooked it, I will place it on the record. And this is Lord Byron as quoted by Judge Braham: "This is as fine a group of men as ever cut a throat or scuttled a ship."

The amendment being offered here for which consent of this body is asked is merely correctional and one which arose in the course of the Style and Drafting Committee's activities and is simply intended to make certain that there is no conflict in Article 5 here proposed with the other articles of the Pennsylvania Constitution which are not within the call of the Convention. The appointive power of the Governor in judicial officers is with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the members elected to the Senate. In the printing the words "the members elected to" were inadvertently overlooked and we are merely correcting that deficiency.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question again before us, will we agree to receive this amendment from Delegate O'Donnell?

Does anyone wish to be heard, pro or con? If not, we will put the question.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Barron.

DELEGATE BARRON. I respectfully request that the members of this delegate body look carefully at the alleged correction. If my reading of the present printer's number is correct, I do not find any such error or omission from this copy or prior copies. I find no reference to members elected.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I did not mean to suggest that this has been deleted from other copies. I merely say that the purpose of this is to make certain that the present Article 5 agrees with the rest of the Constitution of Pennsylvania. That is all. That is the only oversight to which I referred.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Rappaport.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Mr. President, I would like to ask Delegate O'Donnell a question, if I may.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Mr. President, I do this with some trepidation. When you say "elective," do you mean someone who has received an official certificate of election and has been sworn in? I am concerned about the problem of York County.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I am merely repeating the precise words which are now in the Pennsylvania Constitution. That is all. I am not trying to interpret them. I am merely trying to be certain that Article 5, as here proposed, does not conflict with the appointive powers of the Governor as detailed in the Executive article of the Constitution and that is all.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Mr. President, in other words, this language would not interfere with the ruling made by our president at another place that "elective" means someone who has received a certificate of election, is that correct?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, the interpretation placed on this will be the identical interpretation placed on every other executive appointment, whatever that interpretation happens to be.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. I thank the gentleman.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Manderino.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. Mr. President, was there not at some point an opinion expressed by counsel on this matter and something inserted? Maybe it was at this point or some other point on this very issue. Is my recollection at fault here?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May I ask the Chairmen of the Judiciary Committee, Chairman Amsterdam or Chairman Scranton, if they know of any opinion in connection with this matter?

DELEGATE MANDERINO. Mr. President, I was speaking on the floor of the Convention, it seems to me the point came up and there was a recommendation by Convention counsel to insert some words. The same point had been discussed. I do not recall whether it occurred, or not.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May I ask the counsel to the Convention if he would step up here one second.

Counsel says that you are correct in your recollection. An opinion was given that two-thirds of the Senate did not mean the same as two-thirds of the members elected to the Senate.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Mr. President, what does that mean? I would like to ask, what does that mean in the context of your ruling at another place?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Rappaport, I do not think it would be applicable here. I will be glad to have the counsel for the Judiciary Committee and counsel for the Convention state an opinion to the committee which they can announce to you.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Mr. President, the point I am trying to make is, does this language put into the Constitution the substance of your ruling, or does it, in fact, change your ruling?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I hate to disillusion Delegate Rappaport, but it was not the Chair that made any ruling in this connection. It was the body, that ruled because it was a Constitutional question. The Chair did not, personally, make a ruling. I will be glad, in this instance, to have counsel for the Convention and counsel for the committee give an opinion as to what the meaning is of these words.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Mr. President, could we have that opinion before we are asked to vote?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, indeed.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Thank you, Mr. President.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. Mr. President, in the meantime, I would like to speak in favor of the amendment inasmuch as if two-thirds of the Senate does not mean a constitutional two-thirds of those elected, it would apparently mean two-thirds of those present and voting, and I do not think that was the intent at any time.

That would mean that a simple majority really of the total membership elected could approve this, and I think the two-thirds, when it was being discussed, was two-thirds of the members elected. The amendment would make that clearer, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Manderino, I believe your statement is in conformity to the opinion that counsel will give. We will wait.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Would the question be in order?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question would be in order just as soon as the opinion is announced. This should not take any time, because we are waiting for either Chairman Scranton or Chairman Amsterdam to state the opinion.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. We are in our last moments and certainly there is little there now that is not irretrievable. They say a perfectionist is one who does a great deal of things and one who takes infinite pains. Now, the book says he also gives them to everyone else. We would like to move along. We urge you to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I certainly agree with the delegate and I share his desire to move promptly, but I again ask, have counsel for the Convention and counsel for the committee been able to give an opinion to the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee?

CLARENCE WOOD WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Reynolds.

DELEGATE REYNOLDS. I have a guest here I want to introduce while we are waiting. He is a young man just returned from the armed forces in Germany and he is my foster son. My wife and I raised him from a kid. He wants to be introduced, he has been telling me he disagrees with the press. He feels that we have done a good job here. I would like you to meet Clarence Wood, who is now a patient in the hospital after having been discharged.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are very happy to have you with us. I might add we are looking for more supporters like you.

DELEGATE REYNOLDS. Thank you very much.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair inquires again, do we have an opinion for the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee?

The Chair now recognizes Chairman Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. We have conferred with counsel for the Convention and counsel for the committee, and they confirmed the fact that the language which is suggested by Delegate O'Donnell is consistent with the other portions of the Constitution and consistent with the changes which we made from time to time, some of which have now disappeared from Article 5 as we have set it up, and that is to provide for two-thirds of those elected to the Senate; which I understand is what Delegate O'Donnell is suggesting at this time. This would be entirely consistent with the balance of the Constitution.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone wish to be heard pro or con?

We are ready for the question.

The question is, will the Convention agree to receive this amendment, and we will now unlock the voting machine.

All those voting "yea" will vote to accept the amendment from Delegate O'Donnell, those voting "nay" will refuse the consent.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

MOTION TO INSERT CHANGES

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Chairman Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, Delegate Thornburgh has two more suggested changes.

DELEGATE THORNBURGH. Thank you, Chairman Pelletier.

Mr. President, I have waited long and hard through two months to have a chance to make some constructive contribution to the Judiciary Article. Last night I conferred with the moguls of the Bar Association, and they instructed me that the first thing this morning I was to attempt to do was to slide something past you, so here goes. I want all the lawyers to consider this very carefully and be able to catch the nuances of these changes that I am proposing.

On page 8, line 24, we are going to change, if we can slide it past you, "election" to "selection."

Now, watch this one as well. Now you see it, now you do not. On page 30, line 30, change "20" to "11."

These are, in fact, purely errors of transcribing, and I would move that they be accepted as typographical errors.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would you repeat that last change, please, Delegate Thornburgh?

DELEGATE THORNBURGH. On page 30, line 30, the number "20" should be changed to "11."

It was a matter of getting, in the heat of battle, the section numbers in the schedule to jibe with the section numbers in the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, you have had changes suggested to you or recommended by the committee, first by Chairman Pelletier and the last two by Delegate Thornburgh.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Mr. President, may I move the suggested changes by the Committee on Style and Drafting, and ask that they be approved now by the Convention?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Unless we hear objection, we will assume that—

DELEGATE PELLETIER. As an equal proponent of the Bar Association's programs advanced before the Convention, and as an equal ally of Delegate Thornburgh's, I concur completely with the advancement of those suggestions.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone object?

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. If we may accept this as an act of regeneration of Delegate Thornburgh and his particular group, I move the question.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
It was agreed to.

MOTION FOR CONSENT TO OFFER AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand we have one more amendment which is in the process of being prepared.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Delegate Amsterdam is ready to present the final amendment, I believe.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Hope springs eternal. The amendment, sir, is being duplicated at the moment. May we have a recess for about two minutes?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Mr. President, I have no amendment. I have some interrogation of Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I will be glad to stand for interrogation. By that time it may be that the papers will be ready.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Aberman for interrogation.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Mr. President, in the hopes of not requiring an amendment, I would ask that the co-chairman of the Judiciary Committee submit to an interrogation, and I think we can avoid the necessity for an amendment.

I refer the gentleman to page 24 of the clean copy to the Judiciary Article, starting on line 19, which would be sub-Section (y).

I would like to address a few questions to you relating to this particular section of the schedule. I refer first to that portion which reads "The offices of the prothonotary and register of wills in the City of Philadelphia shall no longer be considered constitutional offices under this article, . . ."

Was it the intention of this Committee to reverse that portion of the reasoning contained in the case of Lenox vs. Clark as found in 372 Pa. 355 at pages 370 and 371?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, the only effect, and then I hope this will answer your question, intended was that the constitutional protection which had been heretofore given to those positions of the register of wills and the prothonotary in the City of Philadelphia would no longer be continued because of the fact that Article 5, as it heretofore existed, was to be eliminated entirely.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Mr. President, agreeing with that, it was the further intention of the committee to prevent any possible conflict with the provisions of this schedule, and the Local Government proposal, which is known in our minutes as Proposal No. 6, which has already been passed to the Arrangement and Submission Committee, and he would agree there is no intent in this schedule to conflict with that particular one?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, none whatsoever.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I would ask if he would agree Mr. President, that the evidence of this consistency might be found in the words continuing immediately thereafter that their powers and function shall continue as of the present.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. That is correct, Mr. President.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. And I further ask you, then, that the consideration of the method of their election is being deemed to be continued under Article 9, as is repeated in that Local Government proposal.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. That is correct, Mr. President.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Although the word "but" is used to introduce this, it was not intended by that word "but" to deem any possible negation of the Local Government proposal?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. No, it certainly was not.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Further, by the use of the word "until" it was clearly understood that the existing condition appertaining to the Home Rule Charter of Philadelphia would be continued until some point in the future?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. That is correct.

I believe the colloquy between one or two of the delegates at the time the language was included at the end of (y) would indicate that, also.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I would now refer to the language which you just had reference to which I would like to place upon the record, because we have all agreed at this point that there are two meanings which are susceptible from the words "by a referendum in the manner provided by law."

We are agreed, I would assume, that the present state of the law is continued, by the "present state of the law" I would mean that an act of the General Assembly which would provide a referendum would remain a possibility, as it now is a possibility.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I am not sure that that is so. My understanding was that where we provided for a referendum, in the manner provided by law, I had asked Delegate Cortese whether he, in his amendment, had intended that in order to make a change it would be necessary to use the portions of the Philadelphia Home Rule Charter which provided for the amendment of that charter, and that would, in turn, require an ordinance of the City Council followed by a referendum in the City of Philadelphia.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. I quite agree; and that was the second part of my interrogation.

I will refer to the existing provisions of the Home Rule enabling legislation, I should say enabling the constitutional article, as found in our reenacted local government proposal, which provides that the General Assembly shall have the means creating the amendments relating to election and appointment.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Right.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. That is the existing state of the law?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. That is correct, Mr. President.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Therefore, these words do contain the existing state of the law on that portion?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Yes, they certainly do.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. If at some point in the future, and I would hope that the Commonwealth would adopt the local government article, we know that there is contained in the local government article a reference to a referendum and a reference to initiative by the local home rule unit; we have adopted that proposal heretofore.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Yes, sir.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Therefore, an additional meaning will arise upon the adoption of the local government article by the people, which would provide for an initiative either by the City Council of Philadelphia or the electorate of the City of Philadelphia in the manner provided within the local government article?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. That is right, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Shoemaker.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I would like, Mr. President, to clear up Section 10 (b), and I would request permission to interrogate Delegate Amsterdam.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Chairman Amsterdam, I am sure, will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Chairman Amsterdam, referring you to Section 10, sub-Section (b), the language there refers to the Supreme Court appointing a court administrator and subordinate administrators and staff as may be necessary and proper for the prompt and proper disposition of the business of all courts and justices of the peace.

I would ask for the record, so that this might not be misconstrued, whether or not under that section the Supreme Court could, for instance, appoint a clerk, to a justice of the peace, or a commissioner, or a similar officer, who would act in the office of the justice of the peace for the purpose of conducting the business of that office?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. It certainly could. It puts it within the control and administration of the Supreme Court.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Would that also mean that the staff of the court of common pleas in the administration of the court of common pleas in the county court could be appointed directly by the Supreme Court?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. If the rules of the Supreme Court so provided, there would be no question about it.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. In other words, the entire staff of officers, commissioners, clerks, and all other officers, not elected under other provisions of the law, could be appointed directly by the Supreme Court?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Either directly by the Supreme Court or in accordance with the rules set up by the Supreme Court for the proper administration of the court system, yes, sir.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Hook, did you wish to be recognized?

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, yes, I do. I have one or two questions for Delegate Pelletier, and also one or two questions for Delegate Amsterdam.

I would like to ask Delegate Pelletier, first, two or three questions on interrogation.

Doctor, on Printer's No. 32, on the first page, on line 11, you have made a certain change that has given some doubt to a group of us who met during the recess. You have taken the language "justice of the peace and such other courts as may be provided by law" and you have changed this language and have used and "such other courts as may be provided by law and justices of the peace." You have reversed this, and we feel that this may create a problem. I have some doubt about it. Why did the Style and Drafting Committee make this change?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. I indicated in the beginning that in the area of law the layman should proceed with caution. As I understand the reason for making this change, and the attorneys on the Committee can check me on this, is that up to "and justices of the peace," one is talking about courts, justices of the peace you are talking about individuals, and the committee felt that one should enumerate courts and then move on to justices of the peace. I do not think there was any intent to change any substance here, but simply in terms of language to keep courts together and then refer to individuals.

DELEGATE HOOK. Delegate Pelletier, in my estimation—I may be out of order here—I feel that the justices of the peace were to be considered as the courts as such part of the unified system, and this is in my mind reversing the intent of the delegate body here, in that the justices of the peace were to be considered a court as such.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. I think you will have to ask one of the attorneys, either Delegate Amsterdam or Governor Scranton about that.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. What was the question?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. The question is on page 1, whether by putting justices of the peace at the end there has been some change there. I suggested that the change was made because by "justices of the peace" we were referring to individuals, and the remainder of the article was referring to courts.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I am in no position to answer it.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, it was considered for the purpose of Style and Drafting that it was desirable to put all the language with regard to the courts in one place and put it first, and then put the justices of the peace at the end of each one of those paragraphs that applies to both courts and justices of the peace. No change of a substantial nature whatsoever was intended, and we are reasonably sure that none was effected. It was purely a change of wording in order to make it consistent and read better throughout the constitutional provision.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Please look through the rest of the provision and you will find that—maybe you can find one with which it is not true—in almost every one we separated out the justices of the peace, because, as you know, under many of the amendments which were approved here on this floor, they did different things with the justices of the peace than they did with the other courts, and we simply wanted to start out that way and carry it all the way through. There is no substantive change at all.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, this is what I wanted stated on the floor of the Convention so that the intent was shown. I believe your amendment is ready, Delegate Amsterdam. I would like to reserve the right to interrogate Delegate Amsterdam after the amendment is distributed.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Thank you very much.

Mr. President, I believe an amendment is now being handed out that has the names of Delegate Amsterdam and Delegate Scranton on it. I wonder whether it has been handed up to the Chair?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, we have that amendment, and are you ready to present it?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. We are, yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Then the question is, will the Convention agree to receive an amendment to Proposal No. 7 from Chairman Amsterdam?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. May I say a word about it, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. The Committee on Style and Drafting on page 11, line 24, struck out three words "which shall be," so that the line which read "Justices of the peace shall be governed by rules or canons which shall be prescribed by the Supreme Court" would read instead "Justices of the peace shall be governed by rules or canons prescribed by the Supreme Court." The change was supposed to be purely a stylistic change.

A number of the "lawyers" were of the opinion that there had been mandated upon the Supreme Court a duty to set up rules and canons by which the justices of the peace would be governed, and they felt that taking those words out might change the mandate so that the Supreme Court would either do so or not do so. This was not consistent with what had been intended and, therefore, after further discussion with the Committee on Style and Drafting, it was decided that those words must be put back in in order to prevent a substantive change, and the first part of this amendment is to put those words back in.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Please proceed. We now have the Amsterdam amendment.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. The second part of the amendment is on an entirely different proposition. We have suggested that Section 16 which is on page 26, line 3, have inserted words "Persons now specially admitted to practice before the county court may be permitted to practice before the family court division of the court of common pleas and the municipal court." This affects Philadelphia only. There are in Philadelphia, a number of practitioners who have been specially admitted to practice before the county court. They are not permitted to practice before any of the other courts and it was feared, since the county court itself is being discontinued, that the right of these persons to practice would be terminated. It is intended simply to be sure that these persons who have practiced in these specialized areas may continue to practice in those areas in the future.

There are relatively few persons that are affected. However, it was felt that they ought not to be singled out and hurt, which may have been the case if this grandfather clause had not been included.

We are recommending that to be done at this time, in order that these people not be unnecessarily hurt.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question before the Convention is, will the Convention agree to receive an amendment from Delegate Amsterdam. The Amsterdam amendment which was just explained and copies of which are on your desks. Is there anyone that wishes to be heard pro or con in connection with the consent? We are ready for the question. Those voting "yea" will vote to grant consent to Delegate Amsterdam to present this amendment, all those voting "nay" will be, in effect, withholding their consent.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Allison. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE ALLISON. I rise for a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE ALLISON. Will you please record my vote as "yea."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes. We will record you as voting "yea."

AMSTERDAM-SCRANTON AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

DELEGATES AMSTERDAM and SCRANTON offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 17), page 11, line 24, by striking out "which shall be" and inserting: which shall be

Amend Schedule, Sec. 16, page 26, line 3, by inserting after "schedule.": Persons now specially admitted to practice before the county court may be permitted to practice before the family court division of the court of common pleas and the municipal court.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT'S WIFE WELCOMED TO CONVENTION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Before recognizing Chairman Amsterdam to speak on his amendment, I would like at this time to say the Chair noticed a little while ago a very beautiful girl who came into the balcony up there and I sent a page up to find out who it was, and it was my wife, Mrs. Broderick.

I just want you to know, it is very nice to have you with us and your husband has been doing a great job.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I am going to do a great job, because my wife might come here some day.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Of course, I just want you to know that she will not believe it because I said it.

You may proceed.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I believe that the explanation that was given at the time we asked for permission to put the amendment in was quite detailed. Unless there are questions, I suggest anyone who has a comment might be given an opportunity to do so, then we can proceed to a vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Laputka.

DELEGATE LAPUTKA. I would like Delegate Amsterdam or any of the lawyers who would reply to my interrogation to give some information regarding the qualifications of those who are allowed to practice before the so-called county court. I have never heard of this before and I would like some information on it.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. The qualifications differ in many instances. Sometimes the qualifications, I suppose, is to be a friend of the members of the court. In any event, these are persons that the court upon application has granted permission to practice before that court and there are no special qualifications set up. There are a very small number of men. I am told that it is in the number of a half dozen and that these men do practice law before those courts, because they have become specialized in the particular things they have been doing. This is, in effect, a family court and these are specialists in certain areas of the family court practice which they have been doing for many years. They are, in effect, lawyers whose practice is limited to a very small area that takes them into this court, and only in the City of Philadelphia.

What we were trying to do, simply, is to not prevent their livelihood from continuing. We are not trying to give them any rights and we are not trying to put additional people in this category. All we want to do is protect those that are already serving in that capacity, so their livelihood will not be destroyed.

DELEGATE LAPUTKA. Did I understand the gentleman to say these members of the bar are lawyers and not lay people?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. No, they are not necessarily members of the bar. These are persons who in some instances have been clerks and who have worked in that court and have acquired a tremendous know-how in the particular area in which they are practicing, and the court has felt that because of their particular knowledge and their ability they should be allowed to practice before them in specialized situations.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Orban.

DELEGATE ORBAN. I would like to interrogate Delegate Amsterdam.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed.

DELEGATE ORBAN. Have these gentlemen taken the bar exam?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. No, they have not.

DELEGATE ORBAN. Does this provision include men who have taken the bar exam and failed it, and then were admitted by your local court?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I would not know whether these were among those persons who have failed to pass the bar exam. I would not know that, sir.

DELEGATE ORBAN. Does the gentleman not think this is giving some special concessions to people who have not gone to law school as over against people who have gone to law school and simply failed the examination by a very small margin?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. It is an exception to the normal situation, there is no question about it. But these are persons who have been doing this for a great number of years with the approval of the court. They have been specially admitted, not by lawyers, but by the judges of this court to practice before this court, and we are simply saying that their livelihood and their right to practice is not to be affected by what we do. We are not trying to set up a category. We are not trying to have any additional persons admitted in that way.

DELEGATE ORBAN. Is it possible for a person of that type to be admitted before the court under the present system?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. It was possible because they were admitted. I think under the new system the Supreme Court may have to rule to prevent this from happening in the future.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fineman.

DELEGATE FINEMAN. I want to say that there are only approximately a half dozen men in the City of Philadelphia who fit into this qualification or category. These are older practitioners who have been practicing before the county court for 25, or 35, or even 40 years, and were admitted on special motion by the court after demonstrating to the court some semblance of qualification, either in the form of having served a clerkship for many years in a practitioner's law office or having gone to law school, but for one reason or another not taken the bar examination, and thus were not qualified to be admitted as an ordinary practitioner is admitted. These are older men practicing for a long period of time. I think it would be unfair to suddenly deprive them of the right to make a living. We have to keep in mind this amendment only qualifies them to practice in the family court division of the common pleas court. They now have the right to practice negligence law in cases involving a sum of not in excess of $5,000, and that is being taken away from them because the family court division does not have jurisdiction over trespass actions.

In a sense, we are curtailing some of their practice, but we are leaving them with some rights to make a living, and I hope this assembly would adopt this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Shrager.

DELEGATE SHRAGER. Will Delegate Amsterdam stand for further interrogation?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. He will. Please proceed.

DELEGATE SHRAGER. In order that this unique privilege cannot possibly be extended to others, would you accept the following phrase:

"Only those persons now specially admitted to practice."

The words "only those" before the word "persons" is what I refer to.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I am wondering whether you are trying to mandate a prohibition against the court in the future if it deems desirable and proper to do so to admit "specially." It would seem to me that your language does that. I wonder whether you want to really put that kind of prohibition on the courts.

DELEGATE SHRAGER. That is exactly what I want to do, because I think Delegate Orban made it crystal clear there are men who have taken the bars and, because they failed by one point, they are not permitted to practice before the family court, while the court would have the right, on motion, to admit persons not learned in the law to practice before them. Also, the intent of this entire body seems to be that we did not want persons who were not learned in the law to be practicing before the courts.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. This matter was brought to our attention by Delegate Fineman. He sees no objection to having the limitation that was suggested, so why do we not put it in, unless someone objects to it.

DELEGATE SHRAGER. Thank you.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I take it they do not, so we will assume it is all right.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Manderino.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. I have no objections to the intent being expressed, but I think, substantively, we may be saying more than we intend to. It would then read, "only those persons now specially admitted to practice before the county court may be permitted to practice before the family court." It could be read to exclude everyone from ever practicing before the family court or the common pleas except those persons. I do not think that is the intent.

DELEGATE SHRAGER. It is not the intent.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. I know, but that is what the words would do. We would be saying only those persons now specially admitted may practice in the family court or in the court of common pleas.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. There is no question about it, and all I was going to suggest was that the language be reset so it can be brought back to us as promptly as possible in order to insure that we have done exactly what we intend.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. May I ask a question of Delegate Amsterdam?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed.

DELEGATE MANDERINO. Mr. President, we have in the Commonwealth, in other counties men who have been admitted specially in the county courts, court of common pleas, etc. Am I correct that in other portions of this Constitution where we now have consolidated, we just have the court of common pleas where we had other courts before, and that there is no intent to affect the rights of attorneys who have been admitted to these other courts now that they are being consolidated into one common pleas court? If they have been admitted locally, they will continue to have all of their rights as attorneys of law in those courts?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. That is correct. The problem only came up in Philadelphia because this court's existence was effectively terminated.

AMENDMENT WITHDRAWN

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May I ask Chairman Amsterdam, who is talking on this amendment now, if the words are going to be changed, as we have several other amendments, can we withdraw this amendment?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. May I withdraw it at this time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Tate.

DELEGATE TATE. I have some questions I would like to ask Delegate Amsterdam which might result in some further word changes. Could I ask a few questions at this point?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May I suggest this:

This amendment will come back and these word changes you could discuss to clarify this language will be rewritten and presented again. We have several other amendments now to take up.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. May I suggest that since this amendment has to be redrafted, anyhow, that the two parts of it be separated? One part of it, the first, is simply inserting words back in which should not have been taken out and it is not new at all, whereas the second part of it is something new and I do not think they ought to be mixed together.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Amsterdam, would you agree to that?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. We will do that, sir.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. In an explanation given to me a few moments ago by Chairman Amsterdam, I was advised—and surprised at the interpretation—and I wanted to see whether or not I might prepare some minor amendment to clear that problem up. I found there is no staff to proceed or prepare an amendment, and I wonder if suddenly it has come to pass that we are not in a position to prepare an amendment here on this floor, but have to go over to the fifth floor of the Capitol to do this.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No. We have had for many, many days now, a complete staff right here to prepare amendments, the staff of the drafting service, as well as the secretaries, and amendments can be prepared right here.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, before we proceed to the consideration of the next amendment, may I ask a question of someone on Style and Drafting or someone from the Judiciary Committee?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will the Chairman of Style and Drafting, Chairman Pelletier, please answer a question of Delegate Kauffman?

Proceed.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. Mr. President, on page 19, line 15, is a provision abolishing the office of justice of the peace, alderman and magistrate, despite the fact that we do have a provision creating the office of justice of the peace in the main part of the article. I wonder if someone would explain to me why there is seemingly, at least, a discrepancy between the article and the schedule.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. I would like to ask Delegate Thornburgh to reply to this question, Mr. President.

DELEGATE THORNBURGH. Mr. President, I think the confusion here is over the fact that we are really talking about two different kinds of justices of the peace.

There are the present justices of the peace, whose offices will, in fact, be abolished, but simultaneously the office of justice of the peace under the new article will be created so that in each magisterial district a justice of the peace will assume office, but the current and larger number of justices of the peace which now hold office will have their respective offices abolished.

They will be eligible under the terms of the new article to seek election as justices of the peace in their magisterial districts, but they will no longer continue. The office they presently hold will no longer continue after the establishment of the new magisterial district at the completion of their terms.

This whole Section 12 on page 19 is, in effect, a grandfather clause for those persons presently serving as aldermen, justices of the peace or magistrates.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I think that makes the record clear and I thank Delegate Thornburgh for the explanation.

MOTION ON CONSENT TO OFFER AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now I believe Delegate Shapiro has an amendment.

The question is, will the Convention agree to receive an amendment from Delegate Shapiro?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. Chairman, this is the caboose on the Jirolanio train.

Delegate Jirolanio has offered an amendment which this body has accepted to specifically refer to the right of trial by jury in criminal matters in a trial de novo on appeal from the community court in Philadelphia.

Two paragraphs further down we deal with civil claims which are first tried in the municipal court of Philadelphia and then given a right to appeal for a trial de novo to a trial division of the court of common pleas.

In view of the fact that we have specifically included the right to trial by jury in criminal matters, if we fail to do so in connection with civil matters, the implication would appear that we did not intend to grant a jury trial. I, therefore, offer this amendment to include the exact same language in the paragraph dealing with civil matters as we have now included in the paragraph dealing with criminal matters.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question before the Convention is, will the Convention agree to receive such an amendment from Delegate Shapiro?

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

SHAPIRO AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Shapiro.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule, Sec. 16, page 25, line 17, by inserting after "de novo": including the right to trial by jury

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Shapiro, you are now recognized, if you wish to make any further statements in connection with your amendment.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. The only further statement I have to make is that every member of the Judiciary Committee and every member of Style and Drafting with whom I had an opportunity to discuss the matter—and Senator Jirolanio himself—have approved the offering of this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Bunting.

DELEGATE BUNTING. Mr. President, may I ask Delegate Shapiro a question?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, sir.

Delegate Shapiro, Delegate Bunting wishes to question you.

DELEGATE BUNTING. Mr. President, I would like to ask Delegate Shapiro if the original intent in both sub-Section (iii) and sub-Section (v) was to have a right of jury trial as it came out of Style and Drafting?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I believe, first, if I may, I think the intention of the Judiciary Committee was clearly to allow a right of trial by jury and the Style and Drafting Committee felt that right did exist as the language was presented. But you have now amended the language and this merely is an amendment to conform one paragraph to another so that there is no implication that in one case the right of trial by jury is intended and in the other case no such right is intended.

DELEGATE BUNTING. Am I correct that we thought we had trial by jury reserved for both instances before the amendment?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. We did think we had that, Mr. President, yes.

DELEGATE BUNTING. Since the amendment has come in, we need the amendment in both places in order to continue trial by jury.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. That is correct.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Bloom.

DELEGATE BLOOM. Mr. President, I would like to ask Delegate Shapiro a few questions.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed.

DELEGATE BLOOM. Does this mean in small claims, where it is brought up from the justice of the peace, as we have in our county, to the court of common pleas that they would be entitled to trial by jury?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. This amendment does not deal with anything except trials de novo on appeal from the municipal court in Philadelphia.

DELEGATE BLOOM. Only in Philadelphia?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. Yes.

DELEGATE BLOOM. I am satisfied as long as it is only in Philadelphia.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Aberman, did you wish to be recognized?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. The copy that is on my desk says "page 25, line 17." I thought we were talking about page 23, line 19.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. I did not say anything about page 23.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. The section relating to Philadelphia commences on page 20.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. You may be looking at the clean copy.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are you now satisfied?

DELEGATE ABERMAN. If he is satisfied.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Woodside?

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, I would like to ask Delegate Shapiro in what cases this would give a right to a trial by jury which is not provided for now in the Bill of Rights, which provides that the trial by jury shall be as heretofore. The "heretofore" is dating back prior to 1776 when we permit, in some cases, a trial by jury down to $8.00.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. So far as I know, this will not give any right to trial by jury in any case that does not now exist except insofar as we might have removed that right of trial by jury by adding language in line 8 of page 25 and neglecting to do so in line 17 of page 25.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hook.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, I would like to interrogate Delegate Shapiro on this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. He will stand for interrogation.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, in Philadelphia is there in use the arbitration system?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. There is.

DELEGATE HOOK. In these particular cases, does the arbitration act of 1836, as Delegate Cortese cited the other day, guarantee the right of trial by jury?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. If you are talking about appeals from arbitration, I would say yes.

DELEGATE HOOK. In this particular amendment you are not referring to these arbitration cases, is this correct?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. That is correct. I am referring only to civil claims originally tried in the municipal court in Philadelphia.

DELEGATE HOOK. Are the majority of the small claims tried by this system in Philadelphia?

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. We do not have this system in Philadelphia at present. We have magistrate courts with jurisdictions only up to $100.

DELEGATE HOOK. This would be an innovation in the present system, then.

DELEGATE SHAPIRO. The municipal court, with jurisdiction up to $500 in civil cases, would be an innovation in Philadelphia.

DELEGATE HOOK. That is all at this time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are we ready for the question?

The question is, will the Convention agree to the amendment being offered by Delegate Shapiro?

The question recurs,

MOTION FOR CONSENT TO RECEIVE AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are ready for the next amendment. The next amendment is one being offered by Delegate Casey. The question is, will the Convention agree to receive an amendment from Delegate Casey?

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Casey for an explanation.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, the purpose of offering this amendment is to make it clear. If the delegates will refer to page 26 of the schedule, beginning at line 28, in the section dealing with the referendum by which a community court can be established in Philadelphia, the purpose of this amendment is to make clear that if the referendum is approved by the people of Philadelphia the community court will then be in effect and the members of that court will derive their tenure from the provisions of sub-Section (z) beginning on line 25 and continuing in the succeeding lines, notwithstanding the fact that sub-Section (v) beginning on line 6 of page 26 gives to the members of the municipal court the right to complete one term and a succeeding term.

This amendment makes it clear and is intended to clarify the point that if a community court is established in Philadelphia the members of the municipal court and the traffic court at that time will be eligible to complete only that term that they are then serving and no succeeding term, and that thereafter the provisions of Article VII with regard to community courts, including the provision that all judges thereof must be learned in the law, will apply to the community court of Philadelphia.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

MOTION FOR CONSENT TO RECEIVE AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. This next amendment is an amendment being offered by Delegate Shoemaker.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Shoemaker and the question is, will the Convention consent to receiving an amendment from Delegate Shoemaker?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, this is a clarification amendment, I think.

I was surprised awhile ago when I asked Delegate Amsterdam the implications of Section 10 (b) and he stated on the record—and I would certainly hope those of you who were involved in county government and the administration of the lower courts will pay attention to this because I think it is very important to you—the explanation that 10 (b) as it is written on page 4 of the proposal would allow the Supreme Court to appoint anyone they wanted to assist in the administration of all levels of court, but was not limited to the administration. It went deeper than that.

I asked could the Supreme Court appoint tipstaffs to the county court judges and the answer was, yes. I asked whether or not that meant they could appoint administrative or judicial officers of justices of the peace such as commissioners, or other type functionaries, and the answer was, yes.

I asked whether or not this meant that they could appoint any and all staff to the common pleas court, and the answer was, yes.

I gathered from that that a stenographer, court reporter or any other person that is hired or appointed by the county court or the JP Court, the whole patronage system for whatever it is worth in the administration of justice, would then fall under the Supreme Court and they can supersede anything else.

This would also mean, of course, I presume, that the county officials would have to pay the bills of this staff.

In other words, if the judge in the local court asked for six tipstaffs and the county commissioners did not want to pay for but one or two, or whatever, they could go back to the Supreme Court and say give me six tipstaffs. The Supreme Court could appoint them and the county commissioners pay the bill.

I do not think this was the intention and I ask to receive permission to debate the amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone else wish to be heard? Are we ready for the question?

The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Would the sponsor consent to be interrogated?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure he would. Proceed with your questions.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Delegate Shoemaker, if I read Proposal No. 7 and your amendment together, Proposal No. 7 now reads that the Supreme Court shall appoint a court administrator and may appoint such subordinate administrators and staff as may be necessary and proper for the prompt and proper disposition of the business of all courts and justices of the peace.

Now, as amended by you, if I am correct, and I would ask you to tell me whether I am correct, it would now read that the Supreme Court shall appoint a court administrator and may appoint such subordinate administrators and staff as may be necessary and proper for the prompt and proper administration of the unified judicial system. Am I correct?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. That is the way it is written, Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. What, then, is the difference between what you are attempting to accomplish and what the committee has recommended?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Delegate O'Donnell, let me first apologize for the haste with which this was prepared. It certainly is not as clear as I would like to make it.

However, the answers that were given to me by Delegate Amsterdam when I inquired into the meaning of Section 10 (b) indicated that the language "proper disposition of the business of all courts and justices of the peace" was broader than the administration of the unified judicial system.

I have no objection and intend that the language that I would supplant here would limit itself to the administration of the judicial system, but would not go into the actual conduct of the inner workings such as court reporters, and tipstaffs, and all the other functionaries that do not directly relate to the general administration of the unified system.

This would be the intention behind my language. Maybe it is not as clear as I would have made it, but that was my intention.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. If I then understand your point, you wanted to bring about a result that would prevent the Supreme Court from involving itself with court officers below that of judge.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. That is correct.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Do you think you have accomplished it in any way whatever?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. If the meaning of my supplanted language is not clear, I would be more than happy to have your suggestion as to how that end might be accomplished. I certainly would accede to your flow of words.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, if I may have the floor for a moment.

This Judiciary Committee, if it agreed on anything, the one thing on which it unanimously agreed was that there is a terrible court backlog situation in many, many areas of Pennsylvania. If the Judiciary Committee agreed on any one item, that one item was that we clearly wanted to see to the prompt and proper disposition of the business of courts. I would protest strongly against that being taken out of this Constitution, because that is precisely what the Judiciary Committee wanted to accomplish more than anything else in the world.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, if I can ask Delegate O'Donnell a question:

Was it the intention of the Judiciary Committee that the court tipstaffs, court reporters, stenographers, and law clerks to judges all be appointed, or permissibly appointed, by the Supreme Court? Was that the Judiciary Committee's intention?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. No. That is not accomplished in this amendment. You may be interested to know that the court reporters and the officers of that character are employees of the various counties or cities wherein they are located. There is not a thing in the entire Judiciary Article which suggests, permits, or even implies that the Supreme Court can involve itself in that kind of business.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Mr. President, in that case, since there is now a clear dispute between Chairman Amsterdam's reply to my interrogation and Delegate O'Donnell's interpretation of this language, I would request from the Chair and counsel a clear interpretation of the meaning of Section 10 (b) so that I would know whether or not it is necessary to amend it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gouger.

DELEGATE GOUGER. May I interrogate Delegate Scranton?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, you may proceed.

DELEGATE GOUGER. Delegate Scranton, in your considered judgment, does this amendment add anything to the resolution or to the proposal as it now stands?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. In my considered judgment, and I do not mean this personally, I think it is a complete waste of time.

DELEGATE GOUGER. Mr. President, time is running on. Do you have any commitments? May I move the question or do you have commitments that would prohibit that?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No. You may move the question. The question has been moved by Delegate Gouger.

Do you wish to be heard on this, Delegate Shoemaker?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I would only like an answer to the inquiry that I directed to the Chair. If the meaning of this is as Delegate O'Donnell stated it, I will withdraw the amendment. If the meaning is as stated by Delegate Amsterdam, then I will not withdraw it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is Delegate Amsterdam here?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Amsterdam, would you please answer Delegate Shoemaker's inquiry?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Yes, sir.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. I asked for a ruling of the Chair to resolve the differences to the questions answered.

I asked Delegate Amsterdam previously, and correct me if I am wrong, Delegate Amsterdam, whether or not the language in Section 10 (b) did not mean that the Supreme Court could appoint tipstaffs to the judges in the county courts. You said, yes, is that still your answer?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. My answer is still, yes. However, I see no reason why counsel should not give the opinion that is requested.

That is my personal judgment, because I believe that in a unified system where the Supreme Court appoints administrators, even though that may be for the business of the court, it may be desirable to set up a proper system for the hiring of people to see that the business is handled expeditiously and, if that is done, it would seem to me, that that is a perfectly proper function of the court.

On the other hand, I see no problems with it. It is something that can be done in any well run organization, and I wonder what Delegate Shoemaker is worrying about. Is he really worried that the Supreme Court is going to come down to his district and hire a secretary? Is he honestly worried about that?

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Delegate Amsterdam, I am certainly concerned about the transfer of powers from the legislative and administrative branches of the government to the judiciary. It does not matter what county I am from and what my politics are, I think we need this clear distinction—

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President—

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. May I finish?

That the codes of the Commonwealth, the law of the Commonwealth, provide that the county is responsible for the paying of bills of these people, and I suggest that if the interpretation, as you make it, is correct, then there is a conflict between this provision and the provisions of existing law.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Counsel to the Convention and counsel to the Judiciary Committee are right there now conferring with Chairman Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, we now have counsel's opinion, and it is that the business of the court means the business of the court and, generally speaking, that means that which the court is set up to do, namely, the judicial business. He is unable, I believe, to rule on whether a particular secretary who is authorized by law to be there may have her job to some degree affected by the administrative powers of the Supreme Court.

Certainly, nobody here has said that the legislative right to set up positions and to continue or discontinue positions is in any way affected by this article, and we certainly never intended that it should be. That question was not asked.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. The question, Delegate Amsterdam, is who controls the appointment power, not setting up the court system, not setting up what jobs are intended for the court, but who fills those jobs, the Supreme Court or the local branch or the justices of the peace?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Delegate Shoemaker, I thought you had indicated that some reply that I made meant that the court rather than the legislature would set up these jobs and might have to find the money to pay for them. That certainly was never intended and, if I gave you any such idea, I want to erase it from your mind immediately.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. Then do I gather from your answer, so that the record is clear and I am satisfied, sir, that what you mean to say is that the court administrative system as defined in 10 (b) means that the job definition, job description, and so forth, would be prescribed by this under 10 (b), but the actual filling of those jobs and the paying for the jobs would come under the laws that now exist in the county or are presently existing in law?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. It never was intended to be changed by what we did, and I have no doubt that the words do not change that.

MOTION WITHDRAWN

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair just wants to say:

Therefore, I understand that under those circumstances

Delegate Shoemaker would be willing to withdraw the motion to amend.

DELEGATE SHOEMAKER. That is quite correct, Mr. President. Under those circumstances, I am pleased to withdraw this, but that was not my prior understanding.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you.

We will consider the motion withdrawn.

The Chair will recognize Delegate Braham.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Mr. President, I believe there is a view that should be considered, and to that end I suggest that there might be a Section 10 (c) (1) to this effect:

The business of the courts of common pleas shall be in charge of those courts administered by the president judge aided by such staff as the court may require and select, subject to the general rules and supervision of the Supreme Court.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are you suggesting that as an amendment?

DELEGATE BRAHAM. Yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Of course, may I say that under our amendment procedure, if you are suggesting one, you can take it up right here with Solicitor Balaban and discuss it with the committee.

DELEGATE BRAHAM. I did not know, I thought it might receive some summary treatment as the preceding one did. If it does not meet with the ideas of some of the delegates of the body, I will not press it at the present time, but this is a matter that was brought up from time to time in the Judicial Article, and I was never satisfied that it was quite thoroughly considered.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gouger.

DELEGATE GOUGER. Mr. President, you have a motion. I move the question. It was contingent only upon Delegate Shoemaker receiving an answer from counsel. He has received it, and I again move you the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Gouger, I just want to point out we have no question before us. The amendment has been withdrawn, and we are in good shape. I do thank you, and I share your desire to move ahead expeditiously.

DELEGATE GOUGER. On behalf of the added nitpickers, thank you.

MOTION TO SUSPEND RULES

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, I am sure that at least three learned volumes will be prepared by the members of this Convention six or seven years terminating our business here today for amendments to the Judiciary Article. I would wish to test the sense of this Convention by proposing to amend the rules and stating to the Chair that we would like to have Proposal No. 7 moved to the third reading, the change of the rule being that we be permitted to move it to the third reading without having this matter go to Style and Drafting. We would save four and five hours. I think we have had enough. I think all things must come to an end. We have had about twelve days of amendments to the Judicial Article. I really appeal to you. We are not going to get out.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have a motion to suspend the rules on the floor, and I would just like to say, Delegate Solomon, I think that motion is timely. I just want to point out to you that we had two amendments that were offered by Chairman Amsterdam and they were withdrawn to be reprepared. I understand we have one more.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. That is it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I understand that is it. There are only two that we have left then.

MOTION TO FINALLY LIMIT AMENDMENTS

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Governor Scranton, I believe, has some comment on that, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me just get a count.

Fellow delegates, I certainly agree with Delegate Solomon that we do have to get on with our business and terminate the amending process some time, or we will never finish tonight. Now, let me give you a count as to what we have here.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. May I do it, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Certainly.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. There are, to the best of my knowledge, three amendments left.

One is breaking down the amendment that Delegate Amsterdam put in into two amendments, the first of which was putting back in the word "shall," and something or other—I forget what the words are—which there was no objection to, as far as I know, from anybody.

The second one was with regard to those few Philadelphians who practice at the moment in court and the court is being changed, and now it has been proposed by a number of people who came racing up to the desk that this is important to other persons who practice in certain courts around the State, and they are attempting to reframe that to make sense for everybody.

The third one is one that has been raised by more members of the committee and they feel strongly that the Style and Drafting Committee took something very important out and they want it put back in again with regard to compensation.

Now, those are the only three that I know about.

May I make this comment which I have made quietly many times, and now I will make it publicly:

Throughout the entire Constitution the four substantive articles that you have tentatively approved, you have tentatively approved three of them, and with ours, if you pass same, there will be, I am sure, as there is in all constitutions, many things that either the Legislature or the courts, particularly the Supreme Court, will have to either change or rule upon, because there has never been a constitution that this has not been true of, and if you think that we are so magnificently clairvoyant that we can come up with the answers to every little thing in here, I just want to say to you that I do not agree. I do not think we are that good. No constitutional convention has ever been that good, and I sincerely hope that everybody else will now refrain from adding any other little things that they just do not happen to like or they think one word is wrong, or another word is right, or something else, because, quite frankly, I am sure that both the Legislature and the Supreme Court are going to have to make some of these changes, anyway, as they always do in all constitutions. If it would be in order, and if nobody has any other conceptions in mind at this moment, I would be glad to move, sir, that we have no further amendments other than the three that I have outlined.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are you putting that in the form of a motion?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I will put it in the form of a motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Chairman Scranton.

DELEGATE BALDRIGE. I second the motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. And it has been seconded by Delegate Baldrige, that after the consideration of the three amendments that we now have on the desk no further amendments be accepted.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
It was agreed to.

MOTION FOR CONSENT TO RECEIVE AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question is: Will the Convention agree to receive an amendment from Chairman Amsterdam?

Chairman Amsterdam, will you please present your amendment?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, this is the amendment that I spoke about earlier where Style and Drafting had inadvertently taken out three words on line 24 of page 11 on the assumption that it was not a matter of substance. For fear that it may be, we are simply putting these words back and I have explained, I think in detail, why. I believe there was no problem and I, therefore, suggest we go to a prompt vote on it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will unlock the voting machine and the question is, will the Convention agree to receive this amendment from Chairman Amsterdam? All those voting yea, vote to give their consent.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

AMSTERDAM AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 17), page 11, line 24, by striking out "which shall be" and inserting: which shall be

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barry.

DELEGATE BARRY. This is with the consent of Delegate Amsterdam. It reinstates language that is taken out from Section 18. We feel that this language is substantive, because there may arise a situation where a judge is suspended and he takes an appeal, or there is some other question about suspension.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. We have not voted on the last amendment yet? We just voted to accept it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want you to know we just obtained the consent to present this amendment.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I am sorry, this is another amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Chairman Amsterdam, do you wish to be heard in connection with your amendment?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. The question.

MOTION FOR CONSENT TO RECEIVE AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The question is, will the Convention agree to accept another amendment from Chairman Amsterdam?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President. My name is being put on a lot of amendments this morning. I want you to know these are amendments that are requested by various members of the body in order to make clarification, in order to put back language which we originally had with the agreement of Style and Drafting.

In this case, Delegate Barry would like to speak about the amendment and I think he can do it better than I can.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barry.

DELEGATE BARRY. Mr. President, this language was taken out by Style and Drafting. We think it is a substantive change and we ask that it be reinstated. Delegate Curran and myself as co-chairmen of the sub-committee recommend this, and it is with the consent of Delegate Amsterdam and Governor Scranton.

We feel if there is an order by the Supreme Court for suspension or removal of a judge, this states, the suspension or removal shall take effect as of the date of that order. It provides the salary shall cease from the date of that order. This is not taken care of by language in the retirement section. We feel it should specifically be stated in this section on the Judicial Inquiry and Review Board. It is a substantive change. The entire committee that we were able to consult agrees.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is there any who wish to speak against this?

We will unlock the voting machine. The question is, will you agree to receive this amendment? Those voting "yea," will agree to receive it and those voting "nay" do not give their consent.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

AMSTERDAM AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Sec. 1 (Sec. 18), page 13, line 24, by striking out "ARTICLE." and inserting: article. Upon an order for suspension or removal, the justice or judge shall be suspended or removed from office, and his salary shall cease from the date of such order.

MOTION TO MAKE CORRECTIONS

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, we still have one more. It has not been finished, but it is being framed by Senator Stroup and some others. Dr. Pelletier has one announcement which will clean something up.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We are happy to recognize Chairman Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. We find that in the pressure of events yesterday, we made an error which we recognized ourselves here on page 11. We changed "compensation" to "salary," and it should not have been done, so we would like permission to return it to the original committee wording.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Page 11, line 8.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. So it would read, "no compensation" and strike "salary" on line 9. Salary was inserted by us and compensation was removed. This was a mistake on our part.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the corrections?

It was agreed to.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. As you so well put it, I would like you to know that I have to own up to personal responsibility for this error. It was mine, and mine alone. I was the one that mistakenly changed the word "compensation" to "salary," and I am sorry for it.

ADDRESS BY DELEGATE SCRANTON

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Mr. President, I am sorry to take up your time, but since we are waiting for the drafting bureau to come up with whatever the last amendment is, it is not wasting your time.

In the course of the last few weeks, there have been a great many comments made, some in jest, and some not so much in jest, on this floor and, likewise, in the press and other places about the Judicial Article. I would like to comment to you briefly about this.

I made a pretty thorough investigation of what the Judiciary Articles say in the other constitutions of the United States. I point out to you that although there has been a tremendous amount of emphasis on the floor here and also in the committee and, therefore, of course, in the media, because so much time was taken on this one subject, which is the selection of judges, and a good deal of the comment has been going back and forth and in and out on this subject, that we may be overlooking the fact there is a tremendous amount in this article which is tremendously forward-looking.

For example, the setup of the unified judicial system is as good as any in the United States, and there are very few.

Secondly, I say to you that rarely in any constitutional convention that I have seen, has a reform been made with more flexibility and yet with more immediate impact, so that it can wear well, and endure well and change as it goes along than the reform that is made in this particular article with regard to the minor judiciary and I congratulate you on it. I think it is a very fine piece of work.

The Judicial Inquiry and Review Board, there is only one other like it in the United States and, if this goes through, it is a tremendous step forward for the people of Pennsylvania, as well as for the judges of same. It protects the judges and at the same time it makes changes where changes are necessary in the finest kind of way.

Last but by no means least, we have changed the retirement process as you know, and yet made it possible for anyone after the age of 70 years to continue to act as a judge. We all know there are many such judges who do it very competently and very well and whom we need in this Commonwealth of ours to carry on in a good judicial system. I say to you in no uncertain terms that as we end this today, if we do, if we pass this particular article, and I suggest to you, that you compare it and compare it closely with our present system in this State or, for that matter, with the system in any other state of the Union, you have something to be extremely proud of and you have every reason to lift your heads high and to walk proudly for what you have done. I want you to know I personally appreciate it, but, far more, I am sure the people of Pennsylvania will when they see it working which is the real test.

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE AURENTZ requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 29, 1968

The standing Committee on Local Government having now completed its substantive duties with respect to Local Government proposals would indeed be remiss if it failed to give recognition to the members of the staff assigned to the committee to assist it in performing its duties.

First, the committee wishes to express its gratitude to Fred Hershey, Committee Staff Director, Attorney Abe Frumkin, Staff Researchers, Gertrude Trautman, Francis Bishop, Carl Skinner, William Graffius, Sandra Friedman, Louis Paone and Woodrow Zeitlen, all of whom devoted many hours of their time collecting and preparing research material for the committee so that it could make intelligent decisions on proposals to be reported from our committee. These individuals are part of the reason that our committee was able to function so smoothly.

Second, the committee wishes to give recognition to Regina Gear who was assigned as our Secretary to our committee and the following Secretaries: Elva Boyer, Doris Shewitz and Donna Byron.

The committee wishes to give special thanks and recognition to Miss Gear for her dedication and highly efficient and competent work for the Local Government Committee; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Constitutional Convention of Pennsylvania congratulate Regina Gear, the above-named research staff and the secretaries to the committee and express its gratitude to them for a task well done; and be it further

RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution be prepared for the research staff members as a token of the convention's appreciation.

WIFE AND FRIENDS OF DELEGATE BANES WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Banes.

DELEGATE BANES. It was a pleasure indeed to have yesterday with us from the City of McKeesport, Elizabeth Township, my wife and along with her Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Teslovic.

DAUGHTERS OF DELEGATE FAY WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Huggins.

DELEGATE HUGGINS. In front of me sits a man who has been known to the delegation here as a "Mr. Can Do." I want you to know, Mr. President, if I might use this phrase, that he "can do" because there are three delightful girls here, daughters of Delegate Frank Fay, and they are Mary Ann, Theresa and Frances. Susie is missing, but I think we can certainly welcome those three.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will the Fay girls please stand?

I want you to know that I have already told those young ladies what a great job Delegate Fay has been doing.

WIFE OF DELEGATE CASEY WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, my wife, Ellen, is seated in the rear of the chamber and I would appreciate it very much if you would introduce her to the members of the Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That would be a real privilege and pleasure. Where are you, Ellen?

There she is. I just want you to know that I do not have to tell you that your husband has been doing a good job, because you know it and we all do. I want to say at this time that he has been a wonderful and great vice-president and his cooperation with me has been just absolutely magnificent and I appreciate that.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Reynolds. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE REYNOLDS. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE REYNOLDS. I would like to make one inquiry.

Now that we have passed the Judicial Article—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is our big problem.

DELEGATE REYNOLDS. I mean, passed the last amendment—

I would like to know, now that Delegate Richter has had his resolution passed to make all of the non-lawyers lawyers, what court we are going to practice in and how soon we can start.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is the amendment they are preparing now.

PARENTS OF DELEGATE FEATHER WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Feather.

DELEGATE FEATHER. I would like to introduce my parents sitting in the balcony on the right, Mr. and Mrs. John Feather.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Please stand so we can greet you.

COUNSEL TO STYLE AND DRAFTING COMMITTEE COMMENDED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Aberman.

DELEGATE ABERMAN. Mr. President, I would like to spread on the record—unfortunately, I do not see them here, but I think this entire delegation owes a great vote of thanks to two gentlemen. I am sure if I mentioned their names, most of you would not be able to identify them. These are the two gentlemen who served as counsel to the Style and Drafting Committee and have performed a job which, from my view as a lawyer spending most of his time drafting documents, is one of the most incredible jobs I have ever seen in my life. They have worked night and day for the last seven or eight days. They worked in association with the chief scrutiner of the constitutional convention, Delegate O'Donnell, in many instances, but at the same time the amount of work and the technical capability that they brought to their job is something that, from the Style and Drafting point of view, you would not be finishing in the manner that you are but for these two gentlemen. I think we would be sadly remiss unless the names of Mr. Andrew Farley and Mr. William Hackney were specifically put into this record so that everyone will acknowledge that but for their duties and but for the excellent and high caliber of their performance the work that has been accomplished here would not have been done.

I would ask that this be placed in the minutes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It will be placed in the record and I might add that I think we had a resolution—

DELEGATE ABERMAN. They were not in that resolution.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Oh, they were not in that resolution.

Did you wish to amend that resolution, then?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. They were in that resolution.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I thought I heard their names, but this is an additional tribute that will appear in the record.

WIFE OF DELEGATE SILVERMAN WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Silverman.

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. I would like to introduce my wife Janet to the Convention. She is sitting in the back.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Janet, will you stand? We are very happy that your good husband has been with us and there is no doubt that he has done a great job.

ADDRESS BY DELEGATE WOODSIDE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Woodside.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, if you are not ready to proceed with another matter, I prepared a speech about two months ago that I have not had a chance to give yet.

Most of it is not necessary any more, but there are a few things I would like to say at this time if the Convention has a few minutes to listen to me. Is it all right now?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It is not only all right now, but I will ask the Convention to give their undivided attention to whatever it is you are going to say.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. Mr. President, it was 47 years ago that I walked up the hill to this building with trepidation to start a political career as a page boy in the Senate. I want to say, parenthetically, that the walk from the Penn Harris Hotel up here is a lot steeper today than it was then. It has gotten steeper every year.

Since that time, I served our Commonwealth in three branches of government and in all three official Constitutional revision groups. Whether I observed well may be questioned, but that I had a rare opportunity to observe I am sure could not be questioned.

In consideration of this, and the deference that is sometimes given to men with gray hair, I would appreciate it if you would just let me make a few observations.

First, I would like to say not so much to the delegates as to the press, and, through them, to the public, that in my opinion, there is no field of governmental activity where there has been such devotion to duty as by those who have dealt with Constitutional provisions.

It was true of the Constitutional Revision Commission of 1959 and it certainly has been true of both the delegates and the staff in this Convention.

I felt that among all the names that have been mentioned here, there has been one that has been overlooked. That is General William A. Schnader. One of the good delegates just came back to me and showed me a resolution that he had prepared concerning General Schnader. I am certainly happy that the same thought came to him that came to me because there is no one in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania who is more responsible for Constitutional revision than the former Attorney General, William A. Schnader.

It was he, more than any other person, who devised first the idea of amending the Constitution not section by section, as our commission in 1959 thought it should be done, but by amending article by article. Most of the Constitution was amended in this manner. Because of this, we came here with a limited call to deal with specific matters which had not been put into the Constitution by recent amendments.

General Schnader, more than anyone else in the Commonwealth, is responsible for the new Constitution. I think we should pay him a tribute as a result of that and I am happy that a resolution will subsequently be introduced giving him due recognition for the tremendous service which he has rendered to this Commonwealth in this respect.

It is not the only thing he has done for this Commonwealth and this country. He, more than any other person is responsible for the commercial code.

Pennsylvania was the first State to adopt it. It was adopted while I was serving as Attorney General, but it was adopted primarily through the efforts of William A. Schnader.

As a matter of fact, he was the one, more than any other person, who brought about the work that was done on it for a period of over ten years by the Commission on Uniform State laws.

So I say that it would be a great tragedy if we were to adjourn without paying a tribute to William A. Schnader for what he has done for this Commonwealth.

I do not discount the important work done by the members of this Convention and by others in revising the Constitution prior hereto by amendments. There were many other people who contributed in many important ways.

I want to put in the record, also, the names of the commission on which I had the privilege of serving as chairman because those members and staff too worked long and faithfully just as the delegates and our staff worked. That Commission worked exceedingly hard for a period of over a year in developing a report which I hope was helpful to this Convention.

I had the privilege of being Chairman of that Commission and, therefore, I get more credit for the work of that Commission than I really deserve, because everyone in that group worked hard and faithfully throughout.

One of the great men on that Commission was the former Chief Justice, Horace Stern. Others who contributed to that report were: General Milton G. Baker, the Honorable Genevieve Blatt, Matthew A. Crawford, Esq., the Honorable Richardson Dilworth, who although Mayor of Philadelphia at the time, attended every meeting, Dean Jefferson B. Fordham of the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania. Also, the late George R. Lamade, Mrs. Mitchell McCarthy, our own fellow delegate, Dean M. Nelson McGeary, and Mrs. Robert L. McGeehan, who many will remember for her presentation before this Judiciary Committee at this Convention, Philip Price, Esq., the late Honorable Oscar J. Tallman, a former Pennsylvania State Senator, the Honorable Edward W. Tompkins, and the Secretary of the Commission, the Honorable Robert D. Fleming, our fellow delegate and president pro tempore of the Senate. Three of us, Senator Fleming, Dean McGeary and I, had the privilege of serving on both the Commission and in this Convention.

You will note, too, William A. Schnader was the Chairman of the Committee appointed by Governor Scranton. That Committee also did a tremendous amount of work in revising our report and making suggestions valuable to the Convention.

I would like to say one other word, if I may. It may be a long word but there is one more thought that I would like to leave with this Convention:

I agree with what Governor Scranton said concerning the Fifth Article. I have not the slightest doubt that when this Article is adopted, as I hope it will be, this Commonwealth will have the greatest judicial system in America.

I do feel, however, that we may not have given the judges of this Commonwealth the credit that they deserve for some of the things which they have already done in developing our judicial system.

Therefore, I would like to say just a few things about the judicial system as we have it today.

We and the public have been exhorted for some time to make changes in the method of selecting judges. In the process, many people have been led to suspect our judges and condemn our judicial system, and thus to conclude that both are worse than they are. I feel compelled to attempt to dispel certain misapprehensions concerning our judges and our judicial system. Judges have a tradition of not defending themselves. With few exceptions, attacks upon them go unanswered.

Unlike the other two branches of government, the judiciary has no publicity agents to relate its good points. If it had, the public would have a different impression of our courts of record. Pennsylvania has never suffered from the type of judicial horrors that forced changes in New Jersey and Illinois and Missouri and other states. For example, in Pennsylvania we do not have a Supreme Court sitting in rows and composed in part of laymen as did New Jersey until recently; we do not have judges practicing law as did New Jersey and Illinois—a system inviting "legalized bribery;"—we do not have scores and scores of different courts each with their independent and separate jurisdictions as did Illinois; Pennsylvania judges have not been subjected to retribution by a legislature which disagreed with their decisions as happened in the state of Missouri; our trials are not delayed by days of examination of jurors as in California, or by the submission of hundreds of questions to a jury as in some of the southern states. The vacancies on Pennsylvania courts do not remain unfilled for years because of political haggling as do federal judicial posts. Pennsylvania does not have the numerous problems arising out of appeal courts sitting in panels that the federal government and many states have. And Pennsylvania has for fifty years administered the assignment and transfer of judges in the manner used by Illinois for the last four years.

In comparison to most judicial systems, including the Federal system, we have a good judicial system. Not perfect, but one which is much better than most, and with the improvements made in the Judicial Article, I have no doubt that, as suggested by Governor Scranton, we will have the greatest system in the country.

I would like to leave two thoughts with you about judges. Much has been said about the laziness of judges. I have served on two courts with 15 different judges and in my 21 years of experience on those two courts I did not find one single judge who was not willing and anxious and able to carry his full load of judicial work, and who did not actually carry his full load of judicial work.

I want to say one other thing. The judges of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, some people think, have an excellent retirement system. They do, but they pay well for it. I just was shown a check of one of the judges in Pennsylvania, and with the deductions that were taken for his retirement, his social security and his withholding tax, the check amounted to less than 55 per cent of his salary. The judges are contributing very handsomely towards their retirement system.

I have talked too long, I know, but I have felt these matters keenly and I felt they should be made a part of the record, and called to the attention of the delegates.

I appreciate your permitting me at this time and under these circumstances to talk so long. I thank you.

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE LEACH requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 29, 1968

It is indeed fitting and appropriate that this Constitutional Convention pause to recognize the outstanding contributions made by William A. Schnader, Esquire, formerly Attorney General of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in helping to bring about this convention to rewrite a portion of our basic law.

He was the recipient of the Gold Medal of the American Bar Association and the Justice Award of the American Judicature Society; two of the highest awards made in the United States for contributions to improvement of the law and the administration of justice.

In 1961 he became one of the leading champions for modernizing and changing the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and through his efforts and authorship, twelve "article by article" amendments which, if adopted, would have modernized the entire Constitution, were recommended by committees of the Pennsylvania Bar Association. These amendments constituted the "Project Constitution" package.

In 1963 he was named chairman of a special committee on Project Constitution a position he still holds. This committee was created for the purpose of promoting the adoption of Project Constitution by the General Assembly and approval by the electors of this Commonwealth.

He also chaired the Governor's Commission on Constitutional Revision created by Governor Scranton in December 1963.

An octogenarian, his keen mind, directness of purpose and energy are most remarkable; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That this Constitutional Convention does hereby extend to William A. Schnader its gratitude and demonstrates to him its appreciation for his contributions made to the improvement of the basic law of Pennsylvania; and be it further

RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to William A. Schnader.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Ruth. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE RUTH. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE RUTH. Mr. President, I have just a short point of personal privilege on behalf of the Right Rev. Delegate Huntley Higgins and myself. We wish to indicate to you and this body that certain material persented last evening to this Convention is being transcribed and, if it is not available prior to adjournment sine die, we ask your permission to submit it to you or place it in the record nunc pro tunc.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Permission is granted.

THANKS EXTENDED TO "A MODERN CONSTITUTION FOR PENNSYLVANIA, INC."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Tate.

DELEGATE TATE. Mr. President, I have just a short word while we are giving thanks to those who have made major contributions to the success of this constitutional convention. I would like to place on the record my personal thanks, and I hope the thanks of every delegate here, for the untiring and long work over the many months and many years of an organization dedicated solely to constitutional modernization, viz., A Modern Constitution for Pennsylvania, Incorporated, whose President, Richard Bond, has worked for many, many months and years on this project, and on whose board of directors has served three of the delegates in this convention, Delegate Amsterdam, Delegate Gray and Delegate Heyburn.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Kauffman. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE KAUFFMAN. I would like to make a suggestion, Mr. President, that you give some consideration to this before we adjourn today.

This morning Delegate Goldstein introduced a resolution calling for annual meetings of the delegates to this Convention, and I suggest that it might be appropriate to set up some machinery pursuant to which those meetings could be arranged and set up.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think it is an excellent suggestion, and the Chair would request that you meet with Delegate Goldstein and prepare such machinery.

MOTION FOR CONSENT TO OFFER AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want to say this:

I see that there are other delegates waiting to be recognized. I would like to suggest that we get onto this amendment, because it is a question of getting the changes printed. I want Delegate Brennan, Delegate Goldstein,—Delegate Michener, too, was standing at the microphone. As soon as we arrive at the next point of inactivity, we will certainly recognize you and Delegate Barron, too.

I want to say that the question is, will the Convention agree to receive another amendment from Chairman Amsterdam?

The Chair recognizes Chairman Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, the amendment which we are now going to ask the Convention to be permitted to be placed before it is signed by Senator Stroup, by Delegate Fineman and by Delegate Shrager. Therefore, I would say it, at least, had bipartisan support. This is the amendment we discussed earlier whereby any persons now especially admitted to practice may continue to practice either in the court of common pleas, if that continues in existence, or in a division of the court of common pleas, or in the municipal court of the City of Philadelphia, where substantially the same person could have practiced in the same way heretofore. In other words, because of the changes of the courts, particularly in Philadelphia County, we have had to say that the substantial practice being continued in the court is what determines the right of an especially admitted person to continue to act as an attorney.

That, Mr. Chairman, is the amendment and we would hope that the Convention, since this is the last amendment to the Judiciary Article, would approve this unanimously.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, first of all, is there anyone else who wishes to be heard? If not we will put the question.

We will open up the voting machine, and the first question is, will the Convention agree to receive this amendment?

All those voting "yea" will vote the consent to receive the amendment from Delegate Amsterdam, those voting "nay" would, in effect, be refusing their consent.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

The roll was recorded as follows:

AMSTERDAM AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Schedule, page 31, by adding after line 5: Section 29. Persons Specially Admitted by Local Rules.—Any person now specially admitted to practice may continue to practice in the court of common pleas or in that division of the court of common pleas and the municipal court in the City of Philadelphia which substantially includes the practice for which such person was previously specially admitted.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will now recognize Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I want to pay special tribute to those whose names were succeeded by a red light, because they were among the delegates who felt they were not thoroughly in accord with this amendment, but they abstained from rising to talk against it. I think a special vote of thanks ought to be given to them because, although they are not thoroughly in accord, they have gone along with the majority very gracefully.

I ask that we vote on the amendment at this time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is there any objection?

The question is, will the Convention agree to the amendment now being offered by Delegate Amsterdam?

All those voting "yea" will vote to support the amendment, those voting "nay" will vote to reject it.

The question recurs,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Amsterdam?

MOTION TO SUSPEND RULES

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. At this time that is our last amendment and let me just state that what we have before us is to determine a matter of procedure.

It was earlier suggested by Delegate Solomon that we have a vote on suspending the rules for the purpose of moving immediately to advance this proposal, Proposal No. 7, to final passage. It has also been suggested that it could be handled, perhaps, in another way, and again I am going to leave it to this body to determine that, and that would be that we would proceed immediately to take up the report of Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People during the period, that is, when this Article VII would be reprinted.

I am advised that the printing time will be three hours, which means that it is now 1:30, and I assume that you delegates feel, and I feel, that it would be nice to have a bite of lunch, because we are going to be here for several more hours at least. The question is, shall we go to lunch now, shall we come back and hear from Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People, and then move for final passage on Proposal No. 7, or shall we now suspend the rules and, without seeing the final product, move it on to final passage? I am going to recognize Delegate Solomon.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, this requires 109 votes, and I am pleased that we will consider it, and I hope that we will consider it now. I make again the motion that we suspend the rules under Rule 5 moving Proposal No. 7, what was Printer's copy No. 32, to the third reading without the requirement of submission to Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me restate the motion so there is no doubt as to what it means. I want to explain what it means in time. It means that we wait until this comes back from the printer, which would be in three hours.

The motion is to suspend sub-Section 12 of Rule 26, and sub-Section 12 says, "In the event the proposal of the Committee on Style and Drafting is amended on third consideration, a vote on final passage shall not be taken thereon, but said proposal shall automatically be reprinted and recommitted to the Committee on Style and Drafting in the same manner and with the same effect as a proposal advanced from second to third consideration."

That is a motion, and I want to state that Style and Drafting has indicated that it will not remain in their hands for any time, and that is the question now before the Convention on the motion that has been made and seconded.

We will now recognize Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, for the first time, I guess, at this Convention I have to disagree with Delegate Solomon.

This Judiciary Article has been, I think, and I must agree with Governor Scranton, one of the finest accomplishments of this Convention. I would hate to see this Convention suspend its rules for the first time in this Convention on the very last day on such a very important item. We are going to have to be here, anyway, to receive the report, the final report on Address and Submission to the People, and we spent so much time and so many hours of the morning and, like everyone else, I am very anxious to go home, too, but it will be only an extra hour or two to do this thing right and to follow the rules. I think it is in order, and I hope that we would follow that procedure, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Jirolanio.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Mr. President, originally I felt in the same mood as Delegate Solomon and I figured possibly the best thing to do was to suspend the rules, which I had in mind to do yesterday, but since the Chair has advised us that we are going to have enough work for the next couple of hours and, assuming that the Chair means well when it states that we will have the report in the next two or three hours, if that is so—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I did not use the word "two." I said three.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. I figured by making it smaller you would then stir the committee and the proper agency to give us the proper material before that. If that is going to be so, then I would urge my good friend and brother, Delegate Solomon, to withdraw his motion so we can go on with the business and go out to eat.

MOTION WITHDRAWN

DELEGATE SOLOMON. Mr. President, if Senator Jirolanio feels that we do not have 109 votes—

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. You are right.

DELEGATE SOLOMON. And since he is the co-proponent of this motion to amend the rules, I will withdraw it.

I do hope that your three hours is three hours, or less, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I certainly hope that it will be less, but I am advised by the printers that the time it would take to print it up would be three hours.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Nelson. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE NELSON. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE NELSON. Until Proposal No. 7 has been finally adopted, it is not referred to the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People. How long after it has been referred to us will we have to incorporate it into our work?

If it were passed now pursuant to Delegate Solomon's resolution, we could go to work on it immediately.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Nelson, it was my understanding, after conversations with you, that when you knew the substance of this proposal, that your committee report was in such shape that you could have it ready within about an hour. I think in view of the motion made by Chairman Scranton that we will not have any more amendments. I think that we can assume that you know the contents of Proposal No. 7, and I will, therefore, ask you whether you would not be ready to report when we return from lunch.

DELEGATE NELSON. As I understand it, Style and Drafting might now make some changes. We would have to proceed on the assumption that what we have now is what it is going to be, because our report would incorporate in at least two places the exact language of Proposal No. 7 as finally adopted, and our report would be inaccurate if any changes were made from this point on or, if for some reason, we cannot assume—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I want anybody in this body that is considering offering an amendment to raise their hands, because I understand that there will not be any changes made and, if I am wrong, please correct me.

DELEGATE NELSON. In other words, I think that Delegate Pasquerilla's criticism would apply equally as well to the work of our Committee, because we would have proceeded on an assumption which may not materialize.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. This is something I will let the body decide.

Delegate Pasquerilla, I ask you to yield and then I will recognize Delegate Strickler.

DELEGATE STRICKLER. Mr. President, I think this would be rather dangerous, because we have to put in the exact wording in connection with many of these things in the arrangement of the articles, and it would have to be printed and, if we do this now, it will be very inadequate. Certainly we could not present it in final form.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. I have been accused of dictatorship on several occasions, but perhaps we could settle this if the Committee on Style and Drafting would meet over here and, if I could take a vote, I think I can assure you that we will not touch it, if they are willing. Personally, I would assure the Convention, as far as I am concerned, I would not touch another comma, but, if you want, I will get the Committee over here and take a vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Frankly, my discussions have been based on that assurance that you would not touch a comma, but I think it would be excellent because it should, if that is the procedure, go through your committee.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. All right. Do you want me to gather the committee now?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let us be at ease while he gathers his committee.

May I talk to Chairman Nelson a second?

DELEGATE PELLETIER. Would the Committee gather on the far side of the chamber?

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON STYLE AND DRAFTING

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pelletier.

DELEGATE PELLETIER. The Committee is ready to report. We will not touch anything.

Mr. President, I stand in place and read the following report:

> The Honorable,
> The Delegates Assembled,
> Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention
>
> Mesdames and Sirs:
>
> The Committee on Style and Drafting is pleased to submit this abbreviated report. As the Delegates are aware, the Committee returned Committee Proposal No. 7 relating to the Judiciary late last evening. The purpose of this report following that submission pursuant to Rule 22 is to insure that the Convention's record properly indicates that the Committee discharged its responsibilities.
> At the outset, the Committee wishes to acknowledge the assistance of Frank Garber, Esquire and Alice Drayer, both of the Legislative Reference Bureau. Without their unstinting cooperation all day yesterday and for half the night last night, the marked copy of Proposal No. 7 would not have been available. We also wish to note on the record that the many young ladies of the Legislative Reference Bureau who typed and proofed copy throughout the night, though nameless, deserve our deepest appreciation. In this same regard, our Counsel and the Committee acknowledge the long hours of discussion and writing spent by Counsel to the substantive committee, Carter Buller, and Arthur Frankston, that committee's research director.
> Due to the pressure of time with respect to the Convention's desire that this proposal be returned on third consideration as soon as possible, we wish to advise that the most concentrated efforts were devoted to the body of the proposed article; this Committee's consideration of the schedule was deliberately limited to serious matters of grammatical expression and rearrangement of sections to insure more logical presentation. This explanation is offered not as excuse, but solely to insure that the Delegates are aware that this Committee does not concur in the necessity for detailed schedules which are "legislative" in character. The circumstances of the moment as well as the practicalities of life required that we acquiesce in the substantive committee's judgment on this point.
> As the Committee has reported previously, we consider hereafter the significant matters of drafting.
> 1. In every instance a conscious attempt was made to reenforce, in the manner of expression throughout the article and schedule, the concept of a "unified judicial system." Thus, at Section 1, the listing of courts precedes the statement of the justice of the peace. Having established that identification, the Committee thereafter referred to courts and justices of the peace in the unified judicial system.
>
> 2. The arrangement of the sections within the article was also considered and some sections rearranged. For example, following the several sections relating to the jurisdiction of the several courts in the unified judicial system, the Committee inserted the sections relating to the definition of judicial districts and to the concept of judicial administration.
> 3. The sections relating to election or appointment of judicial officers were rearranged and detailed section references inserted. While the Committe would agree that extensive cross-references in a constitutional document is not the best stylistic approach, the sense of the Committee was that these sections were so detailed that clearly identified cross-references within the section and to other sections were mandatory.

4. We would note our preference that the section relative to the referendum on the question of a qualifications commission be included in the schedule. However, after consideration by the committee and consultation with the Co-Chairmen of the substantive committee, it was agreed that doing so would unnecessarily delay returning this Proposal to the Convention on third consideration calendar.

5. Undoubtedly some question will be raised respecting the Committee's decision to acquiesce in the inclusion of a detailed description of the organization and functions of a judicial inquiry and Review Board. The Committee concurs in the judgment of the substantive committee. This greater concern for detail is necessitated by the fact that the concept here contained is new to the Commonwealth. As a result, it is necessary that the wishes of the Convention be explicit. Once the concept has found acceptance and has functioned for a period of time, the detailed explanation can be amended out of the Constitution.

6. As the Committee has recommended in previous reports, we note with appreciation the promptness with which the Judiciary Committee met to act upon certain ambiguities and unresolved issues. Thus it was possible that this Committee could continue its deliberations in conjunction with sub-committees to the substantive committee, reviewing proposed language at the same time the standing committee was making a determination on the substantive matters involved.

7. Finally the Committee, in the brief time available for consideration and working from marked copy, sought to insure uniformity in expression, clarity by the judicious use of punctuation, and brevity of expression. We regret the necessity of so many correctional amendments this morning, but the Committee's recommendations were submitted on marked copy and time would not permit the usual repeated review sessions necessary to insure that the human errors in marking and transcription had been deleted.

Respectfully submitted,

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is a very fine report.

I have just had a conversation here with Chairman Nelson, and if this procedure is agreeable to this body, we can follow it. If it is not, it is still in your hands, and that is this:

We would take now about one hour for lunch. We would come back and we would hear from the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People. We would discuss it, and I am sure that before we are ready to vote on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People, we will then have the final bill ready from Article VII, and we will take that through to final passage, and then we go back and adopt the Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People report to the people.

DELEGATE GOLDSTEIN. Mr. President, I so move that we accept your recommendation and that we recess until 2:45 p.m., if anybody comes in with an amendment, we are going to give him a self-executing hang rope.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If that is agreeable, we will stand recessed until 2:45 p.m.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Convention will now come to order, the time for recess having expired.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Bunting. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BUNTING. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

I suggest and certainly hope the delegates, until we get at least closer to our objective, will keep their points of personal privileges as short as possible because we must get on. I do recognize you, Delegate Bunting.

DELEGATE BUNTING. Mr. President, I wanted to set the Convention straight on two things. I was not just voting a straight dissent.

I did not rise for that purpose. I want to comment on our friend Pandora. When her box was opened the first time, her evil spirits flew out. When it was opened the second time, she saw a beautiful gem and that was supposed to symbolize hope. I think that is our position today, the box that was prevalent last night. Hope is what we have as well as faith, and confidence and a lot of energy for going forward.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEE ON ARRANGEMENT, SUBMISSION AND ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will now recognize the Chairman of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People, pursuant to the understanding we had before the luncheon recess. I will repeat again, when we reach that point in the presentation where Proposal No. 7 is back from the printer's, we will then, with your permission, break in for the adoption of Proposal No. 7.

The Chair recognizes Chairman Nelson.

DELEGATE NELSON. Mr. President, I read in place two of three recommendations of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have No. 3?

DELEGATE NELSON. No. 2 and No. 3. No. 1 is on Arrangement and that will have to await the body's action.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Has No. 2 been distributed?

DELEGATE NELSON. Yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Everybody has one but me. Could I have No. 2? I have it. Thank you.

The Chair again recognizes Chairman Nelson.

DELEGATE NELSON. Mr. President. I think we should take up No. 2, having to do with the ballot questions, and this may be the most controversial of our recommendations. With the permission of the Chair, I will yield to Delegate Buck, who is Chairman of our submission group for a statement on the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Buck.

DELEGATE BUCK. Mr. President. As I understand it, we are now going to confine ourselves to Recommendation No. 2.

DELEGATE NELSON. Recommendation No. 2, that is the two-page recommendation.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA

1967-1968

RECOMMENDATION NO. 2

of the

COMMITTEE ON ARRANGEMENT, SUBMISSION AND ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE

The Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People recommends that the ballot questions, which shall bring before the electorate the recommendations of the Convention, be as follows:

I.

Shall Proposals 1 and 2 on LEGISLATIVE APPORTIONMENT adopted by the Constitutional Convention, providing for 50 Senators and 203 Representatives, and for a Commission to apportion the Legislature after each decennial census, be approved?

II.

Shall Proposals 3 and 4 on STATE FINANCE adopted by the Constitutional Convention, providing for a limit on borrowing based on tax revenues, budgeting, financial planning, auditing and related matters, be approved?

III.

Shall Proposal 5 on TAXATION adopted by the Constitutional Convention, permitting certain tax exemptions, incentives and benefits, retaining certain tax benefits, providing for reimbursement of local taxing authorities under certain conditions and related matters, be approved?

IV.

Shall Proposal 6 on LOCAL GOVERNMENT, adopted by the Constitutional Convention, providing for home rule for all units of local government, optional forms of government, uniform procedures for merger, consolidation and boundary change, intergovernmental cooperation and area governments, local finance and debt limits, apportionment and related matters, be approved?

V.

Shall Proposal 7 on the JUDICIARY adopted by the Constitutional Convention, establishing a unified judicial system, prescribing qualifications of justices, judges and justices of the peace, providing for the election, tenure, removal, discipline and retirement of judges, prohibiting certain activities by judges, and related matters be adopted?

Respectfully submitted,

Co-Chairmen, Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People

DELEGATE BUCK. Mr. President, speaking on behalf of the Committee on Arrangment, Submission and Address to the People, we would like to report that the questions as contained in Recommendation No. 2 represent the unanimous recommendation to the best of my knowledge, information and belief of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People.

By way of introduction, I would like to say this, that in framing these question, and you will notice that there are five of them that are to appear on the ballot, we have used a single question for Proposals Nos. 1 and 2 on Legislative Apportionment; for Proposal No. 6 on Local Government, and Proposal No. 7 on the Judiciary; we placed Proposals Nos. 3 and 4 on State Finance into a separate question that appears as II on the recommendation and Proposal No. 5 of the Committee on Taxation, that appears as Question III.

It was the opinion of the committee that the appropriate manner in which to present the various proposals to the people of Pennsylvania for approval was in the form of the four questions with the report of the Committee on Finance broken into two questions.

I might say this by way of explanation. We are limited to not more than 75 words per question, and by reason of the size of the voting machines we were informed that we could not place more than nine questions on the voting machine. So we decided that Question I dealing with Legislative Apportionment under the Act calling this limited Constitutional Convention was required to be placed before the voters in one question.

Insofar as Question IV dealing with Local Government and Question V dealing with the Judiciary, because of the interrelationship of these various sections of those two respective articles, it was the opinion of the Committee that Proposal No. 6 on Local Government, and Proposal No. 7 on the Judiciary should be placed on the ballot as single questions.

With reference to the form of the question which begins "Shall Proposals 1 and 2," and then follows consecutively, "Shall Proposals 3 and 4," "Shall Proposal 5," "Shall Proposal 6" and "Shall Proposal 7." The reason we make specific reference to the proposals is because you will recall that in the Constitutional Referendum question that the people of our State voted on last November, the question read in substance, "Shall a Constitutional Convention be called to prepare for submission to the electorate," proposals for the revision of the subject matter of the various articles that we have dealt with.

In order to avoid any litigation that might arise in regard to whether or not the people of Pennsylvania have approved the various proposals made by this Convention, it was decided to specifically refer in each question to each proposal, so that when the electorate votes upon the respective proposals there will be no question about what they have approved or disapproved.

I would like, however, to give the members of our assembly an opportunity to review the questions as we have prepared them, and I might say this, too, in framing these questions we have tried to include sufficient description within each question to at least apprise the voter as he enters the voting booth in regard to the content of each proposal, so that you will notice on Question I, "Shall Proposals 1 and 2 on Legislative Apportionment adopted by the Constitutional Convention, providing for 50 Senators and 203 Representatives, and for a Commission to apportion the Legislature after each decennial census, be approved."

If there is anybody that feels that they wish to improve upon that question, or have any questions they would like to ask about it, we would be very happy to answer them.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Nelson.

DELEGATE NELSON. There are two typographical errors that I would like to note. Question I, the fourth line, "apportion" should be "reapportion."

In the last question to follow the format, on the very last word of Question V it should be "approved" rather than "adopted."

DELEGATE BUCK. Thank you.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Could we have that just once more so everyone could get them, including the Presiding Officer?

DELEGATE NELSON. Question I, line 4, "Commission to reapportion" rather than "apportion."

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes.

DELEGATE NELSON. Question V, the very last word should be "approved" rather than "adopted" to follow the form of the other questions.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you.

Have all the delegates been able to make those corrections?

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Rovner. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE ROVNER. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE ROVNER. Mr. President, may I ask one question?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may proceed.

DELEGATE ROVNER. In each one of the questions, II, III, IV and V, the last sentence states, "and related matters, be approved." Why was not that same language used in No. I?

DELEGATE BUCK. I do not think it was omitted for any specific purpose, and I am sure there would be no objection to adding, "and related matters."

DELEGATE ROVNER. I think it should be in, in order to keep it uniform.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Forster.

DELEGATE FORSTER. Mr. President, the phrase that has been used in all questions except I, "and related matters," is the carry-all provision that covers the substantive matters that the question could not possibly list in detail.

In Question I all of the substantive matters are covered in the descriptive material and there is no need for the related matters in that question. Does that take care of your question, Delegate Rovner?

DELEGATE ROVNER. I think it ought to be uniform. I think it would be wise to keep it in there so there cannot be any questions afterwards.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone else wish to be heard in connection with this matter?

Yes, Delegate Forster.

DELEGATE FORSTER. If there are any other related matters in those two articles, then we should use it, but we could find none.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Croop.

DELEGATE CROOP. I do not think there are any other matters. We covered the entire subject and to use language that would indicate that there were related matters would be very much in error, in my opinion. As it is now written, it addresses itself to the entire subject matter and, therefore, there could be no related matter. It is properly written.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Wilmarth. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE WILMARTH. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE WILMARTH. We were mandated to this Convention for four articles, four proposals really in the heart of the people. We have now divided into five, the division has come in State Finance and Taxation. I wonder if the committee has adequately discussed what will happen when we go back with five proposals instead of four. We can readily understand the reason, we lived with this for three months, but I am a little afraid that this is going to be most difficult to explain and I would like to know if the committee did consider this.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Chairman Nelson to respond.

DELEGATE NELSON. Yes, this has been given considerable consideration. Under the act the legislative reapportionment proposals must consist of one question. We are not permitted more than one. Then the act says that so far as the other three areas are concerned, there must be at least one question. There is no prohibition against breaking them up. This seemed to be the feeling of the committee. They very definitely wanted the exemption proposal separated from the other, so that if one should fall we would still have the other. It is logical. It is the one place where we could divide so that the remaining provisions would be self-sufficient if one fell. They were gotten up that way as three separate proposals. This is the reason for our handling it that way.

DELEGATE WILMARTH. I agree this is very logical. I am not disputing the minds of the committee.

However, I am concerned that I have learned over the years it all depends on where you sit. We have been sitting here for three months, and I certainly realize the importance of this, but when we go back to the voters in April with five proposals when we were mandated with four, I am somewhat concerned that there will be confusion unless we have more press, more television, and more work on this committee than I can foresee at the moment.

DELEGATE NELSON. I would like to correct an impression that we had four questions. We were to consider four areas. There was no limitation on the number of questions. The fact is that we are going to the people, not with five proposals, but with seven proposals, and they would be so advertised by the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

DELEGATE WILMARTH. I, in no sense, dispute this. I am only looking at it as someone out in the field who still has the figure 4 in their mind, and I am so concerned that this may be most confusing. I agree with the committee. This is not my point, my point is that I hope we have considered what will happen when we go to sell this.

MOTION TO ADOPT RECOMMENDATIONS Nos. 2 and 3

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Goldman.

DELEGATE GOLDMAN. Mr. President, I have gone through these Questions II and III the same as the other delegates have. My own opinion on it is that they are very good and they have been broken down very well. I believe Question II provides for budgeting and borrowing and tax raising questions. Question III has to do with exemptions and benefits, which may well be an entirely different and unrelated matter from Question II.

I think the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People has done a very remarkable job on this. I talked to the delegates about it a few days ago. I think this has been done very well. I would recommend it be accepted as submitted to us.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Forster.

DELEGATE FORSTER. In answer to the problem that Delegate Wilmarth raises, I would disagree with him that the public has any concept of four in mind. I venture to say we could talk to the electorate and they do not have any number in mind. Unfortunately, perhaps, not too much interest.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Percey. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE PERCEY. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE PERCEY. Mr. President, do I understand that we are now going to be asked to vote on this to approve it or disapprove it?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It is the understanding of the Chair that we are going to vote on approving and adopting this report.

DELEGATE PERCEY. I would like to inquire, Mr. President, whether it would be appropriate at this time for me to explain how I am going to vote or to wait until after the vote is taken?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, I think it is in order at this time, if you would care to do so.

DELEGATE PERCEY. Thank you, Mr. President. (5)

On Tuesday Delegate Michener was quite concerned about a vote on the Judiciary Committee voting for one section of which he disapproved and voting for the entire article. I would like to make my position clear in relationship to the same problem Delegate Michener had.

This is my personal feeling, if this Convention was presented with a challenge by the voters of the Commonwealth, in my personal opinion I think in many respects the Convention has failed to meet that challenge and, as proposed by the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People, I oppose, personally, as it is broken down by the committee, Question I, Question III and Question V. To translate that into our old numbers of proposals, I oppose Proposals 1, 2, 5 and 7.

I intend to vote "yes" to have this submitted to the voters, because I feel that I am as much responsible for the document as anyone else, but I do not want to deceive my fellow delegates into thinking I am going to go out and work for these proposals and these recommendations. I oppose them here and I will oppose them in the voting booth in April. I think the majority of the delegates of this Convention do not agree with me, but I am sure they respect my disagreement with the document, just as much as I respect their agreement, and I just wanted to make my position clear on the proposals and the submission to the people.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Otto.

DELEGATE OTTO. I second Delegate Goldman's motion.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barry. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BARRY. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BARRY. May I ask, on a point of procedure, whether we will approve the format of each question or will we approve them as a group?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Unless it would be the desire of this Convention to break them down, it would certainly seem to me we would expedite matters if we approved this report No. 2, which includes the questions. This is what the Chair had in mind, but there is no doubt in my mind, also, that we could break this down if it was the desire of the body.

DELEGATE BARRY. May I express my disagreement with the format of Question III? As I understand Proposal 5, it concerns tax exemptions and does not concern incentives or benefits. During the last primary at the time we were authorized to hold a Constitutional Convention, there were some questions on the ballot relating to certain matters and they were phrased in a fashion like this:

Shall the obsolete provision of so and so be abolished? This, in effect, was almost begging the question. It seems to me it is demeaning for us to beg the question in this fashion and to talk about incentives and benefits. I say this not only because I disagree with Proposal 5 that they are incentives and benefits, but, even if I did agree, I do not think they have to be so phrased. At a minimum it should say, retaining certain tax exemptions and regulating further tax exemptions, rather than sayng tax exemptions and incentives and benefits, which not even the proposal itself in its language stated. The proposal stated regulating exemptions from taxation and providing for taxation of real property of public utilities. I do not think we ought to demean ourselves by begging the question and asking for that type of answer from the electorate.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Buck.

DELEGATE BUCK. I might say in answer to that comment that we did feel that the use of the words "permitting certian tax exemptions, incentives and benefits" applied to Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 5 that specifically provides for tax exemptions and then it also provides for certain incentives in the form of limited tax exemptions for limited periods of time to non-profit corporations in the interest of industrial development, also, in order to encourage the rehabilitation by private enterprise of certain deteriorated areas and also providing for special incentives to encourage residential construction.

So the Committee in using the phrase "permitting certain tax exemptions, incentives and benefits" was specifically referring to those sections of Proposal 5 and, then, when they mentioned retaining certain tax benefits, we were specifically referring to the provision that was placed in the proposal dealing with certain benefits to disabled veterans and, then, when we made reference to provision for reimbursement of local taxing authorities under certain conditions, we were making specific reference to the return of the gross receipts taxes and also to reimbursing communities for loss of real estate taxes in the event some special provision was made by the Legislature for the needy and the aged. So, at least, so far as our Committee was concerned, the use of those words were specifically related to the provisions of Proposal 5 to which we thought the use of our terminology applied.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair would now like to recognize Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, certainly the wording of Article III on Proposal 5 is, so far as present poll-taking methods is concerned, an invitation to defeat. It seems to me that this is pretty badly rigged against the proposal of the Committee simply from the point of view of words. In other words, I could have written this and said, "Shall Proposal 5 on Taxation provide exemptions for our wounded heroes," and the whole set of the thing would be favorable. This seems to me to be so worded almost as if to betray the fact that the wording of it was intended to insure the defeat.

DELEGATE BUCK. Mr. President, I can assure you the wording was not designed to accomplish that result and I also would like to mention that we specifically considered including a reference to the fact that we were providing for certain tax benefits for veterans, but felt that maybe that was the wrong way to approach it, so we decided to abandon the use of that kind of an appeal and confine ourselves strictly to trying to summarize, in the best way we knew how, just exactly what the provisions of Proposal 5 were seeking to accomplish.

When we used the words, "permitting certain tax exemptions, incentives and benefits," we were specifically referring to those things in Proposal 5 that accomplish that and, when we referred to retaining certain tax benefits, although we could have brought in "for the benefit of veterans," we decided that maybe that was an improper word to use and then, of course, when we refer to the reimbursement of local taxing authorities, we were referring to the gross receipts taxes that may come back and to the reimbursement for loss, or real estate taxes. We certainly do not want this question to be phrased in such a way that it will defeat No. 5. If someone has a suggestion as to how we can improve it, we would be delighted to receive it.

DELEGATE MICHENER. I wonder whether Chairman Woodring and Chairman Leonard approved of this. I am speaking only as a grammarian, because it is prejudicial as it stands.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May the Chair at this time make a suggestion? Do you think we could expedite this if we voted on each question at a time, one at a time?

DELEGATE BUCK. It is beginning to appear that way, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, it is.

DELEGATE BUCK. I was hopeful we could present the five.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That was my original hope, but there seems to be some controversy about at least one of the questions.

DELEGATE BUCK. We certainly like to avoid controversy.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Rappaport.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Mr. President, I had the pleasure of discussing all of these questions with Delegate Buck, Delegate Nelson and Delegate Forster. I had disagreed with their original approach to this as just really having section numbers which I objected to in putting the Internal Revenue Code on the ballot, and I felt we should have some identifying phrases. While I disagree with one or two of them that they had used, I think, by and large, they have done a fine job. It is not often that I have agreed with those three delegates during the course of this Convention. Mr. President, I would, therefore, move the question on all five.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. As I understand, the motion now before us by Delegate Rappaport, seconded by Delegate Jirolanio, is that we move the question on all five and that we vote on five as a unit.

I see Delegate Leonard wishes recognition.

DELEGATE LEONARD. Mr. President, I would like, if we could vote on all of them except Question III and then come back to that. Give us a few minutes, and I think we may come up with some suggested words there.

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Might I suggest that anyone who is unhappy with any of the five of them would vote "nay" on my call of the question and then we will see how we stand.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think if we had taken them one at a time we would be through them by now, but let us now recognize Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I am sorry to be difficult, but since both co-chairmen of the Judiciary Committee do not like theirs either and we have a suggestion—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Well, we have a motion on the floor.

Delegate Rappaport, how do you feel about your motion?

DELEGATE RAPPAPORT. Mr. President, as I suggested, if there is anyone who is unhappy with any of them, he votes "nay" on my motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have a motion on the floor. It has been moved and seconded.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Is it possible to vote for all five when the Convention has not, in fact, made any recommendation yet on the Judiciary Article?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will say this:

The Chair and the Parliamentarian recognize that you have a very good point.

DELEGATE BLOOM. I think we could save a lot of time if the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People would confer with the co-chairmen of each of them to see if they were satisfied, or not. I do not know whether they have done so.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have a motion on the floor, and I can tell you we will have to vote on that motion unless it is withdrawn.

The motion has been made by Delegate Rappaport, seconded by Delegate Jirolanio, that we vote on all five of the questions.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. May I have an answer on my parliamentary inquiry? I do not think it has been answered.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes, you may. You have expressed a technical difficulty here that has a substantial basis in fact. We have not yet adopted Proposal No. 7.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I wonder if Delegate Rappaport would be good enough to amend his motion to include the four, because I do not think there is any problem about the form of the fifth question once the committee proposal is, in fact, carried to the floor.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. I remind the delegates that it was at precisely this point in the New York Convention that the whole thing went down the drain, because Anthony Travia, in a fit of petulance, insisted upon this part of submission to the people against the advice of the best men he had in the convention from the Republican side. He bowled his way through on it. He made some dreadful mistakes at this point, and the wonderful work that that group did at the expense of $12 million went down the drain. I, for the sake of a few minutes, do not want to see anything like that happen here.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gouger.

DELEGATE GOUGER. That is all well and good. Now we get into the most beautiful opportunity for nit picking known to man. There is none of us that can say the same thing in precisely the same words. I respect Delegate Michener's skill in the use of words, but we have been having committee meetings and we would have welcomed any of these suggestions. All we are going to do is open this up and two hours from now we will be nit picking on whether to use this word or that word. On behalf of the committee, we have to be completely objective. This nonsense of trying to lead the voter to vote in favor of it, I think, is immoral. Now let us present it objectively and factually. This has been handled by men who truly know how to phrase questions, legal men, public relations men, and so on.

Again, Delegate Michener can probably express it more beautifully and in greater flowing prose, but this is going to be three hours from now. The question has been moved and I humbly submit to you gentlemen let us get on with the business.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. So the delegates will know this, the question right now is debatable if anyone wants to debate it. The motion before the Convention is whether or not we vote on all five as a unit. That is the motion we vote on, all five as a unit.

DELEGATE JIROLANIO. Let us have the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will open up the voting machine.

The question is, shall this Convention vote on this proposal Recommendation No. 2 as a unit in one vote? All those voting "yea" will vote that it shall be taken up as a unit, those voting "nay" will vote, in effect, that it be taken up otherwise; perhaps question by question.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?

MOTION TO ADOPT QUESTION I RELATING TO PROPOSALS 1 and 2

DELEGATE FORSTER. Mr. President, now that we have voted against considering them as a unit, may I respectfully move the adoption of Question I relating to Proposals 1 and 2?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is there a second to that motion?

DELEGATE GRAY. I second the motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The motion has been seconded by Delegate Gray.

Let me state the question. The question is, shall this Convention adopt Question I on Proposals 1 and 2 as framed in Recommendation No. 2 by the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People?

Are we ready for the question?

THE CONVENTION. Yes.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to adopt Question I on Proposals 1 and 2 as framed in Recommendation No. 2?

REQUEST TO POSTPONE QUESTION III

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Leonard.

DELEGATE LEONARD. Mr. President, I would like if you could move on beyond Question III, because I would like to submit an amendment to Question III.

MOTION TO ADOPT QUESTION IV

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Forster.

DELEGATE FORSTER. I would like to yield to Chairman Pasquerilla, and I would hope that he would move the adoption of Question IV relating to Local Government.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. I move the adoption of Question IV, having had the opportunity to review it previously before it was submitted to this body, that is, Question IV, Proposal No. 6.

DELEGATE FORSTER. I will second the motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The motion has been made by Delegate Pasquerilla, seconded by Delegate Forster.

The question is, shall the Convention adopt Question IV on Proposal No. 6 as framed by the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People?

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to adopt Question IV?

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Goldstein. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE GOLDSTEIN. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE GOLDSTEIN. Mr. President, am I in order to make a motion now at this time?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes. I think that would be in order at this time, Delegate Goldstein.

MOTION TO AMEND RESOLUTION

DELEGATE GOLDSTEIN. Mr. President, I would like to thank the delegates who supported the resolution which I proposed this morning.

Now I would like to make a motion to draft Delegate Bruce Kauffman as our first chairman for the purpose of making arrangements for the 1969 constitutional anniversary affair, and as Vice-Chairman Dick Gerber, and I will offer my service to them in regard to this affair.

I further propose that each year at our anniversary the delegates elect a new president and a new vice-president.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. It is my opinion that we can only have one president of this Constitutional Convention, and I would ask if the maker of the resolution would change his resolution to say the chairman is to make the arrangements?

DELEGATE GOLDSTEIN. I agree with you, Delegate Pasquerilla. We will make it the chairman and vice-chairman.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. This is in the form of a resolution, is that right?

DELEGATE GOLDSTEIN. It is in the form of a motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. In the form of a motion?

You have a motion on the floor, therefore, to amend your resolution of this morning?

DELEGATE GOLDSTEIN. That is right.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Orban.

DELEGATE ORBAN. That is Frank A. Orban for the benefit of the stenographer.

I would like to ask Delegate Goldstein what services he will offer.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You know, I was a little worried when he was electing a new president right away, too.

DELEGATE GOLDSTEIN. I will be more than glad to offer my services for anything the chairman would like me to do, except my professional services.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment to the resolution?

It was agreed to.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We will consider your resolution amended, and the remarks will be placed on the record.

DELEGATE GOLDSTEIN. Thank you, Mr. President.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Murray. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE MURRAY. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE MURRAY. Senor el Presidente,

El Delegado de Philadelphia, Senor Herman Key-Les Pide un Permiso Par El Mes de Abril, Para la Election'e de la Cande'tura de la Casa Represente' a la Camera de Pennsylvania. Gratsias Amigos Deligatos.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want you to know that as soon as that is translated—

DELEGATE MURRAY. Mr. President, we had a little trouble the other day with the stenographers down front, and the translation of that would be that the delegate from Philadelphia, Delegate Herman Quiles, asked for permission of leave of absence for the month of April in order that he may run for election for the House of Representatives for the State of Pennsylvania. Gracios, friendly delegates.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Very good.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Quiles.

DELEGATE QUILES. Thank you very much, Delegate Murray.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Gray, did you wish to be recognized?

DELEGATE GRAY. If I may, sir, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE GRAY. I would have to yield first, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sorry.

DELEGATE GRAY. I would be glad to yield to the Governor, but you did not even recognize me.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I momentarily had forgotten, Delegate Gray, that you had the microphone.

Do you yield to Delegate Scranton?

DELEGATE GRAY. You know, this gives me a real rare pleasure. Governor Scranton, do you have something serious to discuss?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. It is not very long. May I do it?

DELEGATE GRAY. But is it of a serious nature?

DELEGATE SCRANTON. Yes.

DELEGATE GRAY. Well, I do not have something serious, so you may talk.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. It was not clear to me when—I think it was Delegate O'Donnell who asked whether Question number 5 from Delegate Nelson's committee could be approved before you approve of our entire article. Can it or can it not? We are almost ready with the language.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Let me just state this:

The Chair will say that it can be approved, unless we hear objection from the delegates.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. All right. We will be ready right away.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gray. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE GRAY. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE GRAY. First, I want to say as co-chairman of this committee, and as a non-working co-chairman, that you were very kind to place me on this committee with such distinguished people.

Now, I would like you to know before we adjourn today that Lieutenant Governor Strickler was a most helpful person;

Then there was this gentleman over here by the name of Herman Buck, who was a very, very constructive and valuable member of the committee;

Then there was this distinguished public relations official of the Armstrong Cork Company, Delegate Forster, who did a tremendous job on this committee.

I want to say, finally, not because he has given me $150 to buy him two tickets to the heavyweight championship fight on Monday night, but I want you to know that this man, Jim Nelson, is an unusual person. You see, he is a man who has sat here on this floor for the three months we have been here. He has not run his mouth a lot, and he is a Phi Beta Kappa, but he has worn his Phi Beta Kappa key on the inside, and to me that is important.

COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO ESCORT GOVERNOR TO CONVENTION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair at this time would like to appoint a committee composed of Vice President Casey, Vice President Orban and Secretary Michener, and ask if they will go to escort our surprise guest, the Governor of the State of Pennsylvania, and ask him to come in.

CONVENTION FAREWELL ADDRESS BY GOVERNOR RAYMOND P. SHAFER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Fellow delegates, it is my extreme privilege and pleasure to present to you the Governor of this great Commonwealth, Raymond P. Shafer. (Applause.)

GOVERNOR SHAFER. Mr. Lieutenant Governor and President of this Convention, distinguished delegates to this Convention, and my fellow Pennsylvanians:

Almost three months ago to this day, you began for Pennsylvania one of her most critical, though short, journeys through history.

Part of that journey ends today as you depart this Hall of Democracy to resume your daily responsibilities as citizens.

Whether it ends successfully now depends on the people who brought you here with a mandate to shake the status quo.

You were assigned the responsibility to change for the people their Constitution so they could govern themselves better in our modern, complex society—a responsibility that also required that you keep intact the delicate balance of Democratic principles that have made and kept us free.

Your mandate for change was as clear and resounding as the once great ring of the Bell that signaled from Pennsylvania soil the beginning of the World's most significant Revolution in the way men and women govern themselves.

Your task was awesome, but inevitable. For it was your honor—one that does not come in many lifetimes—to be called into Convention to propose changes that will affect the lives of all Pennsylvanians during this Century.

I come before you today, as Governor, to bid you farewell as you close this page in our History and to thank you for a job well done.

What you have achieved was not easy. The conflicting forces in the Democratic process filled the debate and interplay of this Convention as they must when citizens come together to determine their responsibilities to each other.

Some of you have experienced for the first time both the excitement and the frustrations that are a part of this process.

You have learned how extremely important it is for citizens to become involved in public affairs if we are to continue building the finest society possible—a society in which our basic law sets forth the principle that all citizens be given an equal opportunity to live their lives fully and freely.

And for those among us who are not completely satisfied with specific recommendations adopted by the majority in this Convention, it is important to remember that our personal preferences should not obscure the real accomplishments that were made here.

I am convinced that when Pennsylvanians look at the full measure of your achievement, they will find that you have proposed for them the changes they so vitally sought and need to make democracy work better in a world that is growing skeptical of its effectiveness.

In the broadest terms, you have served the people well.

When they called you into Convention, for the first time in almost a Century, they said, in effect: "We want changes in our Constitution to assure us that every man and woman will be equally represented in the making of laws in our Legislature."

You responded by proposing a change that will make certain there is a self-enforcing periodic reapportionment of the General Assembly to assure equal representation. And that is the essential change we sought.

The people told you they wanted a better system of financing State Government—that they wanted to be rid of the unrealistic debt limitation our Constitution places on modern government.

You responded by proposing a more realistic debt limit that gives protection to our taxpayers while it provides us with a sounder way of financing our programs for people.

The people said to you: "We want a streamlined local government that is able to respond more effectively and decisively to our common needs."

Your local government proposal—which will work the quiet and major revolution in local government if adopted—will strengthen our communities and their ability to respond to the enormous problems of the late 20th Century America. It will give Pennsylvania the potential for the finest local government in the Nation.

Finally, the people asked you to reform the way justice is administered to them at all levels of the law—a reform that was your greatest challenge in a day when order under law is meeting its sternest test.

What you now propose offers the citizens of Pennsylvania one of the finest judicial reform plans among the states, through a unified court system that provides significant changes from the minor judiciary up.

In sum, you have put together revisions for our government that, together with the seven amendments adopted last May, will give Pennsylvania the kind of Constitution she must have to accomplish the people's business as we speed ahead into the 21st Century.

There will be those, I am certain, who will attempt to persuade the people that they should not adopt your proposals because you have not gone far enough, or that you have gone too far, or that you have not produced what they personally wanted.

To have your total effort fall to their opposition would be the highest and saddest folly of this Century for Pennsylvania and her future.

I ask each of you to leave here today committed to telling the people about your achievements and why it is so essential to them that they adopt your proposed reforms.

I know of no higher duty and responsibility you now have than to see this job through to its historic end at the polls in April.

I personally pledge the kind of campaign to have the people of this Commonwealth adopt your proposal that we conducted with bipartisan cooperation last year to have this Convention called.

I am personally prepared to begin today to conduct such a campaign.

I also am extremely pleased to tell you that our distinguished former Governor William W. Scranton, who served this Convention so loyally, and former Governor George M. Leader will be the Honorary Chairmen of a Constitutional Campaign Committee as they were last year.

I also call on the great Pennsylvania communications industry—its reporters, editors, broadcasters—to help us clearly tell the people about the significance of your work here.

This industry's dedication to the cause of good government, which was a major reason for winning the confidence of the people in calling this Convention, can now help us achieve our final goal.

This is a goal that all concerned Pennsylvanians can support because it is not just a Republican, or Democratic, or independent's goal.

And in line with that, I compliment each of you for holding obvious partisanship, which spelled disaster for other states' constitutional conventions, to a minimum in your proceedings.

Lieutenant Governor Broderick and the leaders of this Convention are to be given the highest praise for the dignity and fairness with which they conducted the business of this Convention.

I am confident that this bipartisanship will carry over to the polls in April.

And, now, as you leave, I am certain you take with you the knowledge and pride that you were part of an historic event that will not be measured in days, but in decades.

Your dedication has brought about proposals for meaningful reforms in which the people place their faith and trust. You have given our State an opportunity to wear a new mantle of leadership in our Republic.

It is now up to the people to seize that opportunity for themselves and their children.

Thank you and goodbye.

COMMITTEE TO ESCORT GOVERNOR FROM HOUSE TO EXECUTIVE OFFICES

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I ask the committee to escort Governor Shafer back to his quarters.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE CHAIR

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Please be seated. While you are getting back to your seats, I just want you to know I received a note that was passed to me from over in the press section that said, "If you delegates really want to hear and see what was done in this Convention for the past three months, you will attend the Gridiron Dinner being sponsored by the Pennsylvania Legislative Correspondents Association on March 13th. Signed by the President Saul Kohler."

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE ORBAN requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 29, 1968

One of the hardest working committees of this Convention has only come into the limelight during the last few weeks.

Because of the nature of its work and the fact that it could not begin to properly function until after the various proposals were sent to it, the Committee on Style and Drafting was faced with a tremendous task. There is no question that this committee, as evidenced by the fine reports that it has presented, has performed its work in an excellent manner and with deliberate speed and dispatch.

The co-chairmen, Delegate Pelletier and Johnson, and all the members of the committee should be congratulated; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Constitutional Convention extend its heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the excellent manner in which the Committee on Style and Drafting handled the tasks assigned to them.

AMENDMENT TO STAFF RESOLUTION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Otto.

DELEGATE OTTO. Mr. President, yesterday this body approved a resolution in which we praised the staff of The Reporter, our official newspaper. Here I found inadvertently I left out a name and this is an important name because it is the artist of the newspaper, Marie Swengel. If the body approves it, I would like the name added.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure that that can be done. Is there any objection to the amendment of that resolution? The Chair hears none so we will place it in the record and see that the resolution is amended.

DELEGATE OTTO. Thank you.

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE BRENNAN requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 29, 1968

The standing Committee on Taxation and State Finance has terminated its labors on behalf of the Convention, with the successful completion and final passage of Proposals Three, Four and Five. It is appropriate therefore, that we now give recognition to the members of the staff assigned to the Committee who have so ably assisted it in performing its duties.

Our Committee Staff Director, Mitchell J. Hunt, who was loaned to the Convention by the Eastern Division of the Pennsylvania Economy League, and who will return to his duties as Supervisor of County Branches of that estimable organization after the Convention, deserves special commendation for the able and devoted service which he has performed for the Committee.

Marx S. Leopold, Esquire, Research Assistant to the Subcommittee on State Debt, a member of the Pennsylvania Bar and former member of the staff of Congressman James M. Quigley, rendered excellent service to his subcommittee and to the Committee as a whole.

Jacob A. Myers, a graduate of Dickinson College who interned for Congressman George Goodling, and who, following the Convention, will be joining the Pennsylvania Economy League State Branch, was Research Assistant to the Subcommittee on Sinking Fund and Budget, and in that capacity proved to be a loyal, patient and enthusiastic staff member.

David William Thomas, a student at Alderson-Broaddus College, is a Research Assistant assigned to the Committee, performed his duties for the entire Committee in an able and courteous manner.

Mention should also be made of the secretarial staff members assigned to the Committee. Donna Clark, Mary Shertzer, JoAnn M. Garofalo, Joanne Books and Alice Zeidler, gave many hours of careful and competent assistance to the Committee and its members.

Mention must also be made of the service to the Committee given by Gerald H. Goldberg, Esquire, who acted in the dual capacity of Legal Counsel to the Committee and as Research Counsel to the Subcommittee on Taxation. As a former Chairman of the State Sales Tax Board of Review, and writer and lecturer in the field of State Taxation, Mr. Goldberg was well qualified for his duties.

The Committee on Taxation and State Finance desires to express its appreciation to and regard for all of the staff members hereinabove named; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Constitutional Convention of Pennsylvania congratulate Mitchell J. Hunt and all of the above named staff members, and express its gratitude to them for a task well done; and be it further RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution be prepared for Mitchell J. Hunt and the other staff members herein named, as a token of the appreciation of the Convention.

RECOMMENDATION No. 2 OF THE COMMITTEE ON ARRANGEMENT, SUBMISSION AND ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE

POTT-LEONARD AMENDMENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Leonard.

DELEGATE LEONARD. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 5.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to Recommendation No. 2 of the Committee?

DELEGATES POTT and LEONARD offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Recommendation, Ballot Question III, page 1, lines 3 and 4 of III, by striking out "incentives and benefits, retaining certain tax benefits,"

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Leonard.

DELEGATE LEONARD. We have only eliminated seven words in the middle part of the paragraph, so the question will now read, "Shall Proposal 5 on Taxation adopted by the Constitutional Convention, permitting certain tax exemptions," and striking out the balance of that line and the first three words of the next line, "providing for reimbursement of local taxing authorities under certain conditions and related matters, be approved?"

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May I suggest, Chairman Leonard, that if you could read that language again and refer to exactly where it was stricken out, our delegates would be able to correct it. Those delegates that do not have copies of the amendment will be able to correct the language.

DELEGATE LEONARD. We are merely deleting certain words following, "Shall Proposal 5 on Taxation adopted by the Constitutional Convention, permitting certain tax exemptions," and striking out the balance of that line and the first three words on the next line, "providing for reimbursement of local taxing authorities under certain conditions and related matters, be approved?"

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anyone wish to be heard either for or against this amendment?

DELEGATE GOUGER. I would like to ask Chairman Leonard to tell us why he wants these removed.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I am sure Chairman Leonard will respond to your question.

DELEGATE LEONARD. Mr. President, this is for simplicity. We believe the words in the sentence "incentives, benefits, retaining certain tax benefits" confuses more than it adds, so we have eliminated that for the benefit of brevity and clarity; we hope.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Barry.

DELEGATE BARRY. This removes the objections I had when I spoke against the original wording of the language and I, therefore, move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Barry and seconded by Delegate Miller.

I think we must vote on the amendment first. The question before the House is, shall the amendment being offered by Delegate Leonard be adopted, and we will now unlock the voting machine. All those voting "yea" will vote to adopt the amendment. Those voting "nay" will vote to reject the amendment.

The question recurs,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Leonard?

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE RUTH requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 29, 1968

WHEREAS, The Judiciary Committee's proposal has reasonably withstood extended amendments even though subjected to more debate expanded over nine convention days and many nights, than any other proposal; and

WHEREAS, The full Judiciary Committee recognizes its proposal couldn't have withstood such unprecedented onslaught without the unselfish time and effort expended beyond any reasonable expectation by certain dedicated individuals, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Convention thanks the Judiciary Committee and wishes to commend and congratulate its General Counsel, Carter Buller, Professor Arthur Frankston, Gene Urey, Harold Jacobs, and attractive and most competent Betty Clements, Secretary to the Committee Chairman, the Sub-committee secretaries, Marcia Mazia, Judy Gamble, Nancy Smith, Darlene Ruth, Pauline Cambell and other staff members for work beyond the call of duty.

QUESTION V

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have one more question and the remaining question is Question V in connection with the Judiciary.

Let me ask the question. Is there an amendment to it? Delegate Scranton is pointing to Delegate Amsterdam.

AMSTERDAM AMENDMENT TO QUESTION V

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Recommendation No. 2 of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to Recommendation No. 2 of the Committee?

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Recommendation, Ballot Question V, page 2, lines 3 to 8 of V, by striking out "prescribing qualifications of" in 3rd line and all of 4th to 8th lines and inserting: providing directly, or through Supreme Court rules, for the qualifications, selection, tenure, removal, discipline and retirement of, and prohibiting certain activities by justices, judges, and justices of the peace, and related matters be approved?

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Amsterdam.

DELEGATE AMSTERDAM. Mr. President, I believe that the amendment which we are recommending has been passed out and we are recommending this as a result of discussions which we have had with members of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People. I believe that the change will be satisfactory to them.

The amendment is intended to advise the electorate either directly or through Supreme Court rules the matters of qualification, selection and tenure, removal and discipline, as well as retirement, and prohibited activities, which are applicable equally to justices of the peace as well as they are to justices and judges. In other words, the Judiciary Article provides for justices of the peace in Section 18 (k), that the Supreme Court shall prescribe rules of procedure for the suspension, removal, discipline and compulsory retirement of justices of the peace and the other items are with regard to the justices of the peace and are directly provided for in the Judiciary Article and it is for that reason we have asked that that be noted, so that the public will know when they are voting on Article V that this is covered.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We now recognize Chairman Nelson.

DELEGATE NELSON. Mr. President, I, personally, have no objection to the change and, unless some member of the committee rises to indicate the contrary, I think we can all assume that no member of the committee objects to the change.

I move the adoption of the amendment.

DELEGATE BAGENSTOSE. I second the motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Ready for the question?

Unlock the voting machine.

The question. Will the Convention adopt the amendment to Question V on Recommendation No. 2 of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People?

All those voting "yea" will vote to support the amendment, those voting "nay" vote to reject it.

The question recurs,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Amsterdam?

RECOMMENDATION NO. 3

of the

1. The Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People recommends that the Constitutional Convention adopt an Address to the People in the form hereto attached.

2. The Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People further recommends that the Address to the People and copies of a condensed version thereof be printed and distributed as directed by the Committee on Administration and Finance.

Respectfully submitted,

By: JAMES W. NELSON
By: WILLIAM H. GRAY, JR.

Co-Chairmen, Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People

THIS IS SUGGESTED LAYOUT AND TYPE STYLE FOR THE PROPOSAL AND SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION SECTION OF THE ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE.

SECTION II

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1

Section eighteen of article two of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended and four new sections are added after said section, to read:

Section 18

The General Assembly at its first session after the adoption of this Constitution, and immediately after each United States decennial census, shall apportion the State into senatorial and representative districts agreeably to the provisions of the two next preceding sections.

Commentary:

The board of county commissioners of any county may appoint at any time a charter board of not more than nine members, and shall appoint a charter board within thirty days after receipt of a petition signed by five per cent of the qualified voters of the county or by ten thousand voters, whichever is less. If additional charter board members are nominated by petitions signed by three per cent of the qualified voters of the county or by three thousand voters, whichever is less, which shall be delivered to the board of county commissioners within sixty days after the charter board shall have been appointed, then the board of county commissioners shall call a special election not less than thirty nor more than ninety days after receipt of the petitions unless a regular election falls within the designated period. The appointees of the board of county commissioners and those nominated by petitions shall be placed on the ballot in alphabetical order without party designation. The voters shall be entitled to cast votes for, and elect, a number of nominees equal to the number of charter board members originally selected by the board of county commissioners and those so elected shall constitute the charter board.

ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE OF PENNSYLVANIA

This address presents the proposals for constitutional revision adopted by the limited Constitutional Convention which will be submitted to the voters of Pennsylvania for ratification on April 23, 1968.

The proposals amend, replace or supplement Articles and Sections of the present Constitution, as amended, in four subject areas. As set forth in Act No. 2 which was ratified by the people to call the Convention, these four subject areas are: (1) Legislative Apportionment; (2) Taxation and State Finance; (3) Local Government, and (4) Judicial Administration, Organization, Selection and Tenure.

The Convention directed that this address be prepared and distributed so that the citizens of the Commonwealth would have full opportunity to study and evaluate the proposals before voting on them.

The important decision facing the voters is whether to complete the task of modernizing Pennsylvania's basic law by ratifying these proposals—or to leave the task only partially completed by rejecting them.

Our present Constitution was drafted in 1872 and 1873 against a background of corruption and special-interest legislation. Before the turn of the century, a number of its provisions were outmoded and it was beginning to hamper the government's ability to meet the needs of the people under changing social and economic conditions. Since 1900, the demand for revision steadily increased but six times over this same period the voters rejected calls for open Constitutional Conventions.

Early in this decade, it was decided to accomplish modernization of the Constitution by the gradual process of amendment. Twelve amendments were drafted to effect the needed updating of the basic law. In the period from 1964 to 1967, the Legislature twice adopted nine of these amendments.

Two of these nine were ratified by the people in 1966, and the other seven were approved in the May, 1967, Primary Election. These nine amendments made sweeping changes in many Articles and Sections of the Constitution. In fact, they did the entire job of modernizing except for the four subject areas assigned to the limited Constitutional Convention when its call was approved by the voters in May of 1967.

Act No. 2 directed the election of 150 delegates to the Convention and designated 13 ex-officio delegates, making a total of 163. Three delegates were elected from each of the fifty Senatorial Districts of the State in the Municipal Election of November 7, 1967. The 13 ex-officio delegates included the Lieutenant Governor and the Majority and Minority leadership of the Senate and House of Representatives.

Two alternative methods of nominating delegates were provided in the Act. The first, and most generally used, was nomination by political party. County Committees of each party were empowered to nominate two candidates in each Senatorial District. The second method permitted individuals to get on the ballot by filing petitions signed by at least 500 electors residing in their Senatorial Districts.

In the November Election, each elector was entitled to vote for two candidates for delegate from his Senatorial District. The three candidates receiving the highest number of votes were certified as delegates to the Convention. This method made possible minority party representation in each district.

Act No. 2 not only limited the subject areas the Convention could consider, but also laid down other restrictions.

First, it set a three-month life for the Convention, beginning December 1, 1967, and adjourning sine die February 29, 1968.

Second, it specifically prohibited the Convention from making any recommendation that clearly permits or prohibits the imposition of a graduated income tax.

Third, it prohibited the Convention from changing in any manner that portion of the Constitution which specifies that all taxes shall be uniform, upon the same class of subjects, within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax.

Fourth, it prohibited the Convention from altering the restriction that the Motor License Fund should be used solely for public highways, bridges and air navigation facilities.

In addition, Act No. 2 specified that in presenting Convention recommendations to the electorate in April of 1968, proposed changes should be submitted separately with no less than one question for each article, and a separate question for the amendment on legislative apportionment.

A Preparatory Committee headed by Lieutenant Governor Raymond J. Broderick and the officers of both Houses of the General Assembly held preconvention public hearings on the subjects to be considered by the Convention and prepared, with the assistance of qualified authorities in the fields denoted, nine reference manuals that were used extensively by the delegates in their study and deliberations.

Official convening of the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1967-1968 occurred in the Hall of the House of Representatives of the Capitol in Harrisburg, December 1, 1967. The delegates were certified by the Secretary of the Commonwealth and the oath of office was administered by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

The Convention organized by the election of the following officers: Lieutenant Governor Raymond J. Broderick, President; Former State Senator Robert P. Casey, First Vice President; Frank A. Orban, Jr., Second Vice President; and James A. Michener, Secretary.

After two working days, the Convention adopted its rules and within a week eight major committees and sixteen sub-committees were appointed. The major committees were: Legislative Apportionment; Judiciary; Local Government; Taxation and State Finance; Style and Drafting; Rules; Administration and Finance, and Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People. These committees met daily following the plenary sessions of the Convention.

To assist the delegates in their work, a staff under the direction of John W. Ingram, made up of administrators, legal counsel, researchers, technical experts, secretaries, clerks and pages was appointed by the Convention.

During December, after the Convention had organized, delegate proposals were received and public hearings held. Delegates submitted 209 proposals which were referred to the appropriate committees and sub-committees where they were carefully studied, analyzed and discussed. Many features of these delegate proposals were contained in the final committee proposals which were subsequently offered to the Convention. Public hearings were held by each of the substantive committees to augment the information gained from the pre-convention hearings conducted by the Preparatory Committee.

During the first half of January, sub-committees completed their deliberations and prepared their reports and recommendations to the full standing committees. The last half of the month was devoted to exhaustive debate and amendment of the proposals by the full committees, leading to the eventual adoption of the formal committee proposals for presentation to the Convention.

Seven such committee proposals were given to the Convention on or before February 2, 1968. They were: Proposals Nos. 1 and 2, Legislative Apportionment; Proposals Nos. 3, 4 and 5, Taxation and State Finance; Proposal No. 6, Local Government, and Proposal No. 7, The Judiciary.

Each of these proposals was in turn debated and amended by the full Convention. After first and second consideration each proposal was sent to the Style and Drafting Committee for careful screening, to be checked for substantive matters omitted and to be sure the ideas were expressed in clear, concise language, and arranged in logical sequence. After being returned to the Convention by this Committee, the proposal was placed on third consideration and was finally adopted by the Convention.

The seven proposals adopted by the Convention are presented in full text with a summary and explanation in the second section of this address document, beginning on Page 7. The Articles and Sections of the present Constitution they are designed to replace are to be found in the Appendix, beginning on Page 41.

The adopted proposals, together with the questions framed by the Convention for submission to the electors, will be certified by the President and Secretary of the Convention to the Secretary of the Commonwealth by March 7, 1968 in order that proper arrangements can be made for the 1968 Primary Election.

The adopted proposals now to be offered to the voters of Pennsylvania are the end product of thousands of hours of research, study and debate by 163 delegates who came to the Convention from every part of the State, with broad diversity of backgrounds and possessing personal or regional viewpoints, but with the over-riding determination to write provisions that would be in the best interest of the Commonwealth and its people.

Delegates to the Convention do not contend that they have drafted ideal or perfect proposals, for that would have been impossible to accomplish. Rather, they take the more practical view that these new provisions are sound and will be acceptable to the great majority of Pennsylvanians. Further, they firmly believe these proposals will not only complete the task of modernizing the Constitution but also give Pennsylvania a basic law that is flexible and forward-looking—well suited to the challenges of the years ahead.

The decision is now in the hands of the people. In this regard the powers of the people are eloquently set forth in Article 1, Section 2, of our Constitution which reads:

> "All power is inherent in the people, and all free governments are founded on their authority and instituted for their peace, safety and happiness. For the advancement of these ends they have at all times an inalienable and indefeasible right to alter, reform or abolish their government in such manner as they may think proper."

Shall modernization of our Constitution be completed or left only partially completed? This is the basic question the people will be called upon to answer in voting on these proposals April 23.

PROPOSAL NO. 1

A PROPOSAL

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania providing for apportionment of legislative districts.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Sections sixteen and seventeen of article two of the Constitution of Pennsylvania are amended to read:

Section 16. Legislative Districts.—The Commonwealth shall be divided into fifty senatorial and two hundred three representative districts, which shall be composed of compact and contiguous territory as nearly equal in population as practicable. Each senatorial district shall elect one Senator, and each representative district one Representative. Unless absolutely necessary no county, city, incorporated town, borough, township or ward shall be divided in forming either a senatorial or representative district.

SCHEDULE

The foregoing amendment to article two of the Constitution of Pennsylvania if approved by the electorate voting on April 23, 1968, shall become effective the year following that in which the next Federal decennial census is officially reported as required by Federal law.

PROPOSAL NO. 2

A PROPOSAL

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania providing for apportionment of legislative districts.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Section eighteen of article two of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended to read:

SUMMARY and EXPLANATION

The composition of the General Assembly remains the same.

The Commonwealth will be divided into fifty (50) Senatorial Districts and two hundred three (203) Representative Districts. Each Senatorial District will elect one Senator, and each Representative District will elect one Representative.

No county, city, town, borough, township or ward shall be divided in forming such districts unless absolutely necessary.

(Proposal No. 2—Cont.)

Section 17. Legislative Reapportionment Commission.—(a) In each year following that in which the Federal decennial census is officially reported as required by Federal law, a Legislative Reapportionment Commission shall be constituted for the purpose of reapportioning the Commonwealth. The commission shall act by a majority of its entire membership.

(b) The commission shall consist of five members: four of whom shall be the majority and minority leaders of both the Senate and the House of Representatives, or deputies appointed by each of them, and a chairman selected as hereinafter provided. No later than the fourth Monday in January of the year following the year in which the Federal decennial census is officially reported as required by Federal law, the four members shall be certified by the President Pro Tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives to the elections officer of the Commonwealth who under law shall have supervision over elections.

The four members within forty-five days after their certification shall select the fifth member, who shall serve as chairman of the commission, and shall immediately certify his name to such elections officer. The chairman shall be a citizen of the Commonwealth other than a local, State or Federal official holding an office to which compensation is attached.

If the four members fail to select the fifth member within the time prescribed, a majority of the entire membership of the Supreme Court within thirty days thereafter shall appoint the chairman as aforesaid and certify his appointment to such elections officer.

Any vacancy in the commission shall be filled within fifteen days in the same manner in which such position was originally filled.

(c) No later than ninety days after either the commission has been duly certified or the population data for the Commonwealth as determined by the Federal decennial census are available, whichever is later in time, the commission shall file a preliminary reapportionment plan with such elections officer. The commission shall have thirty days after filing the preliminary plan to make corrections in the plan.

Any person aggrieved by the preliminary plan shall have the same thirty-day period to file exceptions with the commission in which case the commission shall have thirty days after the date the exceptions were filed to prepare and file with such elections officer a revised reapportionment plan. If no exceptions are filed within thirty days, or if filed and acted upon, the commission's plan shall be final and have the force of law.

(d) Any aggrieved person may file an appeal from the final plan directly to the Supreme Court within thirty days after the filing thereof. If the appellant establishes that the final plan is contrary to law, the Supreme Court shall issue an order remanding the plan to the commission and directing

The duty of reapportioning the General Assembly is delegated to a five-member Legislative Reapportionment Commission to be constituted following each Federal decennial census.

The Commission will consist of the Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate and the House of Representatives and a fifth member selected by them. The fifth member shall be the Chairman of the Commission. The Chairman may not hold any public office to which compensation is attached.

the commission to reapportion the Commonwealth in a manner not inconsistent with such order.

(e) When the Supreme Court has finally decided an appeal or when the last day for filing an appeal has passed with no appeal taken, the reapportionment plan shall have the force of law and the districts therein provided shall be used thereafter in elections to the General Assembly until the next reapportionment as required under this section 17.

(f) The General Assembly shall appropriate sufficient funds for the compensation and expenses of members and staff appointed by the commission, and other necessary expenses. The members of the commission shall be entitled to such compensation for their services as the General Assembly from time to time shall determine, but no part thereof shall be paid until a preliminary plan is filed. If a preliminary plan is filed but the commission fails to file a revised or final plan within the time prescribed, the commission members shall forfeit all right to compensation not paid.

(g) If a preliminary, revised or final reapportionment plan is not filed by the commission within the time prescribed by this section, unless the time be extended by the Supreme Court for cause shown, the Supreme Court shall immediately proceed on its own motion to reapportion the Commonwealth.

(h) Any reapportionment plan filed by the commission, or ordered or prepared by the Supreme Court upon the failure of the commission to act, shall be published by the elections officer once in at least one newspaper of general circulation in each senatorial and representative district. The publication shall contain a map of the Commonwealth showing the complete reapportionment of the General Assembly by districts, and a map showing the reapportioned districts in the area normally served by the newspaper in which the publication is made. The publication shall also state the population of the senatorial and representative districts having the smallest and largest population and the percentage variation of such districts from the average population for senatorial and representative districts.

SCHEDULE

The foregoing amendment to article two of the Constitution of Pennsylvania if approved by the electorate voting on April 23, 1968, shall become effective the year following that in which the next Federal decennial census is officially reported as required by Federal law.

STATE TAXATION AND FINANCE

BALLOT QUESTION II

Shall Proposals 3 and 4 on STATE FINANCE, adopted by the Constitutional Convention, providing for a limit on borrowing based on tax revenues, budgeting, financial planning, auditing and related matters, be approved?	YES
	NO

PROPOSAL NO. 3

A PROPOSAL

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania further providing for Commonwealth indebtedness.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended by adding after section six two new sections to read:

Section 7. Commonwealth Indebtedness.—(a) No debt shall be incurred by or on behalf of the Commonwealth except by law and in accordance with the provisions of this section.

(1) Debt may be incurred without limit to suppress insurrection, rehabilitate areas affected by man-made or natural disaster, or to implement unissued authority approved by the electors prior to the adoption of this article.

(2) The Governor, State Treasurer and Auditor General, acting jointly, may (i) issue tax anticipation notes having a maturity within the fiscal year of issue and payable exclusively from revenues received in the same fiscal year, and (ii) incur debt for the purpose of refunding other debt, if such refunding debt matures within the term of the original debt.

(3) Debt may be incurred without limit for purposes specifically itemized in the law authorizing such debt, if the question whether the debt shall be incurred has been submitted to the electors and approved by a majority of those voting on the question.

(4) Debt may be incurred without the approval of the electors for capital projects specifically itemized in a capital budget, if such debt will not cause the amount of all net debt outstanding to exceed one and three-quarters times the average of the annual tax revenues deposited in the previous five fiscal years as certified by the Auditor General. For the purposes of this subsection, debt outstanding shall not include debt incurred under clauses (1) and (2) (i), or debt incurred under clause (2) (ii) if the original debt would not be so considered, or debt incurred under sub-

SUMMARY and EXPLANATION

Proposal 3 is intended to establish a realistic limit on the borrowing authority of the Legislature. The limit is set at 1.75 times the average yearly tax collections over a five-year period. This eliminates the necessity of resorting to the device of creating authorities to finance capital expenditures. Authority and other debt which is self-liquidating and debt approved by the voters in a referendum are excluded from the debt limit, as section (3) unless the General Assembly shall so provide in the law authorizing such debt.

(b) All debt incurred for capital projects shall mature within a period not to exceed the estimated useful life of the projects as stated in the authorizing law, and when so stated shall be conclusive. All debt, except indebtedness permitted by clause (2) (i), shall be amortized in substantial and regular amounts, the first of which shall be due prior to the expiration of a period equal to one-tenth the term of the debt.

(c) As used in this section, debt shall mean the issued and outstanding obligations of the Commonwealth and shall include obligations of its agencies or authorities to the extent they are to be repaid from lease rentals or other charges payable directly or indirectly from revenues of the Commonwealth. Debts shall not include either (1) that portion of obligations to be repaid from charges made to the public for the use of the capital projects financed, as determined by the Auditor General, or (2) obligations to be repaid from lease rentals or other charges payable by a school district or other local taxing authority, or (3) obligations to be repaid by agencies or authorities created for the joint benefit of the Commonwealth and one or more other State governments.

(d) If sufficient funds are not appropriated for the timely payment of the interest upon and installments of principal of all debt, the State Treasurer shall set apart from the first revenues thereafter received applicable to the appropriate fund a sum sufficient to pay such interest and installments of principal, and shall so apply the money so set apart. The State Treasurer may be required to set aside and apply such revenues at the suit of any holder of Commonwealth obligations.

Section 2. Section nine of the article is amended to read:

Section 8. Commonwealth Credit Not to be Pledged.—The credit of the Commonwealth shall not be pledged or loaned to any individual, company, corporation or association nor shall the Commonwealth become a joint owner or stockholder in any company, corporation or association.

Section 9. Municipal Debt Not to be Assumed by Commonwealth.—The Commonwealth shall not assume the debt, or any part thereof, of any county, city, borough, incorporated town, township or any similar general purpose unit of government unless such debt shall have been incurred to enable the Commonwealth to suppress insurrection or to assist the Commonwealth in the discharge of any portion of its present indebtedness.

SCHEDULE

The existing sections four, five, eleven, twelve, thirteen, sixteen, seventeen, twenty-one, twenty-two and twenty-three of article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania are hereby repealed.

Effective when the last bonds have been issued under their authority, sections twenty-four and twenty-five of article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania are hereby repealed.

is debt incurred to suppress insurrection or rehabilitation areas affected by disaster.

Payment of principal and interest of all debt of the Commonwealth is guaranteed by a requirement that revenues be set apart for the purpose.

Any debt incurred for capital improvements must be amortized over a period of time which does not exceed the useful life of the improvement.

PROPOSAL NO. 4

A PROPOSAL

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania specifying audit control of public moneys and establishing and regulating a balanced State budget for the next fiscal year and financial plans for the succeeding five years.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended by adding after section nine a new section to read:

Section 10. Audit.—The financial affairs of any entity funded or financially aided by the Commonwealth, and all departments, boards, commissions, agencies, instrumentalities, authorities and institutions of the Commonwealth, shall be subject to audits made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards.

Any Commonwealth officer whose approval is necessary for any transaction relative to the financial affairs of the Commonwealth shall not be charged with the function of auditing that transaction after its occurrence.

Section 2. Article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended by adding after section eleven three new sections to read:

Section 12. Governor's Budgets and Financial Plan.—Annually, at the times set by law, the Governor shall submit to the General Assembly:

(a) A balanced operating budget for the ensuing fiscal year setting forth in detail (i) proposed expenditures classified by department or agency and by program and (ii) estimated revenues from all sources. If estimated revenues and available surplus are less than proposed expenditures, the Governor shall recommend specific additional sources of revenue sufficient to pay the deficiency and the estimated revenue to be derived from each source;

(b) A capital budget for the ensuing fiscal year setting forth in detail proposed expenditures to be financed from the proceeds of obligations of the Commonwealth or of its agencies or authorities or from operating funds; and

(c) A financial plan for not less than the next succeeding five fiscal years, which plan shall include for each such fiscal year:

(i) Projected operating expenditures classified by department or agency and by program, in reasonable detail, and estimated revenues, by major categories, from existing and additional sources, and

(ii) Projected expenditures for capital projects specifically itemized by purpose, and the proposed sources of financing each.

Section 13. Appropriations.—(a) Operating budget appropriations made by the General Assembly shall not exceed the actual and estimated revenues and surplus available in the same fiscal year.

SUMMARY and EXPLANATION

Under Proposal 4, the General Assembly must limit appropriations in a fiscal year to the revenues that are available for each fiscal year and must approve a capital budget for the next fiscal year.

The Governor must prepare annually a financial plan for at least a five-year period to disclose proposed programs, costs and revenues.

The Sinking Fund requirement is eliminated and the General Assembly is required to use any surplus at the end of the fiscal year in balancing the budget for the following year.

The financial affairs of the Commonwealth are subjected to audits made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards. The functions of pre-audit and post-audit may not be performed by the same officer or department.

(Proposal No. 4—Cont.)

(b) The General Assembly shall adopt a capital budget for the ensuing fiscal year.

Section 14. Surplus.—All surplus of operating funds at the end of the fiscal year shall be appropriated during the ensuing fiscal year by the General Assembly.

SCHEDULE

The following schedule is adopted: Sections ten, twelve, thirteen and fourteen of article eight shall take effect as soon as possible, but no later than July 1, 1970.

BALLOT QUESTION III

Shall Proposal 5 on TAXATION, adopted by the Constitutional Convention, permitting certain tax exemptions, providing for reimbursement of local taxing authorities under certain conditions and related matters, be approved?	YES
	NO

PROPOSAL NO. 5

A PROPOSAL

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania further regulating exemptions from taxation and providing for the taxation of real property of public utilities.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Section one of article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended and a new section is added after said section, to read:

Section 1. Uniformity of Taxation.—All taxes shall be uniform, upon the same class of subjects, within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax, and shall be levied and collected under general laws.

Section 2. Exemptions and Special Provisions. —(a) The General Assembly may by law exempt from taxation:

(i) Actual places of regularly stated religious worship;

(ii) Actual places of burial, when used or held by a person or organization deriving no private or corporate profit therefrom and no substantial part of whose activity consists of selling personal property in connection therewith;

(iii) That portion of public property which is actually and regularly used for public purposes;

(iv) That portion of the property owned and occupied by any branch, post or camp of honorably discharged servicemen or servicewomen which is actually and regularly used for benevolent, charitable or patriotic purposes; and

(v) Institutions of purely public charity, but in the case of any real property tax exemptions only that portion of real property of such institution

SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION

The provisions of the Constitution relating to exemption of certain classes of property from State and local taxation, including property of public utilities, are further defined by Proposal 5. In lieu of local taxation, a portion of the gross receipts tax imposed by the State upon public utilities will be allocated to local governments on a fair and equitable basis.

The requirement that all taxes shall be uniform upon the same classes of subjects and shall be levied and collected under general laws is retained. Also retained is the provision that gasoline taxes be earmarked for the motor license fund.

The General Assembly may permit special tax exemptions for needy citizens which local taxing authorities may grant if they so desire. The General Assembly may mandate such exemptions from real estate taxes only if they provide for local governments to be reimbursed for any losses suffered as a result of any such additional exemptions.

The General Assembly may also provide for exemptions or special taxing provisions to be which is actually and regularly used for the purposes of the institution.

(b) The General Assembly may, by law:

(i) Establish standards and qualifications for private forest reserves, and make special provision for the taxation thereof;

(ii) Establish as a class or classes of subjects of taxation the property or privileges of persons who, because of age, disability, infirmity or poverty are determined to be in need of tax exemption or of special tax provisions, and for any such class or classes, uniform standards and qualifications. The Commonwealth, or any other taxing authority, may adopt or employ such class or classes and standards and qualifications, and except as herein provided may impose taxes, grant exemptions, or make special tax provisions in accordance therewith. No exemption or special provision shall be made under this clause with respect to taxes upon the sale or use of personal property, and no exemption from any tax upon real property shall be granted by the General Assembly under this clause unless the General Assembly shall provide for the reimbursement of local taxing authorities by or through the Commonwealth for revenue losses occasioned by such exemption;

(iii) Establish standards and qualifications by which local taxing authorities may make uniform special tax provisions applicable to a taxpayer for a limited period of time to encourage improvement of deteriorating property or areas by an individual, association or corporation, or to encourage industrial development by a non-profit corporation; and

(iv) Make special tax provisions on any increase in value of real estate resulting from residential construction. Such special tax provisions shall be applicable for a period not to exceed two years.

(c) Citizens and residents of this Commonwealth, who served in any war or armed conflict in which the United States was engaged and were honorably discharged or released under honorable circumstances from active service, shall be exempt from the payment of all real property taxes upon the residence occupied by the said citizens and residents of this Commonwealth imposed by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania or any of its political subdivisions if, as a result of military service, they are blind, paraplegic or double or quadruple amputees, and if the State Veterans' Commission determines that such persons are in need of the tax exemptions granted herein.

Section 2. Sections one B, two, eighteen, twenty-four and twenty-five of article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania are renumbered three, five, eleven, fifteen and sixteen respectively, and section three of article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended to read:

Section 6. Taxation of Corporations.—The power to tax corporations and corporate property shall not be surrendered or suspended by any contract applicable for a limited period of time, generally at the option of local taxing authorities, to encourage rehabilitation of deteriorating areas, and promoting industrial and housing development.

Existing Sections 1b, 2, 3, 18, 24, and 25 of Article VIII are retained verbatim, except they are renumbered as Sections 3, 5, 6, 11, 15, and 16 respectively. (See Appendix pages 43-50.)

or grant to which the Commonwealth shall be a party.

Section 3. Article eight of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended by adding after section three, a new section, to read:

Section 4. Public Utilities.—The real property of public utilities is subject to real estate taxes imposed by local taxing authorities. Payment to the Commonwealth of gross receipts taxes or other special taxes in replacement of gross receipts taxes by a public utility and the distribution by the Commonwealth to the local taxing authorities of the amount is herein provided shall, however, be in lieu of local taxes upon its real property which is used or useful in furnishing its public utility service. The amount raised annually by such gross receipts or other special taxes shall not be less than the gross amount of real estate taxes which the local taxing authorities could have imposed upon such real property but for the exemption herein provided. This gross amount shall be determined in the manner provided by law. An amount equivalent to such real estate taxes shall be distributed annually among all local taxing authorities in the proportion which the total tax receipts of each local taxing authority bear to the total tax receipts of all local taxing authorities, or in such other equitable proportions as may be provided by law.

Notwithstanding the provisions of this section, any law which presently subjects real property of public utilities to local real estate taxation by local taxing authorities shall remain in full force and effect.

SCHEDULE

Sections one and two shall take effect as soon as possible, but no later than July 1, 1970. Section four shall take effect July 1, 1970, unless the General Assembly earlier provides enabling legislation in accordance therewith.

PROPOSAL NO. 6

A PROPOSAL

Amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania providing for local government in Pennsylvania.

SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION

(Proposal No. 6—Cont.)

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. The Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended by adding a new article to read:

ARTICLE IX
LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Section 1. Local Government.—The General Assembly shall provide by general law for local government within the Comonwealth. Such general law shall be uniform as to all classes of local government regarding procedural matters.

Section 2. Home Rule.—Municipalities shall have the right and power to frame and adopt home rule charters. Adoption, amendment or repeal of a home rule charter shall be by referendum. The General Assembly shall provide the procedure by which a home rule charter may be framed and its adoption, amendment or repeal presented to the electors. If the General Assembly does not so provide, a home rule charter or a procedure for framing and presenting a home rule charter may be presented to the electors by initiative or by the governing body of the municipality. A municipality which has a home rule charter may exercise any power or perform any function not denied by this Constitution, by its home rule charter or by the General Assembly at any time.

All units of local government are given the right to adopt a home rule charter under guidelines to be determined by the General Assembly.

Should the General Assembly fail to act within four years, any unit of local government may adopt a home rule charter by majority vote of the electorate in a referendum, and upon adoption of such a charter, will be entitled to exercise any power not denied to it by the Constitution, the General Assembly or its own charter.

Section 3. Optional Plans.—Municipalities shall have the right and power to adopt optional forms of government as provided by law. The General Assembly shall provide optional forms of government for all municipalities. An optional form of government shall be presented to the electors by initiative, by the governing body of the municipality, or by the General Assembly. Adoption or repeal of an optional form of government shall be by referendum.

The General Assembly is also required to provide optional forms of government for all municipalities. One optional form of government preserved to counties is a modified version of the present form of county government in which the offices of coroner and surveyor are removed as Constitutional offices; county treasurers will be permitted to succeed themselves; appointed public defenders are made county officers; residence requirements for appointed county officers are now statutory; all county officers are to be compensated solely by salary; and vacancies in the offices of county commissioner and county auditor will be filled as provided by the General Assembly instead of by the court of common pleas. Constitutional offices other than coroner and surveyor are retained.

Section 4. County Government.—County officers shall consist of commissioners, controllers or auditors, district attorneys, public defenders, treasurers, sheriffs, registers of wills, recorders of deeds, prothonotaries, clerks of the courts, and such others as may from time to time be provided by law.

County officers, except for public defenders who shall be appointed as shall be provided by law, shall be elected at the municipal elections and shall hold their offices for the term of four years, beginning on the first Monday of January next after their election, and until their successors shall be duly qualified; all vacancies shall be filled in such a manner as may be provided by law.

County officers shall be paid only by salary as provided by law for services performed for the county or any other governmental unit. Fees incidental to the conduct of any county office shall be payable directly to the county or the Commonwealth, or as otherwise provided by law.

Three county commissioners shall be elected in each county. In the election of these officers each qualified elector shall vote for no more than two persons, and the three persons receiving the highest number of votes shall be elected.

Provisions for county government in this section shall apply to every county except a county which has adopted a home rule charter or an optional form of government. One of the optional forms of county government provided by law shall include the provisions of this section.

Section 5. Intergovernmental Cooperation.—A municipality by act of its governing body may, or upon being required by initiative and referendum in the area affected shall, cooperate or agree in the exercise of any function, power or responsibility with, or delegate or transfer any function, power or responsibility to, one or more other governmental units including other municipalities or districts, the Federal government, any other state or its governmental units, or any newly created governmental unit.

The proposal allows any units of local government to cooperate with or delegate to, either voluntarily or through initiative and referendum, any other governmental unit, including a State or the Federal government; permits the General Assembly to provide for the government of areas involving more than one municipality, and provides for the granting of powers by the General Assembly to governmental units functioning on an intergovernmental or area-wide basis.

Section 6. Area Government.—The General Assembly shall provide for the establishment and dissolution of government of areas involving two or more municipalities or parts thereof.

Section 7. Area-wide Powers.—The General Assembly may grant powers to area governments or to municipalities within a given geographical area in which there exists intergovernmental cooperation or area government and designate the classes of municipalities subject to such legislation.

Section 8. Consolidation, Merger or Boundary Change.—Uniform Legislation. The General Assembly shall, within two years following the adoption of this article, enact uniform legislation establishing the procedure for consolidation, merger or change of the boundaries of municipalities.

The General Assembly is given two years to adopt uniform merger, consolidation and boundary laws. Annexation of territory of a contiguous unit is permitted upon approval by a majority vote of the electors of each of the local units involved, without the approval of the governing body subject to the right of the General Assembly to provide additional methods for boundary changes.

Initiative. The electors of any municipality shall have the right, by initiative and referendum, to consolidate, merge and change boundaries by a majority vote of those voting thereon in each municipality, without the approval of any governing body.

Study. The General Assembly shall designate an agency of the Commonwealth to study consolidation, merger and boundary changes, advise municipalities on all problems which might be connected therewith, and initiate local referendum.

An agency will be designated by the General Assembly to study and advise municipalities on consolidation, merger and boundary changes and to initiate local referenda.

Legislative Power. Nothing herein shall prohibit or prevent the General Assembly from providing additional methods for consolidation, merger or change of boundaries.

Section 9. Appropriation for Public Purposes.—The General Assembly shall not authorize any municipality or incorporated district to become a stockholder in any company, association or corporation, or to obtain or appropriate money for, or to loan its credit to, any corporation, association, institution or individual. The General Assembly may provide standards by which municipalities or school districts may give financial assistance or lease property to public service, industrial or commercial enterprises if it shall find that such assist-

Provision is made for the General Assembly to establish standards pursuant to which any municipality may give financial assistance to public service, industrial, or commercial enterprises if necessary for the health, safety or welfare of the Commonwealth or any municipality. Existing rights of municipalities are preserved.

ance or leasing is necessary to the health, safety or welfare of the Commonwealth or any municipality or school district. Existing authority of any municipality or incorporated district to obtain or appropriate money for, or to loan its credit to, any corporation, association, institution or individual, is preserved.

Section 10. Local Government Debt.—Subject only to the restrictions imposed by this section, the General Assembly shall prescribe the debt limits of all units of local government including municipalities and school districts. For such purposes, the debt limit base shall be a percentage of the total revenue, as defined by the General Assembly, of the unit of local government computed over a specific period immediately preceding the year of borrowing. The debt limit to be prescribed in every such case shall exclude all indebtedness (1) for any project to the extent that it is self-liquidating or self-supporting or which has heretofore been defined as self-liquidating or self-supporting, or (2) which has been approved by referendum held in such manner as shall be provided by law. The provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to the City or County of Philadelphia.

Debt limits will be established by the General Assembly for all units of local government based on a percentage of revenue.

Financing of local projects through Authorities will continue to be permitted, and neither self-liquidating indebtedness nor debt approved by the voters in a referendum will be included within the debt limitation.

Any unit of local government, including municipalities and school districts, incurring any indebtedness, shall at or before the time of so doing adopt a convenant, which shall be binding upon it so long as any such indebtedness shall remain unpaid, to make payments out of its sinking fund or any other of its revenues or funds at such time and in such annual amounts specified in such covenant as shall be sufficient for the payment of the interest thereon and the principal thereof when due.

Added security will be provided for bondholders through a binding covenant to pay from first tax revenues in place of the current requirement that an annual tax be levied.

Section 11. Local Reapportionment.—Within the year following that in which the Federal decennial census is officially reported as required by Federal law, and at such other times as the governing body of any municipality shall deem necessary, each municipality having a governing body not entirely elected at large shall be reapportioned, by its governing body or as shall otherwise be provided by uniform law, into districts which shall be composed of compact and contiguous territory as nearly equal in population as practicable, for the purpose of describing the districts for those not elected at large.

Each local governing body to the extent that the members are not elected at large, will be required to reapportion itself within one year following certification of each Federal decennial census into districts that are compact, contiguous and as nearly equal in population as practicable.

Section 12. Philadelphia Debt.—The debt of the City of Philadelphia may be increased in such amount that the total debt of said city shall not exceed thirteen and one-half percent of the average of the annual assessed valuations of the taxable realty therein, during the ten years immediately preceding the year in which such increase is made, but said city shall not increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding three percent upon such average assessed valuation of realty, without the consent of the electors thereof at a public election held in such manner as shall be provided by law.

Debt limitations and governmental structure of the City of Philadelphia are unchanged.

In ascertaining the debt-incurring capacity of the City of Philadelphia at any time, there shall be deducted from the debt of said city so much of such debt as shall have been incurred, or is about to be incurred, and the proceeds thereof expended, or about to be expended, upon any public improvement, or in construction, purchase or condemnation of any public utility, or part thereof, or facility therefor, if such public improvement or public utility, or part thereof, or facility therefor, whether separately, or in connection with any other public improvement or public utility, or part thereof, or facility therefor, may reasonably be expected to yield revenue in excess of operating expenses sufficient to pay the interest and sinking fund charges thereon. The method of determining such amount, so to be deducted, shall be as now prescribed, or which may hereafter be prescribed by law.

In incurring indebtedness for any purpose the City of Philadelphia may issue its obligations maturing not later than fifty years from the date thereof, with provision for a sinking fund to be in equal or graded annual or other periodical installments. Where any indebtedness shall be or shall have been incurred by said City of Philadelphia for the purpose of the construction or improvement of public works or utilities of any character, from which income or revenue is to be derived by said city, or for the reclamation of land to be used in the construction of wharves or docks owned or to be owned by said city, such obligations may be in an amount sufficient to provide for, and may include the amount of the interest and sinking fund charges accruing and which may accrue thereon throughout the period of construction, and until the expiration of one year after the completion of the work for which said indebtedness shall have been incurred.

No debt shall be incurred by, or on behalf of, the County of Philadelphia.

Section 13. Abolition of County Offices in Philadelphia.—(a) In Philadelphia all county offices are hereby abolished, and the city shall henceforth perform all functions of county government within its area through officers selected in such manner as may be provided by law.

(b) Local and special laws, regulating the affairs of the City of Philadelphia and creating offices or prescribing the powers and duties of officers of the City of Philadelphia, shall be valid notwithstanding the provisions of section thirty-two of article three of this Constitution.

(c) All laws applicable to the County of Philadelphia shall apply to the City of Philadelphia.

(d) The City of Philadelphia shall have, assume and take over all powers, property, obligations and indebtedness of the County of Philadelphia.

(e) The provisions of section two of this article shall apply with full force and effect to the functions of the county government hereafter to be performed by the city government.

(f) Upon adoption of this amendment all county officers shall become officers of the City of Philadelphia, and until the General Assembly shall otherwise provide, shall continue to perform their duties and be elected, appointed, compensated and organized in such manner as may be provided by the provisions of this Constitution and the laws of the Commonwealth in effect at the time this amendment becomes effective, but such officers serving when this amendment becomes effective shall be permitted to complete their terms.

Section 14. Definitions.—As used in this article, the following words shall have the following meanings:

"Municipality" means a county, city, borough, incorporated town, township or any similar general purpose unit of government which shall hereafter be created by the General Assembly.

"Initiative" means the filing with the applicable election officials at least ninety days prior to the next primary or general election of a petition containing a proposal for referendum signed by electors comprising five percent of the number of electors voting for the office of Governor in the last gubernatorial general election in each municipality or area affected. The applicable election official shall place the proposal on the ballot in a manner fairly representing the content of the petition for decision by referendum at said election. Initiative on a similar question shall not be submitted more often than once in five years. No enabling law shall be required for initiative.

"Referendum" means approval of a question placed on the ballot, by initiative or otherwise, by a majority vote of the electors voting thereon.

Section 2. Sections seven, eight, ten, fifteen and nineteen of article eight; section one of article thirteen; sections one, two, three, four, five, six, seven and eight of article fourteen and sections one, two, three, four and five of article fifteen are repealed.

SCHEDULE

This new article and the repeal of existing sections shall take effect on the date of approval by the electorate, except that the following sections shall take effect on the effective date of legislation adopted pursuant to the sections or the date indicated below, whichever shall first occur.

The first, third and fourth paragraphs of section eight shall take effect two years after the effective date. The second sentence of section one, the fourth sentence of section two, all of section three, the third paragraph of section four, and the first paragraph of section ten shall take effect four years after the effective date. The second sentence of section one and the first paragraph of section eight on Uniform Legislation shall be construed so as to be consistent with the jurisdiction of this Convention.

PROPOSAL NO. 7

A PROPOSAL

Repealing article five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania relating to the Judiciary and adding a new Judiciary article.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HEREBY PROPOSES AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. The Constitution of Pennsylvania is amended by adding after article four, a new article to read:

ARTICLE
THE JUDICIARY

Section 1. Unified Judicial System.—The judicial power of the Commonwealth shall be vested in a unified judicial system consisting of the Supreme Court, the Superior Court, the Commonwealth Court, courts of common pleas, community courts, municipal and traffic courts in the City of Philadelphia, such other courts as may be provided by law and justices of the peace. All courts and justices of the peace and their jurisdiction shall be in this unified judicial system.

Section 2. Supreme Court.—The Supreme Court (a) shall be the highest court of the Commonwealth and in this court shall be reposed the supreme judicial power of the Commonwealth;

(b) shall consist of seven justices, one of whom shall be the Chief Justice; and

(c) shall have such jurisdiction as shall be provided by law.

Section 3. Superior Court.—The Superior Court shall consist of seven judges, one of whom shall be the President Judge, and its jurisdiction shall be as provided by law.

Section 4. Commonwealth Court.—The Commonwealth Court shall be a State-wide court, and shall consist of the number of judges and have such jurisdiction as shall be provided by law. One of its judges shall be the president judge.

Section 5. Courts of Common Pleas.—There shall be one court of common pleas for each judicial district (a) having such divisions and consisting of such number of judges as shall be provided by law, one of whom shall be the president judge; and

SUMMARY and EXPLANATION

This proposal creates for the first time in Pennsylvania a completely unified judicial system.

All courts of the Commonwealth—the Superior Court, a State-wide court to be known as the Commonwealth Court, Courts of Common Pleas, Community Courts where adopted, the Municipal and Traffic Courts in the City of Philadelphia, and such other courts as may be provided by the General Assembly, Justices of the Peace—are made subject to the supervision and administrative control of the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court is authorized to appoint a Court Administrator and such subordinates as may be necessary to aid it in the supervision and control of the unified judicial system.

The number of members of the Supreme and Superior Courts will continue to be seven members for each.

Common Pleas Courts shall have such number of judges as the General Assembly shall from time to time determine.

Judges of existing separate Orphans' Courts will become judges of an Orphans' Court Division of the Court of Common Pleas.

The jurisdiction of the several courts and of the justice of the peace is left to the determination of the General Assembly.

(b) having unlimited original jurisdiction in all cases except as may otherwise be provided by law.

Section 6. Community Courts; Philadelphia Municipal Court and Traffic Court.—(a) In any judicial district a majority of the electors voting thereon may approve the establishment or discontinuance of a community court. Where a community court is approved, one community court shall be established; its divisions, number of judges and jurisdiction shall be as provided by law.

(b) The question whether a community court shall be established or discontinued in any judicial district shall be placed upon the ballot in a primary election by petition which shall be in the form prescribed by the officer of the Commonwealth who under law shall have supervision over elections. The petition shall be filed with that officer and shall be signed by a number of electors equal to five percent of the total votes cast for all candidates for the office occupied by a single official for which the highest number of votes was cast in that judicial district at the last preceding general or municipal election. The manner of signing such petitions, the time of circulating them, the affidavits of the persons circulating them and all other details not contained herein shall be governed by the general laws relating to elections. The question shall not be placed upon the ballot in a judicial district more than once in any five-year period.

(c) In the City of Philadelphia there shall be a municipal court and a traffic court. The number of judges and the jurisdiction of each shall be as provided by law. These courts shall exist so long as a community court has not been established or in the event one has been discontinued under this section.

Section 7. Justices of the Peace; Magisterial Districts.—(a) In any judicial district, other than the City of Philadelphia, where a community court has not been established or where one has been discontinued there shall be one justice of the peace in each magisterial district. The jurisdiction of the justice of the peace shall be as provided by law.

(b) The General Assembly shall by law establish classes of magisterial districts solely on the basis of population and population density and shall fix the salaries to be paid justices of the peace in each class. The number and boundaries of magisterial districts of each class within each judicial district shall be established by the Supreme Court or by the courts of common pleas under the direction of the Supreme Court as required for the efficient administration of justice within each magisterial district.

Section 8. Other Courts.—The General Assembly may establish additional courts or divisions of existing courts, as needed, or abolish any statutory court or division thereof.

Section 9. Right of Appeal.—There shall be a

Citizens of the Commonwealth are guaranteed a right of appeal from a court not of record to a court of record, and from a court of record or administrative agency to a court of record or an appellate court in all cases.

The electorate of each judicial district is given the option of adopting a Community Court with judges learned in the law to replace the present minor judiciary system in the judicial district and be organized into appropriate divisions to be established by the General Assembly. Upon adoption of a Community Court, the members of the minor judiciary in that judicial district would serve out the balance of their terms. Their offices would then be abolished and their judicial functions would thereafter be performed by the Community Court.

In Philadelphia there will be a Municipal Court and a Traffic Court for minor cases.

In judicial districts not adopting a Community Court, the Justice of the Peace system will continue with substantial reforms. Members of the minor judiciary will be compensated by salaries, greatly reduced in number and subjected to judicial supervision by the Supreme Court. In addition, if they are not members of the bar of the Supreme Court, they will be required to complete a course of training and pass an examination. The General Assembly is empowered to establish classes of Magisterial Districts on the basis of population and population density with one justice of the peace to serve in each district. Boundaries of the Magisterial Districts will be set by the courts. The terms of office of all justices and judges are fixed at ten years. Municipal Court and Traffic Court judges in Philadelphia and justices of the peace will serve terms of six years.

right of appeal in all cases to a court of record from a court not of record; and there shall also be a right of appeal from a court of record or from an administrative agency to a court of record or to an appellate court, the selection of such court to be as provided by law; and there shall be such other rights of appeal as may be provided by law.

Section 10. Judicial Administration.—(a) The Supreme Court shall exercise general supervisory and administrative authority over all the courts and justices of the peace, including authority to temporarily assign judges and justices of the peace from one court or district to another as it deems appropriate.

(b) The Supreme Court shall appoint a court administrator and may appoint such subordinate administrators and staff as may be necessary and proper for the prompt and proper disposition of the business of all courts and justices of the peace.

(c) The Supreme Court shall have the power to prescribe general rules governing practice, procedure and the conduct of all courts, justices of the peace and all officers serving process or enforcing orders, judgments or decrees of any court or justice of the peace, including the power to provide for assignment and reassignment of classes of actions or classes of appeals among the several courts as the needs of justice shall require, and for admission to the bar and to practice law, and the administration of all courts and supervision of all officers of the judicial branch, if such rules are consistent with this Constitution and neither abridge, enlarge nor modify the substantive rights of any litigant, nor affect the right of the General Assembly to determine the jurisdiction of any court or justice of the peace, nor suspend nor alter any statute of limitation or repose. All laws shall be suspended to the extent that they are inconsistent with rules prescribed under these provisions.

The power is given to the Supreme Court to prescribe rules of practice and conduct not only for the courts and justices of the peace, but also for all officers serving process or enforcing orders, judgments and decrees.

(d) The Chief Justice and president judges of all courts with seven or less judges shall be the justice or judge longest in continuous service on their respective courts; and in the event of his resignation from this position the justice or judge next longest in continuous service shall be the Chief Justice or president judge. The president judges of all other courts shall be selected for five-year terms by the members of their respective courts, except that the president judge of the traffic court in the City of Philadelphia shall be appointed by the Governor. A Chief Justice or president judge may resign such position and remain a member of the court. In the event of a tie vote for office of president judge in a court which elects its president judge, the Supreme Court shall appoint as president judge one of the judges receiving the highest number of votes.

In courts with seven or less members the justice or judge with the longest continuous service will be Chief Justice or president judge. In other courts members of the court will select the president judge for a five-year term.

(e) Should any two or more justices or judges of the same court assume office at the same time, they shall cast lots forthwith for priority of commission, and certify the results to the Governor who shall issue their commissions accordingly.

Section 11. Judicial Districts; Boundaries.—The number and boundaries of judicial districts shall be changed by the General Assembly only with the advice and consent of the Supreme Court.

The boundaries and number of judicial districts may not be changed by the General Assembly without approval by the Supreme Court.

Special provisions are made to provide for local problems in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

Section 12. Qualifications of Justices, Judges and Justices of the Peace.—(a) Justices, judges and justices of the peace shall be citizens of the Commonwealth. Justices and judges, except the judges of the traffic court in the City of Philadelphia, shall be members of the bar of the Supreme Court. Justices and judges of state-wide courts, for a period of one year preceding their election or appointment and during their continuance in office, shall reside within the Commonwealth. Other judges and justices of the peace, for a period of one year preceding their election or appointment and during their continuance in office, shall reside within their respective districts, except as provided in this article for temporary assignments.

(b) Judges of the traffic court in the City of Philadelphia and justices of the peace shall be members of the bar of the Supreme Court or shall complete a course of training and instruction in the duties of their respective offices and pass an examination prior to assuming office. Such courses and examinations shall be as provided by law.

Section 13. Election of Justices, Judges and Justices of the Peace; Vacancies.—(a) Justices, judges and justices of the peace shall be elected at the municipal election next preceding the commencement of their respective terms of office by the electors of the Commonwealth or the respective districts in which they are to serve.

Justices, judges and justices of the peace will be elected at municipal elections.

At the Primary Election in 1969 the electorate of the Commonwealth will be given an opportunity to adopt a plan for the appointment of justices and judges of state-wide courts by the Governor from a list of 10 to 20 names submitted to him by a Judicial Qualifications Commission composed of four non-lawyer electors appointed by the Governor and three non-judge members of the bar appointed by the Supreme Court.

(b) A vacancy in the office of justice, judge or justice of the peace shall be filled by appointment by the Governor. If the vacancy occurs during the session of the Senate, the appointment shall be with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the members elected to the Senate, except in the case of justices of the peace which shall be by a majority. If the vacancy occurs during sine die adjournment of the Senate such appointment shall not require the advice and consent of the Senate. The person so appointed shall serve for an initial term ending on the first Monday of January following the next municipal election more than ten months after the vacancy occurs.

Vacancies in the office of justice, judge or justice of the peace will be filled by appointment of the Governor with the approval of the Senate if the vacancy occurs while the Senate is in session, and without the approval of the Senate if the vacancy occurs while the Senate is adjourned. Appointments to the office of justice of the peace will require the approval of a majority of the Senate, while appointments of justices and judges will require a two-thirds majority.

(c) The provisions of section thirteen (b) shall not apply either in the case of a vacancy to be filled by retention election as provided in section fifteen (b). In case of a vacancy created by failure of a justice or judge to file a declaration for retention election as provided in section fifteen (b). In case of a vacancy occurring at the expiration of an appointive term under section thirteen (b), the vacancy shall be filled by election as provided in section thirteen (a).

Justices, judges and justices of the peace appointed by the Governor to fill a vacancy will hold office for a term ending on the first Monday of January following the next municipal election more than ten months after the hap-

(d) At the primary election in 1969, the electors of the Commonwealth may elect to have the justices and judges of the Supreme, Superior, Commonwealth and all other state-wide courts appointed by the Governor from a list of persons qualified for the offices submitted to him by the Judicial Qualifications Commission. If a majority vote of those voting on the question is in favor of this method of appointment, then whenever any vacancy occurs thereafter for any reason in such court, the Governor shall fill the vacancy by appointment in the manner prescribed in this subsection. Such appointment shall not require the consent of the Senate.

(e) Each justice or judge appointed by the Governor under section thirteen (d) shall hold office for an initial term ending the first Monday of January following the next municipal election more than twenty-four months following the appointment.

Section 14. Judicial Qualifications Commission. —(a) Should the method of judicial selection be adopted as provided in section thirteen (d), there shall be a Judicial Qualifications Commission, composed of four non-lawyer electors appointed by the Governor and three non-judge members of the bar of the Supreme Court appointed by the Supreme Court. No more than four members shall be of the same political party. The members of the commission shall serve for terms of seven years, with one member being selected each year. The commission shall consider all names submitted to it and recommend to the Governor not fewer than ten nor more than twenty of those qualified for each vacancy to be filled.

(b) During his term, no member shall hold a public office or public appointment for which he receives compensation, nor shall he hold office in a political party or political organization.

(c) A vacancy on the commission shall be filled by the appointing authority for the balance of the term.

Section 15. Tenure of Justices, Judges and Justices of the Peace.—(a) The regular term of office of justices and judges shall be ten years and the regular term of office for judges of the municipal court and traffic court in the City of Philadelphia and of justices of the peace shall be six years. The tenure of any justice or judge shall not be affected by changes in judicial districts or by reduction in the number of judges.

(b) A justice or judge elected under section thirteen (a), appointed under section thirteen (d) or retained under this section fifteen (b) may file a declaration of candidacy for retention election with the officer of the Commonwealth who under law shall have supervision over elections on or before the first Monday of January of the year preceding the year in which his term of office expires. If no declaration is filed, a vacancy shall exist upon the expiration of the term of office of such justice or judge, to be filled by election under section thirteen (a) or by appointment under section thirteen (d) if applicable. If a justice or judge files a declaration, his name shall be submitted to the electors for re-election on a non-partisan ballot, leaving it to the electorate to determine whether his record merits retention in office.

pening of such vacancy except that a justice or judge appointed to a vacancy in a state-wide court from a list submitted to the Governor by a Judicial Qualifications Commission, if this plan for selection of state-wide judges is adopted by the electorate at the Primary Election in 1969, will hold office for a term ending on the first Monday of January following the next municipal election more than twenty-four months after his appointment.

Any justice or judge who has been elected to office will be entitled to have his name submitted to the electors for re-election on a mitted to the electors without party designation, on a separate judicial ballot or in a separate column on voting machines, at the municipal election immediately preceding the expiration of the term of office of the justice or judge, to determine only the question whether he shall be retained in office. If a majority is against retention, a vacancy shall exist upon the expiration of his term of office, to be filled by appointment under section thirteen (b) or under section thirteen (d) if applicable. If a majority favors retention, the justice or judge shall serve for the regular term of office provided herein, unless sooner removed or retired. At the expiration of each term a justice or judge shall be eligible for retention as provided herein, subject only to the retirement provisions of this article.

Section 16. Compensation and Retirement of Justices, Judges and Justices of the Peace.—(a) Justices, judges and justices of the peace shall be compensated by the Commonwealth as provided by law. Their compensation shall not be diminished during their terms of office, unless by law applying generally to all salaried officers of the Commonwealth.

(b) Justices, judges and justices of the peace shall be retired upon attaining the age of seventy years. Former and retired justices, judges and justices of the peace shall receive such compensation as shall be provided by law. No Compensation shall be paid to any justice, judge or justice of the peace who is suspended or removed from office under section eighteen of this article or under article six.

All justices and judges hereafter elected or appointed will be required to retire at the age of 70 years, but former and retired justices and judges may be with their consent assigned post-retirement service by the Supreme Court.

(c) A former or retired justice or judge may, with his consent, be assigned by the Supreme Court on temporary judicial service as may be prescribed by rule of the Supreme Court.

Section 17. Prohibited Activities.—(a) Justices and judges shall devote full time to their judicial duties, and shall not engage in the practice of law, hold office in a political party or political organization, or hold an office or position of profit in the government of the United States, the Commonwealth or any municipal corporation or political subdivision thereof, except in the armed service of the United States or the Commonwealth.

Justices and judges will be required to devote full time to their official duties and may not engage in certain prohibited activities. Justices of the peace will be required to conduct their activities according to rules or canons of ethics to be prescribed by the Supreme Court.

(b) Justices and judges shall not engage in any activity prohibited by law and shall not violate any canon of legal or judicial ethics prescribed by the Supreme Court. Justices of the peace shall be governed by rules or canons which shall be prescribed by the Supreme Court.

(c) No justice, judge or justice of the peace shall be paid or accept for the performance of any judicial duty or for any service connected with his office, any fee, emolument or perquisite other than the salary and expenses provided by law.

(d) No duties shall be imposed by law upon the Supreme Court or any of the justices thereof or the Superior Court or any of the judges thereof, except such as are judicial, nor shall any of them exercise any power of appointment except as provided in this Constitution.

Section 18. Suspension, Removal, Discipline and Compulsory Retirement.—(a) There shall be a Judicial Inquiry and Review Board having nine members as follows: three judges of the courts of common pleas from different judicial districts and two judges of the Superior Court, all of whom shall be selected by the Supreme Court; and two non-judge members of the bar of the Supreme Court and two non-lawyer electors, all of whom shall be selected by the Governor.

(b) The members shall serve for terms of four years, provided that a member, rather than his successor, shall continue to participate in any hearing in progress at the end of his term. A vacancy on the board shall be filled by the respective appointing authority for the balance of the term. The respective appointing authority may remove a member only for cause. No member shall serve more than four consecutive years; he may be reappointed after a lapse of one year. Annually the members of the board shall elect a chairman. The board shall act only with the concurrence of a majority of its members.

(c) A member shall not hold office in a political party or political organization. Members, other than judges, shall be compensated for their services as the Supreme Court shall prescribe. All members shall be reimbursed for expenses necessarily incurred in the discharge of their official duties.

(d) Under the procedure prescribed herein, any justice or judge may be suspended, removed from office or otherwise disciplined for violation of section seventeen of this article, misconduct in office, neglect of duty, failure to perform his duties, or conduct which prejudices the proper administration of justice or brings the judicial office into disrepute and may be retired for disability seriously interfering with the performance of his duties.

(e) The board shall keep informed as to matters relating to grounds for suspension, removal, discipline, or compulsory retirement of justices or judges. It shall receive complaints or reports, formal or informal, from any source pertaining to such matters, and shall make such preliminary investigations as it deems necessary.

(f) The board, after such investigation, may order a hearing concerning the suspension, removal, discipline or compulsory retirement of a justice or judge. The board's orders for attendance of or testimony by witnesses or for the production of documents at any hearing or investigation shall be enforceable by contempt proceedings.

(g) If, after hearing, the board finds good cause therefor, it shall recommend to the Supreme Court the suspension, removal, discipline or compulsory retirement of the justice or judge.

(h) The Supreme Court shall review the record of the board's proings on the law and facts and many permit the introduction of additional evidence. It shall order suspension, removal, dis-

There will be a Judicial Inquiry and Review Board composed of three Common Pleas Court judges selected by the Supreme Court, two Superior Court Judges selected by the Supreme Court, and two lawyers and two laymen appointed by the Governor, to investigate misconduct in office, neglect of duty, or other conduct which prejudices the administration of justice. In addition, any justice or judge may be retired for disability that seriously interferes with his duties. The Board may make recommendations to the Supreme Court for final decision on whether suspension, removal, discipline or compulsory retirement is in order.

cipline or compulsory retirement, or wholly reject the recommendation, as it finds just and proper. Upon an order for compulsory retirement, the justice or judge shall be retired with the same rights and privileges were he retired under section sixteen of this article. Upon an order for suspension or removal, the justice or judge shall be suspended or removed from office, and his salary shall cease from the date of such order. All papers filed with and proceedings before the board shall be confidential but upon being filed by the board in the Supreme Court, the record shall lose its confidential character. The filing of papers with and the giving of testimony before the board shall be privileged.

(i) No justice or judge shall participate as a member of the board or of the Supreme Court in any proceeding involving his suspension, removal, discipline or compulsory retirement.

(j) The Supreme Court shall prescribe rules of procedure under this section.

(k) The Supreme Court shall prescribe rules of procedure for the suspension, removal, discipline and compulsory retirement of justices of the peace.

(l) A justice, judge or justice of the peace convicted of misbehavior in office by a court, disbarred as a member of the bar of the Supreme Court or removed under this section eighteen shall forfeit automatically his judicial office and thereafter be ineligible for judicial office.

(m) A justice or judge who shall file for nomination for or election to any public office other than a judicial office shall forfeit automatically his judicial office.

No justice or judge may become a candidate for any non-judicial public office without forfeiting his judicial office.

(n) This section is in addition to and not in substitution for the provisions for impeachment for misbehavior in office contained in article six. No justice, judge or justice of the peace against whom impeachment proceedings are pending in the Senate shall exercise any of the duties of his office until he has been acquitted.

Section 2. Article five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania is repealed in its entirety, and those provisions of Schedules No. 1 and No. 2 are repealed to the extent they are inconsistent with this article and attached schedule.

SCHEDULE TO JUDICIARY ARTICLE

This schedule is a part of this judiciary article, and it is intended that the provisions contained herein shall have the same force and effect as those contained in the numbered sections of the article.

This article and schedule, unless otherwise stated herein, shall become effective on January 1, 1969. In this schedule where the word "now" quoted appears it speaks from the date of adoption of this schedule; where the word "present" appears it speaks from the effective date hereof.

Courts Other Than in the City of Philadelphia and Allegheny County

Section 1. The Supreme Court.—The Supreme

Court shall exercise all the powers and, until otherwise provided by law, jurisdiction now vested in the present Supreme Court and, until otherwise provided by law, the accused in all cases of felonious homicide shall have the right of appeal to the Supreme Court.

Section 2. The Superior Court.—Until otherwise provided by law, the Superior Court shall exercise all the jurisdiction now vested in the present Superior Court. The present terms of all judges of the Superior Court which would otherwise expire on the first Monday of January in an odd-numbered year shall be extended to expire in the even-numbered year next following.

Section 3. Commonwealth Court.—The Commonwealth Court shall come into existence on January 1, 1970. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in this article, the General Assembly shall stagger the initial terms of judges of the Commonwealth Court.

Section 4. The Courts of Common Pleas.—Until otherwise provided by law, the several courts of common pleas shall exercise the jurisdiction now vested in the present courts of common pleas. The courts of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery, quarter sessions of the peace, and orphans' courts are abolished and the several courts of common pleas shall also exercise the jurisdiction of these courts. Orphans' courts in judicial districts having separate orphans' courts shall become orphans' court divisions of the courts of common pleas and the court of common pleas in those judicial districts shall exercise the jurisdiction presently exercised by the separate orphans' courts through their respective orphans' court division.

Section 5. Orphans' Court Judges.—In those judicial districts having separate orphans' courts, the present judges thereof shall become judges of the orphans' court division of the court of common pleas and the present president judge shall become the president judge of the orphans' court division of the court of common pleas for the remainder of his term without diminution in salary.

Section 6. Courts of Common Pleas in Multi-County Judicial Districts.—Courts of common pleas in multi-county judicial districts are abolished as separate courts and are hereby constituted as branches of the single court of common pleas established under this article in each such judicial district.

Section 7. Community Courts.—In a judicial district which establishes a community court, a person serving as a justice of the peace at such time:

(a) May complete his term exercising the jurisdiction provided by law and with the compensation provided by law, and

(b) Upon completion of his term, his office is abolished and no judicial function of the kind heretofore exercised by a justice of the peace shall thereafter be exercised other than by the community court.

Justices, Judges and Justices of the Peace

Section 8. Justices, Judges and Justices of the Peace.—Notwithstanding any provision in the article, a present justice, judge or justice of the peace may complete his term of office.

Section 9. Associate Judges.—The office of associate judge not learned in the law is abolished, but a present associate judge may complete his term.

Section 10. Retention Election of Present Justices and Judges.—A present judge who was originally elected to office and seeks retention in the 1969 municipal election and is otherwise eligible may file his declaration of candidacy by February 1, 1969.

Section 11. Selection of President Judges.—Except in the City of Philadelphia, section ten (d) of the article shall become effective upon the expiration of the term of the present president judge, or upon earlier vacancy.

Magistrates, Aldermen and Justices of the Peace and Magisterial Districts Other Than in the City of Philadelphia

Section 12. Magistrates, Aldermen and Justices of the Peace.—An alderman, justice of the peace or magistrate:

(a) May complete his term, exercising the jurisdiction provided by law and with the method of compensation provided by law prior to the adoption of this article;

(b) Shall be deemed to have taken and passed the examination required by this article for justices of the peace if he has completed one full term of office before creation of a magisterial district, and

(c) At the completion of his term, his office is abolished.

(d) Except for officers completing their terms, after the first Monday in January, 1970, no judicial function of the kind heretofore exercised by these officers, by mayors and like officers in municipalities shall be exercised by any officer other than the one justice of the peace elected or appointed to serve in that magisterial district.

Section 13. Magisterial Districts.—So that the provisions of this article regarding the establishment of magisterial districts and the instruction and examination of justices of the peace may be self-executing, until otherwise provided by law in a manner agreeable to this article, the following provisions shall be in force:

(a) The Supreme Court or the courts of common pleas under the direction of the Supreme Court shall fix the number and boundaries of magisterial districts of each class within each judicial district by January 1, 1969, and these magisterial districts, except where a community court has been adopted, shall come into existence on January 1, 1970, the justices of the peace thereof to be elected at the municipal election in 1969. These justices of the peace shall retain no fine, costs or any other sum that shall be delivered into their hands for the performance of any judicial duty or for any service connected with their offices, but shall remit the same to the Commonwealth, county, municipal subdivision, school district or otherwise as may be provided by law.

(b) Classes of magisterial districts.

(i) Magisterial districts of the first class shall have a population density of more than five thousand persons per square mile and a population of not less than sixty-five thousand persons.

(ii) Magisterial districts of the second class shall have a population density of between one thousand and five thousand persons per square mile and a population of between twenty thousand persons and sixty-five thousand persons.

(iii) Magisterial districts of the third class shall have a population density of between two hundred and one thousand persons per square mile and a population of between twelve thousand persons and twenty thousand persons.

(iv) Magisterial districts of the fourth class shall have a population density of between seventy and two hundred persons per square mile and a population of between seven thousand five hundred persons and twelve thousand persons.

(v) Magisterial districts of the fifth class shall have a population density of under seventy persons per square mile and a population of between four thousand persons and seven thousand five hundred persons.

(c) Salaries of justices of the peace.

The salaries of the justices of the peace shall be as follows:

(i) In first class magisterial districts, twelve thousand dollars per year,

(ii) In second class magisterial districts, ten thousand dollars per year,

(iii) In third class magisterial districts, eight thousand dollars per year,

(iv) In fourth and fifth class magisterial disdistricts, five thousand dollars per year.

(v) The salaries here fixed shall be paid by the State Treasurer and for such payment this article and schedule shall be sufficient warrant.

(d) Course of training, instruction and examination. The course of training and instruction and examination in civil and criminal law and procedure for a justice of the peace shall be devised by the Department of Public Instruction, and it shall administer this course and examination to insure that justices of the peace are competent to perform their duties.

Section 14. Magisterial Districts.—Effective immediately upon establishment of magisterial districts and until otherwise prescribed the civil and criminal procedural rules relating to venue shall apply to magisterial districts; all proceedings before aldermen, magistrates and justices of the peace shall be brought in and only in a magisterial district in which occurs an event which would give rise to venue in a court of record; the court of common pleas upon its own motion or on application at any stage of proceedings shall transfer any proceeding in any magisterial district to the justice of the peace for the magisterial district in which proper venue lies.

Prothonotaries and Clerks Other Than in the City of Philadelphia

Section 15. Prothonotaries, Clerks of Courts, Clerks of Orphans' Courts.—Until otherwise provided by law, the offices of prothonotary and clerk of courts shall become the offices of prothonotary and clerk of courts of the court of common pleas of the judicial district, and in multi-county judicial districts of their county's branch of the court of common pleas, and the clerk of the orphans' court in a judicial district now having a separate orphans' court shall become the clerk of the orphans' court division of the court of common pleas, and these officers shall continue to perform the duties of the office and to maintain and be responsible for the records, books and dockets as heretofore. In judicial districts where the clerk of the orphans' court is not the register of wills, he shall continue to perform the duties of the office and to maintain and be responsible for the records, books and dockets as heretofore until otherwise provided by law.

The City of Philadelphia

Section 16. Courts and Judges.—Until otherwise provided by law: (a) the court of common pleas shall consist of a trial division, orphans' court division and family court division.

(b) The judges of the court of common pleas shall become judges of the trial division of the court of common pleas provided for in this article and their tenure shall not otherwise be affected.

(c) The judges of the county court shall become judges of the family court division of the court of common pleas and their tenure shall not otherwise be affected.

(d) The judges of the orphans' court shall become judges of the orphans' court division of the court of common pleas and their tenure shall not otherwise be affected.

(e) As designated by the Governor, twenty-two of the present magistrates shall become judges of the municipal court and six shall become judges of the traffic court, and their tenure shall not otherwise be affected.

(f) One of the judges of the court of common pleas shall be president judge and he shall be selected in the manner provided in section ten (d) of this article. He shall be the administrative head of the court and shall supervise the court's judicial business.

(g) Each division of the court of common pleas shall be presided over by an administrative judge, who shall be one of its judges and shall be elected for a term of five years by a majority vote of the judges of that division. He shall assist the president judge in supervising the judicial business of the court and shall be responsible to him. Subject to the foregoing, the judges of the court of common pleas shall prescribe rules defining the duties of the administrative judges. The president judge shall have the power to assign judges from each division to each other division of the court when required to expedite the business of the court.

(h) Until all members of the municipal court are members of the bar of the Supreme Court, the president judge of the court of common pleas shall appoint one of the judges of the municipal court as president judge for a five-year term or at the pleasure of the president judge of the court of common pleas. The president judge of the municipal court shall be eligible to succeed himself as president judge for any number of terms and shall be the administrative head of that court and shall supervise the judicial business of the court. He shall promulgate all administrative rules and regulations and make all judicial assignments. The president judge of the court of common pleas may assign temporarily judges of the municipal court who are members of the bar of the Supreme Court to the court of common pleas when required to expedite the business of the court.

(i) The Governor shall appoint one of the judges of the traffic court as president judge for a term of five years or at the pleasure of the Governor. The president judge of the traffic court shall be eligible to succeed himself as president judge for any number of terms, shall be the executive and administrative head of the traffic court, and shall supervise the judicial business of the court, shall promulgate all administrative rules and regulations, and shall make all judicial assignments.

(j) The exercise of all supervisory and administrative powers detailed in this section sixteen shall be subject to the supervisory and administrative control of the Supreme Court.

(k) The prothonotary shall continue to exercise the duties of that office for the trial division of the court of common pleas and for the municipal court.

(l) The clerk of quarter sessions shall continue to exercise the duties of that office for the trial division of the court of common pleas and for the municipal court.

(m) That officer serving as clerk to the county court shall continue to exercise the duties of that office for the family division of the court of common pleas.

(n) The register of wills shall serve ex officio as clerk of the orphans' court division of the court of common pleas.

(o) The court of common pleas shall have unlimited original jurisdiction in all cases except those cases assigned by this schedule to the municipal court and to the traffic court. The court of common pleas shall have all the jurisdiction now vested in the court of common pleas, the court of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery, courts of quarter sessions of the peace, orphans' court, and county court. Jurisdiction in all of the foregoing cases shall be exercised through the trial division of the court of common pleas except in those cases which are assigned by this schedule to the orphans' court and family court divisions of the court of common pleas. The court of common pleas through the trial division shall also hear and determine appeals from the municipal court and traffic court.

(p) The court of common pleas through the orphans' court division shall exercise the jurisdiction hertofore exercised by the orphans' court.

(q) The court of common pleas through the family court division of the court of common pleas shall exercise jurisdiction in the following matters:

(i) Domestic Relations: desertion or nonsupport of wives, children and indigent parents, including children born out of wedlock; proceedings for custody of children; divorce and annulment and property matters relating thereto.

(ii) Juvenile Matters: dependent, delinquent and neglected children and children under eighteen years of age, suffering from epilepsy, nervous or mental defects, incorrigible, runaway and disorderly minors eighteen to twenty years of age and preliminary hearings in criminal cases where the victim is a juvenile.

(iii) Adoptions and Delayed Birth Certificates.

(r) The municipal court shall have jurisdiction in the following matters:

(i) Committing magistrates' jurisdiction in all criminal matters.

(ii) All summary offenses, except those under the motor vehicle laws.

(iii) All criminal offenses for which no prison term may be imposed or which are punishable by a term of imprisonment of not more than two years, and indictable offenses under the motor vehicle laws for which no prison term may be imposed or punishable by a term of imprisonment of not more than three years. In these cases, the defendant shall have no right of trial by jury in that court, but he shall have the right of appeal for trial de novo including the right to trial by jury to the trial division of the court of common pleas. Until there are a sufficient number of judges who are members of the bar of the Supreme Court serving in the municipal court to handle such matters, the trial division of the court of common pleas shall have concurrent jurisdiction over such matters, the assignment of cases to the respective courts to be determined by rule prescribed by the president judge of the court of common pleas.

(iv) Matters arising under The Landlord and Tenant Act of 1951.

(v) All civil claims involving less than five hundred dollars. In these cases, the parties shall have no right of trial by jury in that court but shall have the right of appeal for a trial de novo including the right to trial by jury to the trial division of the court of common pleas, it being the purpose of this subsection to establish an expeditious small claims procedure whereby it shall not be necessary for the litigants to obtain counsel. This limited grant of civil jurisdiction shall be coextensive with the civil jurisdiction of the trial division of the court of common pleas.

(vi) As commissioners to preside at arraignments, fix and accept bail, issue warrants and perform duties of a similar nature.

The grant of jurisdiction under clauses (iii) and (v) of this subsection may be exercised only by those judges who are members of the bar of the Supreme Court.

(s) The traffic court shall have exclusive jurisdiction of all summary offenses under the motor vehicle laws.

(t) The courts of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery, quarter sessions of the peace, the county court, the orphans' court and the ten separate courts of common pleas are abolished and their jurisdiction and powers shall be exercised by the court of common pleas provided for in this article through the divisions established by this schedule.

(u) The office of magistrate, the board of magistrates, and the present traffic court are abolished.

(v) Those judges appointed to the municipal court in accordance with subsection (e) of this section who are not members of the bar of the Supreme Court shall be eligible to complete their present terms and to be elected to and serve for one additional term, but not thereafter.

(w) The causes, proceedings, books, dockets and records of the abolished courts shall become those of the court or division thereof to which, under this schedule, jurisdiction of the proceedings or matters concerned has been transferred, and that court or division thereof shall determine and conclude such proceedings as if it had assumed jurisdiction in the first instance.

(x) The present president judges of the abolished courts and chief magistrates shall continue to receive the compensation to which they are now entitled as president judges and chief magistrate until the end of their present terms as president judges and chief magistrate respectively.

(y) The offices of prothonotary and register of wills in the City of Philadelphia shall no longer be considered constitutional offices under this article, but their powers and functions shall continue as at present until these offices are covered in the Home Rule Charter by a referendum in the manner provided by law.

(z) If a community court is established in the City of Philadelphia, a person serving as a judge of the municipal or traffic court at that time:

(i) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsec-

tion (v) of this section, may complete his term exercising the jurisdiction provided by law and with the compensation provided by law; and

(ii) At the completion of his term, his office is abolished and no jurisdiction of the kind exercised by those officers immediately after the effective date of this article and schedule shall thereafter be exercised other than by the community court.

Allegheny County

Section 17. Courts.—Until otherwise provided by law:

(a) The court of common pleas shall consist of a trial division, an orphans' court division and a family court division; the courts of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery and quarter sessions of the peace, the county court, the orphans' court, and the juvenile court are abolished and their present jurisdiction shall be exercised by the court of common pleas. Until otherwise provided by rule of the court of common pleas and, except as otherwise provided in this schedule, the court of common pleas shall exercise the jurisdiction of the present court of common pleas and the present county court through the trial division. Until otherwise provided by rule of the court of common pleas, the jurisdiction of the present orphans' court, except as otherwise provided in this schedule, shall be exercised by the court of common pleas through the orphans' court division.

(b) Until otherwise provided by rule of the court of common pleas, the court of common pleas shall exercise jurisdiction in the following matters through the family court division:

(i) Domestic Relations: Desertion or nonsupport of wives, children and indigent parents, including children born out of wedlock; proceedings, including habeas corpus, for custody of children; divorce and annulment and property matters relating thereto.

(ii) Juvenile Matters: All matters now within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court.

(iii) Adoptions and Delayed Birth Certificates.

Section 18. Judges.—Until otherwise provided by law, the present judges of the court of common pleas shall continue to act as the judges of that court; the present judges of the county court shall become judges of the court of common pleas; the present judges of the orphans' court shall become judges of the orphans' court division of the court of common pleas; the present judges of the juvenile court shall become judges of the family court division of the court of common pleas.

Section 19. President Judges.—The present president judge of the court of common pleas may complete his term as president judge; the present president judge of the orphans' court shall be the president judge of the orphans' court division of the court of common pleas for the remainder of his term as president judge, and the present president judge of the county court shall be the president judge of the family court division of the court of common pleas for the remainder of his term as president judge, all these without diminution of salary as president judge. The president judge of the trial division shall be selected pursuant to section twenty of this schedule.

Section 20. President Judges; Court Divisions.—Until otherwise provided by law, the trial division, the orphans' court division and the family court division of the court of common pleas shall each be presided over by a president judge, who shall be one of the judges of such division and shall be elected for a term of five years by a majority vote of the judges of that division. He shall assist the president judge of the court of common pleas in supervising the judicial business of the court and shall be responsible to him. Subject to the foregoing, the judges of the court of common pleas shall prescribe rules defining the duties of the president judges. The president judge of the court of common pleas shall have the power to assign judges from one division to another division of the court when required to expedite the business of the court. The exercise of these supervisory and administrative powers, however, shall be subject to the supervisory and administrative powers of the Supreme Court.

The City of Pittsburgh

Section 21. Inferior Courts.—Upon the establishment of magisterial districts pursuant to this article and schedule, and unless otherwise provided by law, the police magistrates, including those serving in the traffic court, the housing court and the city court shall continue as at present. Such magistrates shall be part of the unified judicial system and shall be subject to the general supervisory and administrative authority of the Supreme Court. Such magistrates shall be subject to the provisions of this article and schedule regarding educational requirements and prohibited activities of justices of the peace.

Causes, Proceedings, Books and Records

Section 22. Causes, Proceedings, Books and Records.—All causes and proceedings pending in any abolished court or office of the justice of the peace shall be determined and concluded by the court to which jurisdiction of the proceedings has been transferred under this schedule and all books, dockets and records of any abolished court or office of the justice of the peace shall become those of the court to which, under this schedule, jurisdiction of the proceedings concerned has been transferred.

Commission and Board

Section 23. Judicial Qualifications Commission.—The selection of the first members of the Judicial Qualifications Commission provided for in section fourteen (a) of this article shall be made as follows: The Governor shall appoint the four non-lawyer members for terms of, respectively, one year, three years, five years and seven years, no more than two of whom shall be members of the same political party. The Supreme Court shall appoint the three non-judge members of the bar of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania for terms, respectively, of two years, four years and six years, no more than two of whom shall be members of the same poltical party.

Section 24. Judicial Inquiry and Review Board.—The selection of the first members of the Judicial Inquiry and Review Board shall be made as follows: one judge of the Superior Court, one non-judge member of the bar of the Supreme Court, and one non-lawyer member shall be selected for two-year terms; one judge of the Superior Court, one non-judge member of the bar of the Supreme Court, and one non-lawyer member shall be selected for four-year terms; one judge of the court of common pleas shall be selected for a term of two years, one for a term of three years, and one for a term of four years.

General Provision

Section 25. Dispensing with Trial by Jury.—Until otherwise provided by law, the parties, by agreement filed, may in any civil case dispense with trial by jury, and submit the decision of such case to the court having jurisdiction thereof, and such court shall hear and determine the same; and the judgment thereon shall be subject to writ of error as in other cases.

Section 26. Writs of Certiorari.—Unless and until changed by rule of the Supreme Court, in addition to the right of appeal under section nine of this article, the judges of the courts of common pleas, within their respective judicial districts, shall have power to issue writs of certiorari to the municipal court in the City of Philadelphia, justices of the peace and inferior courts not of record and to cause their proceedings to be brought before them, and right and justice to be done.

Section 27. Judicial Districts.—Until changed in accordance with section eleven of this article, the number and boundaries of judicial districts shall remain as at present.

Section 28. Referendum.—The officer of the Commonwealth who under law shall have supervision over elections shall cause the question provided for in section thirteen (d) of this article to be placed on the ballot in the 1969 primary election throughout the Commonwealth.

Section 29. Persons Specially Admitted by Local Rules.—Any person now specially admitted to practice may continue to practice in the court of common pleas or in that division of the court of common pleas and the municipal court in the City of Philadelphia which substantially includes the practice for which such person was previously specially admitted.

The above Summary and Explanation is offered for the convenience of the people only and is not to be considered an official interpretation of the proposals to which it relates.

APPENDIX

ARTICLES AND SECTIONS OF THE CONSTITUTION OF 1874 THAT WILL BE REPEALED, REPLACED OR MODIFIED BY THE PROPOSALS OF THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

ARTICLE II

THE LEGISLATURE

Senatorial District Apportionment

Section 16. The State shall be divided into fifty senatorial districts of compact and contiguous territory as nearly equal in populations as may be, and each district shall be entitled to elect one Senator. Each county containing one or more ratios of population shall be entitled to one Senator for each ratio, and to an additional Senator for a surplus of population exceeding three-fifths of a ratio, but no county shall form a separate district unless it shall contain four-fifths of a ratio, except where the adjoining counties are each entitled to one or more Senators, when such county may be assigned a Senator on less than four-fifths and exceeding one-half of a ratio; and no county shall be divided unless entitled to two or more Senators. No city or county shall be entitled to separate representation exceeding one-sixth of the whole number of Senators. No ward, borough or township shall be divided in the formation of a district. The senatorial ratio shall be ascertained by dividing the whole population of the State by the number fifty.

Representative District Apportionment

Section 17. The members of the House of Representatives shall be apportioned among the several counties, on a ratio obtained by dividing the population of the State as ascertained by the most recent United States census by two hundred. Every county containing less than five ratios shall have one representative for every full ratio, and an additional representative when the surplus exceeds half a ratio; but each county shall have at least one representative. Every county containing five ratios or more shall have one representative for every full ratio. Every city containing a population equal to a ratio shall elect separately its proportion of the representatives allotted to the county in which it is located. Every city entitled to more than four representatives, and every county having over one hundred thousand inhabitants shall be divided into districts of compact and contiguous territory, each district to elect its proportion of representatives according to its population, but no district shall elect more than four representatives.

Time of Apportionment

Section 18. The General Assembly at its first session after the adoption of this Constitution, and immediately after each United States decennial census, shall apportion the State into senatorial and representative districts agreeably to the provisions of the two next preceding sections.

ARTICLE VIII

TAXATION AND FINANCE

Uniformity of Taxation; Exemptions

Section 1. All taxes shall be uniform, upon the same class of subjects, within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax, and shall be levied and collected under general laws; but the General Assembly may, by general laws, exempt from taxation public property used for public purposes, actual places of religious worship, places of burial not used or held for private or corporate profit, institutions of purely public charity and real and personal property owned, occupied, and used by any branch, post, or camp of honorably discharged soldiers, sailors, and marines; and the General Assembly may, by general laws, set up standards and qualifications for private forest reserves, and make special provision for the taxation thereof. Citizens and residents of this Commonwealth, who served in any war or armed conflict in which the United States was engaged and were honorably discharged or released under honorable circumstances from active service, shall be exempt from the payment of all real property taxes upon the residence occupied by the said citizens and residents of this Commonwealth imposed by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania or any of its political subdivisions if, as a result of military service, they are blind, paraplegic or double quadruple amputees, and if the State Veterans' Commission determines that such persons are in need of the tax exemptions granted herein. Any taxing authority may exempt from occupational privilege taxes, persons deriving less than one thousand dollars per year from such occupation.

Reciprocal Exemptions

Section 1B. Taxation laws may grant exemptions or rebates to residents, or estates of residents, of other States which grant similar exemptions or rebates to residents, or estates of residents, of Pennsylvania.

Exemption from Taxation Restricted

Section 2. All laws exempting property from taxation, other than the property above enumerated shall be void.

Taxation of Corporations

Section 3. The power to tax corporations and corporate property shall not be surrendered or suspended by any contract or grant to which the State shall be a party.

Limitation of State Debt

Section 4. No debt shall be created by or on behalf of the State, except to supply casual deficiencies of revenue, repel invasions, suppress insurrection, defend the State in war, or to pay existing debt; and the debt created to supply deficiencies in revenue shall never exceed, in the aggregate at any one time, one million dollars: Provided, however, That the General Assembly, irrespective of any debt, may authorize the State to issue bonds, to the amount of one hundred millions of dollars, for the purpose of improving and rebuilding the highways of the Commonwealth.

State Loans Restricted to Purpose

Section 5. All laws, authorizing the borrowing of money by and on behalf of the State, shall specify the purpose for which the money is to be used, and the money so borrowed shall be used for the purpose specified and no other.

State Credit Not to Be Pledged

Section 6. The credit of the Commonwealth shall not be pledged or loaned to any individual, company, corporation or association, nor shall the Commonwealth become a joint owner or stockholder in any company, association or corporation.

Municipalities Not to Become Stockholders

Section 7. The General Assembly shall not authorize any county, city, borough, township or incorporated district to become a stockholder in any company, association or corporation, or to obtain or appropriate money for, or to loan its credit to, any corporation, association, institution or individual.

Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as provided herein, and in section fifteen of this article, shall never exceed fifteen (15) per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein nor shall any such county, municipality or district incur any debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding five (5) per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the consent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law. The debt of the city of Philadelphia may be increased in such amount that the total debt of said city shall not exceed thirteen and one-half (13½) per centum of the average of the annual assessed valuations of the taxable realty therein, during the ten years immediately preceding the year in which such increase is made, but said city shall not increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding three (3) per centum upon such average assessed valuation of realty, without the consent of the electors thereof at a public election held in such manner as shall be provided by law. No debt shall be incurred by, or on behalf of, the county of Philadelphia or facility therefor, if such public improvement or public utility, or part thereof, or facility therefor, whether separately, or in connection with any other public improvement or public utility, or part thereof, or facility therefor, may reasonably be expected to yield revenue in excess of operating expenses sufficient to pay the interest and sinking fund charges thereon. The method of determining such amount, so to be deducted, shall be as now prescribed, or which may hereafter be prescribed by the General Assembly.

In ascertaining the debt-incurring capacity of the city of Philadelphia at any time, there shall be deducted from the debt of said city so much of such debt as shall have been incurred, or is about to be incurred, and the proceeds thereof expended, or about to be expended, upon any public improvement, or in construction, purchase, or condemnation of any public utility, or part thereof,

In incurring indebtedness for any purpose the city of Philadelphia may issue its obligations maturing not later than fifty (50) years from the date thereof, with provision for a sinking fund to be in equal or graded annual or other periodical installments. Where any indebtedness shall be or shall have been incurred by said city of Philadelphia for the purpose of the construction or improvement of public works or utilities of any character, from which income or revenue is to be derived by said city, or for the reclamation of land to be used in the construction of wharves or docks owned or to be owned by said city, such obligations may be in an amount sufficient to provide for, and may include the amount of, the interest and sinking fund charges accruing and which may accrue thereon throughout the period of construction, and until the expiration of one year after the completion of the work for which said indebtedness shall have been incurred; and said city shall not be required to levy a tax to pay said interest and sinking fund charges as required by section ten of this article until the expiration of said period of one year after the completion of said work.

State Not to Assume Municipal Debts; Exceptions

Section 9. The Commonwealth shall not assume the debt, or any part thereof, of any city, county, borough or township, unless such debt shall have been contracted to enable the State to repel invasion, suppress domestic insurrection, defend itself in time of war, or to assist the State in the discharge of any portion of its present indebtedness.

Municipalities Taxing Powers

Section 10. Any county, township, school district or other municipality incurring any indebtedness shall, at or before the time of so doing, provide for the collection of an annual tax sufficient to pay the interest and also the principal thereof within thirty years.

State Sinking Fund

Section 11. To provide for the payment of the present State debt, and any additional debt contracted as aforesaid, the General Assembly shall continue and maintain the sinking fund, sufficient to pay the accruing interest on such debt, and annually to reduce the principal thereof by a sum not less than two hundred and fifty thousand dollars; the said sinking fund shall consist of the proceeds of the sales of the public works or any part thereof, and of the income or proceeds of the sale of any stocks owned by the Commonwealth, together with other funds and resources that may be designated by law, and shall be increased from time to time by assigning to it any part of the taxes or other revenues of the State not required for the ordinary and current expenses of government; and unless in case of war, invasion or insurrection, no part of the said sinking fund shall be used or applied otherwise than in the extinguishment of the public debt.

Surplus Funds; Sinking Fund Investments

Section 12. The moneys of the State, over and above the necessary reserve, shall be used in the payment of the debt of the State, either directly or through the sinking fund, and the moneys of the sinking fund shall never be invested in or loaned upon the security of anything, except the bonds of the United States or of this State.

Reserve Funds; Monthly Statements

Section 13. The moneys held as necessary reserve shall be limited by law to the amount required for current expenses, and shall be secured and kept as may be provided by law. Monthly statements shall be published showing the amount of such moneys, where the same are deposited, and how secured.

Penalty for Misuse of Public Moneys

Section 14. The making of profit out of the public moneys or using the same for any purpose not authorized by law by any officer of the State, or member or officer of the General Assembly, shall be a misdemeanor and shall be punished as may be provided by law, but part of such punishment shall be disqualification to hold office for a period of not less than five years.

Exceptions to Municipal Indebtedness; Liquidation

Section 15. No obligations which have been heretofore issued, or which may hereafter be issued, by any county or municipality, other than Philadelphia, to provide for the construction or acquisition of waterworks, subways, underground railways or street railways, or the appurtenances thereof, shall be considered as a debt of a municipality, within the meaning of section eight of article nine of the Constitution of Pennsylvania or of this amendment, if the net revenue derived from said property for a period of five years, either before or after the acquisition thereof, or, where the same is constructed by the county or municipality, after the completion thereof, shall have been sufficient to pay interest and sinking-fund charges during said period upon said obligations, or if the said obligations shall be secured by liens upon the respective properties, and shall impose no municipal liability. Where municipalities or counties shall issue obligations to provide for the construction of property, as herein provided, said municipalities or counties may also issue obligations to provide for the interest and sinking-fund charges accruing thereon until said properties shall have been completed and in operation for a period of one year; and said municipalities and counties shall not be required to levy a tax to pay said interest and sinking-fund charges, as required by section ten of article nine of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, until after said properties shall have been operated by said counties or municipalities during said period of one year. Any of the said municipalities or counties may incur indebtedness in excess of seven per centum, and not exceeding ten per centum, of the assessed valution of the taxable property therein, if said increase of indebtedness shall have been assented to by three-fifths of the electors voting at a public election, in such manner as shall be provided by law.

Soldiers' Bonus*

Section 16. In addition to the purposes stated in article nine, section four of this Constitution, the State may be authorized by law to create debt and to issue bonds, to the amount of fifty millions of dollars, for the payment of compensation to certain persons from this State who served in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States during the war between the United States and Spain, between the twenty-first day of April, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight, and the thirteenth day of August, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight, or who served in the China Relief Expedition in the Philippines or Guam, between the twenty-first day of April, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight, and the fourth day of July, one thousand nine hundred and two, or who served in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States during the World War, between the sixth day of April, one thousand nine hundred and seventeen and the eleventh day of November, one thousand nine hundred and eighteen.

Toll Bridges*

Section 16. In addition to the purposes stated in article nine, section four, of this Constitution, the General Assembly may provide, by law, for the issue of bonds, to the amount of ten millions of dollars, for the purpose of acquiring toll bridges, and may, by law, provide that, upon the acquisition of any such bridge, tolls may be charged for the use thereof, sufficient to pay the interest and sinking fund charges on such bonds and the cost of the maintenance of such bridges, until the bonds issued have been retired and such bridges are freed of tolls.

Authorization of State to Borrow Money

Section 17. The Governor, the Auditor General, and the State Treasurer, immediately upon the adoption of this amendment by the electors, may borrow an amount not exceeding twenty-five million dollars to defray the expenses of the State government for the biennium beginning June first, one thousand nine hundred thirty-three; provided the General Assembly, at its regular session of one thousand nine hundred and thirty-three, has authorized the borrowing of money for this purpose.

Gasoline Taxes and Motor License Fees Restricted

Section 18. All proceeds from gasoline and other motor fuel excise taxes, motor vehicle registration fees and license taxes, operators' license fees and other excise taxes imposed on products used in motor transportation after providing therefrom for (a) cost of administration and collection, (b) payment of obligations incurred in the construction and reconstruction of public highways and bridges shall be appropriated by the General Assembly to agencies of the State or political subdivisions thereof; and used solely for construction, reconstruction, maintenance and repair of and safety on public highways and bridges and air navigation facilities and costs and expenses incident thereto, and for the payment of obligations incurred for such purposes, and shall not be diverted by transfer or otherwise to any other purpose, except that loans may be made by the State from the proceeds of such taxes and fees for a single period not exceeding eight months, but no such loan shall be made within the period of one year from any preceding loan, and every loan made in any fiscal year shall be repayable within one month after the beginning of the next fiscal year.

Special Assessment for Transit Facilities in Philadelphia

Section 19. The city of Philadelphia, in constructing, for the benefit of the inhabitants thereof, transit subways, rapid transit railways, or other local transit facilities for the transportation of persons or property, shall have the power, in order the more justly to distribute the benefits and costs of such transit facilities, to levy special assessments against such properties, whether abutting or not abutting upon said transit facilities, as are or will be specially and particularly benefited by the construction or operation of such transit facilities; such power to be exercised in accordance with existing or with future laws or pursuant to statutes enacted prior to the adoption of this amendment but made effective by it. Such special assessments, when so levied, may be made payable presently when levied or in installments over a period of years, with or without interest, and shall immediately, when so levied, be deducted from any indebtedness incurred for such purposes in calculating the debt of such city. Such city may acquire by eminent domain either the fee or less estate or easements in land necessary for the construction or operation of such transit facilities or for the disposal of earth or material excavated in the construction thereof or for other incidental purposes; but this provision shall not create any additional powers for the condemnation of any railroad or street railway in operation.

(PLEASE NOTE—Section 20 omitted in original)

Bonds Authorized for Special Purposes

Section 21. In addition to the purposes stated in article nine, section four of this Constitution, the Commonwealth may be authorized by law to create debt and to issue bonds to the amount of fifty million dollars ($50,000,000) for the construction of public buildings, highways, drainage and sanitary systems, anti-stream pollution and flood control projects for purposes of reforestation, and for the rehabilitation and hospitalization of war veterans.

Soldier's Bonus (World War II)

Section 22. In addition to the purposes stated in article nine, section four of this Constitution, the Commonwealth may be authorized by law to create debt and to issue bonds to the amount of $500,000,000 for the payment of compensation to certain persons from this Commonwealth who shall have served in the armed forces of the United States or of any of her allies during World War II, between the seventh day of December, one thousand nine hundred forty-one and the second day of September, one thousand nine hundred forty-five, for the service of such persons to their country, whether or not they be living when distribution shall be made, and if such persons shall be deceased when distribution shall be made, such deceased person's compensation shall be paid to his spouse, child, children or parents.

Korean Veterans' Bonus

Section 23. In addition to the purposes stated in article nine, section four of this Constitution, the Commonwealth may be authorized, by law, to create debt and to issue bonds to the amount of one hundred fifty million dollars ($150,000,000) for the payment of compensation to certain persons from this Commonwealth, who served in the armed forces of the United States or any of her allies during the Korean Conflict, between June twenty-fifth, one thousand nine hundred fifty, and July twenty-seventh, one thousand nine hundred fifty-three, for the service of such persons to their country, whether or not they are living when distribution is made, and if the person is deceased when distribution is made, the deceased person's compensation shall be paid to his spouse, child, children or parents.

The law authorizing the creation of the debt and the issuance of the bonds shall not take effect until revenue-raising measures are enacted, which the Senate and House of Representatives, by concurrent resolution, declare and deem sufficient to amortize the amount to be borrowed and paid. The revenue derived from such revenue-raising measures shall be used only for the payment of the debt created, as herein provided, and the measures shall provide for their termination when sufficient funds are accumulated to pay the debt.

Project "70"

Section 24. In addition to the purposes stated in article nine, section four of this Constitution, the Commonwealth may be authorized by law to create debt and to issue bonds to the amount of seventy million dollars ($70,000,000) for the acquisition of land for State parks, reservoirs and other conservation and recreation and historical preservation purposes and for participation by the Commonwealth with political subdivisions in the acquisition of land for parks, reservoirs and other conservation and recreation and historical preservation purposes, subject to such conditions and limitations as the General Assembly may prescribe.

Section 25. In addition to the purposes stated in article nine, section four of this Constitution, the Commonwealth may be authorized by law to create a debt and issue bonds in the amount of five hundred million dollars ($500,000,000) for a Land and Water Conservation and Reclamation Fund to be used for the conservation and reclamation of land and water resources of the Commonwealth, including the elimination of acid mine drainage, sewage, and other pollution from the streams of the Commonwealth, the provision of State financial assistance to political subdivisions and municipal authorities of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania for the construction of sewage treatment plants, the restoration of abandoned strip-mined areas, the control and extinguishment of surface and underground mine fires, the alleviation and prevention of subsidence resulting from mining operations, and the acquisition of additional lands and the reclamation and development of park and recreational lands acquired pursuant to the authority of article nine, section twenty-four of this Constitution, subject to such conditions and liabilities as the General Assembly may prescribe.

NEW COUNTIES

Section 1. No new county shall be established which shall reduce any county to less than four hundred square miles, or to less than twenty thousand inhabitants; nor shall any county be formed of less area, or containing a less population; nor shall any line thereof pass within ten miles of the county seat of any county proposed to be divided.

COUNTY OFFICERS

Enumerated; Treasurers Ineligible to Succeed Themselves

Section 1. County officers shall consist of sheriffs, coroners, prothonotaries, register of wills, recorder of deeds, commissioners, treasurers, surveyors, auditors or controllers, clerks of the courts, district attorneys and such others as may from time to time be established by law; and no treasurer shall be eligible for the term next succeeding the one for which he may be elected.

Elections; Terms; Vacancies

Section 2. County officers shall be elected at the municipal elections and shall hold their offices for the term of four years, beginning on the first Monday of January next after their election, and until their successors shall be duly qualified; all vacancies not otherwise provided for, shall be filled in such manner as may be provided by law.

Residence Requirements

Section 3. No person shall be appointed to any office within any county who shall not have been a citizen and an inhabitant therein one year next before his appointment, if the county shall have been so long erected, but if it shall not have been so long erected, then within the limits of the county or counties out of which it shall have been taken.

Location of County Offices

Section 4. Prothonotaries, clerks of the courts, recorders of deeds, registers of wills, county surveyors and sheriffs, shall keep their offices in the county town of the county in which they respectively shall be officers.

Compensation of County Officers; Fees

Section 5. The compensation of county officers shall be regulated by law, and all county officers who are or may be salaried shall pay all fees which they may be authorized to receive, into the treasury of the county or State, as may be directed by law. In counties containing over one hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants all county officers shall be paid by salary, and the salary of any such officer and his clerks, heretofore paid by fees, shall not exceed the aggregate amount of fees earned during his term and collected by or for him.

Accountability of Municipal Officers

Section 6. The General Assembly shall provide by law for the strict accountability of all county, township and borough officers, as well as for the fees which may be collected by them, as for all public or municipal moneys which may be paid to them.

County Commissioners and Auditors; Filling Vacancies

Section 7. Three county commissioners and three county auditors shall be elected in each county where such officers are chosen, in the year one thousand nine hundred and eleven and every fourth year thereafter; and in the election of said officers each qualified elector shall vote for no more than two persons, and the three persons having the highest number of votes shall be elected; any casual vacancy in the office of county commissioners or county auditor shall be filled, by the court of common pleas of the county in which such vacancy shall occur, by the appointment of and elector of the proper county who shall have voted for the commissioner or auditor whose place is to be filled.

Abolition of County Offices in Philadelphia

Section 8. (1) In Philadelphia all county offices are hereby abolished, and the city shall henceforth perform all functions of county government within its area through officers selected in such manner as may be provided by law.

(2) Local and special laws, regulating the affairs of the city of Philadelphia and creating offices or prescribing the powers and duties of officers of the city of Philadelphia, shall be valid notwithstanding the provisions of section seven of article three of this Constitution.

(3) All laws applicable to the county of Philadelphia shall apply to the city of Philadelphia.

(4) The city of Philadelphia shall have, assume and take over all powers, property, obligations and indebtedness of the county of Philadelphia.

(5) The provisions of article fifteen, section one of the Constitution, shall apply with full force and effect to the functions of the county government hereafter to be performed by the city government.

(6) This amendment shall become effective immediately upon its adoption.

(7) Upon adoption of this amendment all county officers shall become officers of the city of Philadelphia, and until the General Assembly shall otherwise provide, shall continue to perform their duties and be elected, appointed, compensated and organized in such manner as may be provided by the provisions of this Constitution and the laws of the Commonwealth in effect at the time this amendment becomes effective, but such officers serving when this amendment becomes effective shall be permitted to complete their terms.

CITIES AND CITY CHARTERS

Home Rule

Section 1. Cities may be chartered whenever a majority of electors of any town or borough having a population of at least ten thousand shall vote at any general or municipal election in favor of the same. Cities, or cities of any particular class, may be given the right and power to frame and adopt their own charters and to exercise the powers and authority of local self-government, subject, however, to such restrictions, limitations, and regulations, as may be imposed by the Legislature. Laws also may be enacted affecting the organization and government of cities and boroughs, which shall become effective in any city or borough only when submitted to the electors thereof, and approved by a majority of those voting thereon.

Appropriations Must Precede Indebtedness

Section 2. No debt shall be contracted or liability incurred by any municipal commission, except in pursuance of an appropriation previously made therefor by the municipal government.

City Sinking Fund

Section 3. Every city shall create a sinking fund, which shall be inviolably pledged for the payment of its funded debt.

Consolidation in Allegheny County

Section 4. The General Assembly is hereby authorized to provide for the consolidation of the county, poor districts, cities, boroughs and townships of the county of Allegheny, and the offices thereof, into a consolidated city and county, with the constitutional and legal capacity of a municipal corporation, to be known either as "Greater Pittsburgh" or "Metropolitan Pittsburgh" or "City of Pittsburgh (Metropolitan)," and to provide for a charter for its government, and to fix the name thereof in the charter. The said charter shall be submitted to the electors of said county, at a special or general election to be provided for therein. If the majority of the electors voting thereon in the county as a whole, and at least a majority of the electors voting thereon in each of a majority of the cities, boroughs and townships thereof, vote in the affirmative, the act shall take effect for the whole county.

If rejected, the said charter may be resubmitted by the county commissioners to the electors from time to time, but not oftener than once in two years, until adopted. Until a charter shall have been adopted as aforesaid, the General Assembly shall have the power to amend or modify the said charter, in which event the charter as amended or modified shall be submitted and resubmitted as aforesaid.

It shall be competent, subject to the police power of the State, for the Legislature to provide in said charter:

I. For the exercise by the consolidated city of all the powers and duties vested in the county of Allegheny, and the poor districts thereof, and such other powers appropriate to a municipality as may be specified therein, except such powers as are specifically reserved by this section to the municipal divisions herein provided for.

II. For the election of a board of commissioners, by districts and/or at large, by the electors of the consolidated city, the number to be fixed by the charter, in lieu of present county commissioners, in which board shall be vested all the powers of the consolidated city, except as otherwise provided in the charter.

III. For the organization of a government for the consolidated city, and for the appointment and/or election of any officers thereof, created by the Constitution, or otherwise, and to provide for their powers and duties.

IV. For the organization and reorganization of all courts, other than those of record, in the consolidated city, and for the appointment and/or election of the judges and officers thereof, and for the procedure thereof, including the right to provide that said court or courts be courts of record, which courts may exercise the jurisdiction, powers and rights of the magistrates, aldermen and justices of the peace, and such other jurisdiction and powers as may be conferred by law.

V. For the transfer to, and the assumption by, the consolidated city of the property and indebtedness of the county of Allegheny, and the poor districts thereof, and of such property and indebtedness of the cities, boroughs and townships thereof as relate to the powers and duties of said consolidated city, and to provide for an equitable adjustment and arrangement with respect thereto and for the payment of such indebtedness, and, for this purpose, any taxation therein, arising thereby, shall be uniform taxation within the meaning and intent of other provisions of the Constitution.

VI. For the assessment of property for taxation, the levying and collecting of taxes, and the payment of the cost of any public or municipal improvement, in whole or in part, by special assessment upon abutting and non-abutting property specially benefited thereby.

VII. For the creation, by the board of commissioners, of districts for the purpose of regulating the location, height, area, bulk and use of building and premises.

VIII. For the creation of indebtedness by the consolidated city within the limits now or hereafter imposed upon cities by other provisions of the Constitution. Such power to create indebtedness shall not impair the power of the municipal divisions, within the consolidated city, to create indebtedness within the limits now or hereafter imposed upon such municipalities by other provisions of the Constitution.

IX. For the creation, by the board of commissioners, of special districts for the purpose of carrying on or carrying out any public or municipal improvement, not for the exclusive benefit of any one municipal division; and for the payment of the cost and maintenance of such property or improvement, or any part thereof, special taxes may be levied throughout such special districts, respectively, separate and apart from the general consolidated city tax.

X. For the exercise of such powers by the consolidated city as may be necessary to enable it to carry on and carry out such municipal and metropolitan powers and functions as the General Assembly may deem advisable and expedient and for the general welfare of the said city and its inhabitants:

Provided, however, That it is the intent of this section that substantial powers be reserved to the cities, boroughs and townships situated in Allegheny County. To this end the charter shall provide for the continued existence of the said cities, boroughs and townships, as municipal divisions of the consolidated city, under their present names and forms of government, subject to the laws now or hereafter provided for government of municipalities of their respective forms and classes and to the powers conferred upon the consolidated city by the charter, and with their present boundaries. Any two or more of said municipal divisions, or portions thereof, may, with the consent of a majority of the electors voting thereon in each of such divisions at any special or general election, be united to form a single municipal division. Wherever a portion of a municipal division is involved, the election shall be held in the entire municipal division of which the said portion is a part.

The said municipal divisions shall have and continue to have the following powers:

I. The constitutional and legal capacity of municipal corporations.

II. The power to levy and collect taxes and to incur indebtedness, subject to the limitations which are or may be imposed by law upon cities, boroughs, or townships of corresponding classification, for the purpose of carrying out any lawful power of said divisions.

III. The power to acquire, own, construct, maintain, operate or contract for all kinds of public property, works, improvements, utilities or services, which shall be within the municipal division and, where authorized by law, without the limits of the municipal division. Subject, however, to the right and power of the consolidated city to construct, acquire, maintain, and/or operate public works, improvements, utilities and services of all kinds, including through streets, highways and/or bridges, for the use and benefit of the consolidated city and its inhabitants.

IV. The power to maintain a local police force and local fire department, either paid or volunteer, with the necessary buildings, appurtenances and equipment therefor, which may be independent of or supplemental to the police force and fire department of the consolidated city.

V. All other powers not specifically granted by the charter to the consolidated city: Provided, however, That a municipal division may surrender, by a majority vote of the electors voting thereon at any general or special election, any of its powers to the consolidated city, subject to the acceptance thereof by the board of commissioners.

After a charter has been adopted as aforesaid, it may be amended as follows:

I. In matters which relate only to the powers of the consolidated city and which do not reduce the powers of any one or more of the municipal divisions thereof by the General Assembly: Provided, however, That any amendment which changes or modifies the form of government of the consolidated city, or the number of or manner of election of the commissioners thereof, shall not be effective until such amendment shall have been ratified by a majority of the electors of the consolidated city voting thereon at a general or special election, to be provided for in said amendment.

II. In matters which reduce the powers of any one or more of the municipal divisions of the consolidated city, such amendment, enacted by the General Assembly, shall not be effective until it shall have been ratified at a general or special election, to be provided for in said amendment, by a majority of the electors voting thereon in all of the municipal divisions affected thereby, and by a majority of the electors voting thereon in each of a majority of said municipal divisions so affected.

Acquisition of Land for Highway Construction

Section 5. The General Assembly may authorize cities to take more land and property than is needed for actual construction in the laying out, widening, extending or relocating highways or streets connecting with bridges crossing streams or tunnels under streams which form boundaries between this and any other state, but the additional land and property, so authorized to be taken, shall not be more than sufficient to form suitable building sites on such highways or streets. Nor shall the authority hereby conferred be exercised in connection with the laying out, widening, extending or relocating of any highway or street at a point more than three miles distant from the approach to any such bridge or tunnel. After so much of the land and property has been appropriated for such highways or streets as is needed therefor, the remainder may be sold or leased and any restrictions imposed thereupon which will preserve or enhance the benefit to the public of the property actually needed for the aforesaid public use.

ARTICLE V

THE JUDICIARY

Section 1. The judicial power of this Commonwealth shall be vested in a Supreme Court, in courts of common pleas, courts of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery, courts of quarter sessions of the peace, orphans' courts, magistrates' courts, and in such other courts as the General Assembly may from time to time establish.

Supreme Court; Term of Judges; Chief Justice

Section 2. The Supreme Court shall consist of seven judges, who shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State at large. They shall hold their offices for the term of twenty-one years, if they so long behave themselves well, but shall not be again eligible. The judge whose commission shall first expire shall be chief justice, and thereafter each judge whose commission shall first expire shall in turn be chief justice.

Jurisdiction and Powers of Supreme Court

Section 3. The jurisdiction of the Supreme Court shall extend over the State, and the judges thereof shall, by virtue of their offices, be justices of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery in the several counties; they shall have original jurisdiction in cases of injunction where a corporation is a party defendant, of habeas corpus, of mandamus to courts of inferior jurisdiction, and of quo warranto as to all officers of the Commonwealth whose jurisdiction extends over the State, but shall not exercise any other original jurisdiction; they shall have appellate jurisdiction by appeal, certiorari or writ of error in all cases, as is now or may hereafter be provided by law.

Common Pleas Courts

Section 4. Until otherwise directed by law, the courts of common pleas shall continue as at present established, except as herein changed; not more than four counties shall, at any time, be included in one judicial district organized for said courts.

Judicial Districts; Associate Judges

Section 5. Whenever a county shall contain forty thousand inhabitants it shall constitute a separate judicial district, and shall elect one judge learned in the law; and the General Assembly shall provide for additional judges, as the business of the said districts may require. Counties containing a population less than is sufficient to constitute separate districts shall be formed into convenient single districts, or, if necessary, may be attached to contiguous districts as the General Assembly may provide. The office of associate judge not learned in the laws as abolished in counties forming separate districts; but the several associate judges in office when this Constitution shall be adopted shall serve for their unexpired terms.

Common Pleas Courts of Philadelphia and Allegheny Counties; Increasing the Number of Judges

Section 6. In the county of Philadelphia all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the district courts and courts of common pleas, subject to such changes as may be made by this Constitution or by law, shall be in Philadelphia vested in five distinct and separate courts of equal and coordinate jurisdiction, composed of three judges each. The said courts in Philadelphia shall be designated respectively as the court of common pleas number one, number two, number three, number four, and number five, but the number of said courts may be by law increased, from time to time, and shall be in like manner designated by successive numbers. The number of judges in any of said courts, or in any county where the establishment of an additional court may be authorized by law, may be increased, from time to time, and whenever such increase shall amount in the whole to three, such three judges shall compose a distinct and separate court as aforesaid, which shall be numbered as aforesaid. In Philadelphia all suits shall be instituted in the said courts of common pleas without designating the number of the said court, and the several courts shall distribute and apportion the business among them in such manner as shall be provided by rules of court, and each court, to which any suit shall be thus assigned, shall have exclusive jurisdiction thereof, subject to change of venue, as shall be provided by law.

In the county of Allegheny all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the several numbered courts of common pleas shall be vested in one court of common pleas, composed of all the judges in commission in said courts. Such jurisdiction and powers shall extend to all proceedings at law and in equity which shall have been instituted in the several numbered courts, and shall be subject to such changes as may be made by law, and subject to change of venue as provided by law.

The president judge of said court shall be selected as provided by law. The number of judges in said court may be by law increased from time to time. This amendment shall take effect on the first day of January succeeding its adoption.

Prothonotary of Philadelphia

Section 7. For Philadelphia there shall be one prothonotary's office, and one prothonotary for all said courts to be appointed by the judges of said courts, and to hold office for three years, subject to removal by a majority of the said judges; the said prothonotary shall appoint such assistants as may be necessary and authorized by said courts; and he and his assistants shall receive fixed salaries, to be determined by law and paid by said county; all fees collected in said office, except such as may be by law due to the Commonwealth, shall be paid by the prothonotary into the county treasury. Each court shall have its separate dockets, except the judgment docket which shall contain the judgments and liens of all the said courts, as is or may be directed by law.

Criminal Courts in Philadelphia and Allegheny Counties

Section 8. The said courts in the counties of Philadelphia and Allegheny, respectively, shall, from time to time, in turn detail one or more of their judges to hold the courts of Oyer and Terminer and the courts of Quarter Sessions of the Peace of said counties, in such manner as may be directed by law.

Duties of Common Pleas Judges

Section 9. Judges of the courts of common pleas learned in the law, shall be judges of the courts of oyer and terminer, quarter sessions of the peace and general jail delivery, and of the orphans' court, and within their respective districts shall be justices of the peace as to criminal matters.

Certiorari to Courts Not of Record

Section 10. The judges of the courts of common pleas, within their respective counties, shall have power to issue writs of certiorari to justices of the peace and other inferior courts not of record, and to cause their proceedings to be brought before them, and right and justice to be done.

Justices of the Peace and Aldermen

Section 11. Except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, justices of the peace or aldermen shall be elected in the several wards, districts, boroughs or townships, by the qualified electors thereof, at the municipal election, in such manner as shall be directed by law, and shall be commissioned by the Governor for a term of six years. No township, ward, district or borough shall elect more than two justices of the peace or aldermen without the consent of a majority of the qualified electors within such township, ward or borough; no person shall be elected to such office unless he shall have resided within the township, borough, ward or district for one year next preceding his election. In cities containing over fifty thousand inhabitants, not more than one alderman shall be elected in each ward or district.

Magistrates' Courts in Philadelphia

Section 12. In Philadelphia there shall be established, for each thirty thousand inhabitants, one court, not of record, of police and civil causes, with jurisdiction not exceeding one hundred dollars; such courts shall be held by magistrates whose term of office shall be six years, and they shall be elected on general ticket at the municipal election by the qualified voters at large; and in the election of the said magistrates no voter shall vote for more than two-thirds of the number of persons to be elected when more than one are to be chosen; they shall be compensated only by fixed salaries, to be paid by said county; and shall exercise such jurisdiction, civil and criminal, except as herein provided, as is now exercised by aldermen, subject to such changes, not involving an increase of civil jurisdiction or conferring political duties, as may be made by law. In Philadelphia the office of alderman is abolished.

Disposition of Fees

Section 13. All fees, fines and penalties in said courts shall be paid into the county treasury.

Appeal from Decisions of Courts Not of Record

Section 14. In all cases of summary conviction in this Commonwealth, or of judgment in suit for a penalty before a magistrate, or court not of record, either party may appeal to such court of record as may be prescribed by law, upon allowance of the appellate court or judge thereof upon cause shown.

Election of Judges; Term; Removal

Section 15. All judges required to be learned in the law, except the judges of the Supreme Court, shall be elected by the qualified electors of the respective districts over which they are to preside, and shall hold their offices for the period of ten years, if they shall so long behave themselves well; but for any reasonable cause, which shall not be sufficient ground for impeachment, the Governor may remove any of them on the address of two-thirds of each House of the General Assembly.

The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court may designate and assign former judges, learned in the law, who are willing so to do, who have served at least one term and who have not been defeated for reelection, to the office of judge of any court of record, to temporarily sit in the courts of any judicial district for the disposal of business under such circumstances and subject to such qualifications and conditions as the General Assembly may prescribe.

Election of Supreme Court Judges

Section 16. Whenever two judges of the Supreme Court are to be chosen for the same term of service each voter shall vote for one only, and when three are to be chosen he shall vote for no more than two; candidates highest in vote shall be declared elected.

Priority of Judges' Commissions

Section 17. Should any two or more judges of the Supreme Court, or any two or more judges of the court of common pleas for the same district, be elected at the same time, they shall, as soon after the election as convenient, cast lots for priority of commission, and certify the result to the Governor, who shall issue their commissions in accordance therewith.

Compensation of Judges

Section 18. The judges of the Supreme Court and the judges of the several courts of common pleas, and all other judges required to be learned in the law, shall at stated times receive for their services an adequate compensation, which shall be fixed by law, and paid by the State. They shall receive no other compensation, fees or perquisites of office for their services from any source, nor hold any other office of profit under the United States, this State or any other State.

Residences of Judges

Section 19. The judges of the Supreme Court, during their continuance in office, shall reside within this Commonwealth; and the other judges, during their continuance in office, shall reside within the districts for which they shall be respectively elected.

Chancery Powers of Common Pleas Courts

Section 20. The several courts of common pleas, besides the powers herein conferred, shall have and exercise within their respective districts, subject to such changes as may be made by law, such chancery powers as are now vested by law in the several courts of common pleas of this Commonwealth, or as may hereafter be conferred upon them by law.

Limitations Upon Supreme Court

Section 21. No duties shall be imposed by law upon the Supreme Court or any of the judges thereof, except such as are judicial, nor shall any of the judges thereof exercise any power of appointment except as herein provided. The court of nisi prius is hereby abolished, and no court of original jurisdiction to be presided over by any one or more of the judges of the Supreme Court shall be established.

Orphans' Courts; Auditing of Accounts; Registers' Courts Abolished

Section 22. In every county wherein the population shall exceed one hundred and fifty thousand, the General Assembly shall, and in any other county may, establish a separate orphans' court, to consist of one or more judges who shall be learned in the law, which court shall exercise all the jurisdictions and powers now vested in or which may hereafter be conferred upon the orphans' courts, and thereupon the jurisdiction of the judges of the court of common pleas within such county, in orphans' court proceedings, shall cease and determine. In any county in which a separate orphans' court shall be established, the register of wills shall be clerk of such court and subject to its directions, in all matters pertaining to his office; he may appoint assistant clerks, but only with the consent and approval of said court. All accounts filed with him as register or as clerk of the said separate orphans' court shall be audited by the court without expense to parties, except where all parties in interest in a pending proceeding shall nominate an auditor whom the court may, in its discretion, appoint. In every county orphans' courts shall possess all the powers and jurisdiction of a registers' court, and separate registers' courts are hereby abolished.

Style of Criminal Process; Prosecutions

Section 23. The style of all process shall be "The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania." All prosecutions shall be carried on in the name and by the authority of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and conclude "against the peace and dignity of the same."

Right of Appeal in Criminal Cases

Section 24. In all cases of felonious homicide, and in such other criminal cases as may be provided for by law, the accused after conviction and sentence, may remove the indictment, record and all proceedings to the Supreme Court for review.

Filling Vacancies in Courts of Record

Section 25. Any vacancy happening by death, resignation or otherwise, in any court of record, shall be filled by appointment by the Governor, to continue till the first Monday of January next succeeding the first general election, which shall occur three or more months after the happening of such vacancy.

Uniform Laws for Courts; Certain Courts Prohibited

Section 26. All laws relating to courts shall be general and of uniform operation, and the organization, jurisdiction and powers of all courts of the same class or grade, so far as regulated by law, and the force and effect of the process and judgments of such courts, shall be uniform; and the General Assembly is hereby prohibited from creating other courts to exercise the powers vested by this Constitution in the judges of the courts of common pleas and orphans' courts.

Dispensing with Jury Trials in Civil Cases

Section 27. The parties, by agreement filed, may in any civil case dispense with trial by jury, and submit the decision of such case to the court having jurisdiction thereof, and such court shall hear and determine the same; and the judgment thereon shall be subject to writ of error as in other cases.

Section 28. The General Assembly may, by general law, provide that a course of training and education be completed by justices of the peace and aldermen hereafter selected who have not been admitted to practice law in this Commonwealth. The required course of training and education shall not exceed three months' duration, one month of which shall be taken after their election and prior to their assuming office. The remaining two months of training and education shall be taken immediately after assuming office. Their jurisdiction shall extend to summary offenses only prior to completion of the required course. Persons who have served as justices of the peace or aldermen prior to the adoption of this amendment shall not be required to take this course. The required course shall be at the cost of the Commonwealth.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Forster. You may proceed.

DELEGATE FORSTER. Mr. President, you have before you the proposed copy for the Address to the People. I call your attention to the first two recommendations of this third recommendation of our committee. We recommend that the Constitutional Convention adopt an Address to the People in the form hereto attached, and, second, we further recommend that the Address to the People and copies of a condensed version thereof be printed and distributed as directed by the Committee on Administration and Finance.

Now, a word of explanation concerning the copy of the complete booklet which you have. On the first page, it is an exhibit illustrating the kind and style of type that would be used in the main section of the Address where the full text of the finally adopted articles proposed by this Convention will appear on the left side of the page and a commentary in layman's language on the right side of the page.

The next page you have is the copy for the cover of the booklet. We attempted to reproduce by this reproduction machinery available here the design of that cover and, unfortunately, it will not reproduce, so we are going to do the next best thing, that is, pass around from delegate to delegate the official layout so that you can see it. There will be one change in this layout and that is the size. The printing contract which the Committee on Administration and Finance has made with the printer called for a page size of seven inches by nine inches, which is the size of all the booklets, the instructional booklets you got in connection with this Convention, so that the address will fit in and be a part of a complete library and be the same size. This will necessitate some alteration in the design of the layout, you see, but not much. It will still be essentially the same.

The next page you have is the title page of the book. The next page gives the contents. You have then, following that, the Address to the People of Pennsylvania, which, in condensed version, sets forth what this Convention has done, why and how it did its work, and the essential questions that the people will be called on to decide in April.

Following that statement are the ballot questions which will now be changed to reflect the amendments made on them here today when they were adopted.

Following that section, we begin the actual presentation of the full articles with the summary and explanation thereof in the right-hand side. Here, again, in each section the ballot question will be revised to reflect the amendments made today in adopting those questions.

Following the summary and explanation section, we have the list of officers of the Convention; following is the list of all committees and subcommittees. Following is the list of all staff, and they are also shown not only by the major components of staff, but as assigned to committees; the next section is the alphabetical listing of all delegates with party affiliation, senatorial districts, occupation and residence.

May I say to you now it was an impossibility for us to get around to each of you individually to check the spelling of your name or the way it is shown but we want you to look at this copy now and if your name does not appear the way you want it, please report to me and we will see that it is properly changed to reflect it the way you wish it.

Now, one more comment:

The last section is the appendix which includes all of the articles and sections of the present Constitution that the newly proposed articles and sections are intended to replace from the present Constitution.

I have some changes to offer to this now. In the rapid scurry of trying to put this document together in a very short period of time, there were certain omissions. One is that the staff people working with Style and Drafting, that list was omitted. It will be added. In addition, the Assistant to the President of the Convention was omitted. Miss Bette Aversa. That will be added.

Now, we will respectively throw ourselves upon your mercy.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate McGeary.

DELEGATE McGEARY. Mr. President, I just wanted to congratulate the Committee. I think the most important part of this is pages 7 to 21, where there is a summary and explanation of all of our changes. I know many of you have not had a chance to look at it, but I have been taking time in the last hour to read that carefully and I think it is a wonderful job. It will help not only the voters, but will help us who will have to make a speech in the next few days and cannot remember what we have done.

Congratulations.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I certainly join in that, and I think the fellow delegates sincerely congratulate you for a job well done.

DELEGATE FORSTER. I think Delegate Nelson was the primary author of the commentary and, following what Delegate McGeary said, two officers of this Convention have already used these comments for a speech.

Mr. President, I understand there are some suggested changes in this copy from the delegates, and I do not know at this time the status of how we will handle it, whether we will handle it through the formal amending process or whether they could not expedite it by telling us and having us mark our copies accordingly as an amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think it will depend on how many amendments and the extent of them. Let us see who has suggestions to offer, and then we will make a decision together to see what our task is.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Scales.

DELEGATE SCALES. Mr. President, several members of the Local Government Committee have examined the pages on the commentary concerning local government together, and we have submitted an amendment to the Drafting Bureau which is now being prepared. It involves nine or ten changes to correct fairly minor inaccuracies. I understand Delegate Leonard has done the same thing and his suggested changes are being worked on now, also.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That would be a very excellent way to expedite any changes.

May I suggest, if the Judiciary Committee has any changes, they handle theirs in the same way, or Chairman Devlin in connection with Legislative Apportionment, if they want any changes.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, this is really a splendid document and will be of great help, particularly to newspapers, editorial writers, and persons like that, particularly those of us who must make talks on it.

May I direct the committee's attention to page 10 where there is a problem that would not merit an amendment, but I would bring it to the attention of Delegate Forster and, perhaps, he could handle it personally. The third paragraph down on the right, the requirement that all taxes shall be uniform upon the same classes of subjects, etc., was the subject of great discussion in the period when we were authorizing this Convention, these two restrictions, and there were many people who felt that we could not be trusted to obey those restrictions.

It would be very helpful to me—maybe others—to newspapermen, also, if some phrase such as "the Convention meticulously observed the restriction not to," or something like that. Let us get some merit from this. We were meticulous through the help of our President and his staff to keep away from these two areas. I think this should be stated positively, because there were people who were afraid that we would not.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Did you have any comment on that, Delegate Nelson?

DELEGATE NELSON. Yes, one comment. This is meant to be factual boy scout language. I think what Secretary Michener has in mind might well be incorporated into the foreword, the Address to the People, rather than in this factual analysis. I am sure if he would draft a sentence we would be happy to insert it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May I suggest we have our Secretary, Delegate Michener, draft such a sentence and we would see that it would get run off the machine as an amendment and take care of it.

Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Swope.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Mr. President, in line with our distinguished Secretary's observation, I believe that the people of Pennsylvania and its political leaders were intensely interested that we should not touch anything which might bring a graduated income tax into our State. I think this should also be specifically mentioned along with the gasoline taxes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you. Was that a suggestion to Secretary Michener for his amendment?

As I understand it, we are having amendments prepared.

We would like to get on with the business. Do not forget it is February 29th. For the benefit of the delegates who do not have watches on, according to the clock it is 5:28 p.m.

Will the Convention please come to order?

I think, fellow delegates, you would like another explanation as to where we are, what we have left and what our time schedule is, and then I will recognize Delegate Pasquerilla.

First of all, we have, I think, three amendments to this Recommendation No. 3. Could I have your attention, please, because I think you will want to hear this.

One of those amendments is now ready and about to be presented to you by Delegate Pasquerilla. The two others are being prepared. This process should not take us more than the next 10 or 15 minutes. Our holdup, of course, again, and I regret to say it, is on the printing and getting Article 7 in final form. The latest estimate that I received now—this is the one I gave earlier for 4:30—is now sometime between 7:00 and 7:30.

I will tell you what else we have to do. We have a ceremony set up as soon as we have concluded our business, and our business will be concluded when we finally pass No. 7 and finally accept the report of Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People.

We will then have our signing ceremony, which, frankly, I do not think will take more than 25 or 30 minutes, something like that.

So let us put it this way, when we finish this process, you may want to get a bite to eat and then come back at 7:30 with the understanding from 7:30 we should be finished definitely by 9:00 o'clock. Otherwise, we will sit around here and have these little waits in between. I do urge all the delegates to be present. In the signing ceremony we arranged for photographers to take the picture of each delegate. It is a good suggestion.

PASQUERILLA AMENDMENT TO RECOMMENDATION No. 3

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Recommendation No. 3 of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to Recommendation No. 3?

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 12, third paragraph, by removing the period after "government" in line two, and inserting: for all municipalities.

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 13, first paragraph, by striking out "abolished;" in line 2 and inserting: now statutory;

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 13, third paragraph, line 2, by inserting after "cooperate": with or delegate to,

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 13, third paragraph, line 4, by striking out "with":

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 13, third paragraph, line 5, by striking out "the State or" and inserting: a State or the

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 14, first paragraph, by striking out all of first paragraph:

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 14, second paragraph, line 4, by striking out "will be permitted only" and inserting: is permitted

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 14, second paragraph, line 7, by inserting after "involved,": without the approval of the governing body,

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 14, by inserting between third and fourth paragraphs a new paragraph to read: Provision is made for the General Assembly to establish standards pursuant to which any municipality may give financial assistance to public service, industrial or commercial enterprises if necessary for the health, safety or welfare of the Commonwealth or any municipality. Existing rights of municipalities are preserved.

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 15, second paragraph, line 1, by inserting after "body": to the extent that

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 15, second paragraph, lines 1 and 2, by striking out "of which":

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 15, second paragraph, line 3, by striking out "apportion" and inserting: reapportion

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 15, second paragraph, line 7, by striking out "substantially" and inserting: as nearly Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 15, second paragraph, line 7, by removing the period after "population" and inserting: as practicable.

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 15, third paragraph, lines 1 and 2, by striking out all of line 1 and "added" in line 2 and inserting: Added

Amend Recommendation, ROSTER OF DELEGATES, page 37, under the heading of "Occupation", last two lines, by striking out "professor of Law" and inserting: Dean, Duquesne Law School

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Mr. President, under the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People, who have, in my opinion, done a very outstanding job in such a short period of time. We do have some correctional language to insert which will comply more with the intent. There are two pages of corrections but perhaps the most important correction is on page 3 and it says:

"Amend roster of delegates, page 37, under the heading of occupation, the last two lines, strike out "Professor of Law" and insert "Dean of the Duquesne Law School."

Since it is not November, I cannot change Delegate Casey's new title, nor Judge Hannum's, nor mine.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Chairman Nelson.

DELEGATE NELSON. We want it to be known that the occupation of our good Dean was considered at great length. The decision was that we would use the occupation at the time the Convention commenced, because we wondered what we would have done if some member had died during the Convention.

A DELEGATE. We would have buried him.

DELEGATE NELSON. We would not have marked him deceased, so we would have entered the occupation he was engaging in at the time—

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think the only one that can speak with authority on that is Delegate Goldstein.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If you want to make an explanation of any of your other amendments, would you proceed?

DELEGATE NELSON. The amendments are really self-explanatory. Once they are distributed on the desks, all that has to be done is to be fit into the language and there is nothing real serious about them. We felt that since it is going to be sent out to the people, that we should be absolutely sure that they are correct. I do not think we need to go through the 15 changes unless you so desire.

DELEGATE ALLISON. Do I understand this will be put up in book style?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. That is my understanding. I would like Delegate Nelson to answer that.

The question was:

Is it going to be put in book style?

DELEGATE NELSON. The recommendation is that the copies be printed and the copies of the condensed version be printed and distributed as directed by the Committee on Administration and Finance.

DELEGATE ALLISON. Can these corrections be made without the formality of having this material in? You will have other corrections like the State seal, and other things, to be put in there.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. My answer, if you are asking me, is that we want to get this report approved. I think it is important that we all approve what is in the report. If we have something done in committee, we will get home and find something in there we do not like.

WIFE AND FAMILY OF DELEGATE LEE WELCOMED

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Lee.

DELEGATE LEE. May I rise for a point of privilege? I would like to introduce my wife, Linda, who just now joined us.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would you stand up, please, Mrs. Lee?

PRESIDENT AND OFFICERS LAUDED AND COMMENDED BY DELEGATES

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Gray.

DELEGATE GRAY. Mr. President, while we are waiting for the distribution of these amendments, I would like to impose on this Convention to tell you what a swell guy you are. You had to praise yourself in the presence of your wife and, when the Governor came here we all stood up, but you have been the guy that did all the work and I want you to know that from the bottom of our hearts, whether we say so or not, we appreciate you. I do not want you to tell Jim Tate that I said this, you understand—and Delegate Amsterdam is not here, so he will not tell it back in Philadelphia, but we want you to know that you are a great man and I will ask everyone to join in with applause.

(Applause and standing ovation.)

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I thank you very, very much, honestly, from the bottom of my heart.

I want to say just one thing, if I may. You know, I appreciate that, but you saw me standing up here, but every day I met with three of the nicest guys that I ever had the opportunity and pleasure to work with, and they were my fellow officers and I wish you would give the same applause to Bob Casey, Frank Orban and Jim Michener, and every one of you have been magnificent. They have been so cooperative and I cannot tell you how much I appreciate it, from the bottom of my heart.

While you are still standing up, I just want to say I mentioned my fellow officers and you know everybody has been mentioned in the resolutions, but the cooperation that I have gotten from Mark Gruell, Marvin Comisky and Tom Balaban, and I can go on up and down here, "Rags," and the whole crew they have been magnificient. If you thought I made any bad decisions, I did not make any, they made them all. Let us give them a big hand.

ADDRESS BY SECRETARY MICHENER

DELEGATE MICHENER. I would like to point out one thing which has brought great distinction to this Convention and it is an event which stands in great contrast to the Convention that was recently held to the north in which, by a series of very sad political accident, the judges who were delegates to the New York Convention fell into a dreadful dispute with the non-judge delegates and, if you remember, the Convention had to suspend for two days until a formula of apology was worked out in which the judges apologized for trying to dominate the Judiciary Article in a most indefensible way and the non-judge delegates had to apologize for calling the judges names which you can imagine. That did not happen in our Convention. We had in our body, seven of the finest men that the legal profession of Pennsylvania provides. Instead of following the selfish and narrow task that was followed elsewhere, it was these men who spoke consistently to the broad interpretation, to the responsibility of the profession, to the necessity in the profession for order and for discipline and for removal for cause.

Instead of us having to fight the judges for the good things that we needed, our judges showed us the way to those good things and were consistent in standing with the very best that the legal profession in a state like ours can stand for.

We are very fortunate in having Judge Woodside as the head of one of the most important committees, of our deliberations, and, in having Judge Woodring, my good neighbor from the north as co-chairman of one of the difficult committees; in having Judge Shettig giving us his salty news of the smaller counties, of having Judge Hannum here to lend dignity to the office to which he is moving and to bring that dignity to our deliberations; in having Judge Fortney giving us his quiet solid advice.

I had the pleasure of attending many of the meetings of this Committee and to find these men so stalwart in defense of the things that you and I wanted and never at variance with us, was a great thing. To talk both in this hall and elsewhere with Judge Burkholder and to hear his wonderful remembrances of life in the judicial branch.

And above all, Judge Braham who would speak now and then on the problems of the legal profession. It was a pleasure to work with these men. I think we have been most fortunate in having the guidance and unselfishness of these men to bind us together in some of our most difficult decisions, and I think we owe them a round of applause for having shown us what the dignity of the bench really is.

RESOLUTION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Huggins.

DELEGATE HUGGINS. Mr. President, I stand in place and would like to read a resolution and would ask the action of this Constitutional Convention in this matter, if I may. I might say in the beginning, Mr. President, that we had hoped to hold this resolution to the last. I think, judging from the spontaneity of this Convention, we feel that, it has much more meaning now than it would have in the concluding moments.

DELEGATE HUGGINS requested and obtained unanimous consent by acclamation to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 29, 1968.

Leadership is a word that takes on many varied meanings. It can be defined as patience, and calm; as integrity and concern; as humor and flexibility; or it can be seen in the success of a united labor to complete a task with industry and valor. Leadership is varied in meaning, but is a gift that many covet, and one which few truly achieve.

True leadership is man's response to serve beyond self and is man's greatest natural fulfillment and can only be measured in terms of what his fellows see in his fortitude in the midst of stress. Great leadership is never exerted in selfishness of interests, or in the indulgence of individual gain. It is never born in moments of power, nor is it appreciated at the expense of those who value man's ability to lead man beyond the pale of ordinary human endeavors; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That we of this 1967-1968 Constitutional Convention do now, and for all time, praise the leadership exerted in this "date with history" by Raymond Broderick. Through his patient calm, his integrity of concern, for his humor and flexibility and for his industry and valor, we do now thank him, and ask God's blessing upon him in his future which is now marked by a star of leadership.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Can we now proceed with the business of this Convention? I appreciate that very, very, very much. I am now going to recognize Delegate Pasquerilla.

DELEGATE PASQUERILLA. Are there any questions by the delegates on the amendment to recommendations of the Local Government on the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People? Have they not been all distributed?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May I ask Chairman Nelson if you have any comment by your Committee?

DELEGATE NELSON. The committee has no objection to these amendments.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will unlock the voting machine. The question is, will the Convention accept the amendment now being offered by Delegate Pasquerilla to the report on Recommendation No. 3 of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People? Those voting "nay," vote to reject it.

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Pasquerilla?

The roll was recorded as follows:

CORRECTIONAL CHANGES TO RECOMMENDATION No. 3

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Forster.

DELEGATE FORSTER. I was informed by the Parliamentarian that the committee will be accorded the privilege of making some changes without going through the formal amending process because they are purely correctional and I would like to make two at this time.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Very good. After you state your change, the Chair will ask if there is any objection.

DELEGATE FORSTER. The first is in the Address to the People on page 1, the fifth paragraph, the last sentence which says, "Since 1900, the demand for revision steadily increased but six times over, this same period the voters rejected." Our face is red, that figure should be since "1890," instead of "1900." The first referendum I believe was 1891. I request permission to make that change.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Is there any objection? The Chair hears no objection.

MOTION THAT EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR BE FINAL ARBITER ON THE LISTING OF STAFF PERSONNEL IN THE ADDRESS TO PEOPLE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Forster.

DELEGATE FORSTER. The next is really not a correction, although it may result in one. I would move, Mr. President, that this Convention authorize its Executive Director, Mr. Ingram, to be the final arbiter on the listing of staff personnel in the Address to the People. Since it was put together so quickly, we may have omitted names that should have been included, or we may have included some names that should not have been included, and I move the authority be given to him.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved that the Executive Director be given the authority to make corrections in the listing of staff personnel. That motion is seconded by Delegate Bloom.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
It was agreed to.

ADDRESS BY DELEGATE BENFIELD

DELEGATE BENFIELD. Mr. President, I have not been on the floor quite as much as some of you have. Therefore, I would like to have just a few minutes to comment on the thoughts of a layman at this Convention.

Since the beginning of recorded history and the assemblying of people, and the formation of public opinion, public opinion has been the determining force in some of our most tyrannical rules. Actually, we could take all of the laws off the statute books if we would but enforce the Ten Commandments, but, unfortunately, even in the time of the Hebrews this was not enough. They did commit murder, and public opinion had it that it was worse to kill a brother than a cousin, and it was worse to kill a cousin than a stranger. For that reason, even at that time, there were classifications and there were different grades of crime and punishment and, therefore, we had the complex laws.

Public opinion is the reason that we have this Convention. Public opinion felt that our complex laws should be changed. The public elected us as delegates to this Convention, but now, if the press leads public opinion, or if the press represents public opinion, I am wondering whether we are condemned for our work. However, I am sure that if each and every one of us delegates will forget the points that we do not agree with in this Convention, but, if we will emphasize the good that is in it, I am sure that the press will give us good results.

You know, even close to the end of the Continental Congress, George Washington said something that I think is quite fitting for us here. "This Constitution is not what I would write. It is not the Constitution that any one of you would write, but, it is a good compromise."

I see no real fault in it so, therefore, I am going to approve it. I hope that each and every one of you will approve it and go out and encourage the approval of it.

You know, even in the time of Lincoln, when Lincoln was 24 years old, he already worked toward the title of Honest Abe. At that time, he was Postmaster of Salem, Illinois, at an annual salary of $55.70. The post office was closed in 1836, but it took many years until the auditors came along to check the account. When they came, Lincoln was a struggling lawyer, not doing so well. But, when he was told by the agent of the Federal Government that he owed $17, he walked across the room to an old trunk. He unlocked the trunk, took out a yellow bag which was tied with a string, and opened it and there was the $17, never touched. "You know, I would never use anybody else's money but my own."

I hope that you attorneys keep this in mind when you set yourselves up as experts in constitutional law. I hope that you will not be like the mechanic. The doctor went to pick up his car which had just been repaired. When he was presented the bill, the doctor became very indignant. He said, "This is terrible. This bill is way too high. Why you are charging more to work on a car than we do to work on a human body." "Oh, sure," said the mechanic, "but don't forget, we must learn a new model every year and you work on the same body all the time."

Let us keep this in mind when we make fees, so that you do not become criticized the way the justices of the peace were. Bear this in mind, whether you are working on cars or whether you are working on the Constitution, or whether you are working for your own good.

You know, it now comes up to us that we must do the best we can. This reminds me of the hardened and convicted prisoner who was brought before the bar for sentencing. "You have been found guilty of 26 counts," said the Judge. "I sentence you to five years on each count." The prisoner realizing that 130 years was a long time to serve, burst into tears. The judge, taking this as a sign of repentance, bent over the bench and said, "You know, I did not mean to be so harsh. I realize that this is going to be a hard time to serve, a long time to serve, maybe it is impossible. For that reason, you do not have to serve the full term. You just do as good as you can." Let us all do as good as we can in going out and selling this Constitution.

You know, during our deliberations we talked so much about judges, let us bear in mind that judges are made out of men. Making a person a judge by no means decreases his prejudice, nor in any way does it increase his intelligence. Actually, we all must learn new things in whatever work or whatever profession we do, or whatever we make our livelihood on, we must learn new things. It is now up to us. We are the experts. We are the masters. We know the Constitution. Let us be like the master in the verse, "The touch of the master's hand," which goes something like this. It was tattered and torn. The auctioneer thought it hardly worth his while to spend much time on that old violin, but he held it up with a smile and said, "Who will start the bidding? Who will give me a dollar, one dollar, two dollars, two dollars? Who will give me three dollars, three dollars? Then from far back in the room the gray-haired man came and picked up the bow, he wiped the dust off the old violin, tightened the strings and began to play music, pure and sweet like the carol angels sing. The music ceased and then the auctioneer with a low voice said, "Now, what am I bid for the old violin? One thousand, one thousand; two thousand, two thousand; two thousand dollars, who will make it three thousand? Three thousand, going, gone for three thousand dollars." The people cheered, but some shouted, "What change is there? We do not understand." Swiftly came the reply. "The touch of the master's hand."

Many a life is out of tune, battered and scarred with sin. People do not understand, and they would be auctioned cheap like the old violin, unless a dish of pottage, a glass of wine, was going. He was ready to go. He almost went, but just then came the master and no one could understand what changed his soul and what change there was in the wrath and the rod by the touch of the master's hand.

May we go out and sell this compromise which I am sure is good.

LEONARD AMENDMENTS TO RECOMMENDATION No. 3

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Leonard.

DELEGATE LEONARD. Mr. President, I now present amendments to Recommendation No. 3.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to Recommendation No. 3?

DELEGATE LEONARD offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 9, by inserting between 3rd and 4th paragraphs a new paragraph to read: The Governor must prepare annually a financial plan for at least a five year period to disclose proposed programs, costs and revenues.

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 9, 4th paragraph, by striking out all of 4th paragraph and inserting a new paragraph to read: The Sinking Fund requirement is eliminated and the General Assembly is required to use any surplus at the end of the fiscal year in balancing the budget for the following year.

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 9, 5th paragraph, lines 1 and 2, by striking out "every body funded" in line 1, and "or financially aided by the Commonwealth is" in line 2, and inserting: the Commonwealth are Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 9, 5th paragraph, line 3, by striking out "audit." and inserting: audits made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards.

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 10, 4th paragraph, lines 1 to 6, by striking out all of lines 1 to 5 and "proviso, however, that local governments be" in line 6, and inserting: The General Assembly may provide special tax exemptions for needy citizens which local taxing authorities may grant if they so desire; the General Assembly may mandate such exemptions, only if they provide for local governments to be

Amend Recommendation, SUMMARY AND EXPLANATION, page 10, by inserting a new paragraph after paragraph 4 to read: The General Assembly may also provide for exemptions or special taxing provisions to be applicable for a limited period of time to encourage rehabilitation of deteriorating areas, and promoting industrial and housing development.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Chairman Leonard.

DELEGATE LEONARD. Mr. President, we now have ready the amendment to Recommendation No. 3 of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People from the Taxation and State Finance Committee.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Has this amendment been distributed?

DELEGATE LEONARD. Yes.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I suppose the language is self-explanatory?

DELEGATE LEONARD. The language is self-explanatory.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May I ask Chairman Nelson if he has any comments on it?

DELEGATE NELSON. I yield to Delegate Silverman.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Silverman.

DELEGATE SILVERMAN. Mr. President, I have no quarrel with the substance of Chairman Leonard's amendment, but I do believe that the language in the current proposal is more in keeping with what is written in other sections, and I believe that the substance is the same, and for this reason, because the style I feel is better, I would urge the delegates to vote against the amendment and support the committee.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Leonard.

DELEGATE LEONARD. Mr. President, there are some absolutely inaccurate statements made in the summary and explanation here.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would you care to comment?

DELEGATE LEONARD. Yes.

There are several things that are left out, in addition to which there is a paragraph in here which says the sinking fund is eliminated and the General Assembly is required to appropriate any surplus during the ensuing fiscal year for repayment of debts. That is completely inaccurate, and was in the old Constitution and is something that is being eliminated.

There are several other areas in which there are words that were changed on the floor by amendment, and the words that are in this summary and recommendation here are of the old words and not of the new words. I think that the words that are being added here clarify and clearly set forth the summary and explanation of Proposals Nos. 3, 4 and 5, and I heartily recommend their adoption.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Nelson.

DELEGATE NELSON. I am obligated to take issue with Delegate Leonard on his statement that these things are absolutely inaccurate.

There are matters of interpretation involved, and I suppose interpretation will be going out of the words that we have written for many years to come, and I personally have no feeling one way or the other. If the Chairman of the Committee would prefer to change the words, it would make no difference to me. However, if some of the committee members feel that it does change the style, it worsens the style of it. Insofar as the substance is concerned, I would defend the substance.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scales.

DELEGATE SCALES. Mr. President, I think we are all clear as to the chairman's intention, and I move the question.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Does anybody have any objection? The question before the Convention is in connection with the amendment being offered by Delegate Leonard to Recommendation No. 3 of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People.

All those voting "yea" will vote to support Chairman Leonard's recommendation, those voting "nay" will vote to reject it.

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Leonard?

MICHENER AMENDMENT TO RECOMMENDATION No. 3

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Recommendation No. 3 of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People.

On the question recurring,

Will the Convention agree to Recommendation No. 3?

DELEGATE MICHENER offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Recommendation, ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE OF PENNSYLVANIA, page 4, by inserting after the last line on page 4, a new paragraph to read: The Convention meticulously observed the three prohibitions placed upon it: (1) no graduated income tax was imposed; (2) no tax was imposed that was not uniform upon the same class of subjects; (3) all income from the Motor License Fund continues to be used solely for public highways, bridges and air navigation facilities.

On the question,

Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, the amendment which is being circulated at this moment is a very simple one. Delegate Forster and Delegate Nelson have approved it. It comes in at the bottom of page 4.

I would point out that this may be of great benefit to other states who are thinking about a limited convention, and I thought we ought to be on record that we were able to run a limited Convention within the rules laid down.

I recommend the passage of this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are you ready for the question?

We will unlock the voting machine.

A DELEGATE. I wish to amend, if Delegate Michener would concur, that the Convention meticulously observed the three prohibitions placed upon it by Act No. 2 of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and then continue on from there.

DELEGATE MICHENER. That is a real improvement. I think we should write it in and proceed, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Chairman Nelson.

DELEGATE NELSON. Look at page 2, Delegate Michener. Have you read the last several paragraphs where these restrictions are spelled out? I wonder if adding this again would not be repetitious when you go beyond the sentence that the Convention meticulously observed these prohibitions or limitations. I think it is bad editorial style, and I would be the last to criticize yours. To repeat, they are spelled out in detail on page 2.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Yes, they are spelled out specifically on page 2, and items 2, 3 and 4 on the top of page 3, but nowhere do we say that we adhere to them.

DELEGATE NELSON. Would you consider inserting a sentence immediately following that?

DELEGATE MICHENER. Yes.

DELEGATE NELSON. The sentence would be, "The Convention meticulously observed these limitations."

DELEGATE MICHENER. I certainly would agree to that.

DELEGATE NELSON. It would go on the bottom of page 4. Page 3 would be just as good, immediately following the description of the limitation.

DELEGATE MICHENER. We can have it both ways, Mr. Chairman. You are quite right in saying this is a good alternative; I would agree with you.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May I ask Delegate Michener if you would then state to the delegates just how this amendment should read so that we may correct our copies without having to redo them? Then we will vote.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Woodside.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. May I make a suggestion before Delegate Michener proceeds?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Yes.

DELEGATE WOODSIDE. It seems to me that we should not say, "no graduated income tax was imposed." It was not part of our business or prohibition to impose a tax, and it seems to me that the proper word to be used there would be "authorized," would it not?

DELEGATE NELSON. If you look on page 2 the precise limitation is set forth. It specifically prohibited the Convention from making any recommendation that clearly permits the imposition of a graduated income tax, which I submit is something different from either what Judge Woodside or Delegate Michener has said.

DELEGATE MICHENER. I think the solution is to follow the suggestion of co-chairman Nelson, that on page 3, whether it should be a separate paragraph or not, I do not know, but maybe after the word "facilities" in the first paragraph at the top of the page, No. 4, I think we should insert "the Convention meticulously observed the three prohibitions placed upon it."

DELEGATE NELSON. There were four. Could we add a paragraph after 4, since that is a series, and say, "The Convention meticulously observed the limitations or the restrictions thus placed upon it"?

DELEGATE MICHENER. Right, I agree. Then we would kill the numbers here.

I think it is important that this be in the document, because so much trouble was raised about this in preceding calls to limited conventions, and everybody said it could not be done, and we have done it, and I think we deserve credit for it.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. May the Chair make a suggestion? There have been several suggestions which you received, Delegate Michener, in connection with a few changes to your amendment.

Suppose we were to recess for dinner, and when we return from dinner, we could take this up, and it would be in final agreeable language between you and Chairman Nelson.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Fine.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Then we would vote on it.

I might add that we have one more amendment to this from the Judiciary. It is not ready.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate Banes.

DELEGATE BANES. I rise in support of this amendment, but I think there should be one additional prohibition added, that no delegate is permitted to use this amendment in any campaign literature.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Levin. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE LEVIN. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE LEVIN. Several weeks ago Delegate Michener noted the unique situation wherein he was seated between two female delegates.

I have noted I have been seated between two of the most promising young men in our community. I have on the left of me a legal wizard, and on the right of me a financial giant, and the wisdom of both of these gentlemen rubbed off on me, and that is why I did not vote wrong at all.

RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It is now 6:20 p.m. We have a motion by Delegate Irvis, seconded by Delegate Fay, to recess until 8:15 and, unless we hear objection, we will recess until that time.

The Chair hears none and the Convention is now in recess until 8:15 p.m.

AFTER RECESS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The time of recess having expired, the Convention will come to order.

We are first going to complete the amendment proposal in connection with Recommendation No. 3 of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People.

I wonder if your amendment is ready, Delegate Michener. Delegate Michener's amendment is now being distributed.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Michener.

DELEGATE MICHENER. Mr. President, the distinguished Co-Chairman of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People is far too modest. He said he would hesitate to correct my prose. He made eight corrections, everyone was an improvement on what I had written. The amendment was reduced by 80 per cent. I think that is editorial work of the highest merit and I accept it. It has now been approved by the group, sir.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you.

Is there any discussion? If not, are we ready for the question?

MICHENER AMENDMENT WITHDRAWN AND NEW MICHENER AMENDMENT SUBSTITUTED

DELEGATE MICHENER. I withdraw my former amendment, Mr. President, and substitute the following amendment.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to Recommendation No. 3?

DELEGATE MICHENER offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend Recommendation, ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE OF PENNSYLVANIA, page 3, by inserting after the first paragraph on page 3, a new paragraph to read: The Convention faithfully observed the limitations thus placed upon it.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

CLINGER AMENDMENT TO RECOMMENDATION No. 3

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Clinger.

DELEGATE CLINGER. Mr. President, I now present amendments to Recommendation No. 3 of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to Recommendation No. 3?

DELEGATE CLINGER offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

Amend page 16, second paragraph, fourth and fifth lines by striking out "Justice of the Peace,"

Amend page 16, second paragraph, eighth line by inserting after "Assembly": , and Justices of the Peace

Amend page 16, by inserting between third and fourth paragraphs: Common Pleas Courts shall have such number of judges as the General Assembly shall from time to time determine

Amend page 21, second paragraph, fourth line by striking out "Justice" and inserting: Justices

Amend page 21, sixth paragraph, second line by striking out "specialized"

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Clinger.

DELEGATE CLINGER. Mr. President, at the request of the Co-Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, the inscribers of the Article had their first reunion this afternoon in the back of the hall to consider the sections on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People relating to the Judiciary Article.

As a result of this meeting, I have the honor of offering what I hope will be the last amendment to anything offered in this Convention.

On behalf of myself and Delegates Thornburgh, O'Donnell and Sharp, the ink-stained drudges of the Judiciary Committee, I submit this amendment, and I repeat, that the purpose of the amendment is to make crystal clear the intent of the Judiciary Committee.

DELEGATE NELSON. Mr. President, the Committee has no objection to this amendment.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Thank you.

Does anyone wish to be heard? Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATE GOUGER. Mr. President. May I interrogate the co-chairman of this Committee, Delegate Nelson?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You may.

DELEGATE GOUGER. Has the gentleman agreed with these amendments that we have in front of us?

DELEGATE NELSON. Yes, Mr. President, I have.

DELEGATE GOUGER. Is the gentleman quite positive?

DELEGATE NELSON. Yes. Have you some question?

DELEGATE GOUGER. No.

DELEGATE NELSON. Does any member of the committee have any questions? There are no objections to these amendments?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Are we ready for the question?

We will unlock the voting machine. The question before the Convention is, will the Convention agree to the amendment offered by Delegate Clinger? All those voting "yea" will vote to support the amendment, those voting "nay" will vote to reject it.

It has been moved by Delegate Orbin and seconded by Delegate Bloom.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Butera. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE BUTERA. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE BUTERA. Since this amendment was made, do we not first have to suspend the rules?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. No, we do not.

DELEGATE BUTERA. Fine.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. This is not the same as a proposal under our rules. I appreciate your keeping us on the ball though.

I just want my fellow delegates to know that Delegate Jirolanio is not here but he has assigned his right and privileges to Delegate Butera.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Forster.

DELEGATE FORSTER. One more comment before voting on this package and that is, it was the intention of the committee to have the staff names in that section reproduced as were the committee names of the delegates with first names first and last names last, and that is the way it will be done, even though it shows it the other way here.

DELEGATE BUTERA. Delegate Jirolanio did not tell me we are not on Proposal No. 7 now, we are on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People.

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ON THIRD CONSIDERATION

Agreeable to order,

The Convention proceeded to the third consideration of Committee Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 33, entitled:

A Proposal repealing article five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania relating to the Judiciary and adding a new Judiciary article.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. With the permission of this body, I would like to revert to our calendar and call up Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 33.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Hook.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, this morning we called a recess of this Convention to discuss some of the areas involved in this proposal. After our meeting this morning, we met with Chief Counsel of the Convention, Mr. Comisky. We also met with the Co-Chairmen of the Judiciary Committee and there were three areas that we felt that the true intent of this Convention should go on record:

No. 1 deals with the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the State and you will notice on the proposal that the Supreme Court is granted such jurisdiction as shall be provided by law. In the schedule to the proposal it also gives to the Supreme Court, the power it now has. This is a point I believe we have to consider, that the Supreme Court will still have the kingsmen's power and this has been agreed to by counsel and by the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

The second area of concern to me, and my question this morning, was, the point of arbitration as we attorneys know it to be, and this is dealing with the right of appeal. It is the intent of the Judiciary Committee that nothing pertaining to this Constitution will affect anything presently existing in the present statutory law.

At the same time, a further question is one dealing with the right of waiver of jury trial, and this Committee has gone on record to state that nothing pertaining to this constitutional proposal will interfere with anything dealing with the right of appeal as now exists. I am sorry, jury trial waiver. This will continue the same as it has been in the past, and that this will merely continue the process and, actually, this waiver of jury trial is the same as it now is in the present Constitution. Therefore, there should be no problems in these three particular areas and I am saying this for the intent of this delegate body and also for the intent of the Judiciary Committee itself.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Westerberg. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE WESTERBERG. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE WESTERBERG. Mr. President, I had a small corrective amendment to this judicial article prepared for quite a while and I just wondered if this is the time that you wanted me to offer it?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Under the rules, this is the last opportunity to amend this proposal and you just came in under the wire.

WESTERBERG AMENDMENT TO PROPOSAL No. 7

DELEGATE WESTERBERG. Mr. President, I now present an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7.

On the question recurring,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

DELEGATE WESTERBERG offered the following amendment which was read by the clerk:

"The judicial power of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania shall be vested in one Supreme Court and in such inferior courts as the General Assembly may from time to time ordain and establish."

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the amendment?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would you like to comment on your amendment, Delegate Westerberg?

DELEGATE WESTERBERG. I can state it very simply. What it does, in the first part of the amendment it cuts out the entire judicial proposal as it is now and then I have just one small sentence to put in instead of this. It states:

"The judicial power of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania shall be vested in one Supreme Court and in such inferior courts as the General Assembly may from time to time ordain and establish."

I do not believe that this would cause the Style and Drafting Committee any trouble.

I do not believe that it would cause any committee any trouble, and I did think that you would want to consider it, because I also have 33 sponsors other than myself on it and, at their urging, I could not let this pass.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Delegate Westerberg, I suppose you were not here this afternoon when, under our rules and pursuant to a motion made by Delegate Scranton, it requires 34 sponsors to get an amendment to the floor.

DELEGATE WESTERBERG. I now have the 34th sponsor.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We just made it 35.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. I am sure that the Parliamentarian will agree with me that I can withdraw my motion.

AMENDMENT WITHDRAWN

DELEGATE WESTERBERG. Mr. President, I would like to say one more thing in a serious vain. I would like to have it placed on the record that I am kidding.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Donolow.

DELEGATE BUTERA. I believe the delegate has temporarily left the House. He was downstairs.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Van Sant.

DELEGATE VAN SANT. Senator Donolow requests leave of absence for the remainder of the Convention.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Pursuant to our procedure, lest the Chair hears objection, the request for leave will be approved.

The question is, will the Convention agree to advance Proposal No. 7, Printer's No. 33, to final passage?

This proposal, pursuant to the rules, has been considered on three different days and agreed to and the question now before the Convention is, will the Convention finally pass this proposal? It must receive 82 votes.

Are we ready for the question? We will open up the voting machine and proceed to vote. All those voting "yea" agree to finally pass this proposal.

The question recurs,
Will the Convention agree to the proposal on third consideration?

PROPOSAL No. 7 REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. This proposal has been adopted and is referred to the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON ARRANGEMENT, SUBMISSION AND ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE

RECOMMENDATION NO. 1

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair will now recognize Chairman Nelson.

DELEGATE NELSON. Mr. President, I stand in place and read the following report.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA

1967-1968

RECOMMENDATION NO. 1

of the

— — — — —

Subject to approval by the electorate, the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People recommends that Proposals 1 to 7 inclusive adopted by the Convention and referred to it for arrangement into Articles and Sections (to be numbered as provided under Act No. 180 approved the 17th day of August, 1965) in accordance with the applicable provisions of Act No. 2, Session of 1967, be arranged in the following manner:

I. Proposals 1 and 2 shall be arranged into two (2) Sections numbered Sections 16 and 17 as follows:

Section 16. Legislative Districts.—The Commonwealth shall be divided into fifty senatorial and two hundred three representative districts, which shall be composed of compact and contiguous territory as nearly equal in population as practicable. Each senatorial district shall elect one Senator, and each representative district one Representative. Unless absolutely necessary no county, city, incorporated town, borough, township or ward shall be divided in forming either a senatorial or representative district.

Section 17. Legislative Reapportionment Commission.—(a) In each year following that in which the Federal decennial census is officially reported as required by Federal law, a Legislative Reapportionment Commission shall be constituted for the purpose of reapportioning the Commonwealth. The commission shall act by a majority of its entire membership.

(b) The commission shall consist of five members: four of whom shall be the majority and minority leaders of both the Senate and the House of Representatives, or deputies appointed by each of them, and a chairman selected as hereinafter provided. No later than the fourth Monday in January of the year following the year in which the Federal decennial census is officially reported as required by Federal law, the four members shall be certified by the President Pro Tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives to the elections officer of the Commonwealth who under law shall have supervision over elections.

The four members within forty-five days after their certification shall select the fifth member, who shall serve as chairman of the commission, and shall immediately certify his name to such elections officer. The chairman shall be a citizen of the Commonwealth other than a local, State or Federal official holding an office to which compensation is attached.

If the four members fail to select the fifth member within the time prescribed, a majority of the entire membership of the Supreme Court within thirty days thereafter shall appoint the chairman as aforesaid and certify his appointment to such elections officer.

Any vacancy in the commission shall be filled within fifteen days in the same manner in which such position was originally filled.

(c) No later than ninety days after either the commission has been duly certified or the population data for the Commonwealth as determined by the Federal decennial census are available, whichever is later in time, the commission shall file a preliminary reapportionment plan with such elections officer.

The commission shall have thirty days after filing the preliminary plan to make corrections in the plan.

Any person aggrieved by the preliminary plan shall have the same thirty-day period to file exceptions with the commission in which case the commission shall have thirty days after the date the exceptions were filed to prepare and file with such elections officer a revised reapportionment plan. If no exceptions are filed within thirty days, or if filed and acted upon, the commission's plan shall be final and have the force of law.

(d) Any aggrieved person may file an appeal from the final plan directly to the Supreme Court within thirty days after the filing thereof. If the appellant establishes that the final plan is contrary to law, the Supreme Court shall issue an order remanding the plan to the commission and directing the commission to reapportion the Commonwealth in a manner not inconsistent with such order.

(e) When the Supreme Court has finally decided an appeal or when the last day for filing an appeal has passed with no appeal taken, the reapportionment plan shall have the force of law and the districts therein provided shall be used thereafter in elections to the General Assembly until the next reapportionment as required under this section seventeen.

(f) The General Assembly shall appropriate sufficient funds for the compensation and expenses of members and staff appointed by the commission, and other necessary expenses. The members of the commission shall be entitled to such compensation for their services as the General Assembly from time to time shall determine, but no part thereof shall be paid until a preliminary plan is filed. If a preliminary plan is filed but the commission fails to file a revised or final plan within the time prescribed, the commission members shall forfeit all right to compensation not paid.

(g) If a preliminary, revised or final reapportionment plan is not filed by the commission within the time prescribed by this section, unless the time be extended by the Supreme Court for cause shown, the Supreme Court shall immediately proceed on its own motion to reapportion the Commonwealth.

(h) Any reapportionment plan filed by the commission, or ordered or prepared by the Supreme Court upon the failure of the commission to act, shall be published by the elections officer once in at least one newspaper of general circulation in each senatorial and representative district. The publication shall contain a map of the Commonwealth showing the complete reapportionment of the General Assembly by districts, and a map showing the reapportioned districts in the area normally served by the newspaper in which the publication is made. The publication shall also state the population of the senatorial and representative districts having the smallest and largest population and the percentage variation of such districts from the average population for senatorial and representative districts.

SCHEDULE

The foregoing sections of article two of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, if approved by the electorate voting on April 23, 1968, shall become effective the year following that in which the next Federal decennial census is officially reported as required by Federal law.

Said Sections so arranged, shall replace existing Sections 16, 17 and 18 of Article II of the Constitution, so that this Article shall hereafter consist of a total of seventeen (17) consecutively numbered separate Sections.

II. Proposals 3, 4 and 5 shall be arranged into ten (10) sections as follows:

Section 1. Uniformity of Taxation.—All taxes shall be uniform, upon the same class of subjects, within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax, and shall be levied and collected under general laws.

Section 2. Exemptions and Special Provisions. —(a) The General Assembly may by law exempt from taxation:

(i) Actual places of regularly stated religious worship;

(ii) Actual places of burial, when used or held by a person or organization deriving no private or corporate profit therefrom and no substantial part of whose activity consists of selling personal property in connection therewith;

(iii) That portion of public property which is actually and regularly used for public purposes;

(iv) That portion of the property owned and occupied by any branch, post or camp of honorably discharged servicemen or servicewomen which is actually and regularly used for benevolent, charitable or patriotic purposes; and

(v) Institutions of purely public charity, but in the case of any real property tax exemptions only that portion of real property of such institution which is actually and regularly used for the purposes of the institution.

(b) The General Assembly may, by law:

(i) Establish standards and qualifications for private forest reserves, and make special provision for the taxation thereof;

(ii) Establish as a class or classes of subjects of taxation the property or privileges of persons who, because of age, disability, infirmity or poverty are determined to be in need of tax exemption or of special tax provisions, and for any such class or classes, uniform standards and qualifications. The Commonwealth, or any other taxing authority, may adopt or employ such class or classes and standards and qualifications, and except as herein provided may impose taxes, grant exemptions, or make special tax provisions in accordance therewith. No exemption or special provision shall be made under this clause with respect to taxes upon the sale or use of personal property, and no exemption from any tax upon real property shall be granted by the General Assembly under this clause unless the General Assembly shall provide for the reimbursement of local taxing authorities by or through the Commonwealth for revenue losses occasioned by such exemption;

(iii) Establish standards and qualifications by which local taxing authorities may make uniform special tax provisions applicable to a taxpayer for a limited period of time to encourage improvement of deteriorating property or areas by an individual, association or corporation, or to encourage industrial development by a non-profit corporation; and

(iv) Make special tax provisions on any increase in value of real estate resulting from residential construction. Such special tax provisions shall be applicable for a period not to exceed two years.

(c) Citizens and residents of this Commonwealth, who served in any war or armed conflict in which the United States was engaged and were honorably discharged or released under honorable circumstances from active service, shall be exempt from the payment of all real property taxes upon the residence occupied by the said citizens and residents of this Commonwealth imposed by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania or any of its political subdivisions if, as a result of military service, they are blind, paraplegic or double or quadruple amputees, and if the State Veterans' Commission determines that such persons are in need of the tax exemptions granted herein.

Section 4. Public Utilities.—The real property of public utilities is subject to real estate taxes imposed by local taxing authorities. Payment to the Commonwealth of gross receipts taxes or other special taxes in replacement of gross receipts taxes by a public utility and the distribution by the Commonwealth to the local taxing authorities of the amount as herein provided shall, however, be in lieu of local taxes upon its real property which is used or useful in furnishing its public utility service. The amount raised annually by such gross receipts or other special taxes shall not be less than the gross amount of real estate taxes which the local taxing authorities could have imposed upon such real property but for the exemption herein provided. This gross amount shall be determined in the manner provided by law. An amount equivalent to such real estate taxes shall be distributed annually among all local taxing authorities in the proportion which the total tax receipts of each local taxing authority bear to the total tax receipts of all local taxing authorities, or in such other equitable proportions as may be provided by law.

Notwithstanding the provisions of this section, any law which presently subjects real property of public utilities to local real estate taxation by local taxing authorities shall remain in full force and effect.

Section 6. Taxation of Corporations.—The power to tax corporations and corporate property shall not be surrendered or suspended by any contract or grant to which the Commonwealth shall be a party.

Section 7. Commonwealth Indebtedness.—(a) No debt shall be incurred by or on behalf of the Commonwealth except by law and in accordance with the provisions of this section.

(1) Debt may be incurred without limit to suppress insurrection, rehabilitate areas affected by man-made or natural disaster, or to implement unissued authority approved by the electors prior to the adoption of this article.

(2) The Governor, State Treasurer and Auditor General, acting jointly, may (i) issue tax anticipation notes having a maturity within the fiscal year of issue and payable exclusively from revenues received in the same fiscal year, and (ii) incur debt for the purpose of refunding other debt, if such refunding debt matures within the term of the original debt.

(3) Debt may be incurred without limit for purposes specifically itemized in the law authorizing such debt, if the question whether the debt shall be incurred has been submitted to the electors and approved by a majority of those voting on the question.

(4) Debt may be incurred without the approval of the electors for capital projects specifically itemized in a capital budget, if such debt will not cause the amount of all net debt outstanding to exceed one and three-quarters times the average of the annual tax revenues deposited in the previous five fiscal years as certified by the Auditor General. For the purposes of this subsection, debt outstanding shall not include debt incurred under clauses (1) and (2) (i), or debt incurred under clause (2) (ii) if the original debt would not be so considered, or debt incurred under subsection (3) unless the General Assembly shall so provide in the law authorizing such debt.

(b) All debt incurred for capital projects shall mature within a period not to exceed the estimated useful life of the projects as stated in the authorizing law, and when so stated shall be conclusive. All debt, except indebtedness permitted by clause (2) (i), shall be amortized in substantial and regular amounts, the first of which shall be due prior to the expiration of a period equal to one-tenth the term of the debt.

(c) As used in this section, debt shall mean the issued and outstanding obligations of the Commonwealth and shall include obligations of its agencies or authorities to the extent they are to be repaid from lease rentals or other charges payable directly or indirectly from revenues of the Commonwealth. Debt shall not include either (1) that portion of obligations to be repaid from charges made to the public for the use of the capital projects financed, as determined by the Auditor General, or (2) obligations to be repaid from lease rentals or other charges payable by a school district or other local taxing authority, or (3) obligations to be repaid by agencies or authorities created for the joint benefit of the Commonwealth and one or more other State governments.

(d) If sufficient funds are not appropriated for the timely payment of the interest upon and installments of principal of all debt, the State Treasurer shall set apart from the first revenues thereafter received applicable to the appropriate fund a sum sufficient to pay such interest and installments of principal, and shall so apply the money so set apart. The State Treasurer may be required to set aside and apply such revenues at the suit of any holder of Commonwealth obligations.

Section 8. Commonwealth Credit Not to be Pledged.—The credit of the Commonwealth shall not be pledged or loaned to any individual, company, corporation or association nor shall the Commonwealth become a joint owner or stockholder in any company, corporation or association.

Section 9. Municipal Debt Not to be Assumed by Commonwealth.—The Commonwealth shall not assume the debt, or any part thereof, of any county, city, borough, incorporated town, township or any similar general purpose unit of government unless such debt shall have been incurred to enable the Commonwealth to suppress insurrection or to assist the Commonwealth in the discharge of any portion of its present indebtedness.

Section 10. Audit.—The financial affairs of any entity funded or financially aided by the Commonwealth, and all departments, boards, commissions, agencies, instrumentalities, authorities and institutions of the Commonwealth, shall be subject to audits made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards.

Any Commonwealth officer whose approval is necessary for any transaction relative to the financial affairs of the Commonwealth shall not be charged with the function of auditing that transaction after its occurrence.

Section 12. Governor's Budgets and Financial Plan.—Annually, at the times set by law, the Governor shall submit to the General Assembly:

(a) A balanced operating budget for the ensuing fiscal year setting forth in detail (i) proposed expenditures classified by department or agency and by program and (ii) estimated revenues from all sources. If estimated revenues and available surplus are less than proposed expenditures, the Governor shall recommend specific additional sources of revenue sufficient to pay the deficiency and the estimated revenue to be derived from each source;

(b) A capital budget for the ensuing fiscal year setting forth in detail proposed expenditures to be financed from the proceeds of obligations of the Commonwealth or of its agencies or authorities or from operating funds; and

(c) A financial plan for not less than the next succeeding five fiscal years, which plan shall include for each such fiscal year:

(i) Projected operating expenditures classified by department or agency and by program, in reasonable detail, and estimated revenues, by major categories, from existing and additional sources, and

(ii) Projected expenditures for capital projects specifically itemized by purpose, and the proposed sources of financing each.

Section 13. Appropriations.—(a) Operating budget appropriations made by the General Assembly shall not exceed the actual and estimated revenues and surplus available in the same fiscal year.

(b) The General Assembly shall adopt a capital budget for the ensuing fiscal year.

Section 14. Surplus.—All surplus of operating funds at the end of the fiscal year shall be appropriated during the ensuing fiscal year by the General Assembly.

SCHEDULE

The following schedule is adopted: Sections one and two shall take effect as soon as possible but no later than July 1, 1970. Section four shall take effect July 1, 1970, unless the General Assembly earlier provides enabling legislation in accordance therewith.

Sections ten, twelve, thirteen and fourteen of article eight shall take effect as soon as possible, but no later than July 1, 1970.

Said Sections 1, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10, so arranged, shall revise or replace existing Sections 1, 3, 4, 6, 9 and 14 of Article VIII (formerly numbered Article IX) of the Constitution and said Sections 2, 4, 12, 13 and 14 are new and become additional Sections of Article VIII. Existing Sections 1b, 2, 18, 24 and 25 of Article VIII are retained, renumbered as Sections 3, 5, 11, 15 and 16, respectively, so that this Article shall hereinafter consist of a total of sixteen (16) consecutively numbered separate Sections.

III. Proposal 6 shall be arranged into a single Article consisting of fourteen (14) consecutively numbered Sections as follows:

ARTICLE

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Section 1. Local Government.—The General Assembly shall provide by general law for local government within the Commonwealth. Such general law shall be uniform as to all classes of local government regarding procedural matters.

Section 2. Home Rule.—Municipalities shall have the right and power to frame and adopt home rule charters. Adoption, amendment or repeal of a home rule charter shall be by referendum. The General Assembly shall provide the procedure by which a home rule charter may be framed and its adoption, amendment or repeal presented to the electors. If the General Assembly does not so provide, a home rule charter or a procedure for framing and presenting a home rule charter may be presented to the electors by initiative or by the governing body of the municipality. A municipality which has a home rule charter may exercise any power or perform any function not denied by this Constitution, by its home rule charter or by the General Assembly at any time.

Section 3. Optional Plans.—Municipalities shall have the right and power to adopt optional forms of government as provided by law. The General Assembly shall provide optional forms of government for all municipalities. An optional form of government shall be presented to the electors by initiative, by the governing body of the municipality, or by the General Assembly. Adoption or repeal of an optional form of government shall be by referendum.

Section 4. County Government.—County officers shall consist of commissioners, controllers or auditors, district attorneys, public defenders, treasurers, sheriffs, registers of wills, recorders of deeds, prothonotaries, clerks of the courts, and such others as may from time to time be provided by law.

County officers, except for public defenders who shall be appointed as shall be provided by law, shall be elected at the municipal elections and shall hold their offices for the term of four years, beginning on the first Monday of January next after their election, and until their successors shall be duly qualified; all vacancies shall be filled in such a manner as may be provided by law.

County officers shall be paid only by salary as provided by law for services performed for the county or any other governmental unit. Fees incidental to the conduct of any county office shall be payable directly to the county or the Commonwealth, or as otherwise provided by law.

Three county commissioners shall be elected in each county. In the election of these officers each qualified elector shall vote for no more than two persons, and the three persons receiving the highest number of votes shall be elected.

Provisions for county government in this section shall apply to every county except a county which has adopted a home rule charter or an optional form of government. One of the optional forms of county government provided by law shall include the provisions of this section.

Section 5. Intergovernmental Cooperation.—A municipality by act of its governing body may, or upon being required by initiative and referendum in the area affected shall, cooperate or agree in the exercise of any function, power or responsibility with, or delegate or transfer any function, power or responsibility to, one or more other governmental units including other municipalities or districts, the Federal government, any other state or its governmental units, or any newly created governmental unit.

Section 6. Area Government.—The General Assembly shall provide for the establishment and dissolution of government of areas involving two or more municipalities or parts thereof.

Section 7. Area-wide Powers.—The General Assembly may grant powers to area governments or to municipalities within a given geographical area in which there exists intergovernmental cooperation or area government and designate the classes of municipalities subject to such legislation.

Section 8. Consolidation, Merger or Boundary Change.—Uniform Legislation. The General Assembly shall, within two years following the adoption of this article, enact uniform legislation establishing the procedure for consolidation, merger or change of the boundaries of municipalities.

Initiative. The electors of any municipality shall have the right, by initiative and referendum, to consolidate, merge and change boundaries by a majority vote of those voting thereon in each municipality, without the approval of any governing body.

Study. The General Assembly shall designate an agency of the Commonwealth to study consolidation, merger and boundary changes, advise municipalities on all problems which might be connected therewith, and initiate local referendum.

Legislative Power. Nothing herein shall prohibit or prevent the General Assembly from providing additional methods for consolidation, merger or change of boundaries.

Section 9. Appropriation for Public Purposes.—The General Assembly shall not authorize any municipality or incorporated district to become a stockholder in any company, association or corporation, or to obtain or appropriate money for, or to loan its credit to, any corporation, association, institution or individual. The General Assembly may provide standards by which municipalities or school districts may give financial assistance or lease property to public service, industrial or commercial enterprises if it shall find that such assistance or leasing is necessary to the health, safety or welfare of the Commonwealth or any municipality or school district. Existing authority of any municipality or incorporated district to obtain or appropriate money for, or to loan its credit to, any corporation, association, institution or individual, is preserved.

Section 10. Local Government Debt.—Subject only to the restrictions imposed by this section, the General Assembly shall prescribe the debt limits of all units of local government including municipalities and school districts. For such purposes, the debt limit base shall be a percentage of the total revenue, as defined by the General Assembly, of the unit of local government computed over a specific period immediately preceding the year of borrowing. The debt limit to be prescribed in every such case shall exclude all indebtedness (1) for any project to the extent that it is self-liquidating or self-supporting or which has heretofore been defined as self-liquidating or self-supporting, or (2) which has been approved by referendum held in such manner as shall be provided by law. The provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to the City or County of Philadelphia.

Any unit of local government, including municipalities and school districts, incurring any indebtedness, shall at or before the time of so doing adopt a covenant, which shall be binding upon it so long as any such indebtedness shall remain unpaid, to make payments out of its sinking fund or any other of its revenues or funds at such time and in such annual amounts specified in such covenant as shall be sufficient for the payment of the interest thereon and the principal thereof when due.

Section 11. Local Reapportionment.—Within the year following that in which the Federal decennial census is officially reported as required by Federal law, and at such other times as the governing body of any municipality shall deem necessary, each municipality having a governing body not entirely elected at large shall be reapportioned, by its governing body or as shall otherwise be provided by uniform law, into districts which shall be composed of compact and contiguous territory as nearly equal in population as practicable, for the purpose of describing the districts for those not elected at large.

Section 12. Philadelphia Debt.—The debt of the City of Philadelphia may be increased in such amount that the total debt of said city shall not exceed thirteen and one-half percent of the average of the annual assessed valuations of the taxable realty therein, during the ten years immediately preceding the year in which such increase is made, but said city shall not increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding three percent upon such average assessed valuation of realty, without the consent of the electors thereof at a public election held in such manner as shall be provided by law.

In ascertaining the debt-incurring capacity of the City of Philadelphia at any time, there shall be deducted from the debt of said city so much of such debt as shall have been incurred, or is about to be incurred, and the proceeds thereof expended, or about to be expended, upon any public improvement, or in construction, purchase or condemnation of any public utility, or part thereof, or facility therefor, if such public improvement or public utility, or part thereof, or facility therefor, whether separately, or in connection with any other public improvement or public utility, or part thereof, or facility therefor, may reasonably be expected to yield revenue in excess of operating expenses sufficient to pay the interest and sinking fund charges thereon. The method of determining such amount, so to be deducted, shall be as now prescribed, or which may hereafter be prescribed by law.

In incurring indebtedness for any purpose the City of Philadelphia may issue its obligations maturing not later than fifty years from the date thereof, with provision for a sinking fund to be in equal or graded annual or other periodical installments. Where any indebtedness shall be or shall have been incurred by said City of Philadelphia for the purpose of the construction or improvement of public works or utilities of any character, from which income or revenue is to be derived by said city, or for the reclamation of land to be used in the construction of wharves or docks owned or to be owned by said city, such obligations may be in an amount sufficient to provide for, and may include the amount of the interest and sinking fund charges accruing and which may accrue thereon throughout the period of construction, and until the expiration of one year after the completion of the work for which said indebtedness shall have been incurred.

No debt shall be incurred by, or on behalf of, the County of Philadelphia.

Section 13. Abolition of County Offices in Philadelphia.—(a) In Philadelphia all county offices are hereby abolished, and the city shall henceforth perform all functions of county government within its area through officers selected in such manner as may be provided by law.

(b) Local and special laws, regulating the affairs of the City of Philadelphia and creating offices or prescribing the powers and duties of officers of the City of Philadelphia, shall be valid notwithstanding the provisions of section thirty-two of article three of this Constitution.

(c) All laws applicable to the County of Philadelphia shall apply to the City of Philadelphia.

(d) The City of Philadelphia shall have, assume and take over all powers, property, obligations and indebtedness of the County of Philadelphia.

(e) The provisions of section two of this article shall apply with full force and effect to the functions of the county government hereafter to be performed by the city government.

(f) Upon adoption of this amendment all county officers shall become officers of the City of Philadelphia, and until the General Assembly shall otherwise provide, shall continue to perform their duties and be elected, appointed, compensated and organized in such manner as may be provided by the provisions of this Constitution and the laws of the Commonwealth in effect at the time this amendment becomes effective, but such officers serving when this amendment becomes effective shall be permitted to complete their terms.

Section 14. Definitions.—As used in this article, the following words shall have the following meanings:

"Municipality" means a county, city, borough, incorporated town, township or any similar general purpose unit of government which shall hereafter be created by the General Assembly.

"Initiative" means the filing with the applicable election officials at least ninety days prior to the next primary or general election of a petition containing a proposal for referendum signed by electors comprising five per cent of the number of electors voting for the office of Governor in the last gubernatorial general election in each municipality or area affected. The applicable election official shall place the proposal on the ballot in a manner fairly representing the content of the petition for decision by referendum at said election. Initiative on a similar question shall not be submitted more often than once in five years. No enabling law shall be required for initiative.

"Referendum" means approval of a question placed on the ballot, by initative or otherwise, by a majority vote of the electors voting thereon.

SCHEDULE

This article shall take effect on the date of approval by the electorate, except that the following sections shall take effect on the effective date of legislation adopted pursuant to the sections or the date indicated below, whichever shall first occur.

The first, third and fourth paragraphs of section eight shall take effect two years after the effective date. The second sentence of section one, the fourth sentence of section two, all of section three, the third paragraph of section four, and the first paragraph of section ten shall take effect four years after the effective date. The second sentence of section one and the first paragraph of section eight on Uniform Legislation shall be construed so as to be consistent with the jurisdiction of this Convention.

Said Article, so arranged, shall replace existing Articles XIII, XIV, XV, and existing Sections 7, 8, 10, 15 and 19 of Article VIII (formerly numbered Article IX) of the Constitution.

IV. Proposal 7 shall be arranged into a single Article consisting of eighteen (18) consecutively numbered Sections as follows:

ARTICLE

THE JUDICIARY

Section 1. Unified Judicial System.—The judicial power of the Commonwealth shall be vested in a unified judicial system consisting of the Supreme Court, the Superior Court, the Commonwealth Court, courts of common pleas, community courts, municipal and traffic courts in the City of Philadelphia, such other courts as may be provided by the law and justices of the peace. All courts and justices of the peace and their jurisdiction shall be in this unified judicial system.

Section 2. Supreme Court.—The Supreme Court (a) shall be the highest court of the Commonwealth and in this court shall be reposed the supreme judicial power of the Commonwealth;

(b) shall consist of seven justices, one of whom shall be the Chief Justice; and

(c) shall have such jurisdiction as shall be provided by law.

Section 3. Superior Court.—The Superior Court shall consist of seven judges, one of whom shall be the president judge, and its jurisdiction shall be as provided by law.

Section 4. Commonwealth Court.—The Commonwealth Court shall be a statewide court, and shall consist of the number of judges and have such jurisdiction as shall be provided by law. One of its judges shall be the president judge.

Section 5. Courts of Common Pleas.—There shall be one court of common pleas for each judicial district (a) having such divisions and consisting of such number of judges as shall be provided by law, one of whom shall be the president judge; and

(b) having unlimited original jurisdiction in all cases except as may otherwise be provided by law.

Section 6. Community Courts; Philadelphia Municipal Court and Traffic Court.—(a) In any judicial district a majority of the electors voting thereon may approve the establishment or discontinuance of a community court. Where a community court is approved, one community court shall be established; its divisions, number of judges and jurisdiction shall be as provided by law.

(b) The question whether a community court shall be established or discontinued in any judicial district shall be placed upon the ballot in a primary election by petition which shall be in the form prescribed by the officer of the Commonwealth who under law shall have supervision over elections. The petition shall be filed with that officer and shall be signed by a number of electors equal to five percent of the total votes cast for all candidates for the office occupied by a single official for which the highest number of votes was cast in that judicial district at the last preceding general or municipal election. The manner of signing such petitions, the time of circulating them, the affidavits of the persons circulating them and all other details not contained herein shall be governed by the general laws relating to elections. The question shall not be placed upon the ballot in a judicial district more than once in any five-year period.

(c) In the City of Philadelphia there shall be a municipal court and a traffic court. The number of judges and the jurisdiction of each shall be as provided by law. These courts shall exist so long as a community court has not been established or in the event one has been discontinued under this section.

Section 7. Justices of the Peace; Magisterial Districts.—(a) In any judicial district, other than the City of Philadelphia, where a community court has not been established or where one has been discontinued there shall be one justice of the peace in each magisterial district. The jurisdiction of the justice of the peace shall be as provided by law.

(b) The General Assembly shall by law establish classes of magisterial districts solely on the basis of population and population density and shall fix the salaries to be paid justices of the peace in each class. The number and boundaries of magisterial districts of each class within each judicial district shall be established by the Supreme Court or by the courts of common pleas under the direction of the Supreme Court as required for the efficient administration of justice within each magisterial district.

Section 8. Other Courts.—The General Assembly may establish additional courts or divisions of existing courts, as needed, or abolish any statutory court or division thereof.

Section 9. Right of Appeal.—There shall be a right of appeal in all cases to a court of record from a court not of record; and there shall also be a right of appeal from a court of record or from an administrative agency to a court of record or to an appellate court, the selection of such court to be as provided by law; and there shall be such other rights of appeal as may be provided by law.

Section 10. Judicial Administration.—(a) The Supreme Court shall exercise general supervisory and administrative authority over all the courts and justices of the peace, including authority to temporarily assign judges and justices of the peace from one court or district to another as it deems appropriate.

(b) The Supreme Court shall appoint a court administrator and may appoint such subordinate administrators and staff as may be necessary and proper for the prompt and proper disposition of the business of all courts and justices of the peace.

(c) The Supreme Court shall have the power to prescribe general rules governing practice, procedure and the conduct of all courts, justices of the peace and all officers serving process or enforcing orders, judgments or decrees of any court or justice of the peace, including the power to provide for assignment and reassignment of classes of actions or classes of appeals among the several courts as the needs of justice shall require, and for admission to the bar and to practice law, and the administration of all courts and supervision of all officers of the judicial branch, if such rules are consistent with this Constitution and neither abridge, enlarge nor modify the substantive rights of any litigant, nor affect the right of the General Assembly to determine the jurisdiction of any court or justice of the peace, nor suspend nor alter any statute of limitation or repose. All laws shall be suspended to the extent that they are inconsistent with rules prescribed under these provisions.

(d) The Chief Justice and president judges of all courts with seven or less judges shall be the justice or judge longest in continuous service on their respective courts; and in the event of his resignation from this position the justice or judge next longest in continuous service shall be the Chief Justice or president judge. The president judges of all other courts shall be selected for five-year terms by the members of their respective courts, except that the president judge of the traffic court in the City of Philadelphia shall be appointed by the Governor. A Chief Justice or president judge may resign such position and remain a member of the court. In the event of a tie vote for office of president judge in a court which elects its president judge, the Supreme Court shall appoint as president judge one of the judges receiving the highest number of votes.

(e) Should any two or more justices or judges of the same court assume office at the same time, they shall cast lots forthwith for priority of commission, and certify the results to the Governor who shall issue their commissions accordingly.

Section 11. Judicial Districts; Boundaries.—The number and boundaries of judicial districts shall be changed by the General Assembly only with the advice and consent of the Supreme Court.

Section 12. Qualifications of Justices, Judges and Justices of the Peace.—(a) Justices, judges and justices of the peace shall be citizens of the Commonwealth. Justices and judges, except the judges of the traffic court in the City of Philadelphia, shall be members of the bar of the Supreme Court. Justices and judges of statewide courts, for a period of one year preceding their election or appointment and during their continuance in office, shall reside within the Commonwealth. Other judges and justices of the peace, for a period of one year preceding their election or appointment and during their continuance in office, shall reside within their respective districts, except as provided in this article for temporary assignments.

(b) Judges of the traffic court in the City of Philadelphia and justices of the peace shall be members of the bar of the Supreme Court or shall complete a course of training and instruction in the duties of their respective offices and pass an examination prior to assuming office. Such courses and examinations shall be as provided by law.

Section 13. Election of Justices, Judges and Justices of the Peace; Vacancies.—(a) Justices, judges and justices of the peace shall be elected at the municipal election next preceding the commencement of their respective terms of office by the electors of the Commonwealth or the respective districts in which they are to serve.

(b) A vacancy in the office of justice, judge or justice of the peace shall be filled by appointment by the Governor. If the vacancy occurs during the session of the Senate, the appointment shall be with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the members elected to the Senate, except in the case of justices of the peace which shall be by a majority. If the vacancy occurs during sine die adjournment of the Senate such appointment shall not require the advice and consent of the Senate. The person so appointed shall serve for an initial term ending on the first Monday of January following the next municipal election more than ten months after the vacancy occurs.

(c) The provisions of section thirteen (b) shall not apply either in the case of a vacancy to be filled by retention election as provided in section fifteen (b), or in the case of a vacancy created by failure of a justice or judge to file a declaration for retention election as provided in section fifteen (b). In the case of a vacancy occurring at the expiration of an appointive term under section thirteen (b), the vacancy shall be filled by election as provided in section thirteen (a).

(d) At the primary election in 1969, the electors of the Commonwealth may elect to have the justices and judges of the Supreme, Superior, Commonwealth and all other statewide courts appointed by the Governor from a list of persons qualified for the offices submitted to him by the Judicial Qualifications Commission. If a majority vote of those voting on the question is in favor of this method of appointment, then whenever any vacancy occurs thereafter for any reason in such court, the Governor shall fill the vacancy by appointment in the manner prescribed in this subsection. Such appointment shall not require the consent of the Senate.

(e) Each justice or judge appointed by the Governor under section 13 (d) shall hold office for an initial term ending the first Monday of January following the next municipal election more than twenty-four months following the appointment.

Section 14. Judicial Qualifications Commission.—(a) Should the method of judicial selection be adopted as provided in section thirteen (d), there shall be a Judicial Qualifications Commission, composed of four non-lawyer electors appointed by the Governor and three non-judge members of the bar of the Supreme Court appointed by the Supreme Court. No more than four members shall be of the same political party. The members of the commission shall serve for terms of seven years, with one member being selected each year. The commission shall consider all names submitted to it and recommend to the Governor not fewer than ten nor more than twenty of those qualified for each vacancy to be filled.

(b) During his term, no member shall hold a public office or public appointment for which he receives compensation, nor shall he hold office in a political party or political organization.

(c) A vacancy on the commission shall be filled by the appointing authority for the balance of the term.

Section 15. Tenure of Justices, Judges and Justices of the Peace.—(a) The regular term of office of justices and judges shall be ten years and the regular term of office for judges of the municipal court and traffic court in the City of Philadelphia and of justices of the peace shall be six years. The tenure of any justice or judge shall not be affected by changes in judicial districts or by reduction in the number of judges.

(b) A justice or judge elected under section thirteen (a), appointed under section thirteen (d) or retained under this section fifteen (b) may file a declaration of candidacy for retention election with the officer of the Commonwealth who under law shall have supervision over elections on or before the first Monday of January of the year preceding the year in which his term of office expires. If no declaration is filed, a vacancy shall exist upon the expiration of the term of office of such justice or judge, to be filled by election under section thirteen (a) or by appointment under section thirteen (d) if applicable. If a justice or judge files a declaration, his name shall be submitted to the electors without party designation, on a separate judicial ballot or in a separate column on voting machines, at the municipal election immediately preceding the expiration of the term of office of the justice or judge, to determine only the question whether he shall be retained in office. If a majority is against retention, a vacancy shall exist upon the expiration of his term of office, to be filled by appointment under section thirteen (b) or under section thirteen (d) if applicable. If a majority favors retention, the justice or judge shall serve for the regular term of office provided herein, unless sooner removed or retired. At the expiration of each term a justice or judge shall be eligible for retention as provided herein, subject only to the retirement provisions of this article.

Section 16. Compensation and Retirement of Justices, Judges and Justices of the Peace.—(a) Justices, judges and justices of the peace shall be compensated by the Commonwealth as provided by law. Their compensation shall not be diminished during their terms of office, unless by law applying generally to all salaried officers of the Commonwealth.

(b) Justices, judges and justices of the peace shall be retired upon attaining the age of seventy years. Former and retired justices, judges and justices of the peace shall receive such compensation as shall be provided by law. No compensation shall be paid to any justice, judge or justice of the peace who is suspended or removed from office under section eighteen of this article or under article six.

(c) A former or retired justice or judge may, with his consent, be assigned by the Supreme Court on temporary judicial service as may be prescribed by rule of the Supreme Court.

Section 17. Prohibited Activties.—(a) Justices and judges shall devote full time to their judicial duties, and shall not engage in the practice of law, hold office in a political party or political organization, or hold an office or position of profit in the government of the United States, the Commonwealth or any municipal corporation or political subdivision thereof, except in the armed service of the United States or the Commonwealth.

(b) Justices and judges shall not engage in any activity prohibited by law and shall not violate any canon of legal or judicial ethics prescribed by the Supreme Court. Justices of the peace shall be governed by rules or canons which shall be prescribed by the Supreme Court.

(c) No justice, judge or justice of the peace shall be paid or accept for the performance of any judicial duty or for any service connected with his office, any fee, emolument or perquisite other than the salary and expenses provided by law.

(d) No duties shall be imposed by law upon the Supreme Court or any of the justices thereof or the Superior Court or any of the judges thereof, except such as are judicial, nor shall any of them exercise any power of appointment except as provided in this Constitution.

Section 18. Suspension, Removal, Discipline and Compulsory Retirement.—(a) There shall be a Judicial Inquiry and Review Board having nine members as follows: three judges of the courts of common pleas from different judicial districts and two judges of the Superior Court, all of whom shall be selected by the Supreme Court; and two non-judge members of the bar of the Supreme Court and two non-lawyer electors, all of whom shall be selected by the Governor.

(b) The members shall serve for terms of four years, provided that a member, rather than his successor, shall continue to participate in any hearing in progress at the end of his term. A vacancy on the board shall be filled by the respective appointing authority for the balance of the term. The respective appointing authority may remove a member only for cause. No member shall serve more than four consecutive years; he may be reappointed after a lapse of one year. Annually the members of the board shall elect a chairman. The board shall act only with the concurrence of a majority of its members.

(c) A member shall not hold office in a political party or political organization. Members, other than judges, shall be compensated for their services as the Supreme Court shall prescribe. All members shall be reimbursed for expenses necessarily incurred in the discharge of their official duties.

(d) Under the procedure prescribed herein, any justice or judge may be suspended, removed from office or otherwise disciplined for violation of section seventeen of this article, misconduct in office, neglect of duty, failure to perform his duties, or conduct which prejudices the proper administration of justice or brings the judicial office into disrepute, and may be retired for disability seriously interfering with the performance of his duties.

(e) The board shall keep informed as to matters relating to grounds for suspension, removal, discipline or compulsory retirement of justices or judges. It shall receive complaints or reports, formal or informal, from any source, pertaining to such matters, and shall make such preliminary investigations as it deems necessary.

(f) The board, after such investigation, may order a hearing concerning the suspension, removal, discipline or compulsory retirement of a justice or judge. The board's orders for attendance of or testimony by witnesses or for the production of documents at any hearing or investigation shall be enforceable by contempt proceedings.

(g) If, after hearing, the board finds good cause therefor, it shall recommend to the Supreme Court the suspension, removal, discipline or compulsory retirement of the justice or judge.

(h) The Supreme Court shall review the record of the board's proceedings on the law and facts and may permit the introduction of additional evidence. It shall order suspension, removal, discipline or compulsory retirement, or wholly reject the recommendation, as it finds just and proper. Upon an order for compulsory retirement, the justice or judge shall be retired with the same rights and privileges were he retired under section sixteen of this article. Upon an order for suspension or removal, the justice or judge shall be suspended or removed from office, and his salary shall cease from the date of such order. All papers filed with and proceedings before the board shall be confidential but upon being filed by the board in the Supreme Court, the record shall lose its confidential character. The filing of papers with and the giving of testimony before the board shall be privileged.

(i) No justice or judge shall participate as a member of the board or of the Supreme Court in any proceeding involving his suspension, removal, discipline or compulsory retirement.

(j) The Supreme Court shall prescribe rules of procedure under this section.

(k) The Supreme Court shall prescribe rules of procedure for the suspension, removal, discipline and compulsory retirement of justices of the peace.

(l) A justice, judge or justice of the peace convicted of misbehavior in office by a court, disbarred as a member of the bar of the Supreme Court or removed under this section eighteen shall forfeit automatically his judicial office and thereafter be ineligible for judicial office.

(m) A justice or judge who shall file for nomination for or election to any public office other than a judicial office shall forfeit automatically his judicial office.

(n) This section is in addition to and not in substitution for the provisions for impeachment for misbehavior in office contained in article six. No justice, judge or justice of the peace against whom impeachment proceedings are pending in the Senate shall exercise any of the duties of his office until he has been acquitted.

SCHEDULE TO JUDICIARY ARTICLE

This schedule is a part of this judiciary article, and it is intended that the provisions contained herein shall have the same force and effect as those contained in the numbered sections of the article.

This article and schedule, unless otherwise stated herein, shall become effective on January 1, 1969. In this schedule where the word "now" appears it speaks from the date of adoption of this schedule; where the word "present" appears it speaks from the effective date hereof.

Courts Other Than in the City of Philadelphia and Allegheny County

Section 1. The Supreme Court.—The Supreme Court shall exercise all the powers and, until otherwise provided by law, jurisdiction now vested in the present Supreme Court and, until otherwise provided by law, the accused in all cases of felonious homicide shall have the right of appeal to the Supreme Court.

Section 2. The Superior Court.—Until otherwise provided by law, the Superior Court shall exercise all the jurisdiction now vested in the present Superior Court. The present terms of all judges of the Superior Court which would otherwise expire on the first Monday of January in an odd-numbered year shall be extended to expire in the even-numbered year next following.

Section 3. Commonwealth Court.—The Commonwealth Court shall come into existence on January 1, 1970. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in this article, the General Assembly shall stagger the initial terms of judges of the Commonwealth Court.

Section 4. The Courts of Common Pleas.—Until otherwise provided by law, the several courts of common pleas shall exercise the jurisdiction now vested in the present courts of common pleas. The courts of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery, quarter sessions of the peace, and orphans' courts are abolished and the several courts of common pleas shall also exercise the jurisdiction of these courts. Orphans' courts in judicial districts having separate orphans' courts shall become orphans' court divisions of the courts of common pleas and the court of common pleas in those judicial districts shall exercise the jurisdiction presently exercised by the separate orphans' courts through their respective orphans' court division.

Section 5. Orphans' Court Judges.—In those judicial districts having separate orphans' courts, the present judges thereof shall become judges of the orphans' court division of the court of common pleas and the present president judge shall become the president judge of the orphans' court division of the court of common pleas for the remainder of his term without diminution in salary.

Section 6. Courts of Common Pleas in Multi-County Judicial Districts.—Courts of common pleas in multi-county judicial districts are abolished as separate courts and are hereby constituted as branches of the single court of common pleas established under this article in each such judicial district.

Section 7. Community Courts.—In a judicial district which establishes a community court, a person serving as a justice of the peace at such time:

(a) May complete his term exercising the jurisdiction provided by law and with the compensation provided by law, and

(b) Upon completion of his term, his office is abolished and no judicial function of the kind heretofore exercised by a justice of the peace shall thereafter be exercised other than by the community court.

Justices, Judges and Justices of the Peace

Section 8. Justices, Judges and Justices of the Peace.—Notwithstanding any provision in the article, a present justice, judge or justice of the peace may complete his term of office.

Section 9. Associate Judges.—The office of associate judge not learned in the law is abolished, but a present associate judge may complete his term.

Section 10. Retention Election of Present Justices and Judges.—A present judge who was originally elected to office and seeks retention in the 1969 municipal election and is otherwise eligible may file his declaration of candidacy by February 1, 1969.

Section 11. Selection of President Judges.—Except in the City of Philadelphia, section ten (d) of the article, shall become effective upon the expiration of the term of the present president judge, or upon earlier vacancy.

Magistrates, Aldermen and Justices of the Peace and Magisterial Districts Other Than in the City of Philadelphia

Section 12. Magistrates, Aldermen and Justices of the Peace.—An alderman, justice of the peace or magistrate:

(a) May complete his term, exercising the jurisdiction provided by law and with the method of compensation provided by law prior to the adoption of this article;

(b) Shall be deemed to have taken and passed the examination required by this article for justices of the peace if he has completed one full term of office before creation of a magisterial district, and

(c) At the completion of his term, his office is abolished.

(d) Except for officers completing their terms, after the first Monday in January, 1970, no judicial function of the kind heretofore exercised by these officers, by mayors and like officers in municipalities shall be exercised by any officer other than the one justice of the peace elected or appointed to serve in that magisterial district.

Section 13. Magisterial Districts.—So that the provisions of this article regarding the establishment of magisterial districts and the instruction and examination of justices of the peace may be self-executing, until otherwise provided by law in a manner agreeable to this article, the following provisions shall be in force:

(a) The Supreme Court or the courts of common pleas under the direction of the Supreme Court shall fix the number and boundaries of magisterial districts, of each class within each judicial district by January 1, 1969, and these magisterial districts, except where a community court has been adopted, shall come into existence on January 1, 1970, the justices of the peace thereof to be elected at the municipal election in 1969. These justices of the peace shall retain no fine, costs or any other sum that shall be delivered into their hands for the performance of any judicial duty or for any service connected with their offices, but shall remit the same to the Commonwealth, county, municipal subdivision, school district or otherwise as may be provided by law.

(b) Classes of magisterial districts

(i) Magisterial districts of the first class shall have a population density of more than five thousand persons per square mile and a population of not less than sixty-five thousand persons.

(ii) Magisterial districts of the second class shall have a population density of between one thousand and five thousand persons per square mile and a population of between twenty thousand persons and sixty-five thousand persons.

(iii) Magisterial districts of the third class shall have a population density of between two hundred and one thousand persons per square mile and a population of between twelve thousand persons and twenty thousand persons.

(iv) Magisterial districts of the fourth class shall have a population density of between seventy and two hundred persons per square mile and a population of between seven thousand five hundred persons and twelve thousand persons.

(v) Magisterial districts of the fifth class shall have a population density of under seventy persons per square mile and a population of between four thousand persons and seven thousand five hundred persons.

(c) Salaries of justices of the peace

The salaries of the justices of the peace shall be as follows:

(i) In first class magisterial districts, twelve thousand dollars per year,

(ii) In second class magisterial districts, ten thousand dollars per year,

(iii) In third class magisterial districts, eight thousand dollars per year,

(iv) In fourth and fifth class magisterial districts, five thousand dollars per year.

(v) The salaries here fixed shall be paid by the State Treasurer and for such payment this article and schedule shall be sufficient warrant.

(d) Course of training, instruction and examination. The course of training and instruction and examination in civil and criminal law and procedure for a justice of the peace shall be devised by the Department of Public Instruction, and it shall administer this course and examination to insure that justices of the peace are competent to perform their duties.

Section 14. Magisterial Districts.—Effective immediately upon establishment of magisterial districts and until otherwise prescribed the civil and criminal procedural rules relating to venue shall apply to magisterial districts; all proceedings before aldermen, magistrates and justices of the peace shall be brought in and only in a magisterial district in which occurs an event which would give rise to venue in a court of record; the court of common pleas upon its own motion or on application at any stage of proceedings shall transfer any proceeding in any magisterial district to the justice of the peace for the magisterial district in which proper venue lies.

Prothonotaries and Clerks Other Than in the City of Philadelphia

Section 15. Prothonotaries, Clerks of Courts, Clerks of Orphans' Courts.—Until otherwise provided by law, the offices of prothonotary and clerk of courts shall become the offices of prothonotary and clerk of courts of the court of common pleas of the judicial district, and in multi-county judicial districts of their county's branch of the court of common pleas, and the clerk of the orphans' court in a judicial district now having a separate orphans' court shall become the clerk of the orphans' court division of the court of common pleas, and these officers shall continue to perform the duties of the office and to maintain and be responsible for the records, books and dockets as heretofore. In judicial districts where the clerk of the orphans' court is not the register of wills, he shall continue to perform the duties of the office and to maintain and be responsible for the records, books and dockets as heretofore until otherwise provided by law.

The City of Philadelphia

Section 16. Courts and Judges.—Until otherwise provided by law: (a) the court of common pleas shall consist of a trial division, orphans' court division and family court division.

(b) The judges of the court of common pleas shall become judges of the trial division of the court of common pleas provided for in this article and their tenure shall not otherwise be affected.

(c) The judges of the county court shall become judges of the family court division of the court of common pleas and their tenure shall not otherwise be affected.

(d) The judges of the orphans' court shall become judges of the orphans' court division of the court of common pleas and their tenure shall not otherwise be affected.

(e) As designated by the Governor, twenty-two of the present magistrates shall become judges of the municipal court and six shall become judges of the traffic court, and their tenure shall not otherwise be affected.

(f) One of the judges of the court of common pleas shall be president judge and he shall be selected in the manner provided in section ten (d) of this article. He shall be the administrative head of the court and shall supervise the court's judicial business.

(g) Each division of the court of common pleas shall be presided over by an administrative judge, who shall be one of its judges and shall be elected for a term of five years by a majority vote of the judges of that division. He shall assist the president judge in supervising the judicial business of the court and shall be responsible to him. Subject to the foregoing, the judges of the court of common pleas shall prescribe rules defining the duties of the administrative judges. The president judge shall have the power to assign judges from each division to each other division of the court when required to expedite the business of the court.

(h) Until all members of the municipal court are members of the bar of the Supreme Court, the president judge of the court of common pleas shall appoint one of the judges of the municipal court as president judge for a five year term or at the pleasure of the president judge of the court of common pleas. The president judge of the municipal court shall be eligible to succeed himself as president judge for any number of terms and shall be the administrative head of that court and shall supervise the judicial business of the court. He shall promulgate all administrative rules and regulations and make all judicial assignments. The president judge of the court of common pleas may assign temporarily judges of the municipal court who are members of the bar of the Supreme Court to the court of common pleas when required to expedite the business of the court.

(i) The Governor shall appoint one of the judges of the traffic court as president judge for a term of five years or at the pleasure of the Governor. The president judge of the traffic court shall be eligible to succeed himself as president judge for any number of terms, shall be the executive and administrative head of the traffic court, and shall supervise the judicial business of the court, shall promulgate all administrative rules and regulations, and shall make all judicial assignments.

(j) The exercise of all supervisory and administrative powers detailed in this section sixteen shall be subject to the supervisory and administrative control of the Supreme Court.

(k) The prothonotary shall continue to exercise the duties of that office for the trial division of the court of common pleas and for the municipal court.

(l) The clerk of quarter sessions shall continue to exercise the duties of that office for the trial division of the court of common pleas and for the municipal court.

(m) That officer serving as clerk to the county court shall continue to exercise the duties of that office for the family division of the court of common pleas.

(n) The register of wills shall serve ex officio as clerk of the orphans' court division of the court of common pleas.

(o) The court of common pleas shall have unlimited original jurisdiction in all cases except those cases assigned by this schedule to the municipal court and to the traffic court. The court of common pleas shall have all the jurisdiction now vested in the court of common pleas, the court of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery, courts of quarter sessions of the peace, orphans' court, and county court. Jurisdiction in all of the foregoing cases shall be exercised through the trial division of the court of common pleas except in those cases which are assigned by this schedule to the orphans' court and family court divisions of the court of common pleas. The court of common pleas through the trial division shall also hear and determine appeals from the municipal court and traffic court.

(p) The court of common pleas through the orphans' court division shall exercise the jurisdiction heretofore exercised by the orphans' court.

(q) The court of common pleas through the family court division of the court of common pleas shall exercise jurisdiction in the following matters:

(i) Domestic Relations: desertion or nonsupport of wives, children and indigent parents, including children born out of wedlock; proceedings for custody of children; divorce and annulment and property matters relating thereto.

(ii) Juvenile Matters: dependent, delinquent and neglected children and children under eighteen years of age, suffering from epilepsy, nervous or mental defects, incorrigible, runaway and disorderly minors eighteen to twenty years of age and preliminary hearings in criminal cases where the victim is a juvenile.

(iii) Adoptions and Delayed Birth Certificates.

(r) The municipal court shall have jurisdiction in the following matters:

(i) Committing magistrates' jurisdiction in all criminal matters.

(ii) All summary offenses, except those under the motor vehicle laws.

(iii) All criminal offenses for which no prison term may be imposed or which are punishable by a term of imprisonment of not more than two years, and indictable offenses under the motor vehicle laws for which no prison term may be imposed or punishable by a term of imprisonment of not more than three years. In these cases, the defendant shall have no right of trial by jury in that court, but he shall have the right of appeal for trial de novo including the right to trial by jury to the trial division of the court of common pleas. Until there are a sufficient number of judges who are members of the bar of the Supreme Court serving in the municipal court to handle such matters, the trial division of the court of common pleas shall have concurrent jurisdiction over such matters, the assignment of cases to the respective courts to be determined by rule prescribed by the president judge of the court of common pleas.

(iv) Matters arising under The Landlord and Tenant Act of 1951.

(v) All civil claims involving less than five hundred dollars. In the cases, the parties shall have no right of trial by jury in that court but shall have the right of appeal for a trial de novo including the right to trial by jury to the trial division of the court of common pleas, it being the purpose of this subsection to establish an expeditious small claims procedure whereby it shall not be necessary for the litigants to obtain counsel. This limited grant of civil jurisdiction shall be co-extensive with the civil jurisdiction of the trial division of the court of common pleas.

(vi) As commissioners to preside at arraignments, fix and accept bail, issue warrants and perform duties of a similar nature.

The grant of jurisdiction under clauses (iii) and (v) of this subsection may be exercised only by those judges who are members of the bar of the Supreme Court.

(s) The traffic court shall have exclusive jurisdiction of all summary offenses under the motor vehicle laws.

(t) The courts of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery, quarter sessions of the peace, the county court, the orphans' court and the ten separate courts of common pleas are abolished and their jurisdiction and powers shall be exercised by the court of common pleas provided for in this article through the divisions established by this schedule.

(u) The office of magistrate, the board of magistrates and the present traffic court are abolished.

(v) Those judges appointed to the municipal court in accordance with subsection (e) of this section who are not members of the bar of the Supreme Court shall be eligible to complete their present terms and to be elected to and serve for one additional term, but not thereafter.

(w) The causes, proceedings, books, dockets and records of the abolished courts shall become those of the court or division thereof to which; under this schedule, jurisdiction of the proceedings or matters concerned has been transferred, and that court or division thereof shall determine and conclude such proceedings as if it had assumed jurisdiction in the first instance.

(x) The present president judges of the abolished courts and chief magistrate shall continue to receive the compensation to which they are now entitled as president judges and chief magistrate until the end of their present terms as president judges and chief magistrate respectively.

(y) The offices of prothonotary and register of wills in the City of Philadelphia shall no longer be considered constitutional offices under this article, but their powers and functions shall continue as at present until these offices are covered in the Home Rule Charter by a referendum in the manner provided by law.

(z) If a community court is established in the City of Philadelphia, a person serving as a judge of the municipal or traffic court at that time:

(i) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (v) of this section, may complete his term exercising the jurisdiction provided by law and with the compensation provided by law; and

(ii) At the completion of his term, his office is abolished and no jurisdiction of the kind exercised by those officers immediately after the effective date of this article and schedule shall thereafter be exercised other than by the community court.

Allegheny County

Section 17. Courts.—Until otherwise provided by law:

(a) The court of common pleas shall consist of a trial division, an orphans' court division and a family court division; the courts of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery and quarter sessions of the peace, the county court, the orphans' court, and the juvenile court are abolished and their present jurisdiction shall be exercised by the court of common pleas. Until otherwise provided by rule of the court of common pleas and, except as otherwise provided in this schedule, the court of common pleas shall exercise the jurisdiction of the present court of common pleas and the present county court through the trial division. Until otherwise provided by rule of the court of common pleas, the jurisdiction of the present orphans' court, except as otherwise provided in this schedule, shall be exercised by the court of common pleas through the orphans' court division.

(b) Until otherwise provided by rule of the court of common pleas, the court of common pleas shall exercise jurisdiction in the following matters through the family court division:

(i) Domestic Relations: Desertion or nonsupport of wives, children and indigent parents, including children born out of wedlock; proceedings, including habeas corpus, for custody of children; divorce and annulment and property matters relating thereto.

(ii) Juvenile Matters: All matters now within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court.

(iii) Adoptions and Delayed Birth Certificates.

Section 18. Judges.—Until otherwise provided by law, the present judges of the court of common pleas shall continue to act as the judges of that court; the present judges of the county court shall become judges of the court of common pleas; the present judges of the orphans' court shall become judges of the orphans' court division of the court of common pleas; the present judges of the juvenile court shall become judges of the family court division of the court of common pleas.

Section 19. President Judges.—The present president judge of the court of common pleas may complete his term as president judge; the present president judge of the orphans' court shall be the president judge of the orphans' court division of the court of common pleas for the remainder of his term as president judge, and the present president judge of the county court shall be the president judge of the family court division of the court of common pleas for the remainder of his term as president judge, all these without diminution of salary as president judge. The president judge of the trial division shall be selected pursuant to section twenty of this schedule.

Section 20. President Judges; Court Divisions.—Until otherwise provided by law, the trial division, the orphans' court division and the family court division of the court of common pleas shall each be presided over by a president judge, who shall be one of the judges of such division and shall be elected for a term of five years by a majority vote of the judges of that division. He shall assist the president judge of the court of common pleas in supervising the judicial business of the court and shall be responsible to him. Subject to the foregoing, the judges of the court of common pleas shall prescribe rules defining the duties of the president judges. The president judge of the court of common pleas shall have the power to assign judges from one division to another division of the court when required to expedite the business of the court. The exercise of these supervisory and administrative powers, however, shall be subject to the supervisory and administrative powers of the Supreme Court.

The City of Pittsburgh

Section 21. Inferior Courts.—Upon the establishment of magisterial districts pursuant to this article and schedule, and unless otherwise provided by law, the police magistrates, including those serving in the traffic court, the housing court and the city court shall continue as at present. Such magistrates shall be part of the unified judicial system and shall be subject to the general supervisory and administrative authority of the Supreme Court. Such magistrates shall be subject to the provisions of this article and schedule regarding educational requirements and prohibited activities of justices of the peace.

Causes, Proceedings, Books and Records

Section 22. Causes, Proceedings, Books and Records.—All causes and proceedings pending in any abolished court or office of the justice of the peace shall be determined and concluded by the court to which jurisdiction of the proceedings has been transferred under this schedule and all books, dockets and records of any abolished court or office of the justice of the peace shall become those of the court to which, under this schedule, jurisdiction of the proceedings concerned has been transferred.

Commission and Board

Section 23. Judicial Qualifications Commission.—The selection of the first members of the Judicial Qualifications Commission provided for in section fourteen (a) of this article shall be made as follows: The Governor shall appoint the four non-lawyer members for terms of, respectively, one year, three years, five years and seven years, no more than two of whom shall be members of the same political party. The Supreme Court shall appoint the three non-judge members of the bar of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania for terms, respectively, of two years, four years and six years, no more than two of whom shall be members of the same political party.

Section 24. Judicial Inquiry and Review Board.—The selection of the first members of the Judicial Inquiry and Review Board shall be made as follows: one judge of the Superior Court, one non-judge member of the bar of the Supreme Court, and one non-lawyer member shall be selected for two-year terms; one judge of the Superior Court, one non-judge member of the bar of the Supreme Court, and one non-lawyer member shall be selected for four-year terms; one judge of the court of common pleas shall be selected for a term of two years, one for a term of three years, and one for a term of four years.

General Provisions

Section 25. Dispensing with Trial by Jury.—Until otherwise provided by law, the parties, by agreement filed, may in any civil case dispense with trial by jury, and submit the decision of such case to the court having jurisdiction thereof, and such court shall hear and determine the same; and the judgment thereon shall be subject to writ of error as in other cases.

Section 26. Writs of Certiorari.—Unless and until changed by rule of the Supreme Court, in addition to the right of appeal under section nine of this article, the judges of the courts of common pleas, within their respective judicial districts, shall have power to issue writs of certiorari to the municipal court in the City of Philadelphia, justices of the peace and inferior courts not of record and to cause their proceedings to be brought before them, and right and justice to be done.

Section 27. Judicial Districts.—Until changed in accordance with section eleven of this article, the number and boundaries of judicial districts shall remain as at present.

Section 28. Referendum.—The officer of the Commonwealth who under law shall have supervision over elections shall cause the question provided for in section thirteen (d) of this article to be placed on the ballot in the 1969 primary election throughout the Commonwealth.

Section 29. Persons Specially Admitted by Local Rules.—Any person now specially admitted to practice may continue to practice in the court of common pleas or in that division of the court of common pleas and the municipal court in the City of Philadelphia which substantially includes the practice for which such person was previously specially admitted.

Said Article, so arranged, shall replace existing Article V of the Constitution.

Respectively submitted,

By: JAMES W. NELSON
By: WILLIAM H. GRAY, JR.

Co-Chairmen, Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People.

We certify that this Recommendation No. 1 of The Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People has passed the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention on February 29, 1968.

RAYMOND J. BRODERICK, President
JAMES A. MICHENER, Secretary

MOTION TO ADOPT RECOMMENDATION No. 1 OF THE COMMITTEE ON ARRANGEMENT, SUBMISSION AND ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Nelson.

DELEGATE NELSON. While we are waiting, I would like to ask for permission to have this Recommendation defended by one of America's truly great generals, Delegate Strickler.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair is very happy to recognize Delegate Strickler and, while you are proceeding, we will have your report distributed.

DELEGATE STRICKLER. Mr. President, this report deals with the arrangement of all of the articles and sections that you passed finally at this Convention. Subject to the approval of the electorate, the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People recommends that Proposals Nos. 1 to 7, inclusive, adopted by the Convention and referred to it for arrangement into articles and sections to be numbered as provided under Act 180, approved the 17th day of August, 1965, in accordance with the applicable provisions of Act 2, Section 1967, to be arranged in the following manner:

Proposal No. 1 and Proposal No. 2 dealing with Legislative Apportionment shall be arranged in two sections, numbered 16 and 17. Then follows those various sections that appear in the report of the recommendations and these sections so arranged shall replace sections 16, 17 and 18 of Article 2 of the Constitution now existing, so that this Article shall hereafter consist of a total of 17 consecutive numbered sections—correct that, it was 17, it is now 16. So that the Article shall hereafter consist of a total of 16 consecutive numbered separate articles.

Proposals Nos. 3, 4 and 5 on Taxation and State Finance of the Commonwealth Indebtedness shall be arranged into 10 sections, and those 10 sections follow, and the said sections of these 10 sections 1, 7, 8, 9 and 10 so arranged shall revise or replace existing sections 1, 4, 6, 9 and 14 of Article 8 formerly numbered Article 9 of the Constitution; and said sections 2, 4, 12, 13, 14 are new and become additional sections of Article 8, existing sections 1 (d), 2, 3, 18, 24 and 25 of Article 8 are retained.

Renumbered sections 3, 5, 6, 11, 15 and 16 respectively so that this Article hereinafter consists of a total of 16 consecutively numbered separate sections.

I think I shall pause here until these reports are distributed to the members. Some of them do not have them.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Would you see that these reports are distributed, please?

This is very unfortunate. We had 200 of these reports here. Now some of our delegates do not have copies. If anyone has an extra one, I certainly hope they will give it to the delegates who do not have a copy.

We need some more down here, please.

I understand, Delegate Strickler, that all the delegates now have a copy. Excuse me, we need a few more back here. Could we resurrect a few, please?

Would those delegates that have not as yet received a copy please raise their hands? Let us see how many we need. We need eight.

Some of the staff has a copy, I would appreciate them surrendering it to the delegates, and we will see that they get one.

DELEGATE POWELL. Mr. President, would you have me recorded in the journal as approving final passage of the Judiciary Article?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Those reports will be put on the record, that you approve the Judiciary Article.

Let me ask this: Does everyone have a copy now? We are now all right.

I again recognize Delegate Strickler.

DELEGATE STRICKLER. Mr. President, we are now on page 11 of the report.

I have gone over, in summary, Proposals Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5. There will be no change in language in any of these, so these are the exact copies of the final proposals. It is just a matter of arrangement.

Mr. President, may I go back to Proposals Nos. 1 and 2, and where I said that the sections so arranged shall replace existing sections 16, 17 and 18 of Article 2 of the Constitution, so that this Article hereinafter consists of 16 consecutive numbered sections, except it should be 17, as I originally stated. On page 4, next to the last line, change "16" to "17", shall be arranged into a single article consisting of 14 consecutive numbered sections and they follow, and said article so arranged shall replace existing articles 13, 14, 15 and existing sections 7, 8, 10, 15 and 19 of Article 8, formerly numbered Article 9 of the Constitution.

Proposal No. 7 shall be arranged into a single article consisting of 18 consecutively numbered sections as they are listed. Said article so arranged shall replace existing Article 5 of the Constitution.

That is the extent of the report, and if anybody would like to ask any questions, I will be glad to answer them.

If there are no questions, I would like to move the adoption of the report with regard to Recommendation No. 1.

DELEGATE GRAY. I second the motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We have a motion before the Convention that this Convention adopt Recommendation No. 1 of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People, and that motion was made by Delegate Strickler, seconded by Delegate Gray.

Are we ready for the question?

The question is, shall the Convention adopt Recommendation No. 1 of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People?

The question recurs,

Will the Convention agree to adopt Recommendation No. 1?

The roll was recorded as follows:

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Powell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE POWELL. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE POWELL. Mr. President, would you have me recorded in the Journal as approving final passage of the Judiciary Article?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Your remarks will be put on the record, that you approve the Judiciary Article.

RESOLUTION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Orban.

DELEGATE ORBAN. As an official of this Convention, I had the opportunity to be in touch with the work of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People. This Committee has worked under tremendous handicaps. I need not tell you why.

DELEGATE ORBAN requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 29, 1968.

The Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People is the one that was forced to operate under the extreme pressure of time since it only had a day or so to make its report on some proposals and an hour or so to make its report on others.

To expect the excellent reports that this Committee presented to the Convention was doubtful because of the time problem, but upon hearing the reports it is obvious to all the delegates that the members of the Committee completed the task assigned to them in an outstanding manner. Their complete and untiring devotion to their work is evidenced by what we have heard today; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Constitutional Convention offer its sincere congratulations to Delegates James W. Nelson and William H. Gray, Jr. the co-chairmen of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People, and to all the other members of the Committee for the outstanding job they have done in preparing their reports and presenting them to this Convention in such a short period of time.

WRITTEN EXPLANATION OF VOTE PURSUANT TO RULE 19

My vote against final passage of Proposal No. 5 dealing with tax exemptions was prompted by my strong feelings that the prolific enumeration of specific and detailed classes of exemptions is properly a legislative function and should not be welded into the Constitution.

I approve of the ends sought to be served by many of the exemptions set forth—specifically those directed toward encouraging urban renewal and rehabilitation—but it has been my feeling throughout the Convention that the exemption policy of this Commonwealth should be left basically to the legislature. Such a procedure would insure that exemptions are subject to continuing scrutiny and examination by the people so that maximum flexibility is provided to deal with unforeseen and changing future attitudes and circumstances.

RICHARD L. THORNBURGH

APPROVAL OF JOURNALS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now the Chair recognizes Delegate Casey.

DELEGATE CASEY. Mr. President, there are a number of Journals of this Convention which have not been prepared as yet and presented to the Convention for approval, so, prior to adjournment, I would like to move for the record that we now approve formally those journals of the Convention which thus far have not been approved, and I so move.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Casey, seconded by Delegate Orban that we approve the remaining journals of this Convention.

On the question,
Will the Convention agree to the motion?
It was agreed to.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Fohl. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE FOHL. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE FOHL. I would like to take a minute to state into the record the results of a poll that I have taken. We heard polls from Delegate Clinger when he polled in his district about who could remember who was elected for judge. I took the liberty of conducting a poll in the 22nd Senatorial District, which is the Lackawanna County District. I contacted 30 people there and asked them who were their delegates to this Constitutional Convention. I am sorry to say that only one of the 30 could name all three delegates. However, the other 29 said Ed Popil and two others guys.

REMARKS BY DELEGATE STROUP

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Stroup.

DELEGATE STROUP. Mr. President, approximately 14 months ago the legislative leaders of the General Assembly began to formulate plans and to write legislation to bring this Convention into being as a reality. That was not an easy task, Mr. President. It took several months before the legislation was enacted into law. This is a statement on behalf of the ex officio delegates and the other delegates of this Convention: You came from the hills and the mountains, the fertile farms and the beautiful valleys, from those areas where the ancient, silent, timeless Alleghenies loom over our people, from the vast industrial and mining communities, from the teeming millions of our great cities here to the Hall of the House of Representatives determined to write and rewrite the basic law of a portion of our law of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Seldom if ever, indeed, has there been gathered under one hall an assembly of men and women so talented, so brave in mind, so varied in their various occupations and professional aspects, so idealistic indeed and yet practical with it all, dedicated to a common purpose and to a common cause.

The devotion and the tireless effort each and every one of you as delegates to this Convention applied to the formidable task and to the legalistic requirements which you were compelled to face is a great tribute to the democratic process in this State of ours which is the birth of liberty of the nation.

Now, fellow delegates, as we say, each to the other, may God be with you. From your ex officio delegates, may the bronze of work, the silver of happiness and the gold of love be with each and everyone of you all the remaining days of your lives. This is not just our wish or a hope. It shall be our constant prayer for you and I say farewell to you as you leave these halls from your ex officio delegates and if forever, then still forever, fellow delegates, fare thee well.

REMARKS BY DELEGATE BUTERA

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Butera.

DELEGATE BUTERA. I rise to second the remarks of Senator Stroup. I had similar remarks prepared. Suffice it to say that I, too, remember last December at our first leadership meeting when our president presented to us the skeleton of a bill which later would become an act of the Legislature to create this Convention. I want to thank those of you who endorsed the plan at that and several succeeding meetings and went on to work to have the bill passed, for you have restored our faith in human beings. We were told time and time again by those who opposed our efforts that you were all going to be some wild-eyed conservatives or liberals and that you were going to destroy our Commonwealth. We persevered and told them that was not going to be the case, and I can assure you that each one of us is more than pleased with the body here assembled and I do not think it could have been any finer.

REMARKS BY DELEGATE SCRANTON

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Scranton.

DELEGATE SCRANTON. After listening to the eminent Majority Leader of the Senate, who has always been known in Pennsylvania as the Everett Dirkson of Pennsylvania, I would like to say that I think this body should go and adopt a new resolution and send a notice to Illinois that Senator Everett Dirkson is now the Stanley Stroup of Illinois.

REMARKS BY DELEGATE GERBER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Gerber.

DELEGATE GERBER. Mr. President, it seems to me it is only fitting and proper for those of us who are the amateurs to thank those professionals, Senator Stroup, Representative Butera, Representative Irvis, the other Senators and Representatives here who have helped us and you, too, in preparing this Convention.

I think we also owe a vote of thanks to Governor Scranton, Senator Casey, Governor Leader and Governor Shafer for helping bring about the victory in the May primary of 1967 and we only hope that what we did here was responsive to the great preparation done by our legislative leadership.

As one member here who has respect for the Legislature and has respect for the legislative leadership, I think we amateurs should vote thanks with a hand clap for the great legislators who helped bring this Convention together.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Irvis.

DELEGATE IRVIS. Mr. President, may I on behalf of the ex officio members thank Delegate Gerber and ask him if he will submit his remarks to one small amendment? Will he include in it his thanks to the League of Women Voters?

DELEGATE GERBER. You are asking an awful lot at a late hour. For you I will do that.

REMARKS BY DELEGATE STRICKLER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Strickler.

DELEGATE STRICKLER. Mr. President, I would like to make a statement in connection with the 13 ex officio members. I do not believe a lot of the people realize how valuable it was to have them as members of this delegation. I know a lot of people felt that, perhaps, they should not have been here because it should have been entirely non-professional, non ex officio people, but we certainly impressed upon them our thinking. We impressed upon them the various articles and sections that had to be dealt with by the Legislature and they will be far better off to deal with it to meet the deadline on January 1, 1969. After all, we are one team. We are for Pennsylvania, and they are a great part of it.

REMARKS BY DELEGATE REYNOLDS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Reynolds.

DELEGATE REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I want to express my appreciation for having been here and for the reason that I have made some fine contacts here over the past three months.

I remember having received an invitation from Governor Shafer to come here, from ex-Governors of this State, Governor Fine, Governor Scranton, and I forget the Democrat's name, Governor Leader, and we accepted the challenge. I sent out over 10,000 pieces of literature throughout the State of Pennsylvania for the cause of this Convention. I believe we have called together here in this Convention a group of men and women that could not have been better.

I have been very much impressed with the fairness of the American spirit that has been shown here and, if I ever had any doubt as to the caliber of the people of the State of Pennsylvania, this Convention has wiped it out.

I want to pay special tribute to a man who stood up here the other day and laid his heart at our feet, Secretary Michener, a man who did not have to say what he said. He told how he had been segregated against in the country that he loved so dearly. I also hail from another state, I am from North Carolina. I think it is a very nice place to be from. I am very happy to be living here as a citizen and, as I have said before, I served two terms in the Legislature here, and things were not as good then. I am staying in a hotel now that refused me accommodation when I was here before, but they have treated me very nice now.

I do not think we Americans have to worry about the hot summer days and everything as long as we have men and women who are spreading good will around this State. I believe that is what we have done here, and the example we have set here will go forward in settling some of the difficulties we have had with minority groups and other people. Delegate Michener stood here the other day and laid down another challenge, and we do have some areas in Pennsylvania that have not quite yet gotten a hold of the spirit that he exhibited.

I hope that we will carry that spirit everywhere we go from now on, and I can tell you that there are many thousands of minority groups, Jews, Catholics, Protestants and Negroes, black and white, all can live together.

I have been all around the world two times, and I can tell you very distinctly that despite all the faults of America, we are living in the best country in the world. No other country is like America.

The other day a delegate made a statement here, and some of you thought it was a bad statement, and should be expunged, and about 25 or 30 of you came up to me and apologized. You do not need to apologize for what he said, because he did not mean any harm by it; he came to me himself.

He used the word "nigger," and let me tell you there is not a white man in the world that cannot be a nigger, because if you look in the dictionary the word "nigger" means a bad citizen, a bad person, irrespective of race, creed or color, and, therefore, I do not feel ashamed to say that he did not mean what he said in a disparaging way. He was big enough to come to me and to apologize. As we go forward from here, I hope that all of us will carry that spirit.

Let us say to the world that America is the best place to live, and we can live here, whites and black, Jew and Gentile, and everybody will have an equal opportunity to go to the top if they have the ability.

REMARKS BY DELEGATE WELSH

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will recognize Delegate Welsh next. I just want to say that I can see something is building up inside of all of us. The unfortunate thing is we would like to come to the conclusion and get to the signing. I do want to recognize all those who are at the microphone. The only thing I want to say is, please keep it short.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Welsh.

DELEGATE WELSH. Mr. President, I would just like the record to show in the closing hours, when Delegate Gerber made his remarks, that Delegate Welsh from Allegheny County was standing and applauding.

Also, Mr. President, the name "politician" is still honored by me and I still hold it in high regard, not only at this Convention, because I had the same conviction prior to this Convention, but even more so after this Convention.

POINT OF INFORMATION

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Cosetti. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE COSETTI. I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

DELEGATE COSETTI. I would like to be advised who has the adjournment resolution.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I just want you to know the adjournment resolution is out among the delegates.

REMARKS BY DELEGATE HOOK

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Hook.

DELEGATE HOOK. Mr. President, I sat here and listened to the statements pertaining to the ex officio members. I would like to direct the delegate body to four members of the Legislature who served with us on the committee and were not ex officio members. I believe these four people have given us guidance and I would like to read into the record the names of the five people, one of whom I have gotten to know quite well, and that is Marian Markley, who is now going to retire from the General Assembly in January and who has served the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania for a period of 18 years;

Also, Senator Marvin Keller from Bucks County;

Another gentleman who I met the first night here at the Convention, none other than John Van Sant from Lehigh County;

Last but not least, the man from McKean County, Mr. Victor Westerberg of the Westerberg amendment;

James Prendergast of Northampton County, ex officio.

REMARKS BY DELEGATE SWOPE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Swope.

DELEGATE SWOPE. Mr. President. I have been very careful with my words the last few days. I have been trying to recover from the beating I got three days ago. I am recovered now.

I would like to say something about the committee upon which I was honored to be co-chairman with a man who I did not know before this Convention opened, but whose no less distinguished brother I have known for many, many years. I am referring to Iz Bloom.

I would not get up here tonight at this late hour excepting that the four substantive committees and the two committees that I have been working so hard on the last few days have been mentioned on this floor today. It is only fair that I should give some tribute to the members of the Committee of Administration and Finance. We toiled also, we labored, but we were not in the limelight. We tried to save the Commonwealth some money. We budgeted closely and we watched the staff and we did not overstaff, and we tried in every possible way to bring economy in the expenditure of the liberal appropriation that was given to this Convention by the General Assembly.

I want here in the record, Mr. President, the appreciation that I have as co-chairman for the splendid work, the quiet work, that was done by a wonderful group of 18 people in my committee. I would like at this moment if I may, to yield to my Co-Chairman, Iz Bloom.

REMARKS BY DELEGATE BLOOM

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Bloom.

DELEGATE BLOOM. The committee that we had consisted of the nicest men that I ever met. They discussed every problem with us and at the end you had unanimity and we had it during every meeting. Whenever we voted upon a question, everybody agreed, and by the time we mulled it over we went over and over it time and time again, but we all agreed.

This committee, as I said before, watched every nickel that was spent of the taxpayers' money of this Commonwealth. We did our job. We came under criticism at one time by the press, maybe rightfully so, because if there were meals served here during the holiday season, we took it very gracefully and no offense was taken by our committee of what the press said in that connection. We understand they were observers on the outside and, perhaps, did not understand our problems.

I want to go on record as thanking these men who served with us and are still serving with us, as we will not be discharged until all of the moneys have been accounted for and we have been audited and we have made arrangements for the audit.

We made every arrangement for the distribution of the necessary pamphlets, and so forth, that we were authorized to do. Our work will be carried on right up until the time of election.

REMARKS BY DELEGATE HUGGINS

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Huggins.

DELEGATE HUGGINS. Mr. President, you know and I know the end is here, but you know in my particular profession you get over with it quick and you end it with an amen to say that you have agreed. It seems like the more we hear, the less we can "amen."

I think that is going to be the problem, too, when the Constitution we have been working on goes out to the public. Some of the people are not going to buy it too quickly, because they do not know all the sweat and turmoil that went into creating it. There are always strangers around the work of a group like this.

I think no group has tried to be of more creative and more, should I say, understanding of what we are trying to accomplish here to finish tonight.

There are some strangers in our midst whom I think we need to recognize for a job we may not like, for a few points we cannot really tolerate, but for whom we have a very high regard, because they have been with us through the long hours and that is the gentlemen of the press. I think they should stand so we can applaud them.

REMARKS BY DELEGATE CAMARDELLA

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Camardella.

DELEGATE CAMARDELLA. Mr. President, first of all, I would like to have a personal privilege here of saying that it has been my pleasure for the last three months to serve with some of the finest people of this Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

I think a week ago I said I thought my calendar was at an end. Have we reached that point, Mr. President? As I read it now, it is finished. We are pooped. We are out of business. Where do we go from here? Let us proceed.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We do have some place to go from here. We are going to recognize the few delegates that were on the floor previously.

We have a signing ceremony and I would hate to tell you this, but your President would like to just give one or two closing remarks that will not take more than two minutes, if I may. If I could have your indulgence for two or three minutes.

I will do that after we recognize Delegate Forster, Delegate Pott and Delegate Warman and, also, Delegate Orban.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY DELEGATE FORSTER

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I will now recognize Delegate Forster.

DELEGATE FORSTER. Mr. President, even though you have adopted Recommendation No. 3 of the Committee on Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People, the polls are still open on the section where your names are recorded. At least a dozen delegates have come to report incorrect spelling or their names shown the wrong way. I urge you again to check it and let us know tonight. It is important for you to do that, otherwise, you will be most disappointed.

Mr. President, I want to tell you that in Lancaster County there is a Pennsylvania Dutch expression that says, "When the little red car comes, the train is all." I understand when the Committee Report from Arrangement, Submission and Address to the People comes, the Convention is all. This is a parliamentary inquiry, is that correct?

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I think it is almost correct.

REMARKS BY DELEGATE POTT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Pott.

DELEGATE POTT. Mr. President, our sessions over the past three months have started with prayer from men who were invoking Divine guidance over this Convention.

If I can sum up what I believe our Chaplains have been trying to say to us, it would be the following words:

God of our Fathers, be with us yet, lest we forget, lest we forget.

REMARKS BY DELEGATE ORBAN

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate Orban.

DELEGATE ORBAN. Mr. President. For the benefit of the stenographer, it is O-r-b-a-n.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Vice President of this Convention.

DELEGATE ORBAN. Mr. President, I want to express to you my sincerest thanks for permitting me to be your second vice president.

Secondly, I want to thank you for the remembrance presented to me last night.

Thirdly, I want to repeat last night's statement that the treatment and courtesy accorded me by all the delegates and the staff is undeserved, knowing the good, if any, that I contributed is negligible, while the ills I created may be great.

FAREWELL ADDRESS BY PRESIDENT

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. If you will be kind enough to give me, I assure you, not more than two and half, three minutes to say to you from the bottom of my heart, as this Constitutional Convention is about to slip into the pages of history, I just feel compelled to express my gratitude to each and everyone of you, as well as to every one of our 12 million fellow Pennsylvanians, for the job you have done so well.

You know, you worked murderous hours. You ignored your businesses, your families. You have ignored your personal life over the last three months, but you have struck a mighty blow for public service.

You have differed many times on many points, but you have all agreed that this Commonwealth's basic charter should be updated to permit it to cope with the problems of the 21st Century.

You know, on the sixth day of this Convention I gave what some people laughingly referred to as the President's Address, and in that address I said, and I want to quote, "We are here to mold a judicial system which shall produce justice." We have done it.

I said in that address, "We are here to make local government more efficient." We have done it.

I said in that address, "We are here to provide a tax structure which will satisfy the needs of all Pennsylvanians." We have done it.

I also said, "We are here to make one man, one vote, a reality." We have done it.

Yes, we have accomplished all those things, but, even more, there has been a spirit in this Convention which will live on and on after the final adjournment resolution, which will be offered by Delegate Strickler. Let me say something more, if I may, about that spirit. From the day we assembled here until this very moment we have been ruled, we have been controlled, not by any political machine or any political factions, not by the idea of making a Constitution for some part of Pennsylvania or for some special interest, but by the desire to provide a fundamental law under which the people of this Commonwealth, which we all love, will live and prosper for years and years to come.

In humility and in closing, I express to you my heartfelt thanks for the honor which you have conferred upon me by electing me your presiding officer. Your support has sustained me through many trying hours in this Convention and it is sincerely appreciated.

This is not the end of our labors, however. I am going to ask you to help me, help each other, to convince the voters of Pennsylvania that our recommendations are the best for a better Commonwealth, and I hope you will join me in that effort over the next two months.

Yes, I share with you the thought that our recommendations are not perfect, but I also share with you the thought and the determination that they will give Pennsylvania the best Constitution in the land, and in this closing moment I salute you. I say, God bless you. God bless your families, and God bless this wonderful Commonwealth.

Thank you.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. I would like to state at this time that John Ingram has an announcement.

MR. INGRAM. Mr. President, I have been asked to convey to you a message I received late this afternoon from H. Vernon Eney, the President of the recently adjourned Maryland Convention. You will recall he visited this Convention and addressed you.

He asked to be remembered to you. He offered his best wishes and his congratulations to the Pennsylvania Convention, to the officers, to the delegates.

He asked that you be commended on behalf of the Maryland Convention for completing your work in the allotted time and he wanted to wish you well in achieving voter approval of the proposals of this Convention.

PROPOSALS SIGNED BY PRESIDENT

Proposals numbered and entitled as follows having been prepared for presentation to the Secretary of the Commonwealth, and the same being correct, the titles were publicly read as follows:

PROPOSAL NO. 1

A Proposal amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania making changes relating to legislative districts.

PROPOSAL NO. 2

A Proposal amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania making changes relating to legislative apportionment.

PROPOSAL NO. 3

A Proposal amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania further providing for Commonwealth indebtedness.

PROPOSAL NO. 4

A Proposal amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania specifying audit control of public moneys and establishing and regulating a balanced State budget for the next fiscal year and financial plans for the succeeding five years.

PROPOSAL NO. 5

A Proposal amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania further regulating exemptions from taxation and providing for the taxation of real property of public utilities.

PROPOSAL NO. 6

A Proposal amending the Constitution of Pennsylvania providing for local government in Pennsylvania.

PROPOSAL NO. 7

A Proposal repealing article five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania relating to the Judiciary and adding a new Judiciary article.

Whereupon, the PRESIDENT, in the presence of the Convention, signed the same.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair recognizes Delegate O'Donnell. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The gentleman will state it.

The Chair now recognizes Delegate O'Donnell.

DELEGATE O'DONNELL. Mr. President, I, too, rise to a point of personal privilege. I would like publicly to acknowledge a splendid gift which I have just received from our Secretary. He asked me to witness his signature as Secretary of the Convention to Committee Proposal No. 7 and he was kind enough to give me the pen with which he signed it. I would like you to know I thank Secretary Michener and I will treasure this pen.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now, Mr. Ingram, would you please explain how we are going to sign these documents?

MR. INGRAM. The final document, your proposals and the questions, will be placed on the rostrum here. In accordance with Act 2, they will be signed first by the officers, the President, the First Vice President, the Second Vice President and then the Secretary. They will then be received, acknowledged and signed by the Secretary of the Commonwealth. They will then be signed by each delegate who will affix his signature in reverse alphabetical order starting with Judge Woodside in seat 168.

We will ask you to file in alphabetical order in the reverse numerical order of your seat number over to that aisle and that side, down the aisle, across here, up this side of the rostrum and sign here.

We do have a photographer and he will take the picture of each of you as you sign. You will receive in the mail an order form in the event that you want to order a picture of yourself signing the document.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. You know, before we start up to sign, Delegate Buck came up and handed me a quotation from Benjamin Franklin. I will not read the whole quote, but would you permit me to read the last sentence? It says, "On the whole, sir, I cannot help expressing a wish that every member of the Convention who may still have objections to it would with me on this occasion doubt a little of his own infallibility and to make manifest our unanimity, put his name to this instrument."

Please come forward.

WIVES OF DELEGATES INVITED TO JOIN DELEGATES

(After the signing ceremony, the following proceedings were had.)

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Will the delegates please take their seats. We will have about three minutes more.

At this time the Chair would like to invite the wives of our delegates to come in and sit inside the rail in the rear of this assembly.

AMENDMENT TO RESOLUTION

DELEGATE ORBAN. Mr. President, I would like to amend the last resolution I presented at the request of Chairmen Nelson and Gray to include in the Arrangement Committee's resolution the staff and legal counsel.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Unless the Chair hears objection, we will consider it as an amendment pursuant to the amendment that you have handed up. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so amended.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE

DELEGATE MICHENER. I have one last request for leave of absence, which I hope the delegates will pass unanimously. Two of our most respected and beloved delegates are out of work. They have asked for leaves from March to November to find a new job. They are Delegate Pasquerilla from Johnstown and Delegate Casey from Scranton.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. We wish them success in their quest.

DELEGATE MICHENER. We do wish them success.

RECOGNITION OF PAGES

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Since the beginning of this Convention, we have been very fortunate in having with us each week a group of honor students serving as honorary pages. They are outstanding young men and young women in their respective schools and have been selected by their principals.

On this last and final day, I would like to introduce them to you and ask them to rise as I call their names. When I have introduced all of them, let us show our appreciation by giving them a fine round of applause. We appreciate very much their contribution.

The students are:

Phyllis Black of Elizabethtown High School in Elizabethtown;

John Fedora and Joseph Eckert from Stevens Trade School in Lancaster;

Sue Bowman from Annville-Cleona High School in Annville;

Steven Yocklovich from Lebanon High School in Lebanon;

Theodore Bucher from Boiling Springs High School in Boiling Springs;

Robert Shiffer from Millersburg Area High School in Millersburg;

Andrew McCrea from Big Spring High School in Newville;

Richard Bitting from Halifax Area High School in Halifax;

Ernest Wallander, Jr., from Donegal High School in Mt. Joy.

RESOLUTION

DELEGATE WARMAN requested and obtained unanimous consent to offer the following resolution for immediate consideration, which was read, considered and adopted:

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Warman.

DELEGATE WARMAN. Mr. President, I stand in place and present a resolution which I think will be the last one before the adjournment resolution.

I am a non-lawyer and I have decided to write the last will and testament for the Convention, although I did have a little advice from my attorney friend Gerry Ruth.

In the Constitutional Convention, Feb. 29, 1968.

After three months of diligent work, and much mental and verbal exercise, we have attempted to sculpture a document for posterity. In doing so, we have been handicapped by our human limitations. In sequence thereto, it is fitting and proper that we leave certain legacies to any future Constitutional Conventions; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That we bequeath to any future Constitutional Conventions

All problems which now remain unsolved.

All the mistakes we inadvertently and without specific intent have made, or caused by our inability to foresee and forecast the future.

All the problems which may develop from the Space Age that we have been unable to foresee.

All the wisdom, wit and good humor shown by our delegates.

All the legal knowledge shown by the lawyer delegates in bringing it into proper final language.

All the knowledge of human relations and the human needs and desires that must be reflected in the Constitution under the democratic system.

Finally, we pledge that the document so produced is the dedicated effort of the delegates, prepared and delivered with no motivation other than maintaining Pennsylvania as a model for the several States of the Union.

ADJOURNMENT SINE DIE

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. Now for the moment that we have been waiting for for 91 days, and I note by the clock that it is now 10:41.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Strickler.

DELEGATE STRICKLER. Mr. President, now that we have completed our work by adopting seven proposals for constitutional changes, full of human interest and intentionally meaningful in the use of verbage, I now move that this 1967-1968 Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention adjourn sine die.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. The Chair now recognizes Delegate Brown.

DELEGATE BROWN. Mr. President, I would like to second that motion.

PRESIDENT BRODERICK. It has been moved by Delegate Strickler, seconded by Delegate Brown, that this Convention adjourn sine die. All those in favor of that resolution say "aye," those opposed say "no." The ayes have it. We stand adjourned.

(Whereupon, the 1967-1968 Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention adjourned sine die.)
